Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound if thou canst. Come, an it were not for thy humours, there's not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw the action.

26 exion: Dame Quickly's error for 'action' 28 one; cf. n. 29 fubbed: fobbed, i.e., put off deceitfully 33 malmsey-nose: red-nosed 40 quean: hussy 41 channel: kennel, i.e., gutter 43 honey-suckle: Dame Quickly's error for 'homicidal' 44 honey-seed: homicide 45 man-queller: man-killer 49 wo't: wouldst ta: thou 52, 52½ Cf. n. 66 mare: nightmare 70 temper: character 75 parcel-gilt: partly gilded

77 sea-coal: mineral coal (brought by boat from newcastle) Wheeson: Whitsun 81 Keech: literally 'a lump of fat' 85 green: fresh 91 case: circumstances 99 level: steady 105 current: genuine, with pun upon 'sterling' 106 sneap: snub 112½ Cf. n. 114 in the effect of: in a manner suitable to 124½ Cf. n. 125 drollery: humorous painting 126 German hunting: German hunting-scene water-work: water colors 128 humours: caprices 129 draw: withdraw

Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Host. Prithee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles: i' faith, I am loath to pawn my plate, so God save me, la!

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together?

Fal. Will I live? [To Bardolph.] Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words; let's have her.

Exeunt Hostess, [Bardolph, Page,] and Sergeant[s].

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: what is the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse,
Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster,
Against Northumberland and the archbishop.

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently. Come, go along with me, good Master Gower.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here; I thank you, good Sir John.

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me. This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.

Ch. Just. Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool.

Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same]
Enter Prince Henry [and] Poins.

Prince. Before God, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is 't come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

Prince. Faith, it does me, though it discolours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.

Prince. Belike then my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name, or to know thy face to-morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz. these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones! or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for superfluity, and another for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I, for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom; but the midwives say the children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes, faith, and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

Prince. Marry, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee,—as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend,—I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

Prince. By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency: Let the end try the man. But I tell thee my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.

Poins. The reason?

Prince. What wouldst thou think of me if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

Prince. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd and so much engraffed to Falstaff.

Prince. And to thee.

Poins. By this light, I am well spoke on; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and those two things I confess I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.

Enter Bardolph and Page.

Prince. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: a' had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.

Bard. God save your Grace!

Prince. And yours, most noble Bardolph.

Poins. [To the Page.] Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-at-arms are you become! Is 't such a matter to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead?

132 nobles: gold coins worth about six shillings 151 presently: immediately 164; 166 lighten: enlighten, used quibblingly 3 attached: seized 4 discolours the complexion of my greatness: makes me blush 7 studied: inclined

19–24; Cf. n. 33 push: thrust 52 accites: invites 53 lewd: worthless much engraffed: closely attached 58 second brother: younger son proper fellow of my hands: good fellow with my fists 69 pottle-pot: two-quart tankard

Page. A' calls me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes, and methought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat, and peeped through.

Prince. Hath not the boy profited?

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away!

Prince. Instruct us, boy; what dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was delivered of a firebrand; and therefore I call him her dream.

Prince. A crown's worth of good interpretation. There 'tis, boy. [Gives him money.]

Poins. O! that this good blossom could be kept from cankers. Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

Prince. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your Grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master?

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not.

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

Poins. [looking over the Prince's shoulder.] 'John Falstaff, knight,'—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself: even like those that are kin to the king, for they never prick their finger but they say, 'There's some of the king's blood spilt.' 'How comes that?' says he that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap, 'I am the king's poor cousin, sir.'

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter: 'Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting.'

Poins. Why, this is a certificate.

Prince. Peace! 'I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity:'

Poins. He sure means brevity in breath, short-winded.

Prince. 'I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayest, and so farewell.

'Thine, by yea and no,—which is as much as to say, as thou usest him, Jack Falstaff, with my familiars; John, with my brothers and sisters, and Sir John with all Europe.'

Poins. My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it.

Prince. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune!—but I never said so.

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yea, my lord.

Prince. Where sups he? doth the old board feed in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap.

Prince. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord, of the old church.

Prince. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet.

Prince. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

Prince. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph; no word to your master that I am yet come to town: there's for your silence. [Gives money.]

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

Prince. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] This Doll Tearsheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Albans and London.

Prince. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

Prince. From a god to a bull a heavy descension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice! a low transformation! that shall be mine; for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle]
Enter Northumberland, his wife, and the wife to Harry Percy.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,
Give even way unto my rough affairs:
Put not you on the visage of the times,
And be like them to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more:
Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas! sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;
And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.

Lady P. O! yet for God's sake, go not to these wars.
The time was, father, that you broke your word
When you were more endear'd to it than now;
When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry,
Threw many a northward look to see his father
Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.
Who then persuaded you to stay at home?
There were two honours lost, yours and your son's:
For yours, the God of heaven brighten it!
For his, it stuck upon him as the sun
In the grey vault of heaven; and by his light

70 red lattice: ale-house window 76–79; Cf. n. 82, 83 cankers: canker-worms 90 martlemas; cf. n. 94 wen: swelling, i.e., Falstaff 100 takes upon him: pretends conceive: understand 101, 102 borrower's cap; cf. n. 103 fetch it from Japhet: trace kingship through Japhet, the son of Noah 103 ff.; Cf. n.

131 frank: sty 134 Ephesians: slang term for jolly fellow 153 bestow: behave 157, 158; Cf. n. 11 endear'd: bound

Did all the chivalry of England move
To do brave acts: he was indeed the glass
Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves:
He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait;
And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish,
Became the accents of the valiant;
For those that could speak low and tardily,
Would turn their own perfection to abuse,
To seem like him: so that, in speech, in gait,
In diet, in affections of delight,
In military rules, humours of blood,
He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous him!
O miracle of men! him did you leave,—
Second to none, unseconded by you,—
To look upon the hideous god of war
In disadvantage; to abide a field
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name
Did seem defensible: so you left him.
Never, O! never, do his ghost the wrong
To hold your honour more precise and nice
With others than with him: let them alone.
The marshal and the archbishop are strong:
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,
To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck,
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.
North. Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me
With new lamenting ancient oversights.
But I must go and meet with danger there,
Or it will seek me in another place,
And find me worse provided.
Lady N. O! fly to Scotland,
Till that the nobles and the armed commons
Have of their puissance made a little taste.
Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the king,
Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves,
First let them try themselves. So did your son;
He was so suffer'd: so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough
To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband.
North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind
As with the tide swell'd up unto his height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way:
Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company. Exeunt.

24 thick: fast 29 affections of delight: favorite pastimes 30 blood: disposition 38 defensible: able to furnish defense 40 nice: scrupulous 63 For recordation to: in memory of

Scene Fourth

[London. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern, in Eastcheap]
Enter two Drawers [Francis and another].

First Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there? apple-johns? thou knowest Sir John cannot endure an apple-john.

Sec. Draw. Mass, thou sayst true. The prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said, 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old withered knights.' It angered him to the heart; but he hath forgot that.

First Draw. Why then, cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise; Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music. Dispatch: the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight.

Sec. Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince and Master Poins anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

First Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis: it will be an excellent stratagem.

Sec. Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak. Exit.

Enter Hostess and Doll.

Host. I' faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality: your pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose; in good truth, la! But, i' faith, you have drunk too much canaries, and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, What's this? How do you now?

Dol. Better than I was: hem!

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo! here comes Sir John.

Enter Falstaff [singing].

Fal. 'When Arthur first in court'—Empty the jordan.—[Exit Drawer.]—'And was a worthy king.' How now, Mistress Doll!

Host. Sick of a calm: yea, good faith.

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a calm they are sick.

Dol. A pox damn you, you muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll.

Dol. I make them! gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll: we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that.

Dol. Yea, joy, our chains and our jewels.

Fal. 'Your brooches, pearls, and owches':—for to serve bravely is to come halting off, you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely,—

Dol. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet but you fall to some discord: you are both, i' good truth,

2 apple-johns: apples that keep well but become very much shriveled 8 cover: set the table 9 noise: band of musicians 15 old utis: rare sport 28; Cf. n. jordan: chamber-pot 30 calm: mistake for 'qualm' 31 sect: sex 42; Cf. n. owches: jewels 45 chambers: small cannon 46 conger: eel

as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you: you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Dol. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogs-head? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bordeaux stuff in him: you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares.

Enter Drawer [Francis].

Fran. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouthedest rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live among my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name and fame with the very best. Shut the door; there comes no swaggerers here: I have not lived all this while to have swaggering now: shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Host. Pray ye, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-fally, Sir John, ne'er tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the debuty, t'other day; and, as he said to me,—'twas no longer ago than Wedesday last,—'I' good faith, neighbor Quickly,' says he;—Master Dumbe, our minister, was by then;— 'Neighbour Quickly,' says he, 'receive those that are civil, for,' said he, 'you are in an illname'; now, a' said so, I can tell whereupon; 'for,' says he, 'you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive: receive,' says he, 'no swaggering companions.' There comes none here:—you would bless you to hear what he said. No, I'll no swaggerers.

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, i' faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he'll not swagger with a Barbary hen if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call him up, drawer. [Exit Francis.]

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering, by my troth; I am the worse, when one says swagger. Feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Dol. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf: I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter Ancient Pistol, and Bardolph and his boy.

Pist. God save you, Sir John!

Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets: I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, Mistress Dorothy; I will charge you.

Dol. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy.

Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bung, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when, I pray you, sir? God's light! with two points on your shoulder? much!

Pist. God let me not live but I will murder your ruff for this! [Attacking her, and tearing her ruff.]

Fal. No more, Pistol: I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain.

Dol. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what? for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house? He a captain! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word captain as odious as the word 'occupy,' which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted: therefore captains had need look to 't.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I; I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph; I could tear her. I'll be revenged of her.

Page. Pray thee, go down.

Pist. I'll see her damned first; to Pluto's damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs! down faitors. Have we not Hiren here?

Host. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet; 'tis very late, i' faith. I beseek you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall pack-horses,
And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia,
Which cannot go but thirty mile a day,
Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals,
And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with
King Cerberus; and let the welkin roar.
Shall we fall foul for toys?

Host. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs! give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here?

Host. O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think I would deny her? for God's sake! be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calipolis.
Come, give's some sack.
Si fortune me tormente, sperato me contento.
Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire:

49 rheumatic: error for 'splenetic' (?) 50 good-year: corruption of French 'goujere,' 'the pox' 59 Ancient: ensign or second lieutenant, Peto being Captain Falstaff's first lieutenant 63 swaggerers: bullies 73 debuty; cf. n. 83 tame cheater; cf. n. 85 Barbary hen: a hen whose feathers naturally turn back 102 companion: a term of contempt 103 mate: fellow, 'chap' 106 bung: slang for 'sharper' 107 chaps: jaws 108 cuttle: slang for 'cutpurse' 109 basket-hilt: referring to the basket-shaped steel hand-guard on the hilt of Pistol's sword juggler: trickster Since when, etc.: a cant exclamation of scorn 110 two points: shoulder tags, mark of an army commission 124 occupy; cf. n. 134 faitors: imposters Hiren; cf. n. 138, 139; Cf. n. 140 Cannibals: blunder for 'Hannibals' 143 toys: trifles 152; Cf. n. 154; Cf. n.

Give me some sack; and, sweetheart, lie thou there.
[Laying down his sword.]
Come we to full points here, and are et ceteras nothing?

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif. What! we have seen the seven stars.

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs! I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. 'Thrust him down stairs!' know we not Galloway nags?

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling: nay, an a' do nothing but speak nothing, a' shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs.

Pist. What! shall we have incision? Shall we imbrue?
[Snatching up his sword.]
Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!
Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds
Untwine the Sisters Three! Come, Atropos, I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Fal. Get you down stairs. [Drawing.]

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these tirrits and frights. So; murder, I warrant now. Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons; put up your naked weapons. [Exeunt Bardolph and Pistol.]

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal's gone. Ah! you whoreson little valiant villain, you!

Host. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought a' made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

[Enter Bardolph.]

Fal. Have you turned him out o' doors?

Bard. Yea, sir: the rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, i' the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal, to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweatest! Come, let me wipe thy face; come on, you whoreson chops. Ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine Worthies. Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Dol. Do, an thou darest for thy heart: an thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Page. The music is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play. Play, sirs. Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I' faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days, and foining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter [behind] the Prince and Poins, disguised [like Drawers].

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour's the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: a' would have made a good pantler, a' would have chipped bread well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit! hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there is no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and a' plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flapdragons, and rides the wild mare with the boys, and jumps on joint-stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boots very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg, and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties a' has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois.

Prince. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore.

Prince. Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lisping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Dol. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money o' Thursday; shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song! come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me when I am gone.

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt set me a-weeping an thou sayst so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken at the end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis!

Prince. / Poins. [Coming forward.] Anon, anon, sir.

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's? And art not thou Poins his brother?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead!

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears.

157 full points: a full stop 159 neif: fist 160 seven stars: the Pleiades 162 fustian: nonsensical 163 Galloway nags: small and inferior breed of horses 164 Quoit: pitch shove-groat; cf. n. 168 imbrue: draw blood 171 Sisters Three: the Fates, Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos 172 toward: at hand 177 tirrits: blunder for terrors (?) 190 chops: fat-face 200 Bartholomew boar-pig: roast pig, a favorite dish at Bartholomew Fair

207 pantler: servant in charge of the pantry 210 conceit: imagination 214, 215 drinks . . . flapdragons; cf. n. 215 rides . . . mare: plays see-saw 216 joint-stools: stools made by a joiner, as distinguished from those of rough make 217 sign of the leg: a shoemaker's sign 218 breeds no bate: causes no strife 219 gambol: sportive 223 nave of a wheel: Falstaff's knavery and rotundity are both included in this phrase 227 poll: head 231; Cf. n. 233 fiery Trigon: Bardolph; cf. n. 234 lisping: making love old tables: old account book, i.e., the hostess 241 kirtle: waist or skirt or both 246 hearken at: watch

Host. O! the Lord preserve thy good Grace; by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu! are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood [pointing at Doll], thou art welcome.

Dol. How, you fat fool! I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman!

Host. God's blessing of your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yea; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill: you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour; no abuse.

Prince. Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler and bread-chipper and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse!

Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him; in which doing I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal; none, Ned, none: no, faith, boys, none.

Prince. See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy, there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too.

Prince. For the women?

Fal. For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns poor souls. For the other, I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Host. All victuallers do so: what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, gentlewoman,—

Dol. What says your Grace?

Fal. His Grace says that which his flesh rebels against.

Peto knocks at door.

266 take . . . the heat: strike while the iron's hot 268 candle-mine: mine of tallow 292 close: make peace 296 dead elm: cf. n. 297 pricked down: marked down 299 malt-worms: ale-topers 306 quit: absolved

Host. Who knocks so loud at door? Look to the door there, Francis.

Enter Peto.

Prince. Peto, how now! what news?

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster;
And there are twenty weak and wearied posts
Come from the north: and as I came along,
I met and overtook a dozen captains,
Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns,
And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame,
So idly to profane the precious time,
When tempest of commotion, like the south,
Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt
And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.
Give me my sword and cloak. Falstaff, good night.

Exeunt Prince and Poins [Bardolph and Peto].

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence and leave it unpicked. [Knocking within.] More knocking at the door!

[Enter Bardolph.]

How now! what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently;
A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. [To the Page]. Pay the musicians, sirrah. Farewell, hostess, farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the undeserver may sleep when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches. If I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go.

Dol. I cannot speak; if my heart be not ready to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell. Exit [Falstaff, with Bardolph].

Host. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascod-time; but an honester, and truer-hearted man,—well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tearsheet!

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. [Within.] Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master.

Host. O! run, Doll, run; run, good Doll. Come!

She comes blubbered.

Yea, will you come, Doll? Exeunt.

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Westminster. The Palace]
Enter the King in his night-gown, with a Page.

King. Go, call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick;
But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters,
And well consider of them. Make good speed.

[Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep! O sleep! O gentle sleep!
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down

319 posts: couriers 326 south: south wind 340 post: in haste S.d. blubbered: in tears S.d. night-gown: dressing gown

And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,
Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great,
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?
O thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile
In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch
A watch-case or a common 'larum bell?
Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seel up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge,
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them
With deaf'ning clamour in the slippery clouds
That with the hurly death itself awakes?
Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
And in the calmest and most stillest night,
With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty!
King. Is it good morrow, lords?
War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.
King. Why then, good morrow to you all, my lords.
Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?
War. We have, my liege.
King. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom,
How foul it is; what rank diseases grow,
And with what danger, near the heart of it.
War. It is but as a body, yet distemper'd,
Which to his former strength may be restor'd
With good advice and little medicine:
My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd.
King. O God! that one might read the book of fate,
And see the revolution of the times
Make mountains level, and the continent,—
Weary of solid firmness,—melt itself
Into the sea! and, other times, to see
The beachy girdle of the ocean
Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,
And changes fill the cup of alteration
With divers liquors! O! if this were seen,
The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,
What perils past, what crosses to ensue.
Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.
'Tis not ten years gone
Since Richard and Northumberland, great friends,
Did feast together, and in two years after
Were they at wars: it is but eight years since
This Percy was the man nearest my soul,
Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs
And laid his love and life under my foot;
Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard
Gave him defiance. But which of you was by,—
[To Warwick.] You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember,—
When Richard, with his eye brimful of tears,
Then check'd and rated by Northumberland,
Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?
'Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which
My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne';
Though then, God knows, I had no such intent,
But that necessity so bow'd the state
That I and greatness were compelled to kiss:
'The time shall come,' thus did he follow it,
'The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head,
Shall break into corruption':—so went on,
Foretelling this same time's condition
And the division of our amity.
War. There is a history in all men's lives,
Figuring the nature of the times deceas'd;
The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,
With a near aim, of the main chance of things
As yet not come to life, which in their seeds
And weak beginnings lie intreasured.
Such things become the hatch and brood of time;
And by the necessary form of this
King Richard might create a perfect guess
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would of that seed grow to a greater falseness,
Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.
King. Are these things then necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities;
And that same word even now cries out on us.
They say the bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.
War. It cannot be, my lord!
Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the fear'd. Please it your Grace
To go to bed: upon my soul, my lord,
The powers that you already have sent forth
Shall bring this prize in very easily.
To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill,
And these unseason'd hours perforce must add
Unto your sickness.
King. I will take your counsel:
And were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Before Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire]
Enter Shallow and Silence, with Mouldy, Shadow, Wart, Feeble, Bullcalf [and Servants].

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence?
Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.
Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

17 watch-case: sentry-box 19 Seel: sew together (a hawking term) 25 hurly: tumult
68 check'd: rebuked 81 Figuring: symbolizing 87 necessary form: logical necessity 105 instance: proof 107 unseason'd: unseasonable 2 rood: cross

Sil. Alas! a black ousel, cousin Shallow!

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar. He is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. A' must, then, to the inns o' court shortly. I was once of Clement's Inn; where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called 'lusty Shallow' then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called anything; and I would have done anything indeed too, and roundly too. There was I, and Little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotswold man; you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns o' court again: and, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I see him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when a' was a crack not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu! Jesu! the mad days that I have spent; and to see how many of my old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure: death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. By my troth, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu! Jesu! dead! a' drew a good bow; and dead! a' shot a fine shoot: John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead! a' would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Enter Bardolph, and his Boy.

Shal. Good morrow, honest gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: what is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, Sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backsword man. How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth?

7 ousel: blackbird 11 inns o' court: colleges of law 16 roundly: thoroughly 19 swinge-bucklers: roisterers 20 bona-robas: showy harlots 21–23 Cf. n. 27 Skogan; cf. n. crack: lively youngster 34 How: what price 42, 43 clapped i' the clout: hit the white mark in the target 43 at twelve score: at twelve score yards forehand shaft: arrow made for shooting straight forward a fourteen, etc.: fourteen score yards 56 tall: doughty 58, 59 backsword man: fighter at single-sticks

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. 'Better accommodated!' it is good; yea indeed, is it: good phrases are surely and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of accommodo: very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. 'Phrase,' call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or, when a man is, being, whereby, a' may be thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaff.

Shal. It is very just. Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you look well and bear your years very well: welcome, good Sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow. Master Surecard, as I think.

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin, Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather, gentlemen. Have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, So, so, so, so, so, so, so: yea, marry, sir: Ralph Mouldy! let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so. Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, an 't please you.

Shal. What think you, Sir John? a good-limbed fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Moul. Yea, an 't please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular good. In faith, well said, Sir John; very well said.

Fal. Prick him.

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to: peace, Mouldy! you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside: know you where you are? For the other, Sir John: let me see. Simon Shadow!

Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

61 accommodated; cf. n. 79 Surecard: the name signifies 'boon companion' 80 commission: office 86 sufficient: fit 102 Prick: mark down

Shad. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough, and thy father's shadow: so the son of the female is the shadow of the male: it is often so, indeed; but not of the father's substance.

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer; prick him, for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart?

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well. Francis Feeble!

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor he'd have pricked you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat?

Fee. I will do my good will, sir: you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. Prick the woman's tailor; well, Master Shallow; deep, Master Shallow.

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier that is the leader of so many thousands: let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble. Who is next?

Shal. Peter Bullcalf o' the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let's see Bullcalf.

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick me Bullcalf till he roar again.

Bull. O Lord! good my lord captain,—

Fal. What! dost thou roar before thou art pricked?

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown; we will have away thy cold; and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all?

Shal. Here is two more called than your number; you must have but four here, sir: and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's field?

Fal. No more of that, good Master Shallow, no more of that.

Shal. Ha! 'twas a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Fal. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Never, never; she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she's old; and had Robin Nightwork by old Nightwork before I came to Clement's Inn.

Sil. That's fifty-five years ago.

Shal. Ha! cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen. Ha! Sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have. Our watchword was, 'Hem boys!' Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner. Jesus, the days that we have seen! Come, come. Exeunt [Falstaff, Shallow, and Silence].

Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go: and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends: else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And, good Master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend: she has nobody to do anything about her, when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fee. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once; we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind: an 't be my destiny, so; an 't be not, so. No man's too good to serve's prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou'rt a good fellow.

Fee. Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Enter Falstaff and the Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four, of which you please.

Bard. [To Falstaff.] Sir, a word with you. I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf.

Fal. [Aside to Bardolph.] Go to; well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me.

Shal. Marry, then, Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy, and Bullcalf: for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service: and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong: they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thewes, the stature, bulk, and

123 shadows: names, for which we receive pay, though we have not the men 141 battle: army 150 thousands: i.e., vermin 166 such order: such measures

179 away with: endure 196 Corporate: blunder for 'Corporal' 197 Harry ten shillings; cf. n. 218, 219 three pound; cf. n.

big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, Master Shallow. Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is: a' shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow, give me this man: he presents no mark to the enemy; the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat; how swiftly will this Feeble the woman's tailor run off! O! give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So: very well: go to: very good: exceeding good. O, give me always a little, lean, old, chopp'd, bald shot. Well said, i' faith, Wart; thou'rt a good scab: hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn,—I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show,—there was a little quiver fellow, and a' would manage you his piece thus: and a' would about and about, and come you in, and come you in; 'rah, tah, tah,' would a' say; 'bounce,' would a' say; and away again would a' go, and again would a' come: I shall never see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. God keep you, Master Silence: I will not use many words with you. Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night. Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shal. Sir John, the Lord bless you! God prosper your affairs! God send us peace! At your return visit our house; let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with ye to the court.

Fal. 'Fore God I would you would, Master Shallow.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. God keep you.

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen.

Exit [Shallow, with Silence].

On, Bardolph; lead the men away.

[Exit Bardolph, with recruits.]

As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord, Lord! how subject we old men are to this vice of lying. This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth and the feats he hath done about Turnbull Street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when a' was naked he was for all the world like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: a' was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible: a' was the very genius of famine; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake: a' came ever in the rearward of the fashion and sung those tunes to the over-scutched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John a Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn a' never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it and told John a Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an eel-skin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and beefs. Well, I'll be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard but I'll make him a philosopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. Exit.

231 assemblance: appearance 234 gibbets; cf. n. 240 caliver: light musket 241 traverse: march 244 chopp'd: chapped 245 tester: sixpence 246–248 Cf. n. 249 quiver: nimble 250 come you in: make a home thrust 251 bounce: bang 263 at a word: briefly but sincerely 266 fetch off: get the better of, 'take in' 271 duer: more duly 279 over-scutched huswives: cants term for 'harlots' carmen: teamsters 280 fancies . . . good-nights: common names for little poems 281 Vice's dagger; cf. n.

ACT FOURTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter the Archbishop, Mowbray, [Lord] Bardolph, Hastings, within the Forest of Gaultree.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?
Hast. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an 't shall please your Grace.
Arch. Here stand, my lords, and send discoverers forth,
To know the numbers of our enemies.
Hast. We have sent forth already.
Arch. 'Tis well done.
My friends and brethren in these great affairs,
I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd
New-dated letters from Northumberland;
Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:
Here doth he wish his person, with such powers
As might hold sortance with his quality;
The which he could not levy; whereupon
He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes,
To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers
That your attempts may overlive the hazard
And fearful meeting of their opposite.
Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground
And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?
Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form comes on the enemy;
And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Upon or near the rate of thirty thousand.
Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them out.
Let us sway on and face them in the field.

Enter Westmoreland.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here?
Mowb. I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland.
West. Health and fair greeting from our general,
The Prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster.
Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace,
What doth concern your coming.
West. Then, my lord,
Unto your Grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion
Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,

287 hautboy: slender reed instrument, oboe 289, 290 philosopher's two stones; cf. n. 12 hold sortance: be in accord quality: rank 22 form: formation 25 just proportion: exact size gave them out: described them 36 routs: gangs 37 guarded: decked

And countenanc'd by boys and beggary;
I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd,
In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You, reverend father, and these noble lords
Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection
With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop,
Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd,
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd,
Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd,
Whose white investments figure innocence,
The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,
Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself
Out of the speech of peace that bears such grace
Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war;
Turning your books to greaves, your ink to blood,
Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine
To a loud trumpet and a point of war?
Arch. Wherefore do I this? so the question stands.
Briefly to this end: we are all diseas'd;
And, with our surfeiting and wanton hours
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,
And we must bleed for it: of which disease
Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician,
Nor do I as an enemy to peace
Troop in the throngs of military men;
But rather show a while like fearful war,
To diet rank minds sick of happiness
And purge the obstructions which begin to stop
Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly:
I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer,
And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of time doth run
And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere
By the rough torrent of occasion;
And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles,
Which long ere this we offer'd to the king,
And might by no suit gain our audience.
When we are wrong'd and would unfold our griefs,
We are denied access unto his person
Even by those men that most have done us wrong.
The dangers of the days but newly gone,—
Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet appearing blood,—and the examples
Of every minute's instance, present now,
Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms;
Not to break peace, or any branch of it,
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.
West. When ever yet was your appeal denied?
Wherein have you been galled by the king?
What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you,
That you should seal this lawless bloody book
Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine,
And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

55 point: trumpet signal 72 griefs: grievances 96 commotion's: insurrection's

Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,
To brother born an household cruelty,
I make my quarrel in particular.
West. There is no need of any such redress;
Or if there were, it not belongs to you.
Mowb. Why not to him in part, and to us all
That feel the bruises of the days before,
And suffer the condition of these times
To lay a heavy and unequal hand
Upon our honours?
West. O! my good Lord Mowbray,
Construe the times to their necessities,
And you shall say indeed, it is the time,
And not the king, that doth you injuries.
Yet, for your part, it not appears to me
Either from the king or in the present time
That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a grief on: were you not restor'd
To all the Duke of Norfolk's signories,
Your noble and right well-remember'd father's?
Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my father lost,
That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me?
The king that lov'd him as the state stood then,
Was force perforce compell'd to banish him:
And then that Harry Bolingbroke and he,
Being mounted and both roused in their seats,
Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down,
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel,
And the loud trumpet blowing them together,
Then, then when there was nothing could have stay'd
My father from the breast of Bolingbroke,
O! when the king did throw his warder down,
His own life hung upon the staff he threw;
Then threw he down himself and all their lives
That by indictment and by dint of sword
Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.
West. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what.
The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant gentleman:
Who knows on whom Fortune would then have smil'd?
But if your father had been victor there,
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry;
For all the country in a general voice
Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers and love
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on
And bless'd and grac'd indeed, more than the king.
But this is mere digression from my purpose.
Here come I from our princely general
To know your griefs; to tell you from his Grace
That he will give you audience; and wherein
It shall appear that your demands are just,
You shall enjoy them; everything set off
That might so much as think you enemies.
Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer,
And it proceeds from policy, not love.

97–99 Cf. n. 108 to: according to 118 breath'd: given breath of life 121 ff. Cf. n. 124 armed staves: lances in charge: in rest for the charge beavers: movable fronts of the helmets 125 sights: eyeholes of the helmets 129 warder: staff of command 133 miscarried: perished 135 Earl of Hereford: King Henry, actually Duke of Hereford at the time of his banishment (cf. Richard II, I. iii. 21) 149 set off: ignored

West. Mowbray, you overween to take it so.
This offer comes from mercy, not from fear:
For, lo! within a ken our army lies
Upon mine honour, all too confident
To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;
Then reason will our hearts should be as good:
Say you not then our offer is compell'd.
Mowb. Well, by my will we shall admit no parley.
West. That argues but the shame of your offence:
A rotten case abides no handling.
Hast. Hath the Prince John a full commission,
In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?
West. That is intended in the general's name.
I muse you make so slight a question.
Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,
For this contains our general grievances:
Each several article herein redress'd;
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinew'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form;
And present execution of our wills
To us and to our purposes consign'd;
We come within our awful banks again
And knit our powers to the arm of peace.
West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,
In sight of both our battles we may meet;
And either end in peace, which God so frame!
Or to the place of difference call the swords
Which must decide it.
Arch. My lord, we will do so.

Exit Westmoreland.

Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me
That no conditions of our peace can stand.
Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace
Upon such large terms, and so absolute
As our conditions shall consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.
Mowb. Yea, but our valuation shall be such
That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason
Shall to the king taste of this action;
That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff
And good from bad find no partition.
Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this; the king is weary
Of dainty and such picking grievances:
For he hath found to end one doubt by death
Revives two greater in the heirs of life;
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no tell-tale to his memory
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance; for full well he knows
He cannot so precisely weed this land
As his misdoubts present occasion:
His foes are so enrooted with his friends
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so and shake a friend.
So that this land, like an offensive wife,
That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up
And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.
Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods
On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement;
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.
Arch. 'Tis very true:
And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,
If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.
Mowb. Be it so.
Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland.

Enter Westmoreland.

West. The prince is here at hand: pleaseth your lordship,
To meet his Grace just distance 'tween our armies?
Mowb. Your Grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.
Arch. Before, and greet his Grace: my lord, we come.

Scene Second

[The Same]

Enter Prince John of Lancaster and his army.

Lanc. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin Mowbray:
Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop;
And so to you, Lord Hastings, and to all.
My Lord of York, it better show'd with you.
When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text
Than now to see you here an iron man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword and life to death.
That man that sits within a monarch's heart
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
Alack! what mischiefs might he set abroach
In shadow of such greatness. With you, lord bishop,
It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken
How deep you were within the books of God?
To us the speaker in his parliament;
To us the imagin'd voice of God himself;

153 overween: are arrogant 155 within a ken: within seeing distance 158 names: noble and soldierly names 167 In . . . virtue: by complete authority 170 intended: implied 171 muse: wonder slight: trivial 176 insinew'd: joined as by sinews 179 consign'd; cf. n. 180 awful: respectful, reverential 194 our valuation: the king's estimation of us 196 nice: trivial 203 picking: fastidious

211 misdoubts: suspicions 218 hangs: suspends resolv'd correction: chastisement which had been determined upon 224 offer: attack 227 atonement: reconciliation 236 Before: go before me Scene Second; cf. n.

The very opener and intelligencer
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings. O! who shall believe
But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the coutenance and grace of heaven,
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up,
Under the counterfeited zeal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father;
And both against the peace of heaven and him
Have here upswarm'd them.
Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland,
The time misorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your Grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief,—
The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court,—
Whereon this Hydra son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep
With grant of our most just and right desires,
And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.
Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.
Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt:
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them;
And so success of mischief shall be born,
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up
Whiles England shall have generation.
Lanc. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,
To sound the bottom of the after-times.
West. Pleaseth your Grace, to answer them directly
How far forth you do like their articles.
Lanc. I like them all, and do allow them well;
And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook,
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.
My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd;
Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you,
Discharge your powers unto their several counties,
As we will ours: and here between the armies
Let's drink together friendly and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens home
Of our restored love and amity.
Arch. I take your princely word for these redresses.
Lanc. I give it you, and will maintain my word:
And thereupon I drink unto your Grace.
Hast. [To an Officer.] Go, captain, and deliver to the army
This news of peace: let them have pay, and part:
I know it will well please them: hie thee, captain.
Exit [Officer].
Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmoreland.
West. I pledge your Grace: and, if you knew what pains
I have bestow'd to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely; but my love to you
Shall show itself more openly hereafter.
Arch. I do not doubt you.
West. I am glad of it.
Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray.
Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season;
For I am, on the sudden, something ill.
Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry,
But heaviness foreruns the good event.
West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow
Serves to say thus, Some good thing comes to-morrow.
Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.
Mowb. So much the worse if your own rule be true.
Shout [within].
Lanc. The word of peace is render'd: hark, how they shout!
Mowb. This had been cheerful, after victory.
Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest;
For then both parties nobly are subdu'd,
And neither party loser.
Lanc. Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too. Exit [Westmoreland].
And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains
March by us, that we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withal.
Arch. Go, good Lord Hastings,
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by.
Exit [Hastings].
Lanc. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night together.

Enter Westmoreland.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?
West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand,
Will not go off until they hear you speak.
Lanc. They know their duties.

Enter Hastings.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already:
Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses
East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke up,
Each hurries toward his home and sporting-place.
West. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings; for the which
I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason:
And you, lord archbishop, and you, Lord Mowbray,
Of capital treason I attach you both.
Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?
West. Is your assembly so?
Arch. Will you thus break your faith?
Lanc. I pawn'd thee none.
I promis'd you redress of these same grievances
Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour,
I will perform with a most Christian care.
But for you, rebels, look to taste the due
Meet for rebellion and such acts as yours.
Most shallowly did you these arms commence,
Fondly brought here and foolishly sent hence.
Strike up our drums! pursue the scatter'd stray:
God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.

20 intelligencer: interpreter 22 workings: actions 26 taken up: levied 49 success: succession 72 part: depart

84 Against: when about to face 85 heaviness: depression 88 passing: exceedingly 90 render'd: reported 97 peruse: inspect 118 pawn'd: pledged 124 shallowly: thoughtlessly 125 Fondly: foolishly

Some guard these traitors to the block of death;
Treason's true bed, and yielder up of breath. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Another Part of the Forest]
Alarums. Excursions. Enter Falstaff and Colevile.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Colevile of the dale.

Fal. Well then, Colevile is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale: Colevile shall be still your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place deep enough; so shall you be still Colevile of the dale.

Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whoe'er I am. Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb undoes me. Here comes our general.

Enter Prince John, Westmoreland and the rest.

Lanc. The heat is past, follow no further now. Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland. [Exit Westmoreland.]
Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?
When everything is ended, then you come:
These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,
One time or other break some gallows' back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility; I have foundered nine score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colevile of the dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, 'I came, saw, and overcame.'

Lanc. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him; and I beseech your Grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on 't, Colevile kissing my foot. To the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I in the clear sky of fame o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble. Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

Lanc. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

Lanc. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Lanc. Is thy name Colevile?

Cole. It is, my lord.

Lanc. A famous rebel art thou, Colevile.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are
That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me
You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves: but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis, and I thank thee for thee.

Enter Westmoreland.

Lanc. Now, have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made and execution stay'd.

Lanc. Send Colevile with his confederates
To York, to present execution.
Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure.
Exit [Blunt] with Colevile.
And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords:
I hear, the king my father is sore sick:
Our news shall go before us to his majesty,
Which, cousin [addressing Westmoreland], you shall bear, to comfort him;
And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go,
Through Gloucestershire, and when you come to court
Stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

Lanc. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition,
Shall better speak of you than you deserve.
[Exeunt all but Falstaff.]

Fal. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches. They are generally fools and cowards, which some of us should be too but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery and delectable shapes; which, deliver'd o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom,

1 condition: rank 13 observance: homage 18 indifferency: moderate size 21 heat: race, pursuit 28 check: reproof 30 expedition: speed 32 posts: post-horses 45 cinders: glowing coals, stars 46 element: sky

67 present: immediate 69 dispatch we: let us hasten 77 Stand my good lord: be my kind patron 78 condition: official capacity 84 come to any proof: turn out well 87 get wenches: beget girls 78 sherris-sack: sherry 90 crudy: crude, raw 91 forgetive: inventive

man, to arm; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil till sack commences it and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and to addict themselves to sack.

Enter Bardolph.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire; and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber]
Enter the King, Warwick, Thomas Duke of Clarence, Humphrey of Gloucester [and others].

King. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end
To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields
And draw no swords, but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And everything lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength;
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

War. Both which we doubt not but your majesty
Shall soon enjoy.

King. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester,
Where is the prince your brother?

Glo. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

King. And how accompanied?

Glo. I do not know, my lord.

King. Is not his brother Thomas of Clarence with him?

Glo. No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Cla. What would my lord and father?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.
How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother?
He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas;
Thou hast a better place in his affection
Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy,
And noble offices thou mayst effect
Of mediation, after I am dead,
Between his greatness and thy other brethren:
Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love,
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace
By seeming cold or careless of his will;
For he is gracious, if he be observ'd:
He hath a tear for pity and a hand
Open as day for melting charity;
Yet, notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint;
As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws congealed in the spring of day.
His temper therefore must be well observ'd:
Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,
When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth;
But, being moody, give him line and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas,
And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,
A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,
That the united vessel of their blood,
Mingled with venom of suggestion—
As, force perforce, the age will pour it in—
Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As aconitum or rash gunpowder.

Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love.

King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas?

Cla. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

King. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that?

Cla. With Poins and other his continual followers.

King. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;
And he, the noble image of my youth,
Is overspread with them: therefore my grief
Stretches itself beyond the hour of death:
The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape
In forms imaginary the unguided days
And rotten times that you shall look upon
When I am sleeping with my ancestors.
For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,
When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,
When means and lavish manners meet together,
O! with what wings shall his affections fly
Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay.

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite:
The prince but studies his companions
Like a strange tongue, wherein, to gain the language,
'Tis needful that the most immodest word
Be look'd upon, and learn'd; which once attain'd,
Your highness knows, comes to no further use
But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,
The prince will in the perfectness of time
Cast off his followers; and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live,
By which his Grace must mete the lives of others,
Turning past evils to advantages.

King. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb
In the dead carrion.

Enter Westmoreland.

Who's here? Westmoreland!

West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness

104, 105 Cf. n. 117–119 tempering . . . seal: the allusion is to sealing-wax S.d. Jerusalem Chamber; cf. n. 5 address'd: prepared 6 invested: invested with authority 29 omit: neglect 32 observ'd: humored 35–37 Cf. n. 43 Confound: exhaust 46–50 Cf. n. 67 affections: inclinations 69 look beyond: misjudge 79 mete: measure 81–83 Cf. n.

Added to that that I am to deliver!
Prince John your son doth kiss your Grace's hand:
Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings and all
Are brought to the correction of your law.
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,
But Peace puts forth her olive everywhere.
The manner how this action hath been borne
Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.
King. O Westmoreland! thou art a summer bird,
Which ever in the haunch of winter sings
The lifting up of day.

Enter Harcourt.

Look! here's more news.
Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty;
And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of!
The Earl Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolph,
With a great power of English and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown.
The manner and true order of the fight
This packet, please it you, contains at large.
King. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?
Will Fortune never come with both hands full
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach and no food:
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast
And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,
That have abundance and enjoy it not.
I should rejoice now at this happy news,
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy.
O me! come near me, now I am much ill.
Glo. Comfort, your majesty!
Cla. O my royal father!
West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself: look up!
War. Be patient, princes: you do know these fits
Are with his highness very ordinary:
Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be well.
Cla. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs:
The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in
So thin, that life looks through and will break out.
Glo. The people fear me; for they do observe
Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature:
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep and leap'd them over.
Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between;
And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before
That our great-grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died.
War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.
Glo. This apoplexy will certain be his end.
King. I pray you take me up, and bear me hence
Into some other chamber: softly, pray.
[Attendants and Lords take the King up, convey him into an inner room, and lay him upon a bed.]

93 particular: detail 95 haunch: end 109 stomach: appetite 124 wrought the mure: worn the wall 126 fear: frighten 127 (Such portents as) creatures born without parents and other monstrosities 128 as: as if

Scene Fifth

[Another Chamber
King Henry lying on a bed: Clarence, Gloucester, Warwick, and Others in attendance.]

King. Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.
War. Call for the music in the other room.
King. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.
Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.
War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter Prince Henry.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?
Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.
Prince. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!
How doth the king?
Glo. Exceeding ill.
Prince. Heard he the good news yet?
Tell it him.
Glo. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.
Prince. If he be sick with joy, he'll recover without physic.
War. Not so much noise, my lords. Sweet prince, speak low;
The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.
Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room.
War. Will 't please your Grace to go along with us?
Prince. No; I will sit and watch here by the king.
[Exeunt all but the Prince.]
Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?
O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
To many a watchful night! Sleep with it now!
Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet
As he whose brow with homely biggin bound
Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!
When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath
There lies a downy feather which stirs not:
Did he suspire, that light and weightless down
Perforce must move. My gracious lord! my father!
This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep
That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness
Shall, O dear father! pay thee plenteously:
My due from thee is this imperial crown,
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me. Lo! here it sits, [Putting it on his head.]
Which God shall guard; and put the world's whole strength
Into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me. This from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. Exit.
King. [Waking.] Warwick! Gloucester! Clarence!

Enter Warwick, Gloucester, Clarence [and the rest].

9 full: soothing, drowsy 25 ports: gates 28 biggin: nightcap 32 with safety: while it gives safety 34 suspire: breathe 37 rigol: circle, crown 43 immediate: next in line

Cla. Doth the king call?
War. What would your majesty? How fares your Grace?
King. Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?
Cla. We left the prince my brother here, my liege,
Who undertook to sit and watch by you.
King. The Prince of Wales! Where is he? let me see him:
He is not here.
War. This door is open; he is gone this way.
Glo. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.
King. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?
War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.
King. The prince hath ta'en it hence: go, seek him out.
Is he so hasty that he doth suppose
My sleep my death?
Find him, my Lord of Warwick; chide him hither.
[Exit Warwick.]
This part of his conjoins with my disease,
And helps to end me. See, sons, what things you are!
How quickly nature falls into revolt
When gold becomes her object!
For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleep with thoughts,
Their brains with care, their bones with industry;
For this they have engrossed and pil'd up
The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts and martial exercises:
When, like the bee, culling from every flower
The virtuous sweets,
Our thighs packed with wax, our mouths with honey,
We bring it to the hive, and like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste
Yield his engrossments to the ending father.

Enter Warwick.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?
War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,
Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks,
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow
That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.
King. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Enter Prince Henry.

Lo, where he comes. Come hither to me, Harry.
Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.
Exeunt [Warwick, and the rest].
Prince. I never thought to hear you speak again.
King. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought:
I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair
That thou wilt needs invest thee with my honours
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee.
Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind
That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.
Thou hast stol'n that which after some few hours
Were thine without offence; and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:
Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.
Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life.
What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?
Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself,
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear
That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.
Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head:
Only compound me with forgotten dust;
Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at form.
Harry the Fifth is crown'd! Up, vanity!
Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors, hence!
And to the English court assemble now,
From every region, apes of idleness!
Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum:
Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,
Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
England shall double gild his treble guilt.
England shall give him office, honour, might;
For the fifth Harry from curb'd licence plucks
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent.
O my poor kingdom! sick with civil blows,
When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O! thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants.
Prince. O! pardon me, my liege; but for my tears,
The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke
Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown;
And he that wears the crown immortally
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more
Than as your honour and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obedience rise,—
Which my most inward, true, and duteous spirit
Teacheth,—this prostrate and exterior bending.
God witness with me, when I here came in,
And found no course of breath within your majesty,
How cold it struck my heart! if I do feign,
O! let me in my present wildness die
And never live to show the incredulous world
The noble change that I have purposed.
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
I spake unto the crown as having sense,
And thus upbraided it: 'The care on thee depending

65 part: act 72 engrossed: amassed 73 canker'd: tarnished strange-achieved: gained in foreign lands 77 virtuous: beneficial 83 determin'd: ended 85 kindly: natural

105 seal'd up: confirmed fully 120 form: order 121 vanity: folly 137 care: special study 142 dear: earnest 146 affect: aspire to

Hath fed upon the body of my father;
Therefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold:
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,
Preserving life in medicine potable:
But thou most fine, most honour'd, most renown'd,
Hast eat thy bearer up.' Thus, my most royal liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head,
To try with it, as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!
King. O my son!
God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou mightst win the more thy father's love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
Come hither, Harry: sit thou by my bed;
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways
I met this crown; and I myself know well
How troublesome it sat upon my head:
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the soil of the achievement goes
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me
But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand,
And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed,
Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears
Thou seest with peril I have answered;
For all my reign hath been but as a scene
Acting that argument; and now my death
Changes the mode: for what in me was purchas'd,
Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
So thou the garment wear'st successively.
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;
And all my friends, which thou must make thy friends,
Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;
By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displac'd: which to avoid,
I cut them off; and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land,
Lest rest and lying still might make them look
Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course to busy giddy minds
With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne out,
May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so
That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
How I came by the crown, O God, forgive!
And grant it may with thee in true peace live.
Prince. My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
Then plain and right must my possession be:
Which I with more than with a common pain
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter Lord John of Lancaster, and Warwick.

King. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.
Lanc. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!
King. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;
But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare wither'd trunk: upon thy sight
My worldly business makes a period.
Where is my Lord of Warwick?
Prince. My Lord of Warwick!

[Warwick comes forward.]

King. Doth any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swound?
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.
King. Laud be to God! even there my life must end.
It hath been prophesied to me many years
I should not die but in Jerusalem,
Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land.
But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie:
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. Exeunt.

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

[Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire]
Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph [and Bardolph's boy].

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What! Davy, I say.
Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow.
Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused. Why, Davy!

Enter Davy.

Davy. Here, sir.
Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see, Davy; let me see: yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excused.
Davy. Marry, sir, thus; those precepts cannot be served: and again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheat?
Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook: are there no young pigeons?
Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons.
Shal. Let it be cast and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excused.
Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be 164 medicine potable; cf. n. 191 soil: pollution 200 argument: story 201 mode; cf. n. purchas'd: acquired by my own act, not inherited 203 successively: by right of succession 216 hence: in other lands 217 waste: consume

1 cock and pie; cf. n. 11 precepts: summonses 17 cast: reckoned had: and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shal. A' shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any petty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well. A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy, for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy: about thy business, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes o' the hill.

Shal. There is many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.

Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come; off with your boots. Give me your hand, Master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph:— [To the Page.] and welcome, my tall fellow. Come, Sir John.

Fal. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit Shallow.] Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man. Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions,—which is four terms, or two actions,—and a' shall laugh without intervallums. O! it is much that a lie with a slight oath and a jest with a sad brow will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders. O! you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up!

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!

Fal. I come, Master Shallow: I come, Master Shallow.

[Exit.]

24 kickshaws: fancy dishes 31 Well conceited: cleverly put 32 countenance: favor 53 quantities: small pieces 55 semblable coherence: approach to likeness 60 consent: agreement 68 terms: i.e., of court actions: legal actions for debt 69 intervallums: intervals 70 sad: sober 72 ill laid up: carelessly put away

Scene Second

[Westminster. The Palace]
Enter the Earl of Warwick and the Lord Chief Justice.

War. How now, my Lord Chief Justice! whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the king?

War. Exceeding well: his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature;
And to our purposes he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me with him:
The service that I truly did his life
Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed I think the young king loves you not.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm myself
To welcome the condition of the time,
Which cannot look more hideously upon me
Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter John of Lancaster, Gloucester, Clarence [Westmoreland, and others].

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry:
O! that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen.
How many nobles then should hold their places,
That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Ch. Just. O God! I fear all will be overturn'd.

Lanc. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow.

Glo. Cla. } Good morrow, cousin.

Lanc. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument
Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

Lanc. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

Glo. O! good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed;
And I dare swear you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow; it is sure your own.

Lanc. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,
You stand in coldest expectation.
I am the sorrier; would 'twere otherwise.

Cla. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair,
Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour,
Led by the impartial conduct of my soul;
And never shall you see that I will beg
A ragged and forestall'd remission.
If truth and upright innocency fail me,
I'll to the king my master that is dead,
And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter the Prince and Blunt.

Ch. Just. Good morrow, and God save your majesty!

Prince. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty,
Sits not so easy on me as you think.
Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear:
This is the English, not the Turkish court;

15 heavy: sorrowful 25 argument: subject of conversation 33 coldest: most hopeless 36 Cf. n. 40 ragged: beggarly forestalled remission: pardon that is sure not to be granted

Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,
But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,
For, by my faith, it very well becomes you:
Sorrow so royally in you appears
That I will deeply put the fashion on
And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;
But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
Than a joint burden laid upon us all.
For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd,
I'll be your father and your brother too;
Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares:
Yet weep that Harry's dead, and so will I;
But Harry lives that shall convert those tears
By number into hours of happiness.
Brothers. We hope no other from your majesty.
Prince. You all look strangely on me: [To the Chief Justice.] and you most;
You are, I think, assur'd I love you not.
Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,
Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.
Prince. No?
How might a prince of my great hopes forget
So great indignities you laid upon me?
What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison
The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?
Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father;
The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in the administration of his law,
Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth,
Your highness pleased to forget my place,
The majesty and power of law and justice,
The image of the king whom I presented,
And struck me in my very seat of judgment;
Whereon, as an offender to your father,
I gave bold way to my authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the garland,
To have a son set your decrees at nought,
To pluck down justice from your awful bench,
To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
That guards the peace and safety of your person;
Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image
And mock your workings in a second body.
Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours;
Be now the father and propose a son,
Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,
See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd;
And then imagine me taking your part,
And in your power soft silencing your son:
After this cold considerance, sentence me;
And, as you are a king, speak in your state
What I have done that misbecame my place,
My person, or my liege's sovereignty.
Prince. You are right, justice; and you weigh this well;
Therefore still bear the balance and the sword:
And I do wish your honours may increase
Till you do live to see a son of mine
Offend you and obey you, as I did.
So shall I live to speak my father's words:
'Happy am I, that have a man so bold
That dares do justice on my proper son;
And not less happy, having such a son,
That would deliver up his greatness so
Into the hands of justice.' You did commit me:
For which, I do commit into your hand
The unstained sword that you have us'd to bear;
With this remembrance, that you use the same
With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit
As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand:
You shall be as a father to my youth;
My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear,
And I will stoop and humble my intents
To your well-practis'd wise directions.
And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;
My father is gone wild into his grave,
For in his tomb lie my affections;
And with his spirit sadly I survive,
To mock the expectation of the world,
To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now:
Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of floods
And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
Now call we our high court of parliament;
And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go
In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;
That war or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us;
In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.
Our coronation done, we will accite,
As I before remember'd, all our state:
And, God consigning to my good intents,
No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say,
God shorten Harry's happy life one day. Exeunt.

50 Cf. n. 74 easy: trivial 75 Lethe: the river of oblivion 76 use the person: make use of my position as personal representative 82 presented: represented 87 garland: crown 93 second body: deputy 95 propose: imagine 101 considerance: consideration 106 balance and the sword: emblems of Justice 112 proper: own 118 remembrance: admonition 126, 127 Cf. n. 128 sadly: soberly 132 After my seeming: according to appearances 135 state of floods: majesty of the ocean 140 In equal rank: step by step 144 accite: summon 145 remember'd: mentioned 146 consigning to: confirming

Scene Third

[The Garden of Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire]
Enter Sir John, Shallow, Silence, Davy, Bardolph, Page.

Shal. Nay, you shall see my orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of mine own graffing, with a dish of caraways, and so forth; come, cousin Silence; and then to bed.

Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John: marry, good air. Spread, Davy; spread: well said, Davy.

2 graffing: grafting 3 caraways: confection made with caraway seeds 8 said: done

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John: by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper: a good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down. Come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth a', we shall
'Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,
And praise God for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap and females dear,
And lusty lads roam here and there,
So merrily,
And ever among so merrily.'

Fal. There's a merry heart! Good Master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon: most sweet sir, sit. Master page, good master page, sit. Proface! What you want in meat we'll have in drink: but you must bear: the heart's all. [Exit.]

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph; and my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. 'Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;
For women are shrews, both short and tall:
'Tis merry in hall when beards wag all,
And welcome merry Shrove-tide.
Be merry, be merry.'

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now.

[Enter Davy.]

Davy. There's a dish of leather-coats for you.
[Setting them before Bardolph.]

Shal. Davy!

Davy. Your worship! I'll be with you straight. A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. 'A cup of wine that's brisk and fine
And drink unto the leman mine;
And a merry heart lives long-a.'

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. And we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master Silence.

Sil. 'Fill the cup, and let it come;
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.'

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: if thou wantest anything and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart. [To the Page.] Welcome, my little tiny thief; and welcome indeed too. I'll drink to Master Bardolph and to all the cavaleros about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,—

Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together: ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot.

Shal. By God's liggens, I thank thee. The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that: a' will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing: be merry.
[One knocks at the door.]
Look who's at door there. Ho! who knocks? [Exit Davy.]

Fal. [To Silence, who drinks a bumper.] Why, now you have done me right.

Sil. 'Do me right,
And dub me knight:
Samingo.'
Is 't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is 't so? Why, then, say an old man can do somewhat.

[Enter Davy.]

Davy. An 't please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court! let him come in.

Enter Pistol.

How now, Pistol!

Pist. Sir John, God save you, sir!

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good. Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Sil. By 'r lady, I think a' be, but goodman Puff of Barson.

Pist. Puff!
Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!
Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend,
And helter-skelter have I rode to thee,
And tidings do I bring and lucky joys
And golden times and happy news of price.

Fal. I prithee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A foutra for the world and worldlings base!
I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news?
Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. 'And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.'

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?
And shall good news be baffled?
Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Shal. Honest gentlemen, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir: if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there's but two ways: either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am sir, under the king, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian? speak, or die.

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth? or Fifth?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A foutra for thine office!
Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king;
Harry the Fifth's the man. I speak the truth:
When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like

10 husband: husbandman 20 ever among: all the while 25 Proface: may it do you good (Italian 'prò vi faccia') 27 heart: intention 33 Shrove-tide: a time of special merriment at the close of the carnival 39 leather-coats: russet apples 43 leman: sweetheart 54 cavaleros: cavaliers 60 liggens: an original oath of Shallow's 61 will not out: will not fail (sporting term)

66 done me right: a common expression in drinking healths 68 dub me knight; cf. n. 69 Samingo: San Domingo, a common refrain in drinking songs 82 but: except Barson: Barston in Warwickshire 88 price: value 90 foutra: exclamation of contempt 93, 94 These lines refer to popular ballads 95 Cf. n. 104 Bezonian: base beggar 111 fig: to thrust the thumb between two closed fingers, or into the mouth, a vulgar insult, imported from Spain

The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What! is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are just.

Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse. Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double charge thee with dignities.

Bard. O joyful day!
I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pist. What! I do bring good news.

Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed. Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am Fortune's steward. Get on thy boots: we'll ride all night. O sweet Pistol! Away, Bardolph! [Exit Bardolph.] Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and withal devise something to do thyself good. Boot, boot, Master Shallow: I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Blessed are they which have been my friends, and woe to my lord chief justice!

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!
'Where is the life that late I led?' say they:
Why, here it is: welcome these pleasant days! Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[London. A Street]
Enter Hostess Quickly, Doll Tearsheet, and Beadles.

Host. No, thou arrant knave: I would to God that I might die that I might have thee hanged; thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

First Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me, and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her: there hath been a man or two lately killed about her.

Dol. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on; I'll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou wert better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain.

Host. O the Lord! that Sir John were come; he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

First Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat amongst you.

Dol. I'll tell you what, you thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swinged for this, you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy famished correctioner! if you be not swinged, I'll forswear half-kirtles.

First Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Host. O God, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes ease.

Dol. Come, you rogue, come: bring me to a justice.

Host. Ay; come, you starved blood-hound.

Dol. Goodman death! goodman bones!

Host. Thou atomy, thou!

Dol. Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal!

First Bead. Very well. Exeunt.

114 just: correct 131 Quotation from another ballad 7 nut-hook: slang for beadle; cf. catchpole 17 in a censer: i.e., a figure embossed on a censer 18 swinged: whipped blue-bottle: the reference is to the beadle's blue livery 20 half-kirtles: waists or skirts 23 of sufferance: out of suffering 27 atomy: Dame Quickly's confusion of 'atom' with 'anatomy' = skeleton

Scene Fifth

[A public Place near Westminster Abbey]
Enter two Grooms, strewers of rushes.

First Groom. More rushes, more rushes.

Sec. Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

First Groom. 'Twill be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation. Dispatch, dispatch. Exeunt Grooms.

Trumpets sound, and the King and his train pass over the stage. After them, enter Falstaff, Shallow, Pistol, Bardolph, and the Boy.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace. I will leer upon him, as a' comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight.

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me. O! if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion.

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me.

Shal. It is best, certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else; putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nihil est: 'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver,
And make thee rage.
Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts,
Is in base durance and contagious prison;
Hal'd thither
By most mechanical and dirty hand:
Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell Alecto's snake,
For Doll is in: Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her. [Shouts within and trumpets sound.]

Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangour sounds.

The trumpets sound. Enter King Henry the Fifth, Brothers, Lord Chief Justice.

Fal. God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal Hal!

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy!

K. Hen. V. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!

K. Hen. V. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers;
How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!

26, 27 Cf. n. 34 mechanical: common, vulgar 35 ebon: black Alecto: one of the Furies 40 imp: child 43 vain: foolish

I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane;
But, being awak'd, I do despise my dream.
Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;
Leave gormandising; know the grave doth gape
For thee thrice wider than for other men.
Reply not to me with a fool-born jest:
Presume not that I am the thing I was;
For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,
That I have turn'd away my former self;
So will I those that kept me company.
When thou dost hear I am as I have been,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,
The tutor and the feeder of my riots:
Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,
As I have done the rest of my misleaders,
Not to come near our person by ten mile.
For competence of life I will allow you,
That lack of means enforce you not to evil:
And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,
We will, according to your strength and qualities,
Give you advancement. Be it your charge, my lord,
To see perform'd the tenour of our word.
Set on. Exit the King [with his Train].

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Yea, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this: I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancements; I will be the man yet that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot perceive how, unless you give me your doublet and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour that I fear you will die in, Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours: go with me to dinner.
Come, Lieutenant Pistol; come, Bardolph: I shall be sent for soon at night.

Enter Justice and Prince John.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet;
Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord!

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear you soon.
Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormenta, spero contenta.

Exeunt. Mane[n]t [Prince John of] Lancaster and Chief Justice.

Lanc. I like this fair proceeding of the king's.
He hath intent his wonted followers
Shall all be very well provided for;
But all are banish'd till their conversations
Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

Lanc. The king hath call'd his parliament, my lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

Lanc. I will lay odds, that, ere this year expire,
We bear our civil swords and native fire
As far as France. I heard a bird so sing,
Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.
Come, will you hence? Exeunt.

Epilogue

[Spoken by a Dancer.]

First, my fear; then, my curtsy; last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure, my curtsy, my duty, and my speech, to beg your pardon. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me; for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what indeed I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known to you,—as it is very well,—I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I did mean indeed to pay you with this; which, if like an ill venture it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here, I promised you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some and I will pay you some; and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment, to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me: if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for anything I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already a' be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night: and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

Finis

85 colour: pun on collar, halter 86 Fear no colours: have no fear; originally, fear no enemy 89 the Fleet: a London prison

98 conversations: habits Epilogue; cf. n. 5 doubt: fear 9 break: became bankrupt 11 bate: remit 28 to pray for the queen; cf. n.

Notes

Ind. S.d. Rumour, painted full of tongues. Vergil (Æneid iv. 174) describes Fame, or Rumour, as covered with ears, eyes, and tongues. Cf. also Chaucer, Hous of Fame, 1389-90.

Ind.24. Shrewsbury. The last act of Shakespeare's Henry IV, Part I, is devoted to the battle of Shrewsbury, in which the King and his armies overcome the rebel forces under young Harry Percy (Hotspur); his uncle, the Earl of Worcester; and the Scottish Earl of Douglas.

Ind.29. Harry Monmouth. Henry, Prince of Wales, who, according to Shakespeare, killed Hotspur in single combat at the battle of Shrewsbury. Monmouth was the place of his birth.

Ind.35. hole. Shakespeare is obviously playing on the words hole and hold. Most modern editors have spoiled the rather poor pun by substituting the word hold for hole.

I.i.128-130. 'By his spirit was his party inspired, i.e., made keen and sharp as steel; but, when once his spirit was brought down (technically, reduced to a lower temper) all his followers became dull and heavy as lead.'

I.i.140. In 1 Henry IV, V. iii., Douglas kills Sir Walter Blunt, who was dressed to resemble the King, and tells us that he has already killed the Lord of Stafford in the king's 'likeness.' When, later, Prince Hal challenges Douglas to single combat, he says:

> 'the spirits
> Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms.'

I.i.178-191. These lines are the first of a series of passages omitted in the Quarto texts of the play and added by the Folio. The other important Folio additions are the following: I.i.201-221; I.iii.22-25; I.iii.38-57; I.iii.87-113; II.iii.23-45; IV.i.58-82; Epilogue 27, 28 (and so kneel . . . queen). Furthermore, the whole of III.i., containing the King's famous soliloquy on sleep, is omitted in certain Quarto copies, though added in others. On the other hand, certain passages, usually shorter and belonging to the prose scenes, are omitted in the Folio version; viz., I.ii.193-198 (But it was . . . motion); II.ii.20-24 (and God . . . strengthened); II.iv.10, 11 (Dispatch . . . straight); II.iv.113-114; II.iv.350 f. (Come! . . . come, Doll?); III.i.53-56 (O! . . . die); III.ii.277, 278 (yet lecherous . . . mandrake); III.ii.278-280 (and sung . . . good-nights); IV.i.96; IV.i.98.

I.i.216, 217. According to Shakespeare, King Richard II, predecessor and cousin of Henry IV, was murdered in Pomfret castle at Henry's hint, after the latter had forced Richard's abdication. Cf. Shakespeare's Richard II. Richard Scroop, Archbishop of York, belonged to a family which was firmly attached to the cause of Richard.

I.i.220. Bolingbroke. King Henry, born in Bolingbroke castle, Lincolnshire.

I.ii.14. manned with an agate. Attended by a servant as small as a figure cut in an agate.

I.ii.21. face-royal. A royal was a gold coin worth ten shillings. Falstaff is here playing on the double sense of a 'royal face' and the face stamped on the coin.

I.ii.30. glutton. The parable of Dives and Lazarus (St. Luke 16. 19-31) is frequently referred to by Falstaff, possibly because Dives, 'the glutton,' who 'fared sumptuously every day,' but who went to hell and called out for the poor man Lazarus to 'dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue,' reminds Falstaff of his own manner of life and probable fate.

I.ii.31. Achitophel. The counsellor of Absalom (II Samuel 15-17) who was cursed by David, and who 'gat him home to his house and hanged himself' after Absalom rejected his counsel.

I.ii.31, 32. yea-forsooth knave. The reference is to the mild oaths employed by the Puritanical middle-class tradespeople of Shakespeare's own day. Cf. Hotspur's ridicule of this same trait in 1 Henry IV, III.i.254 ff.

I.ii.40-42. Falstaff is here playing with the ancient jest that deceived husbands wear invisible horns. Lightness is obviously used in a double sense, and the old spelling of lanthorn, which emphasizes the horn sides of an Elizabethan lantern, carries out the jest.

I.ii.45. Paul's. The nave of St. Paul's Cathedral was in Shakespeare's day the business center of London. From eleven to twelve, and three to six, daily, men of all professions and trades congregated there. Men out of work, and masters looking for servants, posted their advertisements on the pillars of the nave. Falstaff is probably referring here to a popular saying, quoted in The Choice of Change, 1598: 'A man must not make choice of three things in three places: of a wife in Westminster, of a servant in Paul's, of a horse in Smithfield; lest he choose a quean, a knave, or a jade.' Smithfield is the great cattle market of London.

I.ii.49, 50. This episode from The Famous Victories of Henry V is reprinted in the Introduction.

I.ii.79. hunt counter. A hunting term meaning to follow the trail in a direction opposite to that which the game has taken. There is also perhaps here a pun on the two Compters, or debtors', prisons in London.

I.ii.132, 133. Blind beggars often had dogs to lead them through the streets.

I.ii.145. wax. 'A poor quibble on the word wax, which signifies increase as well as the matter of the honey-comb.' Johnson.

I.ii.151-153. An angel was a gold coin, worth upwards of six shillings, which took its name from its device, the archangel Michael. Falstaff is here punning on the word, and in the phrases cannot go and cannot tell, he is perhaps using terms which refer to the circulation of money, meaning 'I cannot pass current. I cannot count as good coin.'

I.ii.191. spit white. Furnivall quotes Batman uppon Bartholome (1582): 'If the spettle be white viscus, the sicknesse cometh of fleame; if black, of melancholy;—the white spettle not knottie, signifieth health.'

I.ii.203, 204. bear crosses. Another quibble on coins, many of which were marked with crosses.

I.ii.206. A three-man beetle is a mallet so heavy that it requires three men to swing it. Filliping the load, according to Steevens, is a Warwickshire game, in which a toad is placed on the end of a short board placed across a log; the other end of the board is then struck with a mallet, and the toad thrown into the air. If Falstaff took the part of the toad in this game, it would, he implies, require a three-man beetle to fillip one of his size.

I.iii.38-43. Many emendations have been suggested for this apparently corrupt passage. It is probable that a line has been lost here, but it is possible to understand Lord Bardolph's speech without changing the text. Lord Hastings has just been remonstrating with Lord Bardolph for his pessimism, saying that hope never injured any cause. Lord Bardolph replies: 'Yes, it does,—if, for example, this present business of war (indeed this very action now contemplated, this cause that is now on foot), lives merely on such desperate hopes as buds which appear too early in the spring; for hope gives less warrant that these buds will become fruit than despair gives that the frosts will destroy them.'

I.iii.55-57. 'Know how well able our estate is to undergo such a work, and how well able it is to balance the power of our opponent.'

II.i.26, 27. When Dame Quickly says, 'A hundred mark is a long one,' i.e., a long mark, score, or reckoning, she puns on a hundred marks as a debt and a hundred yard mark at archery.

II.i.51, 52. rampallian. Elizabethan slang, rascal, rapscallion; used also by Beaumont and Fletcher. Fustilarian, a word coined by Falstaff, suggested by the word fustilugs, a fat, frowsy woman. Catastrophe, in the sense of conclusion, end; used jocularly here for the posteriors.

II.i.112. Falstaff has the legal right to demand protection against the just claims of Mistress Quickly, as he is about to set forth for the north on the King's business. The Chief Justice admits his 'power to do wrong' in this matter, but urges him to answer the poor woman's suit in a manner suitable to his reputation as a gentleman and soldier.

II.i.124. Falstaff tries to comfort Mistress Quickly for the loss of her plate by assuring her that glasses are much more fashionable and pleasanter to drink from than silver goblets.

II.i.164. 'This is the proper behaviour in fencing.' Falstaff refers to his inattention to the Justice's remarks as a retaliation for the Justice's inattention to his questions in ll. 143 ff.

II.ii.19-24. Shirts were made of holland linen (worth 'eight shillings an ell,' cf. 1 Henry IV, III.iii.62, 63). The play on the words holland and low-countries is apparent. The Prince proceeds to assume that Poins's shortage in shirts is due to the fact that his old shirts are serving as garments for his illegitimate children, who 'bawl out' from 'the ruins of his linen.'

II.ii.76-79. Either Shakespeare or the Page confuses the dream of Hecuba with that of Althea. Althea dreamed that the Fates told her that her newborn son would live only so long as a burning brand on the hearth remained unconsumed. Althea snatched the brand from the hearth, extinguished the fire, and prolonged her son's life.

II.ii.90. martlemas. Corrupted form of Martinmas, or the Feast of St. Martin, November 11. This day was considered the last day of autumn, and was also the day for salting and hanging the winter's supply of beef. The reference is obviously to Falstaff's hearty old age (cf. All-hallown summer, 1 Henry IV, I.ii.137, 138, note), or to Falstaff as a 'martlemas beef.'

II.ii.101, 102. borrower's cap. A man asking for a loan is always very ready to take off his cap.

II.ii.103ff. Most modern editors have rearranged the following speeches, giving to Poins the reading of Falstaff's letter to Hal. The Quarto and Folio arrangement, followed with one exception (cf. Introduction) in this text, seems more natural. In lines 87, 88 Bardolph evidently gives the letter to the Prince, not to Poins. In line 95 the Prince shows the letter to Poins, but does not necessarily give it to him.

II.ii.158. The parallel is not striking. Jove took the form of a bull to woo Europa. Hal disguises himself as a waiter to spy upon Falstaff. The leather jerkins are the only connecting link.

II.iv.28. The ballad sung by Falstaff has been preserved in Percy's Reliques.

II.iv.42. Another scrap of an old ballad.

II.iv.73. debuty. Mistress Quickly's pronunciation of deputy, and of Wednesday in line 74, both of which are corrected in the Folio text, indicates that she has a cold in her head.

II.iv.83. tame cheater. A cant term for a low gamester, especially for a gamester's decoy. Mistress Quickly understands the word in the sense of escheator, or officer of the exchequer. The Cambridge editors suggest the emendation chetah, the hunting leopard, known in Europe as early as the fifteenth century. The sentence, you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound, would indicate at least that Falstaff is playing on the two words cheater and chetah. One would hardly speak of stroking a gamester's decoy.

II.iv.124. occupy. This word was used only in an obscene sense in Shakespeare's day. From the sixteenth to the nineteenth century it seldom appears in literature.

II.iv.134. Have we not Hiren here? This phrase, which became proverbial in Elizabethan drama, probably originated in a lost play by George Peele, entitled, The Turkish Mahomet and Hyren (Irene) the Fair Greek. Pistol applies the name to his sword. Mistress Quickly (ll. 148) thinks he is inquiring for some woman.

II.iv.138, 139. Pistol misquotes from Marlowe's Tamburlaine the Great, Pt. II, IV, iv:

'Holla, ye pamper'd jades of Asia!
What! can ye draw but twenty miles a day?'

II.iv.152. Another burlesque of contemporary drama. This time Shakespeare puts into Pistol's mouth a reference to Peele's Battle of Alcazar, printed in 1594, in which Muley Mahomet enters with lion's flesh on his sword, which he offers to his wife with the words,

'Feed then and faint not, my fair Calypolis.'

II.iv.154. Most editors assume that Pistol is speaking bad Italian. The Cambridge editors suggest that it is perhaps bad Spanish, and that he is reading the motto on his Toledo blade. Douce gives an illustration of a sword with a French version of this motto inscribed upon it. Farmer says: 'Pistol is only a copy of Hannibal Gonsaga who vaunted on yielding himself a prisoner, as you may read in an old collection of tales called Wits, Fits, Fancies:

'Si Fortuna me tormenta
Il speranza me contenta.'

Whatever the language, the meaning of Pistol's motto is, If Fortune torments me, Hope contents me.

II.iv.164. shove-groat shilling. Shove-groat was a game which was a cross between shuffle-board and 'pitching pennies.' It was played on a board three feet long and a foot wide, and the object of the players was to shove coins into numbered spaces at the far end of the board.

II.iv.214, 215. drinks . . . flapdragons. Flapdragon or snapdragon is a sport which consists in snapping raisins or grapes from burning brandy and eating them.

II.iv.231. An impossible conjunction of planets.

II.iv.233. fiery Trigon. Poins continues the astrological figure by referring to the red-nosed Bardolph as the fiery Trigon. When the three superior planets were in that division of the zodiac which consisted of the three so-called fiery signs, Aries, Leo, and Sagittarius, they were said to be in the fiery Trigon, or triangle; when they were in Cancer, Scorpio, and Pisces, they were in the watery Trigon, etc.

II.iv.296. dead elm. Shakespeare mentions elms three times,—here and in The Comedy of Errors, II.ii.175, and in A Midsummer Night's Dream, IV.i.42. In both C. of E. and M. N. D. the reference is to the practice of training ivy on elm trees, illustrating the relation of woman to man. Poins is therefore probably referring to the posture of Falstaff and Doll.

III.ii.21-23. Sir John Oldcastle and Sir John Fastolfe, with both of whom Falstaff has been identified (cf. 1 Henry IV, Introduction), were both pages to the Duke of Norfolk in their youth.

III.ii.27. Skogan. Shakespeare probably took the name from a jest book published in 1565, called Scogin's Jests. This Scogin was the court fool of King Edward IV. It is possible, however, that the reference is to Chaucer's friend, Henry Scogan, described by Ben Jonson in The Fortunate Isles as 'a fine gentleman, and master of arts, of Henry the Fourth's time.'

III.ii.61. accommodated. This is one of the words which Ben Jonson (Discoveries) refers to as one of 'the perfumed terms of the time.' Bardolph is giving himself airs and imitating the affectations of fashionable gallants.

III.ii.197. Bull calf means to say: 'Here, in French crowns, is the equivalent of four English ten-shilling pieces, or ten-shilling pieces with King Henry's head on them.' As a matter of fact Henry VII was the first English king whose head appeared on ten shilling pieces.

III.ii.219. three pound. Falstaff's followers adopt his own methods. Bardolph has collected four pounds, forty shillings from each of the two men, but decides to keep a commission of twenty-five per cent.

III.ii.234. gibbets. A brewer's gibbet was the yoke worn across the shoulders for carrying buckets of beer from the vat to the barrels. Falstaff refers to the dexterity with which brewers' men swing the buckets on to the gibbet.

III.ii.246-248. Sir Dagonet was King Arthur's fool. Arthur's show was an exhibition of archery held annually at Mile-end Green by a society called The Auncient Order, Societie, and Unitie laudable of Prince Arthur and his Knightly Armoury of the Round Table. There were fifty-eight members and each took the name of one of the knights in the old romances.

III.ii.281. Vice's dagger. The Vice, a character in the old Morality plays, carried a thin wooden dagger.

III.ii.289, 290. philosopher's two stones. The philosophers' stone is the reputed stone of the alchemists which transmutes base metals into gold. Falstaff decides that Justice Shallow will be as valuable to him as two philosophers' stones!

IV.i.97-99. This passage is obviously corrupt. The archbishop means in general: 'I make this my quarrel on both public and private grounds, that is, because of the sufferings of the commonwealth and of my own family at the hands of King Henry.' The Archbishop's brother, an adherent of King Richard, had been executed by King Henry's order; cf. 1 Henry IV, I.iii.279, 280.

IV.i.121 ff. This contest is described in the first act of Shakespeare's Richard II.

IV.i.179. consign'd. The Quarto and Folio read confin'd; consign'd is Johnson's emendation. The meaning seems to be that the terms of surrender include the stipulation that the execution of the wishes of the rebels shall be consigned to their own hands.

IV.ii. Shakespeare evidently had no thought of a change of scene, or of pause in action, here. Even the first Folio has no stage direction of exeunt at the end of Scene i., and no indication of scene division. I have kept the conventional modern arrangement for convenience of reference; but the reader should remember that the Archbishop and his party do not leave the stage,—they merely step forward to greet Prince John as he enters.

IV.iii.104, 105. a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil. Falstaff refers to the old superstition that gold mines were guarded by devils.

IV.iv.S.d. The Jerusalem Chamber. An apartment adjoining the southwest tower of Westminster Abbey, built in the fourteenth century as a guest-chamber, and deriving its name from the tapestries depicting the history of Jerusalem with which it was hung. Since the seventeenth century it has been used as a council chamber.

IV.iv.35-37. 'Nevertheless when he is incensed he breaks out in fiery fashion like flint; he abounds in caprices as winter abounds in moisture; and he changes his moods as suddenly as water freezes and melts at the edge of a pond at daybreak.' Flaws are the blades of ice seen on the edges of water on winter mornings.

IV.iv.46-50. 'That the vessel of their united blood may never leak, even though that blood should be mingled with the venom caused by hints and suggestions tending toward discord, which in this age will be sure to be poured in; and even though this venom should work with the strength of aconite or gunpowder.'

IV.iv.81, 83. 'It seldom happens that the bee, having deposited her comb in dead carrion, leaves the comb and the carrion.' The application is to the Prince and his low company.

IV.v.164. medicine potable. 'There has long prevailed an opinion that a solution of gold has great medicinal virtues, and that the incorruptibility of gold might be communicated to the body impregnated with it.' Johnson.

IV.v.201. mode. The key in which music is written, used figuratively and associated with 'mood' in the sense of state of mind.

V.i.1. cock and pie. The origin of this common Elizabethan oath is obscure. Cock is probably a corruption of God, as in the oath Cock's wounds; and pie is perhaps the Roman service book which was sometimes so called, though the word pie applies more properly to the index of the service book. By Shakespeare's time the meaning of the oath was forgotten, and Justice Shallow doubtless thinks he is swearing by a cock and a magpie.

V.ii.36. 'Which goes against the grain with one in your position.'

V.ii.50. This allusion helps to fix the date of the play. Amurath the Fourth succeeded his father on the Turkish throne in 1596. Upon his accession he invited his brothers to dinner and had them all strangled.

V.ii.126, 127. This strange remark of the Prince seems to mean that inasmuch as his own wild affections and desires died at the moment of his father's death, they are now, as it were, buried with his father. Hence his father may be said to be buried with wild affections, or to have 'gone wild into his grave.'

V.iii.69. dub me knight. The reference is to the Elizabethan custom of giving the title of knight for the evening to a man who, kneeling to his mistress, drained a mighty bumper to her health.

V.iii.96. Helicon was the abode of the Muses. Pistol resents having such low fellows as Robin Hood and his men brought into this very grandiloquent literary conversation.

V.v.26, 27. Pistol quotes two Latin phrases which have no significance here, and then proceeds to mistranslate them. The Latin means literally: it is always the same, for without this there is nothing.

Epil. Shakespeare's authorship of this epilogue has been questioned. The dancer says it is of his own making, but he speaks for the author in promising a continuation of the play and in assuring the audience that Falstaff is not Sir John Oldcastle (cf. note on III.ii.21-23, and Introduction to 1 Henry IV, in the present edition). It is interesting to note that Shakespeare's original intention was to continue the Falstaff plot through the play of Henry V; but, as Coleridge remarks, 'Agincourt is not the place for the splendid mendacity of Falstaff. With the coronation of Henry V opens a new period of glorious enthusiasm and patriotic fervor. There is no longer any place for Falstaff on earth; he must find refuge in "Arthur's bosom." '

Epil. 28. pray for the queen. It was the custom to end plays with a prayer for the sovereign. This custom originated in the interludes.

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present edition is, in the main, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig. Stage directions, when not bracketed, are from either the First Quarto or the First Folio or both; bracketed stage directions are modern. The title of the play is from the First Quarto.

In II.ii.104-121 the present editor has substituted the original assignment of speeches, in ll. 104, 109, as found in both Quarto and Folio, for Craig's assignment, as there seems to be no sufficient reason for emendations. He has also assigned ll. 110-120 to the Prince. Craig divides as follows:

104-107 Poins. Sir John . . . certificate.
108 Prince. Peace.
108-121 Poins. I will . . . eat it.

Many minor departures from the Oxford text have been made in this edition in an attempt to arrive at a consistent text. The Oxford editor has in the majority of cases followed the readings of the First Quarto, but in about fifty instances he has adopted the slightly different expressions used in the more formal and less colloquial Folio text. For example, in the scenes of low comedy, he in the Folio is almost invariably a' in the Quarto; is it is is 't; it is is 'tis; etc. The Oxford editor has used sometimes the formal, sometimes the informal expression. He sometimes follows the Folio in correcting the grammar and the mispronunciations of Mistress Quickly and Justice Shallow, and sometimes does not; he frequently omits the oaths found in the Quarto and expurgated in the Folio, but more frequently includes them. The present editor has not thought it wise to burden his pages with a long list of the minor changes he has made in the Oxford text. His policy has been to follow, in general, the more colloquial Quarto text.

In the following list of other variants the readings of the present edition precede the colon, Craig's readings follow it, and the Quarto or Folio authority is given wherever involved:

Ind. 35 hole QF: hold
I.i.40 comes QF: come
ii.3 moe Q: more F
35 through QF: thorough
104 it QF: its
II.i.1 action QF: exion
5 Sirrah!—: Sirrah, QF
63 all I have Q: all, all I have F
142 my lord Q: my good lord F
ii.16 another Q: one other F
51 an QF: a
59 those QF: these 66 Poins QF: Bard.
98 kin QF: akin
110 he sure Q: sure he F
iii.65 his QF: its
iv.33 a pox damn you Q: omit F
41 Yea, joy Q: Ay, marry F
73 debuty Q: deputy F
74 Wedesday Q: Wednesday F
111 but I will Q: I will (passage omitted in F)
134 faitors (faters Q): fates F
154 fortune Q: fortuna F
242 shalt have Q: thou shalt have F
351-352 Come! (She comes blubbered.) Yea, will you come, Doll? Q: omit F
III.ii.174 field QF: fields
276 invisible: invincible QF
IV.ii.14 mischiefs QF: mischief
v. 149 inward, true, and Q: true and inward F
V.iii.128 Blessed Q: Happy F
129 to Q: unto F
iv. 1, 2 that I might die Q: I might die F
9 wert Q: hadst F
v. 21 best, Q: most F

The Life of Henry the Fifth

Edited by
R. J. Dorius

Dramatis Personae

King Henry the Fifth
Duke of Gloucester, Duke of Bedford, Duke of Clarence — Brothers to the King
Duke of Exeter, Uncle to the King
Duke of York, Cousin to the King
Earl of Salisbury
Earl of Westmoreland
Earl of Warwick
Archbishop of Canterbury
Bishop of Ely
Earl of Cambridge
Lord Scroop
Sir Thomas Grey
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Gower, an English Captain, Fluellen, a Welsh Captain, Macmorris, an Irish Captain, Jamy, a Scottish Captain — Officers in King Henry's army
John Bates, Alexander Court, Michael Williams — Soldiers in the same
Pistol
Nym
Bardolph
Boy
A Herald

Chorus

Charles the Sixth, King of France
Lewis, the Dauphin
Duke of Burgundy
Duke of Orleans
Duke of Berri
Duke of Britaine
Duke of Bourbon
The Constable of France
Rambures, Grandpré, Beaumont — French Lords
Governor of Harfleur
Montjoy, a French Herald
Ambassadors to the King of England

Isabel, Queen of France
Katharine, Daughter to Charles and Isabel
Alice, a Lady attending on her
Hostess of the Boar's Head Tavern in Eastcheap (formerly Mistresss Quickly, now married to Pistol)

Lords, Ladies, Officers, French and English Soldiers, Citizens, Messengers, and Attendants

Scene—England and France.

The Life of Henry the Fifth

Introduction

Text and Date

Problems of text and date relating to Henry V are, when compared with the complexity of these matters for many of the plays, relatively simple. Shakespeare rarely refers to clearly datable historical events within his lifetime, but this play contains the only such reference which establishes at once the dates after which and before which the play was probably written. Lines 29–34 in the Prologue to Act V compare the glorious return from France of England's 'conqu'ring Caesar,' King Henry, with that of 'the general of our gracious empress' from Ireland, 'Bringing rebellion broached on his sword.' This general has long been identified with Essex, who left England to establish firmly England's supremacy over Ireland in March 1599 and returned in disgrace the following September. Since public expectation concerning this venture began to wane by June of that year, Shakespeare's high-spirited parallel must have been penned by mid-summer. A little earlier the now famous list of plays given by Meres in his Palladis Tamia (September 1598) mentions Henry IV but not Henry V.

We know that Henry V was acted by the Chamberlain's men (Shakespeare's company) in 1599. It was printed in 1600 in the small quarto form in which single plays were published, and in two later quartos, derived from the first, in 1602 and again in 1619 (marked 1608). The first of these (Q) is probably a radical abridgment of an acting version of the play, possibly memorized or 'reported' by a pirate actor or actors and sold to a printer for ready money. It is one of the 'Bad' Quartos, shorter than the Folio text by some 1700 lines, and it omits all of the choruses and the Epilogue, three entire scenes (I.1, III.1, and IV.2), and eleven other passages of from about twenty to eighty lines. Except in a few speeches it is so garbled (setting many passages of prose as absurdly irregular verse) that it is useful only in corroborating readings of the Folio or in supplying an occasional word or phrase where the Folio reading is doubtful.

The First Folio (F) of 1623 offers us the only good text of this play. It is probably taken from a manuscript in Shakespeare's hand (his 'foul' papers), from a scribal copy of such a manuscript, or possibly from both. Though several of its proper names are confused (Henry is once called 'Ireland'), though Pistol's speeches are printed as prose, and the French is often almost unintelligible, F affords us a commendable and interesting copy text, in a form (with or without revisions by the author) very similar to that which Shakespeare probably handed his players. Scene divisions are not indicated, and although act divisions are marked carelessly, the position of the five choruses relieves us of all doubt concerning this matter. Lineation is often clearly wrong (most of Pistol's speeches) and sometimes doubtful, but punctuation is as thorough as it is for any of the other plays in F. Pointing is, nevertheless, by modern standards, frequently erratic and excessive, and in this text, except in several passages of colorful prose, it is considerably simplified. By and large (though with many exceptions) the numerous colons in F are here given as periods and the semicolons as commas; many commas are dropped entirely.

The presence in this play of the dialect forms of Fluellen and the other captains (most of which are retained) and of a puzzling version of 16th-century French (here normalized) renders problems of orthography in Henry V especially interesting. The glosses call attention to the pronunciation of many words, and many spellings which indicate pronunciation different from our own have been retained, e.g. Callice for Calais, Harflew for Harfleur, Dolphin for Dauphin, bankrout for bankrupt, creeple for cripple, perfit for perfect, shrowdly for shrewdly, venter for venture, divel (also devil), doo'st, farwell, huswife, mervailous, murther, vawting, wrack, and all significant forms in the dialects of the four captains. The F spellings of other words (like vp-peer'd) are indicated in the notes or glosses when important for the meaning or meter of a particular passage. Among the forms not usually noted are I for ay, Ile for I'll, wee'l for we'll, ore for o'er, onely for only, shew for show, and archaic spellings like howre, yeeres, Iland, Soueraign, and Souldiers. Spellings that for the Elizabethans were completely interchangeable are also not usually indicated: an, and; loose, lose; than, then, and to, too. Many other interesting spellings (often phonetic) have not ordinarily been retained or glossed; atchieve, basterd, batcheler, begger, fierie and Squier, Gloster, Humfrey, Lyms (limbs), perswaded, Reyne (reign), shoo (shoe), Syens (scions), and Marshall for martial and Rights for rites. Problems connected with the French of F are discussed briefly in the notes to III.4, and the original French of this scene is reproduced at the end of this Appendix.

In recent years several irregularities in the F text of Henry V have been considered as composite evidence for Shakespeare's working over parts of the original text of the play at a later date, with some specific purpose in mind. The most interesting of the explanations put forth for revision revolves about the possible presence of Falstaff in the first version of the play. Proponents of this theory maintain that Shakespeare then cut the fat knight out for one of several reasons and substituted for him several new scenes or parts of scenes. The passages in question involve II.1 and 3, III.2, and several lines in III.6, in IV.1 and 7–8, and in V.1. Some of the evidence for alteration within these scenes is given in the notes. The Prologue of Act II, for example, prepares us for King Henry's unmasking of the traitors in Southampton and then for scenes in France. But the last two lines of the Prologue seem introduced, rather awkwardly, to account for scenes 1 and 3, which are laid instead in London. These scenes present the merry interchanges of Nym, Bardolph, and Pistol, and culminate in Mistress Quickly's famous description of Falstaff's death. In III.2., furthermore, the Boy's soliloquy (11. 27–49) and the curiously independent episode of the four captains 11.50ff.) show possible signs of having been altered or added to the original text. Similarly, in IV.1 the speeches of Pistol (as everywhere in the play), the discussion between Henry and the three soldiers about war, the episode of Williams' glove, Henry's famous first soliloquy before Agincourt (11. 207–261); in IV.7 and 8 the continuation of the glove episode; and in V.1 the capping of the quarrel between Pistol and Fluellen—all may have been altered by Shakespeare.

It is possible that the promise in the Epilogue to 2 Henry IV to 'continue the story with Sir John [Falstaff] in it' was originally fulfilled. Then, because of the permanent absence from the Chamberlain's men of the actor who played the part of Falstaff (Will Kemp), or, more probably, because the Master of the Revels deleted the role out of deference to Lord Cobham (who saw in the part an insult to his family name), or for some other reason, Falstaff was dropped and new material added to the play. In the version handed down to us Pistol may have taken over much of the role of Falstaff, and Shakespeare may have expanded the part of Fluellen and the subplot generally to make up for the loss of his overwhelmingly popular character. In the present form the play is very long—nearly 3,400 lines.

Despite the evidence for major revision in the F text summarized briefly here and in the notes, however, the nature and extent of such revision, and the reasons for it, are still far from clear. Theories about the possible presence of Falstaff in an earlier version of the play raise serious problems about the nature of Henry V and its immediate predecessor in the series. After the dramatic rightness of the rejection of Falstaff at the end of 2 Henry IV, it is difficult to imagine his being revived to play a role very different from that assigned the buffoon Sir John in The Merry Wives. Certainly the presence of the old Falstaff in the world of the reformed and heroic Henry V would greatly alter the nature of this play. If the aging knight once joined the other irregular humorists on the fields of France, clear traces of his presence, in the kinds of recurring themes and images which relate him so profoundly to the two parts of Henry IV, have disappeared.

The editor of this edition of Henry V is deeply indebted to the careful scholarship of many students of the play. The arguments for revision given above have been developed by Alfred Pollard, Dover Wilson, and G. I. Duthie, and further supported by the detailed evidence of Allan Wilkinson and (especially) J. H. Walter. Of the editions of the play consulted, those by Dover Wilson (Cambridge), G. B. Harrison (Harcourt, Brace), G. L. Kittredge (Ginn), G. C. Moore Smith (Heath), and J. H. Walter (Methuen) have proved to be most helpful. The general editors of the Yale Shakespeare have offered many valuable suggestions.

Act III, Scene 4, in the French of the First Folio

Enter Katherine and an old Gentlewoman.

Kathe. Alice, tu as este en Angleterre, & tu bien parlas le Language.

Alice. En peu Madame.

Kath. Ie te prie m'ensigniez, il faut que ie apprend a parlen: Comient appelle vous le main en Anglois?

Alice. Le main il & appelle de Hand.

Kath. De Hand.

Alice. E. le doyts.

Kat. Le doyts, ma foy Ie oublie, e doyt mays, ie me souemeray le doyts ie pense qu'ils ont appelle de fingres, ou de fingres.

Alice. Le main de Hand, le doyts le Fingres, ie pense que ie suis le bon escholier.

Kath. I'ay gaynie diux mots d'Anglois vistement, coment appelle vous le ongles?

Alice. Le ongles, les appellons de Nayles.

Kath. De Nayles escoute: dites moy, sie ie parle bien: de Hand, de Fingres, e de Nayles.

Alice. C'est bien dict Madame, il & fort bon Anglois.

Kath. Dites moy l'Anglois pour le bras.

Alice. De Arme, Madame.

Kath. E de coudee.

Alice. D'Elbow.

Kath. D'Elbow; Ie men fay le repiticio de touts les mots que vous maves, apprins des a present.

Alice. Il & trop difficile Madame, comme Ie pense.

Kath. Excuse moy Alice escoute, d'Hand, de Fingre, de Nayles, d'Arma, de Bilbow.

Alice. D'Elbow, Madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu, ie men oublie d'Elbow, coment appelle vous le col.

Alice. De Nick, Madame.

Kath. De Nick, e le menton.

Alice. De Chin.

Kath. De Sin: le col de Nick, le menton de Sin.

Alice. Ouy. Sauf vostre honneur en verite vous pronouncies les mots ausi droict, que le Natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Ie ne doute point d'apprendre par de grace de Dieu, & en peu de temps.

Alice. N'aue vos y desia oublie ce que ie vous a ensignie.

Kath. Nome ie recitera a vous promptement, d'Hand, de Fingre, de Maylees.

Alice. De Nayles, Madame.

Kath. De Nayles, de Arme, de Ilbow.

Alice. Sans vostre honeus d'Elbow.

Kath. Ainsi de ie d'Elbow, de Nick, & de Sin: coment appelle vous les pied & de roba.

Alice. Le Foot Madame, & le Count.

Kath. Le Foot, & le Count: O Seignieur Dieu, il sont le mots de son mauvais corruptible grosse & impudique, & non pour le Dames de Honeur d'vser: Ie ne voudray pronouncer ce mots deuant le Seigneurs de France, pour toute le monde, fo le Foot & le Count neant moys, Ie recitera vn autrefoys ma lecon ensembe, d'Hand, de Fingre, de Nayles, d'Arme, d'Elbow, de Nick, de Sin, de Foot, le Count.

Alice. Excellent, Madame.

Kath. C'est asses pour vne foyes, alons nous a diner.

Exit.

Sources of the Play

Henry V is the ninth and last (if we do not include Henry VIII) of the unified series of plays in which Shakespeare dramatizes a memorable succession of events in English history, primarily (King John excepted) of the late 14th and the 15th centuries. For it, as for the earlier plays, Shakespeare turned chiefly to the second edition (1587) of Raphael Holinshed's Chronicles of England, Scotland, and Ireland. He seems to follow his source more closely for this play than for any of the others—in some places, as in the prolonged airing of Henry's claims to the French throne in I.2, or the listing of the dead after Agincourt in IV.8, versifying Holinshed, phrase by phrase, for many lines at a time. Many of the major scenes of the play—the conspiracy at Southampton, the siege of Harfleur, interchanges at the French court, speeches of Henry to the French herald and to his soldiers, and others—are very close in particular passages to Holinshed's narrative. The selections from the Chronicles given in the notes of this edition, however, cannot suggest the unrelaxing alertness of Shakespeare in selecting and organizing details from his source, and the student is urged to consult the full narrative of Henry's reign for himself. Two-thirds of Holinshed's account is concerned with events following Agincourt, but the Prologue to Act

V of Henry V leaps from 1415 to 1420, across later campaigns in France, to the negotiations at Troyes, where Shakespeare makes us 'merry with fair Katharine of France,' as the Epilogue of 2 Henry IV had promised. Nearly all of the central and varied scene before Agincourt (IV.1) is Shakespeare's invention, and so, of course, are Pistol and his crew (inherited—all but Nym—from Henry IV), the four captains fighting under Henry, and, throughout, the dramatic heightening and structuring that have shaped from the stuff of history a work of art.

Holinshed's account is largely based upon Edward Hall's The Union of the Two Noble and Illustre Families of Lancaster and York, 1548. Since Holinshed reproduces many entire passages from Hall with scarcely the change of a word, it is frequently impossible to know when Shakespeare is reading directly from the earlier chronicle. But the passage in which the nobles persuade Henry to go to war (I.2), that in which the Constable describes the English soldiers (IV.2), and several other single words, phrases, or lines seem clearly derived from Hall. More important for Shakespeare than these details, however, was Hall's conception of history, which is far more unified and imaginative than that of Holinshed. Hall's viewing of the course of history from the deposition of Richard II through the victories of Henry V, and beyond, as a single movement, involving divine vengeance and human retribution on a grand scale, doubtless aided Shakespeare greatly in his organizing of the diverse materials that lie behind this related series of plays.

At least three incidents in Henry V—the gift of the tennis balls, Pistol's capture of the French soldier, and Henry's wooing of Katharine—are possibly indebted to an old play on the life of Henry, surviving in a corrupted form as The Famous Victories of Henry the Fift, registered in 1594. A selection from the wooing scene of this play is given below. It is quite possible that Shakespeare consulted a biography of Henry (the Gesta Henrici Quinti) written by a chaplain who accompanied him on his first campaign, and another biography with almost the same title written (by the 'Pseudo-Elmham') about thirty years after his death. Shakespeare's possible further indebtedness to the Brut, to the Italian chronicler Tito Livio, the French Le Fèvre or Monstrelet, or the English Fabyan is difficult to prove.

A Portion of the Wooing Scene from 'The Famous Victories of Henry the Fift.'

Katheren. And it please your Maiestie,
My father sent me to know if you will debate any of these Vnreasonable demands which you require:

Hen. 5. Now trust me Kate,
I commend thy fathers wit greatly in this,
For none in the world could sooner haue made me debate it
If it were possible:
But tell me sweete Kate, canst thou tell me how to loue?
Kate. I cannot hate my good Lord,
Therefore far vnfit were it for me to loue.
Hen. 5. Tush Kate, but tell me in plaine termes,
Canst thou loue the King of England?
I cannot do as these Countries do,
That spend halfe their time in woing:
Tush wench, I am none such,
But wilt thou go ouer to England?
Kate. I would to God, that I had your Maiestie,
As fast in loue, as you haue my father in warres,
I would not vouchsafe so much as one looke,
Until you had related all these vnreasonable demands.
Hen. 5. Tush Kate, I know thou wouldst not vse me so
Hardly: but tell me, canst thou loue the king of England?
Kate. How should I loue him, that hath dealt so hardly
With my father.
Hen. 5. But ile deale as easily with thee,
As thy heart can imagine, or tongue can require,
How saist thou, what will it be?
Kate. If I were of my owne direction,
I could giue you answere;
But seeing I stand at my fathers direction,
I must first know his will.
Hen. 5. But shal I have thy good wil in the mean season?
Kate. Whereas I can put your grace in no assurance,
I would be loth to put in any dispaire.
Hen. 5. Now before God, it is a sweete wench.
She goes aside and speaks as followeth
Kat. I may thinke my selfe the happiest in the world,
That is beloued of the mightie King of England.
Hen. 5. Well Kate, are you at hoast with me?
Sweete Kate, tel thy father from me,
That none in the world could sooner haue perswaded me to
It then thou, and so tel thy father from me.
Kat. God keepe your Maiestie in good health.
Exit KAT.
Hen. 5. Farwel sweet Kate, in faith, it is a sweet wench,
But if I knew I could not haue her fathers good wil,
I would so rowse the Towers ouer his eares,
That I would make him be glad to bring her me,
Upon his hands and knees.
Exit KING.

Enter Prologue

O for a Muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention,
A kingdom for a stage, princes to act,
And monarchs to behold the swelling scene!
Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
Assume the port of Mars, and at his heels,
Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword, and fire
Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles all,
The flat unraised spirits that hath dar'd
On this unworthy scaffold to bring forth
So great an object. Can this cockpit hold
The vasty fields of France? Or may we cram
Within this wooden O the very casques
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
O, pardon! since a crooked figure may
Attest in little place a million,
And let us, ciphers to this great accompt,
On your imaginary forces work.
Suppose within the girdle of these walls
Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,
Whose high upreared and abutting fronts
The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder.
Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts.
Into a thousand parts divide one man,
And make imaginary puissance.
Think when we talk of horses that you see them
Printing their proud hoofs i' th' receiving earth.
For 'tis your thoughts that how must deck our kings,
Carry them here and there, jumping o'er times,
Turning th' accomplishment of many years
Into an hourglass. For the which supply,
Admit me Chorus to this history,
Who prologue-like your humble patience pray
Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play. Exit.

Act First ❧ Scene First

Enter the two Bishops—[the Archbishop] of Canterbury and [the Bishop of] Ely.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you. That self bill is urg'd
Which in th' eleventh year of the last king's reign
Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
But that the scambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of farther question.
Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?
Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
We lose the better half of our possession.
For all the temporal lands which men devout
By testament have given to the Church
Would they strip from us—being valu'd thus:
As much as would maintain to the king's honor
Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights,
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
And, to relief of lazars and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls past corporal toil,
A hundred almshouses right well supplied;
And to the coffers of the king beside,
A thousand pounds by th' year. Thus runs the bill.
Ely. This would drink deep.
Cant. 'Twould drink the cup and all.
Ely. But what prevention?
Cant. The king is full of grace and fair regard.
Ely. And a true lover of the holy Church.
Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no sooner left his father's body,
But that his wildness, mortified in him,
Seem'd to die too. Yea, at that very moment,
Consideration like an angel came
And whipp'd th' offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his body as a paradise
T' envelop and contain celestial spirits.
Never was such a sudden scholar made;
Never came reformation in a flood
With such a heady currance, scouring faults,
Nor never Hydra-headed willfulness
So soon did lose his seat, and all at once,
As in this king.
Ely. We are blessed in the change.
Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the king were made a prelate.
Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You would say it hath been all in all his study.
List his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle rend'red you in music.
Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter; that, when he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears
To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences.
So that the art and practic part of life
Must be the mistress to this theoric;
Which is a wonder how his grace should glean it,
Since his addiction was to courses vain,
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow,
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports,
And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration

SD Prologue: cf. n. 2 invention: poetic creation; -ion is frequently dissyllabic, as in 1. 16 6 port: bearing 8 gentles: gentle audience 9 unraised: uninspired spirits . . . hath; cf. n. 10 scaffold: stage 11 cockpit; cf. n. 12 vasty: vast 13 wooden O: wooden circle; cf. n. casques: helmets 15 crooked figure; cf. n. 16 Attest: stand for 17 accompt: means and is pronounced 'account' 18 imaginary forces: powers of imagination 21 abutting fronts i.e coasts of Dover and Calais 22 perilous dissyllabic, and often written 'parlous.' 23 Piece out supplement 25 puissance forces, troops (here a trisyllable). 27 proud spirited 28 deck equip 29 jumping o'er times the historical period of the play is 1414–20 31 supply service 1 self: same 2 eleventh year: 1410 3 like: likely (to pass). 4 scambling: turbulent 5 question: consideration 7–19 It must . . . the bill; cf. n.

9 temporal: i.e. not used for religious purposes 15 lazars: diseased beggars, especially lepers 16 corporal: read 'corp'ral'; cf. n. 17 supplied; cf. n. 23 fair regard: kind consideration 25 courses . . . youth; cf. n. 27 mortified: killed 29 Consideration: reflection, spiritual contemplation 30 offending Adam; cf. n. 34 flood; cf. n. 35 heady currance: headlong current 36 Hydra-headed: the Hydra was a many-headed monster killed by Hercules 37 his seat: its power 40 divinity: theology 45 List: listen to 47 cause of policy: problem of statecraft 49 Familiar: as though it were as familiar that: so that 50 charter'd libertine: one privileged to have freedom 51 wonder: wonderer 52 sentences: wise sayings 53, 54 art . . . theoric: i.e. experience must have taught him theory 56 vain: idle 57 companies: companions rude: uncultivated 60 sequestration: withdrawal, seclusion

From open haunts and popularity.
Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,
And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best
Neighbor'd by fruit of baser quality.
And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness, which, no doubt,
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty.
Cant. It must be so, for miracles are ceas'd,
And therefore we must needs admit the means
How things are perfected.
Ely. But, my good lord,
How now for mitigation of this bill
Urg'd by the Commons? Doth his majesty
Incline to it, or no?
Cant. He seems indifferent,
Or rather swaying more upon our part
Than cherishing th' exhibiters against us.
For I have made an offer to his majesty,
Upon our spiritual convocation
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
As touching France, to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet
Did to his predecessors part withal.
Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord?
Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty,
Save that there was not time enough to hear,
As I perceiv'd his grace would fain have done,
The severals and unhidden passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,
And generally to the crown and seat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather.
Ely. What was th' impediment that broke this off?
Cant. The French ambassador upon that instant
Crav'd audience, and the hour I think is come
To give him hearing. Is it four o'clock?
Ely. It is.
Cant. Then go we in to know his embassy,
Which I could with a ready guess declare
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.
Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it. Exeunt.

Scene Second

Enter the King, Humphrey [Duke of Gloucester], Bedford, Clarence, Warwick, Westmoreland, and Exeter [with Attendants].

King. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury?
Exe. Not here in presence.
King. Send for him, good uncle.
West. Shall we call in th' ambassador, my liege?
King. Not yet, my cousin. We would be resolv'd
Before we hear him of some things of weight
That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter two Bishops [the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Ely].

Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne
And make you long become it!
King. Sure we thank you.
My learned lord, we pray you to proceed
And justly and religiously unfold
Why the law Salic that they have in France
Or should or should not bar us in our claim.
And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,
Or nicely charge your understanding soul
With opening titles miscreate, whose right
Suits not in native colors with the truth.
For God doth know how many now in health
Shall drop their blood in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to.
Therefore take heed how you impawn our person,
How you awake our sleeping sword of war.
We charge you, in the name of God, take heed.
For never two such kingdoms did contend
Without much fall of blood, whose guiltless drops
Are every one a woe, a sore complaint
'Gainst him whose wrongs gives edge unto the swords
That makes such waste in brief mortality.
Under this conjuration, speak, my lord,
For we will hear, note, and believe in heart
That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd
As pure as sin with baptism.
Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers,
That owe yourselves, your lives, and services
To this imperial throne. There is no bar
To make against your highness' claim to France
But this which they produce from Pharamond:
In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant—
'No woman shall succeed in Salic land.'
Which Salic land the French unjustly gloze
To be the realm of France, and Pharamond
The founder of this law and female bar.
Yet their own authors faithfully affirm
That the land Salic is in Germany,
Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe,
Where Charles the Great, having subdu'd the Saxons,
There left behind and settled certain French,
Who, holding in disdain the German women
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establish'd then this law: to wit, no female
Should be inheritrix in Salic land.
Which Salic, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany call'd Meissen.
Then doth it well appear the Salic law
Was not devised for the realm of France,

61 popularity: low company 65 contemplation: thoughtfulness 66 which: i.e. his contemplation 68 crescive ... faculty: increasing in its natural power 71 perfected: stressed ⏑ — ⏑ 76 indifferent: impartial 78 exhibiters: i.e. those who sponsored the bill in Parliament 80 Upon: as a result of 81 causes: issues 82 open'd ... at large: set forth in full 85 withal: with 90 severals ... passages: details and clear lines of descent 92 seat: throne 93 Edward: cf. n. 94 impediment: interruption SD Clarence: does not speak, and appears here only Westmoreland: F Westmerland suggests pronunciation. (F refers throughout to the First Folio of 1623, F2 to the Second Folio, etc.). 5 cousin: Westmoreland married Henry's cousin resolved ... of: satisfied about

7 task: trouble, occupy 13 law Salic: cf. n. 14 Or ... or: either ... or 17 nicely charge: burden with excessive ingenuity 18 opening: setting forth miscreate: falsely fabricated 19 in... colors: in their essential nature 21, 22 in approbation Of: in proving the justice of 23 impawn: pledge 29 wrongs: wrongful acts 29, 30 gives ... makes; cf. n. 30 mortality: human life 31 conjuration: solemn appeal 34 sin: original sin 39 Pharamond: legendary Frankish king 42 gloze: gloss, interpret 44 female bar: bar against females 48 Charles the Great: Charlemagne; cf. n. 51 dishonest: unchaste

Nor did the French possess the Salic land
Until four hundred one and twenty years
After defunction of King Pharamond,
Idly suppos'd the founder of this law,
Who died within the year of our redemption,
Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the Great
Subdu'd the Saxons and did seat the French
Beyond the River Sala in the year
Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say,
King Pepin, which deposed Childeric,
Did, as heir general, being descended
Of Blithild, which was daughter to King Clothair,
Make claim and title to the crown of France.
Hugh Capet also—who usurp'd the crown
Of Charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole heir male
Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great—
To find his title with some shows of truth,
Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught,
Convey'd himself as th' heir to th' Lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemagne, who was the son
To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son
Of Charles the Great. Also King Lewis the Tenth,
Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare,
Daughter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Lorraine;
By which marriage the line of Charles the Great
Was reunited to the crown of France.
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
King Pepin's title and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female.
So do the kings of France unto this day,
Howbeit they would hold up this Salic law
To bar your highness claiming from the female,
And rather choose to hide them in a net
Than amply to imbare their crooked titles,
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

King. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!
For in the Book of Numbers is it writ:
When the man dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord,
Stand for your own, unwind your bloody flag,
Look back into your mighty ancestors.
Go, my dread lord, to your great-grandsire's tomb,
From whom you claim. Invoke his warlike spirit,
And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France,
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp
Forage in blood of French nobility.
O noble English, that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work and cold for action!

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puissant arm renew their feats.
You are their heir, you sit upon their throne.
The blood and courage that renowned them
Runs in your veins. And my thrice-puissant liege
Is in the very May morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.

Exe. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth
Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood.

West. They know your grace hath cause and means and might;
So hath your highness. Never King of England
Had nobles richer and more loyal subjects,
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England
And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Cant. O, let their bodies follow, my dear liege,
With blood and sword and fire to win your right!
In aid whereof we of the spiritualty
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.

King. We must not only arm t' invade the French,
But lay down our proportions to defend
Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.

Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign,
Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.

King. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbor to us.
For you shall read that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fullness of his force,
Galling the gleaned land with hot assays,
Girding with grievous siege castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defense,
Hath shook and trembled at th' ill neighborhood.

Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege.
For hear her but exampled by herself:
When all her chivalry hath been in France
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended
But taken and impounded as a stray

60 defunction: death 68 heir general: male or female legal heir 74 find: provide; Q fine, furbish. (Q refers throughout to the First Quarto of 1600, Q2 to the Second Quarto, etc.). shows: appearance 76 Convey'd: falsely represented 77 Charlemagne: historically Charles the Bald 79 Lewis the Tenth: read 'Lews'; cf. n. 81 conscience: trisyllabic 84 lineal: direct descendant 88–104 So that . . . ancestors; cf. n. 90 Lewis his: Lewis' 95 hide . . . net: hide themselves in transparent deceits or contradictions 96 amply to imbare: to lay bare completely; cf. n. 100 Numbers: see Numbers 27:8 106 claim: i.e. your right 109 defeat: destruction, at the Battle of Crécy, 1346

112 Forage in: prey on 113 entertain: occupy 116 for: for want of 118 puissant: powerful 129 hath: accented word 132 pavilion'd: encamped 135 spiritualty: clergy (trisyllabic) 140 lay . . . proportions: estimate the required number of troops 141 road: inroad 142 all advantages: every favorable opportunity 143 marches: borders 146 coursing snatchers: mounted raiders 147 intendment: intention 148 still: always giddy: unstable 151 unfurnish'd: unprotected 154 Galling: blistering gleaned: stripped of its defenders assays: attacks 156 That: so that 158 fear'd: frightened 159 exampled by: setting a precedent for 163 impounded . . . stray: put in a pound like a stray animal

The King of Scots, whom she did send to France
To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings
And make her chronicle as rich with praise
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wrack and sumless treasuries.
Ely. But there's a saying very old and true:

'If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin.'

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs,
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,
To tame and havoc more than she can eat.
Exe. It follows then the cat must stay at home.
Yet that is but a crush'd necessity,
Since we have locks to safeguard necessaries
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
Th' advised head defends itself at home.
For government, though high and low and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one consent,
Congreeing in a full and natural close,
Like music.
Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavor in continual motion,
To which is fixed as an aim or butt
Obedience. For so work the honeybees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king, and officers of sorts,
Where some like magistrates correct at home,
Others like merchants venter trade abroad,
Others like soldiers armed in their stings
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds,
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent royal of their emperor;
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens kneading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burthens at his narrow gate,
The sad-ey'd justice with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,
That many things having full reference
To one consent may work contrariously:
As many arrows loosed several ways
Come to one mark; as many ways meet in one town;
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;

164 King of Scots: David Bruce 166 her: F their 168 wrack: wreck sumless: inestimable 170 France: probably dissyllabic 172 in prey: in search of prey 176 tame: broach, break into; cf. n. havoc: destroy 177 then: F theu 178 crush'd: forced; Q curst 180 pretty: good, ingenious; may rhyme with petty 181 advised: thoughtful 184, 185 parts . . . close: terms referring to both government and music 184 consent: harmony (cf. 'concent'). 185 Congreeing: agreeing, harmonizing natural: read 'nat'ral' close: cadence 188 state of man: human life 190 butt: end, target 191 honeybees; cf. n. 192 rule: precept 193 act: operation 194 sorts: various ranks 195 correct: inflict punishment 196 venter trade: venture upon, speculate in trade 198 Make . . . upon: plunder 203 civil: well-behaved 206 sad-ey'd: sober-looking 207 executors: executioners; stressed '— — ˘ — 211 loosed . . . ways: shot from different directions

As many lines close in the dial's center—
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege!
Divide your happy England into four,
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.
If we with thrice such powers left at home
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried and our nation lose
The name of hardiness and policy.
King. Call in the messengers sent from the Dolphin.
[Exeunt some Attendants.]
Now are we well resolv'd, and by God's help
And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe
Or break it all to pieces. Or there we'll sit,
Ruling in large and ample empery
O'er France and all her almost kingly dukedoms,
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombless, with no remembrance over them.
Either our history shall with full mouth
Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth,
Not worship'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin Dolphin, for we hear
Your greeting is from him, not from the king.
Amb. May't please your majesty to give us leave
Freely to render what we have in charge,
Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The Dolphin's meaning and our embassy?
King. We are no tyrant, but a Christian king,
Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As is our wretches fett'red in our prisons.
Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plainness
Tell us the Dolphin's mind.
Amb. Thus, then, in few:
Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms in the right
Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third.
In answer of which claim, the prince our master
Says that you savor too much of your youth,
And bids you be advis'd. There's nought in France
That can be with a nimble galliard won.
You cannot revel into dukedoms there.
He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
This tun of treasure, and, in lieu of this,
Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim
Hear no more of you. This the Dolphin speaks.
King. What treasure, uncle?
Exeter. Tennis balls, my liege.

214 dial's: sundial's 216 End: Q; F And borne: carried out 220 withal: therewith Gallia: Latin name for France 221 powers: forces 224 policy: statesmanship 225 Dolphin: Dauphin; cf. n. 229 Or: either 230 empery: sovereignty 232 urn: grave 236 Turkish mute: cf. n. 237 worship'd: honored with . . . epitaph: even with an epitaph made out of wax 242 render: report grace: merciful disposition 247 is: see I. Pro. 9; cf. n. 250 in few: in brief 256 be advis'd: consider 257 galliard: a lively dance 259 meeter: more fitting 260 tun: cask in lieu of: in return for 264-272 Tennis . . . chases; cf. n.

King. We are glad the Dolphin is so pleasant with us.
His present and your pains we thank you for.
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,
We will in France, by God's grace, play a set
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler
That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chases. And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.
We never valu'd this poor seat of England,
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself
To barbarous license, as 'tis ever common
That men are merriest when they are from home.
But tell the Dolphin I will keep my state,
Be like a king, and show my sail of greatness,
When I do rouse me in my throne of France.
For that I have laid by my majesty
And plodded like a man for working days.
But I will rise there with so full a glory
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France—
Yea, strike the Dolphin blind to look on us.
And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his
Hath turn'd his balls to gunstones, and his soul
Shall stand sore charged for the wasteful vengeance
That shall fly with them. For many a thousand widows
Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands,
Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down.
And some are yet ungotten and unborn
That shall have cause to curse the Dolphin's scorn.
But this lies all within the will of God,
To whom I do appeal and in whose name,
Tell you the Dolphin, I am coming on,
To venge me as I may and to put forth
My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.
So get you hence in peace. And tell the Dolphin
His jest will savor but of shallow wit
When thousands weep more than did laugh at it.
Convey them with safe conduct. Fare you well.

Exeunt Ambassadors.

Exeter. This was a merry message.

King. We hope to make the sender blush at it.
Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour
That may give furth'rance to our expedition.
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business.
Therefore let our proportions for these wars
Be soon collected, and all things thought upon
That may with reasonable swiftness add
More feathers to our wings. For, God before,
We'll chide this Dolphin at his father's door.
Therefore let every man now task his thought,
That this fair action may on foot be brought. Exeunt.

265 pleasant: facetious 268–272 set . . . chases; cf. n. 270 he hath: read 'he'th' 273 comes o'er: taunts 275 seat: throne 276 hence: away from the court 279 state: chair of state, dignity 282 For that: to that end 288 gunstones: cannon balls, originally 289 wasteful: devastating 293 ungotten: unbegotten 298 venge me: avenge myself 303 Convey: escort 306 omit: neglect happy: favorable 310 proportions: forces 313 God before: God leading us 315 task his thought: take careful thought

Act Second

Flourish. Enter Chorus.

Now all the youth of England are on fire,
And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies.
Now thrive the armorers, and honor's thought
Reigns solely in the breast of every man.
They sell the pasture now to buy the horse,
Following the mirror of all Christian kings
With winged heels, as English Mercuries.
For now sits Expectation in the air
And hides a sword from hilts unto the point
With crowns imperial, crowns and coronets,
Promis'd to Harry and his followers.
The French, advis'd by good intelligence
Of this most dreadful preparation,
Shake in their fear and with pale policy
Seek to divert the English purposes.
O England! model to thy inward greatness,
Like little body with a mighty heart,
What mightst thou do that honor would thee do,
Were all thy children kind and natural!
But see, thy fault France hath in thee found out,
A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills
With treacherous crowns. And three corrupted men—
One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second,
Henry Lord Scroop of Masham, and the third,
Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland—
Have, for the gilt of France—O, guilt indeed!—
Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France.
And by their hands this grace of kings must die,
If hell and treason hold their promises,
Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton.
Linger your patience on, and we'll digest
Th' abuse of distance, force a play.
The sum is paid, the traitors are agreed,
The king is set from London, and the scene
Is not transported, gentles, to Southampton.
There is the playhouse now, there must you sit,
And thence to France shall we convey you safe
And bring you back, charming the narrow seas
To give you gentle pass. For, if we may,
We'll not offend one stomach with our play.
But till the king come forth, and not till then,
Unto Southampton do we shift our scene. Exit.

SD Flourish music of trumpets; cf. n. 2 silken dalliance: the clothes and manners of society 6 mirror: perfect pattern 7 winged . . . Mercuries; cf. n. 9 hilts: crosspiece protecting the handle 12 intelligence: espionage 14 pale policy: diplomacy directed by fear 16 model to: small replica of 18 would thee do: would have thee do 19 kind: showing filial love 20 see . . . hath: many editors read 'see thy fault! France hath' France: King of France 22 crowns: crown pieces, gold 26 gilt . . . guilt; common pun in Shakespeare, gilt meaning 'gold' 28 grace of kings: one who dignifies the role of kingship 31-2 digest . . . abuse: overcome the problem 32 force: stuff out, or make a play in spite of difficulties 39 pass: passage 39-40 For . . . play; cf. n. 39 may: can help it 40 offend one stomach: offend anyone's taste, or make anyone seasick 41-2 But . . . scene: the scene will be shifted to Southampton when the king comes forth (scene 2).

Scene First

Enter Corporal Nym and Lieutenant Bardolph

Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not. I say little. But when time shall serve, there shall be smiles—but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight, but I will wink and hold out mine iron. It is a simple one, but what though? It will toast cheese, and it will endure cold, as another man's sword will, and there's an end.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends, and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France. Let't be so, good Corporal Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it. And when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may. That is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly, and certainly she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell. Things must be as they may. Men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time, and some say knives have edges. It must be as it may. Though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Enter Pistol and [Hostess] Quickly.

Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife. Good corporal, be patient here. How now, mine host Pistol?

Pist: Base tyke, call'st thou me host?
Now by this hand I swear I scorn the term,
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Host. No, by my troth, not long. For we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy house straight. [Nym and Pistol draw.] O welladay, Lady! If he be not hewn now, we shall see willful adultery and murther committed.

Bard. Good lieutenant! Good corporal! Offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish!

Pist. Pish for thee, Iceland dog! Thou prick-ear'd cur of Iceland!

Host. Good Corporal Nym, show thy valor, and put up your sword.

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus.

Pist. 'Solus,' egregious dog? O viper vile!
The 'solus' in thy most mervailous face,
The 'solus' in thy teeth, and in thy throat,
And in thy hateful lungs—yea, in thy maw, perdy,
And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth!
I do retort the 'solus' in thy bowels,
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,
And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason; you cannot conjure me. I have an humor to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms. If you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may, and that's the humor of it.

Pist. O braggart vile, and damned furious wight!
The grave doth gape and doting death is near.
Therefore exhale.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say. He that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Draws.]

Pist. An oath of mickle might, and fury shall abate.
Give me thy fist, thy forefoot to me give.
Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat one time or other in fair terms, that is the humor of it.

Pist. 'Couple a gorge!'
That is the word. I thee defy again.
O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get?
No, to the spital go,
And from the powd'ring tub of infamy
Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind,
Doll Tearsheet, she by name, and her espouse.
I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly
For the only she, and—pauca, there's enough.
Go to!

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and your hostess. He is very sick and would to bed. Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets and do the office of a warming pan. Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue!

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days. The king has kill'd his heart. Good husband, come home presently. Exit [with Boy].

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together. Why the divel should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have. That's the humor of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound. Push home.
[They] draw.

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him! By this sword, I will.

1 Nym: the name means 'steal and 'thief' 3 Ancient: ensign, second lieutenant 6 wink: keep my eyes closed iron: sword 11 sworn brothers: comical allusion to knightly brethren in arms 13 may: can 15 rest: resolve rendezvous: refuge, last resort 16, 17 Nell Quickly; cf. n. 17, 18 trothplight: formally bethrothed 22 Though . . . plod; cf. n. mare: Q; F name 26 tyke: cur; cf. n. host: tavernkeeper 30 honestly: chastely 32 Nym . . . draw: perhaps only Nym draws here welladay: wellaway Lady: by Our Lady 33 hewn: cut down; many editors read drawn 37 Iceland . . . cur: lap dogs with sharp erect ears 41 shog off: move off solus: alone (Pistol thinks it an insult and rants like a conjuror). 42 egregious: in the highest degree 43 mervailous; marvelous; here stressed — ·'· — 45 maw: stomach perdy: by God, indeed

48 take: strike; catch fire; bewitch Pistol's cock: lever on a gun; cf. n. 50 I am . . . me I: cannot be called up and dismissed like a fiend 51 indifferently: fairly 52 scour: thrash; clean out a pistol 53 in fair terms: in good style 55 humor; cf. n. 58 exhale: draw your sword; die SD Draws: Q They drawe 61 mickle: great 63 tall: courageous 66 Couple a gorge: Pistol's French for couper la gorge, 'to cut the throat' 67 thee defy: Q; F defie thee 69-73 No . . . espouse; cf. n. 69 spital: hospital 70 powd'ring tub: i.e. for curing venereal diseases by sweating 71 lazar . . . kind; cf. n. 73 quondam: former (now Mistress Pistol). 74 only she: only woman for me pauca: in few words 74, 75 enough. Go to: F enough to go to 77 your many editors read you, 78, 79 face . . . pan; cf. n. 81 he'll . . . pudding: the boy will be hanged and devoured by crows (proverbial). 82 kill'd his heart; cf. n. 83 presently: immediately 85 divel; cf. n. 92 compound: come to terms

Pist. 'Sword' is an oath, and oaths must have their course.
Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends. An thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too. Prithee put up.
[Nym. I shall have my eight shillings I won of you at betting?]
Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay,
And liquor likewise will I give to thee,
And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood.
I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me.
Is not this just? For I shall sutler be
Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.
Give me thy hand.
Nym. I shall have my noble?
Pist. In cash, most justly paid.
Nym. Well then, that's the humor of't.

Enter Hostess.

Host. As ever you come of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shak'd of a burning quotidian tertian that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.
Nym. The king hath run bad humors on the knight, that's the even of it.
Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right.
His heart is fracted and corroborate.
Nym. The king is a good king, but it must be as it may.
He passes some humors and careers.
Pist. Let us condole the knight, for, lambkins, we will live.
[Exeunt.]

Scene Second

Enter Exeter, Bedford, and Westmoreland.

Bedford. 'Fore God, his grace is bold to trust these traitors.
Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.
West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves,
As if allegiance in their bosoms sat,
Crowned with faith and constant loyalty!
Bedford. The king hath note of all that they intend,
By interception which they dream not of.
Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow,
Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favors—
That he should for a foreign purse so sell
His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Sound trumpets. Enter the King, Scroop, Cambridge, and Grey [with Attendants].

King. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard.
My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Masham,
And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts.
Think you not that the pow'rs we bear with us
Will cut their passage through the force of France,
Doing the execution and the act
For which we have in head assembled them?
Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.
King. I doubt not that, since we are well persuaded
We carry not a heart with us from hence
That grows not in a fair consent with ours,
Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish
Success and conquest to attend on us.
Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and lov'd
Than is your majesty. There's not, I think, a subject
That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness
Under the sweet shade of your government.
Grey. True. Those that were your father's enemies
Have steep'd their galls in honey and do serve you
With hearts create of duty and of zeal.
King. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness
And shall forget the office of our hand
Sooner than quittance of desert and merit
According to the weight and worthiness.
Scroop. So service shall with steeled sinews toil,
And labor shall refresh itself with hope
To do your grace incessant services.
King. We judge no less. Uncle of Exeter,
Enlarge the man committed yesterday
That rail'd against our person. We consider
It was excess of wine that set him on,
And on his more advice we pardon him.
Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security.
Let him be punish'd, sovereign, lest example
Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.
King. O, let us yet be merciful!
Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish too.
Grey. Sir,
You show great mercy if you give him life,
After the taste of much correction.
King. Alas, your too much love and care of me
Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch!
If little faults, proceeding on distemper,
Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye
When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested,
Appear before us? We'll yet enlarge that man,
Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care
And tender preservation of our person,
Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes.
Who are the late commissioners?
Cam. I one, my lord.
Your highness bade me ask for it today.
Scroop. So did you me, my liege.
Grey. And I, my royal sovereign.
King. Then, Richard Earl of Cambridge, there is yours,
There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham, and, Sir Knight,
Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours.
Read them, and know I know your worthiness.
My Lord of Westmoreland and Uncle Exeter,

95 an: if; F (frequently) & 97, 98 put up: sheathe your sword 99, 100 I . . . betting: Q; not in F 101 noble; cf. n. 104 by Nym: i.e. by thievery 105 sutler: one who sells provisions and liquor to an army 110 that's: F that 112, 113 quotidian tertian; cf. n. 115 run . . . humors: vented his ill humor 118 fracted: broken; cf. n. 120 passes . . . careers; cf. n. 2 apprehended . . . by: arrested: very soon 7 interception: i.e. by intercepting their communications 8 bedfellow: bosom friend (Scroop). 15 pow'rs: forces; F powres

18 in head: in an armed force 22 grows . . . consent: is not in agreement 29 Grey: F Kni [ght] 30 galls: bitterness, resentment 31 create: made 33 office: use 34 quittance of: recompense for 40 Enlarge: release 43 his more advice: his thinking better of it, or our further consideration about him. 44 security: carelessness, overconfidence 46 his sufferance: i.e. letting him go without punishment 49 Sir: F prints with l. 50 53 orisons: prayers 54 distemper: i.e. drunkenness 55 wink'd at: overlooked stretch our eye: open our eyes sufficiently wide 57 yet: nevertheless 61 late: lately appointed 63 it: i.e. an appointment as commissioner

We will aboard tonight. Why, how now, gentlemen!
What see you in those papers that you lose
So much complexion? Look ye how they change!
Their cheeks are paper. Why, what read you there,
That have so cowarded and chas'd your blood
Out of appearance?
Cam. I do confess my fault,
And do submit me to your highness' mercy.
Grey, Scroop. To which we all appeal.
King. The mercy that was quick in us but late
By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd.
You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy,
For your own reasons turn into your bosoms
As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.
See you, my princes and my noble peers,
These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here,
You know how apt our love was to accord
To furnish him with all appertinents
Belonging to his honor. And this man
Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd
And sworn unto the practices of France
To kill us here in Hampton. To the which
This knight, no less for bounty bound to us
Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. But O,
What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop—thou cruel,
Ingrateful, savage, and inhuman creature?
Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels,
That knew'st the very bottom of my soul,
That almost mightst have coin'd me into gold—
Wouldst thou have practic'd on me for thy use?
May it be possible that foreign hire
Could out of thee extract one spark of evil
That might annoy my finger? 'Tis so strange
That, though the truth of it stands off as gross
As black and white, my eye will scarcely see it.
Treason and murther ever kept together,
As two yoke-divels sworn to either's purpose,
Working so grossly in a natural cause
That admiration did not whoop at them.
But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in
Wonder to wait on treason and on murther.
And whatsoever cunning fiend it was
That wrought upon thee so preposterously
Hath got the voice in hell for excellence.
All other divels that suggest by treasons
Do botch and bungle up damnation
With patches, colors, and with forms being fetch'd
From glist'ring semblances of piety.
But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up,
Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,
Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor.
If that same demon that hath gull'd thee thus
Should with his lion gait walk the whole world,
He might return to vasty Tartar back
And tell the legions 'I can never win
A soul so easy as that Englishman's.'
O, how hast thou with jealousy infected
The sweetness of affiance! Show men dutiful?
Why, so didst thou. Seem they grave and learned?
Why, so didst thou. Come they of noble family?
Why, so didst thou. Seem they religious?
Why, so didst thou. Or are they spare in diet,
Free from gross passion or of mirth or anger,
Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood,
Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement,
Not working with the eye without the ear,
And but in purged judgment trusting neither?
Such and so finely bolted didst thou seem.
And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot
To mark the full-fraught man and best indu'd
With some suspicion. I will weep for thee.
For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like
Another fall of man. Their faults are open.
Arrest them to the answer of the law,
And God acquit them of their practices!
Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge.
I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham.
I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland.
Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd,
And I repent my fault more than my death,
Which I beseech your highness to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.
Cam. For me, the gold of France did not seduce,
Although I did admit it as a motive,
The sooner to effect what I intended.
But God be thanked for prevention,
Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice,
Beseeching God and you to pardon me.
Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice
At the discovery of most dangerous treason
Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,
Prevented from a damned enterprise.
My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.
King. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.
You have conspir'd against our royal person,
Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers
Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death.
Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter,
His princes and his peers to servitude,
His subjects to oppression and contempt,
And his whole kingdom into desolation.
Touching our person, seek we no revenge,

80 quick: alive 83 reasons: arguments 87 accord: consent 88 him: F2; not in F appertinents: appurtenances 90 lightly: thoughtlessly, easily 91 practices: plots 92 Hampton: Southampton 93 for bounty: i.e. for our bounty to him 97 counsels: secrets 100 practic'd . . . use: used me for your own purposes (Scroop had been treasurer). 101 May: can 103 annoy my finger: hurt even my finger 104 gross: obvious, flagrant 108 Working . . . cause: working together so obviously in a cause natural for them 109 admiration: wonder, whoop: cry out; F hoope 110 proportion: natural order 113 preposterously: monstrously, unnaturally 114 voice: vote 115 All: F And 115-118 suggest . . . piety; cf. n. 119 temper'd: molded stand up: i.e. take up treason boldly 121 dub: confer knighthood upon (ironical). 122 gull'd: deceived

123 lion gait: see 1 Peter 5:8 124 Tartar: Tartarus, hell 127 jealousy: suspicion 128 affiance: trust, allegiance Show: appear 128-141 Show . . . suspicion; cf. n. 131 religious: (four syllables). 133 or . . . or: either . . . or 134 blood: passions 135 modest complement: outward appearance of modesty 137 purged: free from whim or partiality 138 bolted: sifted, like flower from bran 140 mark the: F make thee full-fraught: fully furnished indu'd: endowed 148 Henry: Q; F Thomas 149 Masham: F. Marsham 159 prevention: forestallment (four syllables). 160 I: F2; not in F sufferance: suffering (death); cf. n. 167 quit: absolve 168–182 You have . . . hence; cf. n. 170 earnest: partial payment given on account of services to be rendered

But we our kingdom's safety must so tender,
Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws
We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
Poor miserable wretches, to your death,
The taste whereof God of his mercy give
You patience to endure and true repentance
Of all your dear offenses! Bear them hence.
Exeunt [Scroop, Cambridge, and Grey, guarded].
Now, lords, for France, the enterprise whereof
Shall be to you as us, like glorious.
We doubt not of a fair and lucky war,
Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous treason lurking in our way
To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now
But every rub is smoothed on our way.
Then forth, dear countrymen. Let us deliver
Our puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.
Cheerly to sea, the signs of war advance!
No King of England, if not King of France!
Flourish. [Exeunt.]

Scene Third

Enter Pistol, Nym, Bardolph, Boy, and Hostess.

Host. Prithee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No, for my manly heart doth earn.
Bardolph, be blithe. Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins. Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is dead, And we must earn therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell!

Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell. He's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. A' made a finer end, and went away an it had been any christome child. A' parted ev'n just between twelve and one, ev'n at the turning o' th' tide. For after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his finger's end, I knew there was but one way. For his nose was as sharp as a pen, and a' babbled of green fields. 'How now, Sir John!' quoth I. 'What, man! Be o' good cheer.' So a' cried out 'God, God, God!' three or four times. Now I, to comfort him, bid him a' should not think of God; I hop'd there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So a' bade me lay more clothes on his feet. I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone. Then I felt to his knees, and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that a' did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that a' did not.

Boy. Yes, that a' did, and said they were devils incarnate.

Host. A' could never abide carnation. 'Twas a color he never lik'd.

Boy. A' said once the devil would have him about women.

Host. A' did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talk'd of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember a' saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and a' said it was a black soul burning in hell?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintain'd that fire. That's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog? The king will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give me thy lips.
Look to my chattels and my movables.
Let senses rule. The word is 'Pitch and pay.'
Trust none;
For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer cakes,
And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck.
Therefore Caveto be thy counselor.
Go, clear thy crystals. Yoke-fellows in arms,
Let us to France, like horseleeches, my boys,
To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that's but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farwell, Hostess. [Kissing her.]

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humor of it. But adieu.

Pist. Let huswifery appear. Keep close, I thee command.

Host. Farwell, adieu. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Flourish. Enter the French King, the Dolphin, the Dukes of Berri and Britaine [, the Constable, and others].

King. Thus comes the English with full pow'r upon us,
And more than carefully it us concerns
To answer royally in our defenses.
Therefore the Dukes of Berri and of Britaine,
Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth,
And you, Prince Dolphin, with all swift dispatch,
To line and new repair our towns of war
With men of courage and with means defendant.
For England his approaches makes as fierce
As waters to the sucking of a gulf.
It fits us then to be as provident
As fear may teach us out of late examples
Left by the fatal and neglected English
Upon our fields.

Dol. My most redoubted father,
It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe,
For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom,

176 tender: cherish 177 have: Q; not in F 182 dear: often an intensive, 'serious' 185 like: alike 186 fair: fortunate 190 rub: obstacle (figure from bowling) 192 puissance: forces (trisyllabic) 193 straight in expedition: immediately in motion expedition: five syllables 194 signs: standards 2 Staines: commonly the first stop on the road to Southampton 3-6 No . . . therefore: F prints this and ll. 40-49 as prose 6 earn: grieve 9 Arthur's bosom: The Hostess mistakes Arthur's bosom for Abraham's (heaven); see Luke 16:22 10 A': he cf. n. 11 an: as if christome: chrisom, just christened, entirely innocent; cf. n. 14 finger's end: F fingers end; most editors read fingers' end or ends (Q) 15 a' babbled . . . fields; cf. n. 22 knees: Q adds 'and they were as cold as any stone' upward: F. vp-peer'd, and vpward, suggests pronunciation 26 of: against sack: a white wine; cf. n.

33 rheumatic: probably she means 'lunatic'; F rumatique; stressed ⏑ — — — whore of Babylon: the 'scarlet woman' of Revelations 17; the Church of Rome (Romeatic) 38 shog: move on 41 movables: furniture, possessions 42 senses: common sense word: Q; F world Pitch and pay: i.e. cash down 45 hold-fast: from the old proverb 'Brag is a good dog, but Hold-fast is better' 46 Caveto: caution; Q cophetua 47 crystals: eyes 52 Farwell: farewell 54 huswifery: housewifery, good management (pronounced 'húzzifry') Keep: close stay at home SD Flourish: trumpet fanfare Constable: here the chief military officer of France 7 line: strengthen 8 means defendant: means of defense 10 gulf: whirlpool 12 late examples: battles at Crécy and Poitiers See ll. 56-67 below 13 fatal and neglected: fatally underrated 15 redoubted: feared

Though war nor no known quarrel were in question,
But that defenses, musters, preparations
Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected
As were a war in expectation.
Therefore I say 'tis meet we all go forth
To view the sick and feeble parts of France.
And let us do it with no show of fear—
No, with no more than if we heard that England
Were busied with a Whitsun morris dance.
For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,
Her scepter so fantastically borne,
By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth,
That fear attends her not.

Con. O, peace, Prince Dolphin!
You are too much mistaken in this king.
Question your grace the late ambassadors,
With what great state he heard their embassy,
How well supplied with noble councilors,
How modest in exception, and withal
How terrible in constant resolution,
And you shall find his vanities forespent
Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,
Covering discretion with a coat of folly,
As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots
That shall first spring and be most delicate.

Dol. Well, 'tis not so, my Lord High Constable,
But though we think it so, it is no matter.
In cases of defense 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems.
So the proportions of defense are fill'd,
Which of a weak and niggardly projection
Doth like a miser spoil his coat with scanting
A little cloth.

King. Think we King Harry strong,
And, princes, look you strongly arm to meet him.
The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us,
And he is bred out of that bloody strain
That haunted us in our familiar paths.
Witness our too much memorable shame
When Cressy battle fatally was struck,
And all our princes captiv'd by the hand
Of that black name, Edward, Black Prince of Wales,
Whiles that his mountain sire, on mountain standing,
Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,
Saw his heroical seed, and smil'd to see him
Mangle the work of nature and deface
The patterns that by God and by French fathers
Had twenty years been made. This is a stem
Of that victorious stock, and let us fear
The native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England
Do crave admittance to your majesty.

King. We'll give them present audience. Go, and bring them. [Exeunt Messenger and certain Lords.]
You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends.

Dol. Turn head and stop pursuit. For coward dogs
Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten Runs far before them. Good my sovereign,
Take up the English short, and let them know
Of what a monarchy you are the head.
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Enter [Lords, with] Exeter [and train].

King. From our brother of England?

Exe. From him, and thus he greets your majesty:
He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
That you divest yourself and lay apart
The borrow'd glories that by gift of heaven,
By law of nature and of nations, 'longs
To him and to his heirs—namely, the crown
And all wide-stretched honors that pertain
By custom and the ordinance of times
Unto the crown of France. That you may know
'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim,
Pick'd from the wormholes of long-vanish'd days,
Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
He sends you this most memorable line,
In every branch truly demonstrative,
Willing you overlook this pedigree.
And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,
Edward the Third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him, the native and true challenger.

King. Or else what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint, for if you hide the crown
Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it.
Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming,
In thunder and in earthquake, like a Jove,
That, if requiring fail, he will compel.
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy
On the poor souls for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws, and on your head
Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans,
For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy.
This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my message,
Unless the Dolphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

King. For us, we will consider of this further.
Tomorrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our brother of England.

21 expectation: five syllables 26 Whitsun . . . dance; cf. n. 27 idly king'd: i.e. has so frivolous a king 29 humorous: capricious 36 exception: disagreement 37 constant: firm 38 forespent: former 39 Brutus; cf. n. 41 ordure; manure 47 proportions . . . fill'd: numbers necessary for defense are completed 48 of a weak . . . projection: if they are estimated on too small a scale 53 flesh'd: aroused by the first taste of blood, or initiated in fighting (against us). 57 Cressy battle: the victory of Edward III over the French at Crécy in 1346; cf. n. struck: fought 60 mountain sire: mighty sire (or born among the mountains), Edward III 67 native . . . fate: powerful inherited destiny

70 present: immediate 73 Turn head: stand at bay (from hunting). 74 spend their mouths: bark 76 Take up . . . short: answer curtly 88 ordinance of times: usage of past ages 90 sinister: irregular; stressed — ⏑ – awkward: indirect, perverse 93 memorable line: noteworthy pedigree 94 demonstrative: proving his claims 95 overlook: look over 96 evenly: directly 99 indirectly: not in a direct line of descent 100 challenger: claimant 102 constraint: force 103 Even: here and in 1. 144 read 'e'en' 104 fierce; cf. n. 106 That: so that requiring: requesting 107 in the bowels: 'by the mercy,' a phrase from Holinshed (after Philippians 1:8). 110 vasty: vast 112 pining: Q: F priuy 118 For us: for my part

Dol. For the Dolphin,
I stand here for him. What to him from England?
Exe. Scorn and defiance, slight regard, contempt,
And anything that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus says my king. An if your father's highness
Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
He'll call you to so hot an answer of it
That caves and womby vaultages of France
Shall chide your trespass and return your mock
In second accent of his ordinance.
Dol. Say, if my father render fair return,
It is against my will, for I desire
Nothing but odds with England. To that end,
As matching to his youth and vanity,
I did present him with the Paris balls.
Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it,
Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe.
And be assur'd you'll find a difference,
As we his subjects have in wonder found,
Between the promise of his greener days
And these he masters now. Now he weighs time
Even to the utmost grain. That you shall read
In your own losses, if he stay in France.
King. Tomorrow shall you know our mind at full. Flourish.
Exe. Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our king
Come here himself to question our delay,
For he is footed in this land already.
King. You shall be soon dispatch'd with fair conditions.
A night is but small breath and little pause
To answer matters of this consequence. Exeunt.

Act Third

Flourish. Enter Chorus.

Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies
In motion of no less celerity
Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen
The well-appointed king at Hampton pier
Embark his royalty, and his brave fleet
With silken streamers the young Phoebus fanning.
Play with your fancies, and in them behold
Upon the hempen tackle ship boys climbing.
Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give
To sounds confus'd. Behold the threaden sails,
Borne with th' invisible and creeping wind,
Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,
Breasting the lofty surge. O, do but think
You stand upon the rivage and behold
A city on th' inconstant billows dancing,
For so appears this fleet majestical,
Holding due course to Harflew. Follow, follow!
Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy,
And leave your England as dead midnight still,
Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old women,
Either past or not arriv'd to pith and puissance.
For who is he whose chin is but enrich'd
With one appearing hair that will not follow
These cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France?
Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege.
Behold the ordinance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harflew.
Suppose th' ambassador from the French comes back,
Tells Harry that the king doth offer him
Katharine his daughter, and with her, to dowry,
Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.
The offer likes not. And the nimble gunner
With linstock now the divelish cannon touches,
Alarum, and chambers go off.
And down goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eche out our performance with your mind. Exit.

Scene First

Alarum. Enter the King, Exeter, Bedford, and Gloucester [and Soldiers, with] scaling ladders at Harflew.

King. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more,
Or close the wall up with our English dead.
In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility.
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger.
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
Disguise fair nature with hard-favor'd rage.
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head
Like the brass cannon. Let the brow o'erwhelm it
As fearfully as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.
Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide,
Hold hard the breath and bend up every spirit
To his full height. On, on, you noblest English,
Whose blood is fet from fathers of war proof!
Fathers that like so many Alexanders
Have in these parts from morn till even fought
And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.
Dishonor not your mothers. Now attest
That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you.
Be copy now to men of grosser blood
And teach them how to war. And you, good yeomen,
Whose limbs were made in England, show us here

127 at large: in full 130 vaultages: caverns 132 second accent: echo ordinance: ordnance, cannon 135 odds: quarrel 136 vanity: frivolity 137 Paris balls: the old term for tennis balls 138 Louvre: royal palace in Paris; cf. n. 139 mistress court: principal court (also a tennis term) 142 greener: younger, rawer 143 weighs time: i.e. no longer wastes it; cf. n. 146 Flourish: cf. n. 149 is footed: has a foothold 151 breath: breathing space SD Flourish: see II.Pro.SD; cf. n. 1 imagin'd wing: the wing of imagination 3 Than . . . Suppose: F ends 1. 2 with thought 4 well-appointed: well-equipped Hampton: F Douer 5 brave: fine 6 Phoebus: the sun fanning: F fayning 10 threaden: linen 14 rivage: shore

17 Harflew: Harfleur, across from Le Havre at the mouth of the Seine 18 sternage: the sterns 21 pith: strength 24 choice-drawn: selected 26 ordinance: ordnance 27 girded: surrounded, besieged 32 likes: pleases 33 linstock: combustibles at the end of a staff for setting off cannon SD Alarum: trumpet call to arms chambers: small cannon 36 eche out: eke out, supplement 7 summon: F commune; cf. n. 8 hard-favor'd: grim-faced 9 aspect: stressed —·— 10 portage: portholes 12 galled: worn (by the sea). 13 jutty: jut over confounded: worn, ruined 14 Swill'd with: greedily swallowed by ocean: here trisyllabic 18 fet: fetched, of war proof: proved in war 21 argument: matter for dispute, opposition 24 men: F me. 25 yeomen: cf. n.

The mettle of your pasture. Let us swear
That you are worth your breeding, which I doubt not,
For there is none of you so mean and base
That hath not noble luster in your eyes.
I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. The game's afoot!
Follow your spirit, and upon this charge
Cry 'God for Harry, England, and St. George!'
[Exeunt.] Alarum, and chambers go off.

Scene Second

Enter Nym, Bardolph, Pistol, and Boy

Bard. On, on, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay. The knocks are too hot, and, for mine own part, I have not a case of lives. The humor of it is too hot, that is the very plain song of it.

Pist. The plain song is most just, for humors do abound:

Knocks go and come, God's vassals drop and die,
And sword and shield
In bloody field
Doth win immortal fame.

Boy. Would I were in an alehouse in London! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.

Pistol. and I:

If wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with me,
But thither would I hie.

Boy:

As duly,
But not as truly,
As bird doth sing on bough.

Enter Fluellen

Flu. Up to the breach, you dogs! Avaunt, you cullions!
Driving them forward.]

Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mold.
Abate they rage, abate thy manly rage,
Abate thy rage, great duke!
Good bawcock, bate thy rage! Use lenity, sweet chuck!

Nym. These be good humors! Your honor wins bad humors.
Exeunt [all but Boy].

Boy. As young as I am, I have observ'd these three swashers. I am boy to them all three, but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for indeed three such antics do not amount to a man. For Bardolph, he is white-liver'd and red-fac'd, by the means whereof a' faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword, by the means whereof a' breaks words and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, he hath heard that men of few words are the best men, and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest a' should be thought a coward. But his few bad words are match'd with as few good deeds, for a' never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal anything, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Callice they stole a fire shovel. I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers, which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them and seek some better service. Their villainy goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. Exit.

Enter Gower [and Fluellen.]

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines. The Duke of Gloucester would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines? Tell you the duke, it is not so good to come to the mines. For look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war; the concavities of it is not sufficient. For look you, th' athversary, you may discuss unto the duke, look you, is digt himself four yard under the countermines. By Cheshu, I think a' will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gow. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

Flu: It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world! I will verify as much in his beard. He has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy dog.

Enter Macmorris and Captain Jamy.

Gow. Here a' comes, and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvelous falorous gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th' aunchiant wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions. By Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say gud day, Captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, good Captain James.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! Have you quit the mines? Have the pioners given o'er?

Mac. By Chrish, la, tish ill done! The work ish give over, the trompet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done! It ish give over. I would

27 mettle ... pasture: the quality of your breeding; cf. n. 31 slips: leashes; collar, quickly released 32 Straining: F Straying 34 St. George: patron saint of England 3 case: set 5 plain song: simple truth (simple melody without variations) just: correct 6-9 Knocks ... fame: cf. n. 17 duly: surely 18 truly: 'in tune' and 'faithfully' 21 cullions: rascals; cf. n. 22 men of mold: men of earth, mortal men 25 bawcock: fine fellow (French beau coq) chuck: chick 27 swashers: swaggerers 29 man: 'man' and 'servant' 30 antics: buffoons; F Antiques For: as for 31 white-liver'd: cowardly 31, 32 faces it out: puts a good face on it 33 breaks words: 'mistakes his words' and 'breaks promises'

35 best: bravest 37 broke: bruised, drew blood from 39 purchase: booty 42 Callice: Calais; stressed — — 43 piece of service: warlike deed carry coals: put up with insults; do the dirty work 45 makes: goes 47 pocketing ... wrongs: pun ('stealing' and 'bearing insults') 49 cast it up: pun (throw it up) 50 presently: immediately 51 mines: i.e. under the enemy's walls Gloucester: cf. n. 54 disciplines ... war: military science 57 Cheshu: Jesu 58 directions: 'managements,' or 'instructions to this troops' 62 Fluellen: cf. n. 65 in ... beard: to his face 70 falorous: valorous 71 expedition: readiness in arguments aunchiant: ancients 76 Jamy: cf. n. 77 God-den: good evening (commonly used in the afternoon) 79 pioners: engineering troops, sappers. given o'er: given up

have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la! in an hour. O, tish ill done, tish ill done! By my hand, tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication—partly to satisfy my opinion and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline. That is the point.

Jamy. It sall be vary gud, gud feith, gud captens bath, and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion. That sall I, mary.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me! The day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes. It is no time to discourse. The town is beseech'd, and the trompet call us to the breach, and we talk, and, be Chrish, do nothing! 'Tis shame for us all. So God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still, it is shame, by my hand! And there is throats to be cut, and works to be done, and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la!

Jamy. By the mess, ere theise eyes of mine take themselves to slomber, ay'll de gud service, or I'll lig i' th' grund for it. Ay, or go to death! And I'll pay't as valorously as I may, that sall I suerly do, that is the breff and the long. Mary, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation—

Mac. Of my nation! What ish my nation? Ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal. What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation?

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you, being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of war, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself. So Chrish save me, I will cut off your head!

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. Ah, that's a foul fault! A parley [sounded].

Gow. The town sounds a parley.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of war. And there is an end. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Enter the Governor and some Citizens on the walls.] Enter the King [Henry] and all his train before the gates.

King. How yet resolves the governor of the town?
This is the latest parle we will admit.
Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves,
Or like to men proud of destruction
Defy us to our worst. For, as I am a soldier,
A name that in my thoughts becomes me best,
If I begin the batt'ry once again,
I will not leave the half-achiev'd Harflew
Till in her ashes she lie buried.
The gates of mercy shall be all shut up,
And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart,
In liberty of bloody hand shall range
With conscience wide as hell, mowing like grass
Your fresh fair virgins and your flow'ring infants.
What is it then to me if impious War,
Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends,
Do with his smirch'd complexion all fell feats
Enlink'd to waste and desolation?
What is't to me, when you yourselves are cause,
If your pure maidens fall into the hand
Of hot and forcing violation?
What rein can hold licentious wickedness
When down the hill he holds his fierce career?
We may as bootless spend our vain command
Upon th' enraged soldiers in their spoil
As send precepts to the leviathan
To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harflew,
Take pity of your town and of your people
Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command,
Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace
O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds
Of heady murther, spoil, and villainy.
If not—why, in a moment look to see
The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand
Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters,
Your fathers taken by the silver beards
And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls,
Your naked infants spitted upon pikes
Whiles the mad mothers with their howls confus'd
Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry
At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen.
What say you? Will you yield, and this avoid,
Or, guilty in defense, be thus destroy'd?

Governor. Our expectation hath this day an end.
The Dolphin, whom of succors we entreated,
Returns us that his pow'rs are yet not ready
To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king,
We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy.
Enter our gates, dispose of us and ours,
For we no longer are defensible.

King. Open your gates. Come, Uncle Exeter,
Go you and enter Harflew. There remain,
And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French.
Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,
The winter coming on, and sickness growing
Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Callice.

92, 93 bath: both quit . . . leve: answer you with your permission 97 beseech'd: besieged 103 mess: Mass. theise: these 104 de: do lig: lie 107 tway: two 108, 109 under . . . correction: correct me if I'm wrong 123 parley: trumpet summons to a parley 125 required: probably 'found' SD gates: the gates of Harfleur; in F the Governor enters at l. 43 2 latest parle: last parley; cf. n. 4 proud of destruction: proudly headed toward self-destruction

8 half-achiev'd: half won Harflew: Harfleur 11 flesh'd: made fierce by the taste of blood 12 liberty: license 17 fell: cruel 18 Enlink'd to: associated with 23 career: swift course 24 bootless: vainly 26 precepts: summons (a legal term); stressed — – leviathan: whale 27 ashore: F ends l. 26 here 30 temperate: read 'temp'rate' grace: mercy 31 O'erblows: blows away contagious: clouds and mists were thought to carry contagion 32 heady: headstrong, violent; F headly 35 Defile: F Desire 40 break: pierce 41 slaughtermen: i.e. the Slaughter of the Innocents (see Matthew 2:16-18) 44 expectation: hope 45 of: for 50 defensible: capable of defending ourselves 54 all. For us: F all for vs 56 Callice: Calais

Tonight in Harflew will we be your guest;
Tomorrow for the march are we address'd.

Flourish, and enter the town.

Scene Fourth

Enter Katharine and [Alice,] an old gentlewoman.

Kath. Alice, tu as été en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le language.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseignez. Il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez-vous la main en anglais?

Alice. La main? Elle est appelée de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? Ma foi, j'oublie les doigts, mais je me souviendrai. Les doigts? Je pense qu'ils sont appelés de fingres—oui, de fingres.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon écolier. J'ai gagné deux mots d'anglais vitement. Comment appelez-vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles? Nous les appelons de nayles.

Kath. De nayles. Écoutez. Dites-moi si je parle bien: de hand, de fingres, et de nayles.

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est fort bon anglais.

Kath. Dites-moi l'anglais pour le bras.

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude?

Alice. D' elbow.

Kath. D' elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez-moi, Alice. Écoutez: d' hand, de fingre, de nayles, d' arma, de bilbow.

Alice. D' elbow, madame.

Kath. O, Seigneur Dieu, je m'en oublie! D' elbow. Comment appelez-vous le col?

Alice. De nick, madame.

Kath. De nick. Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick; le menton, de sin.

Alice. Oui. Sauf votre honneur, en vérité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droit que les natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre, par la grâce de Dieu, et en peu de temps.

Alice. N'avez-vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ai enseigné?

Kath. Non, je réciterai à vous promptement: d' hand, de fingre, de maylees—

Alice. De nayles, madame.

Kath. De nayles, de arm, de ilbow.

Alice. Sauf votre honneur, d' elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis-je: d' elbow, de nick, et de sin. Comment appelez-vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. Le foot, madame, et le count.

Kath. Le foot et le count! O, Seigneur Dieu! ils sont les mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user. Je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France pour tout le monde. Foh! Le foot et le count! Néanmoins, je réciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: d' hand, de fingre, de nayles, d 'arm, d' elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, le count.

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C'est assez pour une fois. Allons-nous à dîner.

Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

Enter the King of France, the Dolphin, [the Duke of Britaine,] the Constable of France, and others.

King: 'Tis certain he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord,
Let us not live in France. Let us quit all
And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Dol. O, Dieu vivant! Shall a few sprays of us,
The emptying of our fathers' luxury,
Our scions, put in wild and savage stock,
Spurt up so suddenly into the clouds
And overlook their grafters?

Brit. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards!

58 address'd: prepared 3 Un peu: see Introduction; cf. n. Translation. 7 Et les doigts; cf. n.

Kath. Alice, you have been in England and speak the language well.
Alice. A little, my lady.
Kath. I pray you, teach me. I must learn to speak it. What do you call la main in English?
Alice. La main? It is called de hand.
Kath. De hand. And les doigts?
Alice. Les doigts? Dear me, I forget les doigts, but I shall remember. Les doigts? I think that they are called de fingres—yes, de fingres.
Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres. I think that I am a good scholar. I have acquired two words of English quickly. What do you call les ongles?
Alice. Les ongles? We call them de nayles.
Kath. De nayles. Listen. Tell me whether or not I speak correctly: de hand, de fingres, and de nayles.
Alice. That is correct, my lady; it is very good English.
Kath. Tell me the English for le bras.
Alice. De arm, my lady.
Kath. And le coude?
Alice. D' elbow.
Kath. D' elbow. I am going to repeat all the words you have taught me up to now.
Alice. It is too difficult, my lady, I think.
Kath. Pardon me, Alice. Listen: d' hand, de fingre, de nayles, d' arma, de bilbow.
Alice. D' elbow, my lady.
Kath. O, Lord, I forget! D' elbow. What do you call le col?
Alice. De nick, my lady.
Kath. De nick. And le menton?
Alice. De chin.
Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick; le menton, de sin.
Alice. Yes. Saving your grace, in truth you pronounce the words as well as the people of England [do].
Kath. I don't doubt that I shall learn, with God's help, and in a short time.
Alice. Haven't you already forgotten what I have taught you?
Kath. No, I shall recite to you at once: d' hand, de fingre, de maylees—
Alice. De nayles, my lady.
Kath. De nayles, de arm, de ilbow.
Alice. Saving your grace, d' elbow.
Kath. That's what I said; d' elbow, de nick, and de sin. What do you call le pied and la robe?
Alice. Le foot, my lady, and le count.
Kath. Le foot and le count! O, Lord! those are naughty words, wicked, coarse, and immodest and [are] not for fine ladies to use. I wouldn't pronounce these words before the lords of France for the whole world. Fie! le foot and le count! Nevertheless, I shall recite my whole lesson once more: d' hand, de fingre, de nayles, d' arm, d' elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, le count.
Alice. Excellent, my lady.
Kath. That's enough for one time. Let's go to dinner.

SD Britaine; cf. n. 2 withal: with 5 sprays: offshoots 6 luxury: lust 9 overlook . . . grafters; cf. n.

Mort Dieu! ma vie! if they march along
Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom
To buy a slobb'ry and a dirty farm
In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.
Con. Dieu de batailles! Where have they this mettle?
Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull,
On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale,
Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water,
A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley broth,
Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat?
And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine,
Seem frosty? O, for honor of our land,
Let us not hang like roping icicles
Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people
Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields!
Poor we may call them in their native lords.
Dol. By faith and honor,
Our madams mock at us and plainly say
Our mettle is bred out, and they will give
Their bodies to the lust of English youth
To new-store France with bastard warriors.
Brit. They bid us to the English dancing schools
And teach lavoltas high and swift corantos,
Saying our grace is only in our heels
And that we are most lofty runaways.
King. Where is Montjoy the herald? Speed him hence.
Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.
Up, princes, and, with spirit of honor edg'd
More sharper than your swords, hie to the field.
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France,
You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berri,
Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy,
Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont,
Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Faulconbridge,
Foix, Lestrake, Bouciqualt, and Charolois—
High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,
For your great seats now quit you of great shames.
Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land
With pennons painted in the blood of Harflew.
Rush on his host as doth the melted snow
Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat
The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon.
Go down upon him—you have power enough—
And in a captive chariot into Roan
Bring him our prisoner.
Con. This becomes the great.
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march.
For I am sure, when he shall see our army,
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear
And for achievement offer us his ransom.

11 Mort . . . vie: F Mort du ma vie and most editors read Mort de ma vie 13 slobb'ry: muddy 14 nook-shotten: running out into corners or angles 15 batailles: trisyllabic Where: whence mettle: stuff, courage 17 despite: spite . 18 sodden: boiled 19 drench: medicinal draught sur-rein'd: overridden jades: horses (contemptuous). 20 Decoct: warm up 23 roping: hanging down like ropes 26 Poor . . . lords: i.e. their fields have bred leaders of poor quality may: F2; not in F 33 lavoltas: high jumping dances corantos: rapid sliding dances 36 Montjoy: title of the chief herald or king-at-arms of France 38 spirit: here and elsewhere read 'sprite' or 'spir't' 40–45 Charles . . . Charolois: all these names are taken from Holinshed 44 Faulconbridge: cf. n. 46 knights: F Kings 47 seats: estates, fiefs quit you: absolve yourselves 52 void his rheum: spit 54 Roan: Rouen 61 for achievement: i.e. instead of victory

King. Therefore, Lord Constable, haste on Montjoy,
And let him say to England that we send
To know what willing ransom he will give.
Prince Dolphin, you shall stay with us in Roan.
Dol. Not so, I do beseech your majesty.
King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us.
Now forth, Lord Constable and princes all,
And quickly bring us word of England's fall. Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

Enter Captains, English and Welsh: Gower and Fluellen.

Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen! Come you from the bridge?
Flu. I assure you there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.
Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?
Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon, and a man that I love and honor with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my live, and my living, and my uttermost power. He is not—God be praised and blessed!—any hurt in the world, but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an aunchient lieutenant there at the pridge, I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony, and he is a man of no estimation in the world, but I did see him do as gallant service.
Gow. What do you call him?
Flu. He is call'd Aunchient Pistol.
Gow. I know him not.

Enter Pistol.

Flu. Here is the man.
Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favors.
The duke of Exeter doth love thee well.
Flu. Ay, I praise God, and I have merited some love at his hands.
Pist. Bardolph, a soldier firm and sound of heart,
And of buxom valor, hath by cruel fate.
And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel,
That goddess blind,
That stands upon the rolling restless stone—
Flu. By your patience, Aunchient Pistol. Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler afore his eyes, to signify to you, that Fortune is blind. And she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning and inconstant, and mutability, and variation. And her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls. In good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it. Fortune is an excellent moral.
Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him,
For he hath stol'n a pax, and hanged must a' be—
A damned death!
Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free,
And let not hemp his windpipe suffocate.

SD English and Welsh: cf. n. 6 Agamemnon: general of the Greek forces that besieged Troy 8 live . . . living: cf. n. 11 discipline: military science aunchient lieutenant: two ridiculously juxtaposed titles; perhaps 'sublieutenant' aunchient; ancient (ensign) 13 estimation: reputation 19, 20 Captain . . well: F prints all of Pistol's speeches in this scene as prose 24 buxom: lively 25 furious: cruel 29 his: F; often emended to her 35 moral: a symbolical figure 37 pax; cf. n.

But Exeter hath given the doom of death
For pax of little price.
Therefore go speak—the duke will hear thy voice,
And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut
With edge of penny cord and vile reproach.
Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why, then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at. For if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure and put him to execution, for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd! and figo for thy friendship!

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain! Exit.

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal. I remember him now—a bawd, a cutpurse.

Flu. I'll assure you, a' utt'red as prave words at the pridge as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well. What he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars to grace himself, at his return into London, under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfit in the great commanders' names, and they will learn you by rote where services were done—at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgrac'd, what terms the enemy stood on. And this they con perfitly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths. And what a beard of the general's cut and a horrid suit of the camp will do among foaming bottles and ale-wash'd wits is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvelously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower. I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is. If I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind. [Drum within.] Hark you, the king is coming, and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Drum and colors. Enter the King [Henry] and his poor Soldiers [and Gloucester].

Flu. God pless your majesty!

King. How now, Fluellen! Cam'st thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintain'd the pridge. The French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most prave passages. Marry, th' athversary was have possession of the pridge, but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge. I can tell your majesty, the duke is a prave man.

King. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' athversary hath been very great, reasonable great. Marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church—one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man. His face is all bubukles and whelks, and knobs, and flames o' fire, and his lips blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue, and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

King. We would have all such offenders so cut off. And we give express charge that in our marches through the country there be nothing compell'd from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language. For when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. You know me by my habit,

King. Well then, I know thee. What shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

King. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king: Say thou to Harry of England: Though we seem'd dead, we did but sleep. Advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him we could have rebuk'd him at Harflew, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe. Now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial. England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ransom, which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which in weight to reanswer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor. For th' effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number. And for our disgrace, his own person kneeling at our feet but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance, and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc'd. So far my king and master; so much my office.

King. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

King. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back,
And tell thy king I do not seek him now,
But could be willing to march on to Callice
Without impeachment. For, to say the sooth,
Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much
Unto an enemy of craft and vantage,
My people are with sickness much enfeebl'd,
My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have
Almost no better than so many French;
Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herald,
I thought upon one pair of English legs
Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me, God,
That I do brag thus! This your air of France
Hath blown that vice in me. I must repent.
Go therefore, tell thy master here I am.
My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk;
My army but a weak and sickly guard.

53 figo: cf. n. 57 arrant: out-and-out 58 bawd: pander 59 prave: brave, i.e. fine 60 is serve: i.e. shall serve 62 gull: simpleton 65 perfit: perfect 66 learn: teach 67 sconce: fortification 69 stood: insisted 70 con: learn by heart 71 new-tuned: newly composed 74 slanders: scandals, abuses 78 hole . . . coat: i.e. some weak spot in his record 80 from: about, or with news from 85 passages: deeds 90 perdition: loss

94 bubukles: Fluellen's word for 'carbuncles.' whelks: boils 100 compell'd: forced 102 lenity: Q; F Leuitie SD Tucket: trumpet signal 104 habit: i.e. his herald's tabard coat 109 Advantage: cautions, awaiting a favorable opportunity 111 bruise: squeeze (as in squeezing a boil). 112 upon . . . cue: at the right moment 113 England: i.e. Henry 114 admire . . . sufferance: wonder at our forbearance 115 proportion: be in proportion to 117 in weight . . . under: i.e. his public resources would collapse under any attempt to compensate fully 125 quality: profession 127 dost: F doo'st; see IV.7.162 fairly: splendidly 129 Callice: Calais 130 impeachment: hindrance 132 of . . . vantage: who is cunning and has the advantage 140 blown: puffed up

Yet, God before, tell him we will come on,
Though France himself and such another neighbor
Stand in our way. There's for thy labor, Montjoy.
Go bid thy master well advise himself.
If we may pass, we will. If we be hind'red,
We shall your tawny ground with your red blood
Discolor. And so, Montjoy, fare you well.
The sum of all our answer is but this:
We would not seek a battle as we are,
Nor, as we are, we say we will not shun it.
So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness. [Exit.]

Glouc. I hope they will not come upon us now.

King. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.
March to the bridge. It now draws toward night.
Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves,
And on tomorrow bid them march away. Exeunt.

Scene Seventh

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Rambures, Orleans, Dolphin, with others.

Con. Tut, I have the best armor of the world. Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armor, but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dol. My lord of Orleans, and my Lord High Constable, you talk of horse and armor?

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dol. What a long night is this! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ça, ha! he bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs: le cheval volant, the Pegasus, chez les narines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk. He trots the air. The earth sings when he touches it. The basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the color of the nutmeg.

Dol. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire, and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him. He is indeed a horse, and all other jades you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dol. It is the prince of palfreys His neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dol. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb vary deserved praise on my palfrey. It is a theme as fluent as the sea. Turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all. 'Tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on, and for the world, familiar to us and unknown, to lay apart their particular functions and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise, and began thus, 'Wonder of nature—'

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dol. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my courser, for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dol. Me well, which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dol. So perhaps did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dol. O, then belike she was old and gentle, and you rode like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off and in your strait strossers.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dol. Be warn'd by me then. They that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as live have my mistress a jade.

Dol. I tell thee, Constable, my mistress wears his own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dol. 'Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée au bourbier.' Thou mak'st use of anything.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress, or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose.

Rambures. My Lord Constable, the armor that I saw in your tent tonight—are those stars or suns upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dol. Some of them will fall tomorrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dol. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honor some were away.

Con. Ev'n as your horse bears your praises, who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted.

Dol. Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot tomorrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so for fear I should be fac'd out of my way. But I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Rambures. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard ere you have them.

Dol. 'Tis midnight. I'll go arm myself. Exit.

Orl. The Dolphin longs for morning.

Rambures. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

146 There's . . . labor: he gives the herald a purse of some valuable 148-150 If we . . . Discolor; cf. n. 149 tawny: yellow SD Dolphin; cf. n. 12 pasterns: the part of a horse's leg between hoof and fetlock; F2; F postures 13 as if . . . hairs: i.e. as if he were stuffed with hair (like a tennis ball); cf. n. 13, 14 le cheval . . . feu: Pegasus, the flying horse with nostrils of fire 16 basest horn: note pun 17 Hermes: who charmed Argus to sleep by playing on his pipe 19 Perseus: the Greek hero who rode on Pegasus 22 jades; cf. n. 24 absolute: perfect 26 palfreys: saddle horses, usually for ladies 30 lodging: lying down

32 argument: subject 33 reason: discourse 42 prescript: prescribed 43 particular: belonging only to one lover 44 shrewdly: viciously 49 kern: Irish foot soldier French hose: baggy breeches 49, 50 strait strossers: tight trousers, i.e. bare-legged or in underpants 55 live: lief 57 to: as 59, 60 Le . . . bourbier; cf. n. 60 Thou . . . anything: i.e. to win an argument 75 fac'd . . way: outfaced, put to shame; driven off 80 go to hazard: play craps

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.
Orl. He is simply the most active gèntleman of France.
Con. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing.
Orl. He never did harm that I heard of.
Con. Nor will do none tomorrow. He will keep that good name still.
Orl. I know him to be valiant.
Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you.
Orl. What's he?
Con. Marry, he told me so himself, and he said he car'd not who knew it.
Orl. He needs not. It is no hidden virtue in him.
Con. By my faith, sir, but it is. Never anybody saw it but his lackey 'Tis a hooded valor, and when it appears it will bate.
Orl. 'Ill will never said well.'
Con. I will cap that proverb with 'There is flattery in friendship.'
Orl. And I will take up that with 'Give the devil his due.'
Con. Well plac'd. There stands your friend for the devil. Have at the very eye of that proverb with 'A pox of the devil!'
Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much 'A fool's bolt is soon shot.'
Con. You have shot over.
Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord High Constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents.
Con. Who hath measur'd the ground?
Mess. The Lord Grandpré.
Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman. Would it were day! Alas, poor Harry of England! He longs not for the dawning as we do.
Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers so far out of his knowledge!
Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.
Orl. That they lack, for if their heads had any intellectual armor, they could never wear such heavy headpieces.
Rambures. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures. Their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.
Orl. Foolish curs, that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear and have their heads crush'd like rotten apples! You may as well say that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.
Con. Just, just. And the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives. And then give them great meals of beef and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils.

87 tread out: treat with contempt 89 still: always 101 lackey: a running footman servant: (the only person he has stood up to). 101, 102 hooded . . . bate; cf. n. 103-110 Ill will . . . shot: in this game of 'capping proverbs' the one who has the last word wins 109 how much: as much as 110 bolt: arrow 111 shot over: missed the target 112 overshot: outshot 120 peevish: foolish 121 fat-brain'd: fat-headed 121, 122 out . . . knowledge: beyond his experience or understanding 123 apprehension: common sense (pun on 'fear'). 128 mastiffs: well known throughout Europe for their bull-and bear-baiting 129 winking: with their eyes shut 129-130 Russian bear: highly prized in bear-baiting 133 Just, just: exactly so sympathize with: resemble 134 robustious: violent coming on: attack 135, 136 give . . . devils; cf. n.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrowdly out of beef.
Con. Then shall we find tomorrow they have only stomachs to eat and none to fight. Now is it time to arm. Come, shall we about it?
Orl. It is now two o'clock. But let me see, by ten
We shall have each a hundred Englishmen. Exeunt.

Act Fourth

[Enter] Chorus.

Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the poring dark
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp through the foul womb of night
The hum of either army stilly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch.
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each battle sees the other's umber'd face.
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs
Piercing the night's dull ear. And from the tents
The armorers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.
The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of drowsy morning name.
Proud of their numbers and secure in soul,
The confident and overlusty French
Do the low-rated English play at dice,
And chide the creeple tardy-gaited night
Who like a foul and ugly witch doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English,
Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently and inly ruminate
The morning's danger. And their gesture sad,
Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats,
Presenteth them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O, now, who will behold
The royal captain of this ruin'd band
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent,
Let him cry 'Praise and glory on his head!'
For forth he goes and visits all his host,
Bids them good morrow with a modest smile,
And calls them brothers, friends, and countrymen.
Upon his royal face there is no note
How dread an army hath enrounded him,
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of color
Unto the weary and all-watched night,
But freshly looks and overbears attaint
With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty,

137 shrowdly: shrewdly, grievously 138 stomachs: inclinations 1 entertain conjecture: imagine 2 poring: eye-straining 5 stilly: quietly 6 That: so that 8 paly: pale 9 battle: army umber'd: dark brown, i.e. shadowy 12 accomplishing: completing the equipment of 13 rivets: cf. n. 16 name: F nam'd 17 secure: carefree, overconfident 18 overlusty: too merry 19 play at dice: i.e. play for their lives 20 creeple: cripple 24 inly: inwardly 25 gesture sad: serious bearing 26 Investing: clothing with dignity 27 Presenteth: F Presented 33 good morrow: good morning 35 note: sign 37 dedicate: sacrifice 38 all-watched: sleepless throughout 39 overbears attaint: conquers any sign of fatigue and fear 40 semblance: appearance

That every wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort form his looks.
A largess universal like the sun
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear; that mean and gentle all
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the night.
And so our scene must to the battle fly,
Where—O, for pity!—we shall much disgrace
With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right ill-dispos'd in brawl ridiculous,
The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see,
Minding true things by what their mock'ries be. Exit.

Scene First

Enter the King [Henry], Bedford, and Gloucester.

King. Gloucester, 'tis true that we are in great danger;
The greater therefore should our courage be.
Good morrow, brother Bedford. God Almighty!
There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distill it out.
For our bad neighbor makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthful and good husbandry.
Besides, they are our outward consciences
And preachers to us all, admonishing
That we should dress us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather honey from the weed
And make a moral of the divel himself.

Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham.
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a churlish turf of France.
Erp. Not so, my liege. This lodging likes me better,
Since I may say 'Now lie I like a king.'
King. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains
Upon example; so the spirit is eas'd.
And when the mind is quick'ned, out of doubt
The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsy grave and newly move
With casted slough and fresh legerity.
Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas. Brothers both,
Commend me to the princes in our camp.
Do my good morrow to them, and anon
Desire them all to my pavilion.
Glouc. We shall, my liege.
Erp. Shall I attend your grace?
King. No, my good knight.
Go with my brothers to my lords of England.
I and my bosom must debate awhile,
And then I would no other company.

41 That: so that 43 like the sun; cf. n. 45 mean and gentle: those of low birth and gentlemen 46 as . . . define: so far as our poor abilities can depict it 47 touch: glimpse 50-2 With . . . Agincourt; cf. n. 50 foils: rapiers 51 dispos'd: set forth 53 Minding: imagining 3 Good: F God; cf. n. 7 husbandry: economy, management 8 they: things evil (1. 4) or the French 10 dress us fairly: prepare ourselves properly 12 make . . . of: find a moral lesson in SD Erpingham; cf. n. 15 churlish: niggardly, rough 16 likes: pleases 19 Upon example: i.e. knowing others have endured the same troubles 23 casted slough: skin cast off legerity: nimbleness 26 Do: convey anon: immediately 27 pavilion: four syllables

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry!
Exeunt [all but the King].
King. God-a-mercy, old heart! Thou speak'st cheerfully.

Enter Pistol.

Pist. Qui va là?
King. A friend.
Pist. Discuss unto me, art thou officer,
Or art thou base, common, and popular?
King. I am a gentleman of a company.
Pist. Trail'st thou the puissant pike?
King. Even so. What are you?
Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.
King. Then you are a better than the king.
Pist. The king's a bawcock and a heart of gold,
A lad of life, an imp of fame,
Of parents good, of fist most valiant.
I kiss his dirty shoe, and from heartstring
I love the lovely bully. What is thy name?
King. Harry le Roy.
Pist. Le Roy? A Cornish name. Art thou of Cornish crew?
King. No, I am a Welshman.
Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen?
King. Yes.
Pist. Tell him I'll knock his leek about his pate
Upon Saint Davy's day.
King. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.
Pist. Art thou his friend?
King. And his kinsman too.
Pist. The figo for thee then!
King. I thank you. God be with you!
Pist. My name is Pistol call'd. Exit. Manet King.
King. It sorts well with your fierceness.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Captain Fluellen!
Flu. So! in the name of Jesu Christ, speak fewer! It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and auncient prerogatifes and laws of the wars is not kept. If you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle-taddle nor pibble-pabble in Pompey's camp. I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise.
Gow. Why, the enemy is loud. Your hear him all night.
Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb, in your own conscience now?
Gow. I will speak lower.
Flu. I pray you and beseech you that you will.
Exeunt [Gower and Fluellen].

35 God-a-mercy: many thanks 36 Qui va là: who goes there? cf. n. 39 popular: one of the common people 40 gentleman . . . company: a gentleman volunteer, or a soldier on probation for promotion 41 Trail'st . . . pike: are you in the infantry? puissant: powerful pike: long, heavy lance 45 bawcock: fine fellow 46 imp: child, scion 52 Welshman: the king was born at Monmouth, on the Welsh border 55 leek: vegetable related to the onion; the national emblem of the Welsh 61 figo: see III.6.53; cf. n. 64 sorts: fits 66 fewer: F; many editors give lower (Q3). Q lewer 67 admiration: wonder prerogatifes: prerogatives, laws 71 Pompey's camp; cf. n. 73 modesty: moderation

King. Though it appear a little out of fashion,
There is much care and valor in this Welshman.

Enter three Soldiers, John Bates, Alexander Court, and Michael Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder?

Bates. I think it be, but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there?

King. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you?

King. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham.

Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman. I pray you, what thinks he of our estate?

King. Even as men wrack'd upon a sand, that look to be wash'd off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the king?

King. No, nor it is not meet he should. For though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a man, as I am. The violet smells to him as it doth to me; the element shows to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions. His ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man. And though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore, when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are. Yet in reason no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army.

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will, but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck. And so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

King. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king. I think he would not wish himself anywhere but where he is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone. So should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved.

King. I dare say you love him not so ill to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this to feel other men's minds. Methinks I could not die anywhere so contented as in the king's company, his cause being just and his quarrel honorable.

Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after, for we know enough if we know we are the king's subjects. If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.

Will. But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make when all those legs and arms and heads chopp'd off in a battle shall join together at the latter day and cry all 'We died at such a place'—some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon the debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left. I am afeard there are few die well that die in a battle, for how can they charitably dispose of anything when blood is their argument? Now if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it, who to disobey were against all proportion of subjection.

King. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him. Or if a servant under his master's command transporting a sum of money be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconcil'd iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so. The king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant. For they purpose not their death when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers. Some peradventure have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murther; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God. War is his beadle, war is his vengeance, so that here men are punish'd for before-breach of the king's laws in now the king's quarrel. Where they feared the death, they have borne life away, and where they would be safe, they perish. Then if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's, but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed—wash every mote out of his conscience. And dying so, death is to him advantage, or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained. And in him that escapes, it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day to see his greatness and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head—the king is not to answer it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me, and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

King. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransom'd.

Will. Ay, he said so to make us fight cheerfully. But when our throats are cut, he may be ransom'd and we ne'er the wiser.

King. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then! That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch! You may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! Come, 'tis a foolish saying.

81 out of fashion: out of the ordinary, quaint 91 Thomas: F Iohn 93 estate: condition 94 wrack'd: wrecked sand: sand bar 97 meet: fitting 99 element shows: sky appears 100 conditions: characteristics 101 ceremonies: symbols of state 102 affections . . . mounted: desires soar higher 103 stoop: sweep down (image from falconry). 104 out of doubt: without doubt 104, 105 be . . relish: i.e. taste the same 105, 106 possess him: take possession of him 110, 111 at all adventures: at all hazards 111 quit: finished with this job 112 conscience: inner thoughts 117 feel: test 127, 128 latter day: judgment day 129 some upon: i.e. crying out the names of

131 rawly left: poorly provided for die well: i.e. who die a Christian death. 132 charitably . . . anything: settle anything in a spirit of charity 135 proportion of subjection: proper behavior for subjects 136, 137 about merchandise: on a trading voyage 137 sinfully miscarry: die in his sins 141 irreconcil'd iniquities: sins not confessed and atoned for 143 answer: answer for 147 arbitrement: decision: 148 unspotted: sinless 149 contrived: deliberately planned 151 bulwark: defense; excuse for plundering 153 outrun . . . punishment: escaped punishment in their own country 155 beadle: parish officer who arrested and administered punishment 156 before- . . . now: previous . . . what is now 157, 158 Where . . . perish: see Matthew 16:25 158, 159 unprovided: unprepared for death 161 visited: i.e. with punishment from God 163 mote: tiniest spot; F Moth 167 offer: i.e. of his soul 172 lustily: vigorously 177 pay him: give him what he deserves 177, 178 elder-gun: popgun:

King. Your reproof is something too round. I should be angry with you if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us if you live.

King. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

King. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet. Then if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove. Give me another of thine.

King. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap. If ever thou come to me and say, after tomorrow, 'this is my glove,' by this hand, I will take thee a box on the ear.

King. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hang'd.

King. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word. Fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends. We have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

King. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders. But it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and tomorrow the king himself will be a clipper. Exeunt Soldiers.

Upon the king! Let us our lives, our souls,
Our debts, our careful wives,
Our children, and our sins lay on the king!
We must bear all. O, hard condition,
Twin-born with greatness, subject to the breath
Of every fool, whose sense no more can feel
But his own wringing! what infinite heartsease
Must kings neglect that private men enjoy!
And what have kings that privates have not too,
Save ceremony, save general ceremony?
And what art thou, thou idol Ceremony?
What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs than do they worshipers?
What are thy rents? What are thy comings-in?
O Ceremony, show me but thy worth!
What is thy soul of adoration?
Art thou ought else but place, degree, and form,
Creating awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art less happy being fear'd
Than they in fearing.
What drink'st thou oft instead of homage sweet
But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great greatness,
And bid thy ceremony give thee cure!
Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out
With titles blown from adulation?
Will it give place to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee,
Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream,
That play'st so subtly with a king's repose.
I am a king that find thee, and I know
'Tis not the balm, the scepter, and the ball,
The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,
The intertissu'd robe of gold and pearl,
The farced title running 'fore the king,
The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp
That beats upon the high shore of this world—
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous Ceremony,
Not all these, laid in bed majestical,
Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave
Who, with a body fill'd and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest cramm'd with distressful bread,
Never sees horrid night, the child of hell,
But like a lackey, from the rise to set,
Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night
Sleeps in Elysium. Next day after dawn,
Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse
And follows so the ever-running year
With profitable labor to his grave.
And, but for ceremony, such a wretch,
Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep,
Had the forehand and vantage of a king.
The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoys it, but in gross brain little wots
What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace,
Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

Enter Erpingham.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,
Seek through your camp to find you.

King. Good old knight,
Collect them all together at my tent.
I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. Exit.

King. O God of battles, steel my soldiers' hearts,
Possess them not with fear! Take from them now
The sense of reck'ning, if th' opposed numbers
Pluck their hearts from them. Not today, O Lord,
O, not today, think not upon the fault
My father made in compassing the crown!
I Richard's body have interred new
And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears
Than from it issu'd forced drops of blood.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up
Toward heaven, to pardon blood. And I have built
Two chantries where the sad and solemn priests
Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do,
Though all that I can do is nothing worth,
Since that my penitence comes after all,
Imploring pardon.

Enter Gloucester.

Glouc. My liege!

182 round: outspoken 187 gage: pledge 194 take: give 201 enow: enough 202-205 Indeed . . . clipper; cf. n. SD Exeunt Soldiers: F puts after l. 228 207 careful: full of care 209-213 We must . . . enjoy; cf. n. 211 sense: sensibility 212 wringing: suffering 213 neglect: forego 215 ceremony: accessory or symbol of state 219 comings-in: income 221 soul of adoration: that actual virtue which makes people adore thee; cf. n. 222 form: formality 229, 230 Think'st . . . adulation: Can the empty titles of flattery blow out the fire of a fever? 231 give place to: retire before flexure: bending the knee 235 find thee: find thee out

236 balm: holy oil with which kings are anointed scepter: golden rod held by a king ball: the globe carried as a sign of sovereignty 237 mace: symbolizes the power to strike down offenders 238 intertissu'd: interwoven 239 farced: stuffed (with pompous phrases) 246 distressful: hard-earned 249 Phoebus: the sun 250 Elysium: Paradise 251 Hyperion: the sun 255 Winding up: occupying and crowing 256 forehand: upper hand 257 member: sharer 258 gross: dull wots: knows 260 best advantages: turns to the greatest profit 261 jealous: of apprehensive about 269 sense of: faculty for reck'ning, if; cf. n. 270-283 Not today . . . pardon; cf. n. 272 compassing: getting possession of 279 chantries: chapels where priests sing masses for the dead sad: grave 280 still: continuously

King. My brother Gloucester's voice? Ay.
I know thy errand, I will go with thee.
The day, my friends, and all things stay for me.

Exeunt.

Scene Second

Enter the Dolphin, Orleans, Rambures, and Beaumont.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armor. Up, my lords!
Dol. Montez à cheval! My horse! Varlet! Laquais! Ha!
Orl. O brave spirit!
Dol. Via! les eaux et la terre.
Orl. Rien puis? L'air et le feu.
Dol. Ciel! Cousin Orleans.

Enter Constable.

Now, my Lord Constable?
Con. Hark how our steeds for present service neigh!
Dol. Mount them and make incision in their hides,
That their hot blood may spin in English eyes
And dout them with superfluous courage, ha!
Rambures. What, will you have them weep our horses' blood?
How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattl'd, you French peers.
Con. To horse, you gallant princes, straight to horse!
Do but behold yon poor and starved band,
And your fair show shall suck away their souls,
Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.
There is not work enough for all our hands,
Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins
To give each naked curtal ax a stain,
That our French gallants shall today draw out
And sheathe for lack of sport. Let us but blow on them,
The vapor of our valor will o'erturn them.
'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords,
That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants,
Who in unnecessary action swarm
About our squares of battle, were enow
To purge this field of such a hilding foe,
Though we upon this mountain's basis by
Took stand for idle speculation.
But that our honors must not. What's to say?
A very little little let us do,
And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound
The tucket sonance and the note to mount,
For our approach shall so much dare the field
That England shall couch down in fear and yield.

Enter Grandpré.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France?
Yon island carrions, desperate of their bones,
Ill-favoredly become the morning field.
Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose,
And our air shakes them passing scornfully.
Big Mars seems bankrout in their beggar'd host
And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.
The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks
With torch staves in their hand, and their poor jades
Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips,
The gum down-roping from their pale-dead eyes,
And in their pale dull mouths the gimmal'dbit
Lies foul with chaw'd grass, still and motionless.
And their executors, the knavish crows,
Fly o'er them all, impatient for their hour.
Description cannot suit itself in words
To demonstrate the life of such a battle
In life so liveless as it shows itself.
Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay for death.
Dol. Shall we go send them dinners and fresh suits
And give their fasting horses provender,
And after fight with them?
Con. I stay but for my guidon. To the field!
I will the banner from a trumpet take
And use it for my haste. Come, come away!
The sun is high, and we outwear the day.

Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Erpingham with all his host, Salisbury, and Westmoreland.

Glouc. Where is the king?
Bedford: The king himself is rode to view their battle.
West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand.
Exe. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh.
Sal. God's arm strike with us! 'Tis a fearful odds.
God bye you, princes all. I'll to my charge.
If we no more meet till we meet in heaven,
Then joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford,
My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord Exeter,
And my kind kinsman, warriors all, adieu!
Bedford. Farwell, good Salisbury, and good luck go with thee!
Exe. Farwell, kind lord. Fight valiantly today.
And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valor.

[Exit Salisbury.]

Bedford. He is as full of valor as of kindness,
Princely in both.

287 friends: F friend SD Beaumont: does not speak, and appears here only 1 armor. Up: F Armour vp 2 Montez à cheval: To horse! Varlet: valet; F Verlot Laquais: lackey, servant 4-6 Via ... Ciel: Away, water and earth./Nothing more? Air and fire./-Heavens! 8 present: immediate 9 make incision: i.e. with spurs 10 spin in: gush forth into 11 dout: put out; F doubt courage: thought to reside in the blood 14 embattl'd: drawn up in battle formation 17 fair show: splendid appearance 18 shales: shells 21 curtal ax: cutlass, short curved sword used by horsemen when the lance is broken 25 positive ... exceptions: certain against all objections 'gainst: F against 28 enow: enough 29 hilding: worthless 31 for ... speculation: as idle onlookers 35 tucket sonance: trumpet call 36 dare: dazzle, frighten 37 couch: crouch

39 carrions: carcasses desperate of: without hope of saving 40 Ill-favoredly become: are ugly or incongruous upon 41 curtains: banners 42 passing: very 43 bankrout: bankrupt 44 beaver: the movable part of the helmet 45 candlesticks: figures of men on ornamental candlesticks 47 Lob: hang 48 down-roping: dangling down like rope 49 gimmal'd: jointed; often read gimmal; F Iymold 51 executors: i.e. those who will have the disposal of what is left of their bodies 52 them all, impatient: F; many editors read them, all impatient 53 suit ... words: clothe itself in adequate language 54 demonstrate ... battle: depict such an army to the life 55 liveless: lifeless; see III.6.8-9; cf. n. 60 guidon: standard; F Guard:on 61 banner: streamer fastened to a trumpet 63 outwear: wear out 2 battle: army lines 3-4 threescore ... to one: from Holinshed, who says 'six times as manie.' 6 God ... you: most editors read God be wi' you; F God buy you charge: command 11-15 farwell ... valor: farewell, etc.; cf. n. 14 mind: remind 15 fram'd: made

Enter the king.

West. O, that we now had here
But one ten thousand of those men in England
That do no work today!
King. What's he that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland? No, my fair cousin.
If we are mark'd to die, we are enow
To do our country loss, and if to live,
The fewer men, the greater share of honor.
God's will! I pray thee wish not one man more.
By Jove, I am not covetous for gold,
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost.
It yearns me not if men my garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires.
But if it be a sin to covet honor,
I am the most offending soul alive.
No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England.
God's peace! I would not lose so great an honor
As one man more, methinks, would share from me
For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one more!
Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host
That he which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart. His passport shall be made
And crowns for convoy put into his purse.
We would not die in that man's company
That fears his fellowship to die with us.
This day is call'd the feast of Crispian.
He that outlives this day and comes safe home
Will stand a-tiptoe when this day is nam'd
And rouse him at the name of Crispian
He that shall see this day and live old age
Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbors
And say 'Tomorrow is Saint Crispian.'
Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,
[And say 'These wounds I had on Crispin's day.']
Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,
But he'll remember with advantages
What feats he did that day. Then shall our names,
Familiar in this mouth as household words—
Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester—
Be in their flowing cups freshly rememb'red.
This story shall the good man teach his son.
And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by
From this day to the ending of the world,
But we in it shall be remembered—
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers.
For he today that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother. Be he ne'er so vile,
This day shall gentle his condition.
And gentlemen in England now abed
Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here,
And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

Enter Salisbury.

18-20 O . . . today: cf. n. 28 upon: at 29 yearns: grieves 31, 32 But if . . . alive: cf. n. 40 convoy: traveling expenses 42 fears . . . us: fears to share death with us. 43 Crispian: cf. n. 47 live: F; live to; cf. n. 48 vigil: eve of a Christian festival 51 And say . . . day: Q; not in F 53 advantages: exaggerations 65 vile: of low birth 66 gentle . . . condition: give him the rank of a gentleman

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed.
The French are bravely in their battles set
And will with all expedience charge on us.
King. All things are ready if our minds be so.
West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now!
King. Thou dost not wish more help from England, coz?
West. God's will, my liege! Would you and I alone
Without more help, could fight this royal battle!
King. Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand men,
Which likes me better than to wish us one.
You know your places. God be with you all!

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee, King Harry,
If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound
Before thy most assured overthrow.
For certainly thou art so near the gulf
Thou needs must be englutted. Besides, in mercy,
The Constable desires thee thou wilt mind
Thy followers of repentance, that their souls
May make a peaceful and a sweet retire
From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor bodies
Must lie and fester.
King. Who hath sent thee now?
Mont. The Constable of France.
King. I pray thee bear my former answer back.
Bid them achieve me and then sell my bones.
Good God! Why should they mock poor fellows thus?
The man that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd was kill'd with hunting him.
A many of our bodies shall no doubt
Find native graves, upon the which, I trust,
Shall witness live in brass of this day's work.
And those that leave their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, though buried in your dunghills,
They shall be fam'd. For there the sun shall greet them
And draw their honors reeking up to heaven,
Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,
The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.
Mark then abounding valor in our English,
That being dead, like to the bullet's crasing,
Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in relapse of mortality.
Let me speak proudly. Tell the Constable
We are but warriors for the working day.
Our gayness and our gilt are all besmirch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field.
There's not a piece of feather in our host—
Good argument, I hope, we will not fly—
And time hath worn us into slovenry.
But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim,
And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night
They'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck
The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads

71 bestow yourself: take up your position 72 bravely: in splendid array battles: lines of battle 73 expedience: haste 80 likes: pleases 83 compound: make terms 85 gulf: whirlpool 86 englutted: swallowed up 87 mind: remind 95 achieve: capture, kill 100 native: i.e. in England 101 in brass: i.e. a memorial table in a church 109 crasing: variant form of 'grazing,' rebounding 111 relapse of mortality: renewed power to kill; decomposition 113 working day: i.e. strictly for business 116 feather: i.e. in plumes on the helmets 117 argument: proof

And turn them out of service. If they do this—
As, if God please, they shall—my ransom then
Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labor.
Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald.
They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints,
Which if they have as I will leave 'em them,
Shall yield them little, tell the Constable.
Mont. I shall, King Harry. And so fare thee well.
Thou never shalt hear herald any more. Exit.
King. I fear thou wilt once more come again for a ransom.

Enter York.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg
The leading of the vaward.
King. Take it, brave York. Now, soldiers, march away,
And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day! Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Pistol, French Soldier, Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur!
French. Je pense que vous êtes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité.
Pist. Qualtitie calmie custure me! Art thou a gentleman? What is thy name? Discuss.
French. O Seigneur Dieu!
Pist. O Signieur Dew should be a gentleman.
Perpend my words, O Signieur Dew, and mark.
O Signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox,
Except, O Signieur, thou do give to me
Egregious ransom.
French. O, prenez miséricorde! Ayez pitié de moi!
Pist. Moy shall not serve, I will have forty moys,
Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat
In drops of crimson blood.
French. Est-il impossible d'échapper la force de ton bras?
Pist. Brass, cur?
Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat,
Offer'st me brass?
French. O, pardonnez-moi!
Pist. Say'st thou me so? Is that a ton of moys?
Come hither, boy. Ask me this slave in French
What is his name.
Boy. Ecoutez. Comment êtes-vous appelé?
French. Monsieur le Fer.
Boy. He says his name is Master Fer.
Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firk him, and ferret him!
Discuss the same in French unto him.
Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firk.
Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.
French. Que dit-il, monsieur?
Boy. Il me commande à vous dire que vous faites vous prét, car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge.
Pist. Owy, cuppele gorge, permafoy,
Peasant, unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns,
Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.
French. O, je vous supplie, pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner! Je suis le gentilhomme de bonne maison. Gardez ma vie, et je vous donnerai deux cents écus.
Pist. What are his words?
Boy. He prays you to save his life. He is a gentleman of a good house, and for his ransom he will give you two hundred crowns.
Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take.
French. Petit monsieur, que dit-il?
Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier; néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franshisement.
French. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille remercîments, et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.
Pist. Expound unto me, boy.
Boy. He gives you upon his knees a thousand thanks, and he esteems himself happy that he hath fall'n into the hands of one (as he thinks) the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England.
Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show! Follow me.
Boy. Suivez-vous le grand capitaine.
[Exeunt Pistol and French Soldier.]
I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart. But the saying is true: 'The empty vessel makes the greatest sound.' Bardolph and Nym had ten times more valor than this roaring divel i' th' old play, that everyone may pare his nails with a wooden dagger, and they are both hang'd. And so would this be, if he durst steal anything adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp. The French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it, for there is none to guard it but boys. Exit.

Scene Fifth

Enter Constable, Orleans, Bourbon, Dolphin, and Rambures.

Con. O diable!
Orl. O Seigneur! le jour est perdu, tout est perdu!

123 turn ... service: deprive them of their coats as if they wer servants wearing their master's livery 128 'em: F vm 132 thou wilt: read 'thou'lt' 134 vaward: vanguard SD Alarum: trumpet call to arms Excursions: sallies across the stage as if in battle; cf. n. 2-3 Je ... qualité: I think that you are a gentleman of high rank 4 Qualtitie ... me; cf. n. 7-11 O ... ransom; cf. n. 8 Perpend: ponder 9 fox: sword 11 Egregious: enormous 12 O ... moi: O, have mercy! Have pity on me! (moi was pronounced 'moy'). 13 Moy: Pistol perhaps thinks that the Frenchman speaks of a coin, or unit of measure 14 Or: F for rim: diaphragm 16 Est-il ... bras: Is it impossible to escape the strength of your arm? 17 Brass: the s in bras was sounded in French of this period 18 luxurious: lascivious 20, 21 pardonnez ... a ton of: most of Pistol's echoes are of this sort 24 Ecoutez ... appelé: Listen What is your name? 27 firk: beat 29 ferret: worry

31-34 Que ... gorge: What doe she say, sir? Boy. He bids me tell you that you prepare yourself, because this soldier is inclined to cut your throat at once 33 à cette heure; cf. n. 35 Owy ... permafoy: Yes, cut your throat, in faith cf. n. 36 brave: fine 38-40 O ... écus: O, I beseech you, for the love of God, to pardon me! I am a gentleman of a good house. Save my life, and I shall give you two hundred crowns 47-54 Petit ... d'Angleterre: Little sir, what does he say? Boy. [I say] again that it is against his oath to pardon any prisoner; nevertheless, for the crowns which you have promised, he is willing to give you your liberty, your freedom. Frenchman. On my knees I give you a thousand thanks, and I consider myself happy that I have fallen into the hands of a knight, I think the bravest, the most valiant and distinguished nobleman in England 62 Suivez-vous ... capitaine: Follow the great captain 63 heart: the seat of courage 66, 67 roaring ... dagger; cf. n. 66 that ... his: whose 2 O ... perdu: O Lord! the day is lost, all is lost!

Dol. Mort Dieu! ma vie! all is confounded, all!
Reproach and everlasting shame
Sits mocking in our plumes. A short alarum.
O méchante fortune! Do not run away.
Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.
Dol. O, perdurable shame! Let's stab ourselves.
Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for?
Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom?
Bourbon. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!
Let us die in honor. Once more back again!
And he that will not follow Bourbon now,
Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand,
Like a base pander hold the chamber door
Whilst by a slave no gentler than my dog
His fairest daughter is contaminated.
Con. Disorder that hath spoil'd us, friend us now!
Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.
Orl. We are enow yet living in the field
To smother up the English in our throngs,
If any order might be thought upon.
Bourbon. The divel take order now! I'll to the throng.
Let life be short, else shame will be too long.

Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

Alarum. Enter the King and his train, [Exeter, and others,] with Prisoners.

King. Well have we done, thrice valiant countrymen!
But all's not done; yet keep the French the field.
Exe. The Duke of York commends him to your majesty.
King. Lives he, good uncle? Thrice within this hour
I saw him down, thrice up again and fighting.
From helmet to the spur all blood he was.
Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie
Larding the plain, and by his bloody side,
Yoke-fellow to his honor-owing wounds,
The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies.
Suffolk first died, and York, all haggled over,
Comes to him where in gore he lay insteep'd,
And takes him by the beard, kisses the gashes
That bloodily did yawn upon his face,
And cries aloud 'Tarry, my cousin Suffolk!
My soul shall thine keep company to heaven.
Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abreast,
As in this glorious and well-foughten field
We kept together in our chivalry.'
Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up.
He smil'd me in the face, raught me his hand,
And with a feeble gripe says 'Dear my lord,
Commend my service to my sovereign.'
So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck
He threw his wounded arm and kiss'd his lips,
And so espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd
A testament of noble-ending love.
The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd
Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd.
But I had not so much of man in me,
And all my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears.
King. I blame you not,
For, hearing this, I must perforce compound
With mistful eyes, or they will issue too. Alarum.
But hark! What new alarum is this same?
The French have reinforc'd their scatter'd men.
Then every soldier kill his prisoners.
Give the word through. Exeunt.

Scene Seventh

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage! 'Tis expressly against the law of arms. 'Tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offert. In your conscience, now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certain there's not a boy left alive, and the cowardly rascals that ran form the battle ha' done this slaughter. Besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent, wherefore the king most worthily hath caus'd every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O, 'tis a gallant king!

Flu. Ay, he was porn at Monmouth, Captain Gower. What call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not 'pig' great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon. His father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is Macedon where Alexander is porn. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the 'orld, I warrant you sall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon, and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth. It is call'd Wye at Monmouth, but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river. But 'tis all one; 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well, for there is figures in all things. Alexander, God knows, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his best friend, Cleitus.

Gow. Our king is not like him in that. He never kill'd any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it. As Alexander kill'd his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his cups, so also Harry Mon-

3 Mort . . . vie: F Mor Dieu ma vie; see III.5.11. confounded: ruined 6 méchante: wicked, spiteful 8 perdurable: everlasting 9 Be: are 12 die in honor. Once; cf. n. 16 by a slave: O; F a base slaue 18 spoil'd: ruined friend: befriend 19 on heaps: in crowds 3 commends him: sends his respects 8 Larding: enriching 9 honor-owing: possessing honor, honorable 11 haggled: hacked 12 insteep'd: stained 14, 15 face, And: Q; F face. He 21 raught: reached 22 gripe: grip

28 pretty: lovely 31 mother: the more tender part of me 34 compound: come to terms 35 issue: flow Alarum: trumpet call to arms 38 kill his prisoners: i.e. so that the prisoners could not revolt and kill their captors; cf. n. IV.7 F wrongly heads this Actus Quartus 13 magnanimous: great souled 26 is . . . well: takes after it fairly well figures: prototypes, analogies, significance 31 Cleitus: one of the generals of Alexander the Great mouth, being in his right wits and his good judgments, turn'd away the fat knight with the great-belly doublet. He was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks. I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he. I'll tell you, there is good men porn at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty.

Alarum. Enter King Harry and Bourbon with Prisoners, [Warwick, Gloucester, Exeter, and others]. Flourish.

King. I was not angry since I came to France
Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald.
Ride thou unto the horsemen on yon hill.
If they will fight with us, bid them come down,
Or void the field. They do offend our sight.
If they'll do neither, we will come to them
And make them skirr away as swift as stones
Enforced from the old Assyrian slings.
Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have,
And not a man of them that we shall take
Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter Montjoy.

Exe. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glou. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

King. How now! What means this, herald? Know'st thou not
That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom?
Com'st thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great king.
I come to thee for charitable license,
That we may wander o'er this bloody field
To book our dead, and then to bury them,
To sort our nobles from our common men.
For many of our princes—woe the while!—
Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood.
So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs
In blood of princes, and their wounded steeds
Fret fetlock-deep in gore and with wild rage
Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,
Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great king,
To view the field in safety and dispose
Of their dead bodies!

King. I tell thee truly, herald,
I know not if the day be ours or no,
For yet a many of your horsemen peer
And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

King. Prais'd be God and not our strength for it!
What is this castle call'd that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it Agincourt.

King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,
Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

King. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true. If your majesties is remembr'ed of it, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps, which your majesty know to this hour is an honorable badge of the service. And I do believe your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's Day.

King. I wear it for a memorable honor,
For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh plood out of your pody, I can tell you that. God pless it, and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

King. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Jeshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it! I will confess it to all the 'orld. I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

King. God keep me so!

Enter Williams.

Our heralds go with him.
Bring me just notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts. [Exeunt Heralds with Montjoy.]
Call yonder fellow hither.

Exe. Soldier, you must come to the king.

King. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

King. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swagger'd with me last night, who, if alive and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' th' ear. Or if I can see my glove in his cap—which he swore as he was a soldier he would wear, if alive—I will strike it out soundly.

King. What think you, captain Fluellen? Is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience.

King. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the divel is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath. If he be perjur'd, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jacksauce as ever his black shoe trod upon God's ground, and his earth, in my conscience, la!

King. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

39 great-belly doublet: a long waistcoat 40 gipes: jibes 42 Falstaff: see the famous rejection scene (2 Henry IV, V.5). SD Bourbon; cf. n. 46-56 I was . . . them so; cf. n. 47 trumpet: trumpeter 50 void: abandon 52 skirr: scurry 53 Assyrian slings: see Judith 9:7 54-56 we'll cut . . . mercy: Gower said (11. 7, 8) that the order given at IV.6.38 was already carried out 57-84 Here comes . . . Agincourt; cf. n. 61 fin'd: reserved as a fine, fixed as the price to be paid 66 book: register 69 mercenary blood: blood of average soldiers, who, unlike the nobles, fight for wages 70 vulgar: common soldiers 71 and their: F and with 72 Fret: chafe 73 Yerk: kick armed: spiked 79 Peer: appear

87 grandfather: great-grandfather (if Edward III is meant). 90 pattle: The Battle of Crécy 93, 94 Welshmen . . . caps; cf. n. 98 memorable honor: honorable memorial 100, 101 Welsh plood; cf. n. 108 God: F Good 110, 111 Bring . . . parts; cf. n. 110 just: exact 119 alive: F; many editors read a' live 120 take: give 128 quite . . . degree: too far above Williams' rank to accept any challenge from him 132 Jacksauce: saucy knave 133 his . . . shoe: anyone whose dirty foot

King. Who serv'st thou under?
Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege.
Flu. Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge and literatured in the wars.
King. Call him hither to me, soldier.
Will. I will, my liege.
King. Here, Fluellen, wear thou this favor for me and stick it in thy cap. When Alençon and myself were down together, I pluck'd this glove from his helm. If any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon and an enemy to our person. If thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love.
Flu. Your grace doo's me as great honors as can be desir'd in the hearts of his subjects. I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggrief'd at this glove, that is all. But I would fain see it once, an please god of his grace that I might see.
King. Know'st thou Gower?
Flue. He is my dear friend, an please you.
King. Pray thee, go seek him and bring him to my tent.
Flu. I will fetch him. Exit.
King. My Lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloucester,
Follow Fluellen closely at the heels.
The glove which I have given him for a favor
May haply purchase him a box o' th' ear.
It is the soldier's. I by bargain should
Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick.
If that the soldier strike him, as I judge
By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,
Some sudden mischief may arise of it.
For I do know Fluellen valiant.
And, touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury.
Follow, and see there be no harm between them.
Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. Exeunt.

Scene Eighth

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter Fluellen

Flu. God's will and his pleasure, captain, I beseech you now, come apace to the king. there is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of.
Will. Sir, know you this glove?
Flu. Know the glove! I know the glove is a glove.
Will. I know this, and thus I challenge it.
Strikes him.
Flu. 'Sblood! an arrant traitor as any is in the universal world, or in France, or in England!
Gow. How now, sir! You villain!
Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?
Flu. Stand away, Captain Gower. I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.
Will. I am no traitor.
Flu. That's a lie in thy throat! I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him. He's a friend of the Duke Alençon's.

Enter Warwick and Gloucester.

War. How now, how now! What's the matter?
Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is—praised be God for it!—a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter King and Exeter.

King. How now! What's the matter?
Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a traitor that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.
Will. My liege, this was my glove, here is the fellow of it. And he that I gave it to in change promis'd to wear it in his cap. I promis'd to strike him if he did. I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.
Flu. Your majesty hear now, saving your majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is. I hope your majesty is pear me testimony and witness, and will avouchment, that this is the glove of Alençon that your majesty is give me, in your conscience now.
King. Give me thy glove, soldier. Look, here is the fellow of it.
'Twas I indeed thou promised'st to strike,
And thou hast given me most bitter terms.
Flu. An please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world.
King. How canst thou make me satisfaction?
Will. All offenses, my lord, come from the heart. Never came any from mine that might offend your majesty.
King. It was ourself thou didst abuse.
Will. Your majesty came not like yourself. You appear'd to me but as a common man. Witness the night, your garments, your lowliness. And what your highness suffer'd under that shape, I beseech you take it for your own fault, and not mine. For had you been as I took you for, I made no offense. Therefore I beseech your highness pardon me.
King. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns
And give it to this fellow. Keep it, fellow,
And wear it for an honor in thy cap
Till I do challenge it. Give him the crowns,
And, captain, you must needs be friends with him.
Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly. Hold, there is twelve pence for you, and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prawls and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissentions, and I warrant you it is the better for you.
Will. I will none of your money.
Flu. It is with a good will. I can tell you it will serve you to mend your shoes. Come, wherefore should you be so pashful? Your shoes is not so good. 'Tis a good silling, I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter [an English] Herald.

King. Now, herald, are the dead numb'red?
Herald. Here is the number of the slaught'red French.
[Gives a paper.]

148 apprehend: arrest an: if 149 doo's: does; cf. n. 168 choler: anger 169 injury: insult 8 'Sblood: by God's blood any is: F anyes 11 be forsworn: break my oath

26 change: exchange 32 avouchment: certify 36 terms: words 37 An: if it 38 martial: F Marshall 56 prabbles: quarrels 62 silling: shilling

King. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?
Exe. Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to the king,
John Duke of Bourbon and Lord Bouciqualt.
Of other lords and barons, knights and squires,
Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.
King. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French
That in the field lie slain. Of princes in this number,
And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead
One hundred twenty-six. Added to these,
Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen,
Eight thousand and four hundred, of the which
Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights.
So that in these ten thousand they have lost
There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries.
The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,
And gentlemen of blood and quality.
The names of those their nobles that lie dead:
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France,
Jaques of Chatillon, Admiral of France,
The master of the crossbows, Lord Rambures,
Great Master of France, the brave Sir Guichard Dolphin,
John Duke of Alençon, Anthony Duke of Brabant,
The brother to the Duke of Burgundy,
And Edward Duke of Bar. Of lusty earls,
Grandpré and Roussi, Faulconbridge and Foix,
Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestrake.
Here was a royal fellowship of death!
Where is the number of our English dead?
[Herald gives another paper.]
Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk,
Sir Richard Kikely, Davy Gam, esquire.
None else of name, and of all other men,
But five and twenty. O God, thy arm was here!
And not to us, but to thy arm alone
Ascribe we all. When, without stratagem,
But in plain shock and even play of battle,
Was ever known so great and little loss
On one part and on th' other? Take it, God,
For it is none but thine!
Exe. 'Tis wonderful!
King. Come, go we in procession to the village.
And be it death proclaimed through our host
To boast of this, or take that praise from God
Which is his only.
Flu. Is it not lawful, an please your majesty, to tell how many is kill'd?
King. Yes, captain, but with this acknowledgment,
That God fought for us.
Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great good.
King. Do we all holy rites.
Let there be sung Non nobis and Te Deum,
The dead with charity enclos'd in clay.
And then to Callice, and to England then,
Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy men. Exeunt.

66 sort: rank 67-97 Charles . . . twenty: both names and phrasing (except 1. 91) are taken from Holinshed 68 Bouciqualt: F Bouchiquald 71 note: list 73 bearing banners: i.e. indicating their coats of arms 79 mercenaries: common soldiers 90 Faulconbridge: F Fauconbridge and Foyes; see III.5.44; cf. n. 91 Lestrake: Holinshed; F Lestrale 95 Kikely: Holinshed; F Ketly 96 name: rank 97 But . . . twenty: cf. n. 105 we: F me 114 rites: F Rights; passage is close to Holinshed 115 Non . . . Deum: well known psalms 116 charity . . . clay: full Christian burial

Act Fifth

Enter Chorus.

Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story
That I may prompt them. And of such as have,
I humbly pray them to admit th' excuse
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things
Which cannot in their huge and proper life
Be here presented. Now we bear the king
Toward Callice. Grant him there. There seen,
Heave him away upon your winged thoughts
Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach
Pales in the flood with men, with wives and boys,
Whose shouts and claps outvoice the deep-mouth'd sea,
Which like a mighty whiffler 'fore the king
Seems to prepare his way. So let him land
And solemnly see him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath thought that even now
You may imagine him upon Blackheath,
Where that his lords desire him to have borne
His bruised helmet and his bended sword
Before him through the city. He forbids it,
Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride,
Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent
Quite from himself to God. But now behold,
In the quick forge and working house of thought,
How London doth pour out her citizens!
The mayor and all his brethren in best sort,
Like to the senators of th' antique Rome,
With the plebeians swarming at their heels,
Go forth and fetch their conqu'ring Caesar in;
As, by a lower but loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress,
As in good time he may, from Ireland coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword,
How many would the peaceful city quit
To welcome him! Much more, and much more cause,
Did they this Harry. Now in London place him—
As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the King of England's stay at home;
The emperor's coming in behalf of France
To order peace between them—and omit
All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd,
Till Harry's back return again to France.
There must we bring him, and myself have play'd
The interim, by rememb'ring you 'tis past.
Then brook abridgment, and your eyes advance,
After your thoughts, straight back again to France. Exit.

3 excuse: omission or scanting of; cf. n. 10 Pales in: surrounds, bounds with wives F2; with not in F 12 whiffler: an officer who goes before a procession to clear the way 14 solemnly: in state 16 Blackheath: district south of London 17 Where that: where 17-22 Where . . . God; cf. n. 21 trophy: tokens of victory signal: sign of victory ostent: triumphal show 25 in best sort: in finest array 26 antique: stressed ⏑ — — 29 loving likelihood: affectionate probability; F by louing 30 general; cf. n. 32 broached: stuck on a spit, transfixed 38 emperor's coming: cf. n. 42, 43 myself . . . interim: i.e. I have told all that has happened between Acts IV (1415) and V (1420) 43 rememb'ring: reminding 44 brook abridgment: put up with our cutting down the story

Scene First

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right. But why wear you your leek today? Saint Davy's Day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things. I will tell you asse my friend, Captain Gower. The rascally, scauld, beggarly, lousy, pragging knave Pistol—which you and yourself, and all the world, know to be no petter than a fellow, look you now, of no merits—he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek. It was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him. But I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter Pistol.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey cock

Flu. 'tis no matter for his swellings, nor his turkey cocks. God pless you, Aunchient Pistol! You scurvy, lousy knave, God pless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? Dost thou thirst, base Trojan,
To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?
Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek. Because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites and your digestions doo's not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats.

Flu. There is one goat for you. Strikes him
Will you be so good, scauld knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die!

Flu. You say very true, scauld knave, when God's will is. I will desire you to live in the meantime, and eat your victuals. Come, there is sauce for it. [Strikes him.] You call'd me yesterday mountain squire, but I will make you today a squire of low degree. I pray you fall to. If you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain. You have astonish'd him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days. Bite, I pray you. It is good for your green wound and your bloody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge! I eat and eat, I swear—

Flu. Eat, I pray you. Will you have some more sauce to your leek? There is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel. Thou dost see I eat.

Flu. Much good do you, scauld knave, heartily. Nay, pray you throw none away. The skin is good for your broken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you mock at 'em, that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is good. Hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat!

Flu. Yes, verily, and in truth you shall take it, or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you anything, I will pay you in cudgels. You shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God bye you, and keep you, and heal your pate.

Exit.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this!

Gow. Go, go. You are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honorable respect and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valor, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought because he could not speak English in the native garb he could not therefore handle an English cudgel. You find it otherwise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. Exit.

Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now?
News have I that my Doll is dead i' th' spital
Of malady of France,
And there my rendezvous is quite cut off.
Old I do wax, and from my weary limbs
Honor is cudgel'd. Well, bawd I'll turn
And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand.
To England will I steal, and there I'll steal.
And patches will I get unto these cudgel'd scars
And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. Exit.

Scene Second

Enter, at one door, King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, [Gloucester] Warwick, [Westmoreland,] and other Lords; at another, Queen Isabel, the [French] King, [the Princess Katharine, Alice, and other Ladies;] the Duke of Burgundy, and other French.

King H. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met!
Unto our brother France, and to our sister,
Health and fair time of day. Joy and good wishes
To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine.
And as a branch and member of this royalty,
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,
We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy.
And, princes French, and peers, health to you all!

France. Right joyous are we to behold your face,
Most worthy brother England, fairly met.
So are you, princes English, every one.

5 scauld: scabby, scurvy 8 yesterday: i.e. Saint Davy's Day 17-19 Ha . . . leek: F prints as prose 17 bedlam: lunatic Trojan: a dissolute fellow 18 fold . . . web: cut the thread of your life; the Parcae were the Roman Fates 19 am qualmish: feel sick 25 Cadwallader: the last of the Welsh kings 32 mountain squire: i.e. poor Welshman 32, 33 make . . . degree: i.e. cut you down to size (the allusion is to a popular metrical romance 35 astonish'd: dismayed, stunned 38 green: fresh, raw coxcomb: head 47 do: may it do 51 Good: very well 54 groat: fourpence 57 in earnest: as payment on account 59 woodmonger: dealer in wood 60 bye: be with; F bu'y 63 begun: F began 63, 64 upon . . . respect: for an honourable reason 64 memorable: commemorative predeceased: long since dead 65 avouch: support 66 gleeking: mocking galling: annoying, scoffing 68 garb: fashion 70 condition: disposition, character 71-78 Doth . . . steal: F prints as prose 71-80 Doth . . . wars: cf. n. 71 huswife: hussy, i.e. jilt; probably pronounced 'hussif,' 72 spital: hospital 73 Of malady of France: venereal disease; F of a 76 bawd: pander 77 something . . . to: to some extent turn to 78 steal; cf. n. 80 swear: F swore SD Burgundy: F Bourgongne. 1 wherefore: for which 5 royalty: royal family 6 contriv'd: arranged 9 France: the French king; F indicates Henry (below) by England

Queen. So happy be the issue, brother England,
Of this good day and of this gracious meeting
As we are now glad to behold your eyes—
Your eyes which hitherto have borne in them
Against the French, that met them in their bent,
The fatal balls of murthering basilisks.
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality, and that this day
Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love.
King H. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.
Queen. You English princes all, I do salute you.
Burg. My duty to you both, on equal love,
Great Kings of France and England! That I have labor'd
With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavors
To bring your most imperial majesties
Unto this bar and royal interview,
Your mightiness on both parts best can witness.
Since then my office hath so far prevail'd
That face to face and royal eye to eye
You have congreeted, let it not disgrace me
If I demand before this royal view
What rub or what impediment there is
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace,
Dear nurse of arts, plenties, and joyful births,
Should not in this best garden of the world,
Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage?
Alas, she hath from France too long been chas'd,
And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in it own fertility.
Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies. Her hedges even-pleach'd,
Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs. Her fallow leas
The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory
Doth root upon, while that the colter rusts
That should deracinate such savagery.
The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth
The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover,
Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank,
Conceives by idleness, and nothing teems
But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burrs,
Losing both beauty and utility.
And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges,
Defective in their natures, grow to wildness,
Even so our houses and ourselves and children
Have lost, or do not learn for want of time,
The sciences that should become our country,
But grow like savages—as soldiers will
That nothing do but meditate on blood—
To swearing and stern looks, defus'd attire,
And everything that seems unnatural.
Which to reduce into our former favor
You are assembled. And my speech entreats
That I may know the let why gentle Peace
Should not expel these inconveniences
And bless us with her former qualities.
King H. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would the peace
Whose want gives growth to th' imperfections
Which you have cited, you must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands,
Whose tenors and particular effects
You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands.
Burg. The king hath heard them, to the which as yet.
There is no answer made.
King H. Well then, the peace
Which you before so urg'd lies in his answer.
France. I have but with a cursitory eye
O'erglanc'd the articles. Pleaseth your grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed
To resurvey them, we will suddenly
Pass our accept and peremptory answer.
King H. Brother, we shall. Go, uncle Exeter,
And brother Clarence, and you, brother Gloucester,
Warwick, and Huntingdon, go with the king.
And take with you free power to ratify,
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantageable for our dignity,
Anything in or out of our demands,
And we'll consign thereto. Will you, fair sister,
Go with the princes or stay here with us?
Queen. Our gracious brother, I will go with them.
Happily a woman's voice may do some good
When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on.
King H. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here with us.
She is our capital demand, compris'd
Within the forerank of our articles.
Queen. She hath good leave.

Exeunt. Manent King [Henry] and Katharine [and Alice].

King H. Fair Katharine, and most fair,
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms
Such as will enter at a lady's ear
And plead his love suit to her gentle heart?
Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me. I cannot speak your England.
King H. O fair Katharine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?
Kath. Pardonnez-moi, I cannot tell vat is 'like me.'
King H. An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel.
Kath. Que dit-il? Que je suis semblable à les anges?

12 England: F2; F Ireland 16 bent: gaze, line of sight or fire 17 balls . . . basilisks; cf. n. 19 quality: essential nature and that: and (we hope) that 20 griefs: grievances 27 bar: court of decision 31 congreeted: greeted each other 32 view: presence 33 rub: impediment 36 best garden; cf. n. put up: raise 40 it: its 42 even-pleach'd: evenly interwoven 44 fallow leas: uncultivated meadows, arable land 45 darnel . . . fumitory: weeds; F Femetary 46 while that: while colter: blade of the plowshare; F Gulter 47 deracinate: uproot 48 even mead: level meadow erst: formally 49 burnet: a weed (or herb) 50 all: F withall 51 Conceives by: is fertilized by nothing teems: brings forth nothing 52 docks: weeds kecksies: dry stalks of the hemlock variety 54 as: F all fallows: plowed fields 55 Defective . . . natures: losing or deficient in their true natures 61 defus'd: disordered, diffused

63 reduce: bring back favor: good appearance 65 let: hindrance 66 inconveniences: misfortunes 68 would: desire 69 imperfections: five syllables 72 tenors: purport;F Tenures 73 enschedul'd: drawn up in writing 78 cursitory: (Wilson), 'cursory'; F curselarie; Q cursenary; most editors read cursorary (Q3). 79 Pleaseth: if it pleases 80 presently: at once 82 suddenly: immediately 83 Pass: give, pronounce accept: 'acceptance' or 'accepted' peremptory: final 89 advantageable: advantageous 91 consign: formally agree 94 Happily: perhaps, haply 95 nicely: precisely stood: insisted 97 capital: chief SD Exeunt: F Exeunt omnes 101 terms: phrases 103 love suit: see Appendix B 109 vat: F wat throughout; see also vell (F well), 1. 131 112, 113 Que . . . dit-il: What does he say? That I am like the angels? Alice. Yes, truly, saving your grace, he says so

Alice. Oui, vraiment, sauf votre grâce, ainsi dit-il.

King H. I said so, dear Katharine, and I must not blush to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu! Les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

King H. What says she, fair one? That the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice. Oui, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits. Dat is de princess.

King. The princess is the better Englishwoman. I' faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding. I am glad thou canst speak no better English, for if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say 'I love you.' Then if you urge me farther than to say 'Do you in faith?' I wear out my suit. Give me your answer, i' faith, do, and so clap hands and a bargain. How say you, lady?

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, me understand vell.

King H. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why, you undid me. For the one I have neither words nor measure, and for the other I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leapfrog, or by vawting into my saddle with my armor on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife. Or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favors, I could lay on like a butcher and sit like a jackanapes, never off. But before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation—only downright oaths, which I never use till urg'd, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sunburning, that never looks in his glass for love of anything he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier. If thou canst love me for this, take me. If not, to say to thee that I shall die, is true—but for thy love, by the Lord, no. Yet I love thee too. And while thou liv'st, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places. For these fellows of infinite tongue that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favors, they do always reason themselves out again. What! A speaker is but a prater, a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will fall, a straight back will stoop, a black beard will turn white, a curl'd pate will grow bald, a fair face will wither, a full eye will wax hollow. But a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon, or rather the sun and not the moon, for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me. And take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what say'st thou then to my love? Speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible dat I sould love de enemy of France?

King H. No, it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate. But in loving me you should love the friend of France, for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it. I will have it all mine. And, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

King H. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Je quand sur le possession de France, et quand vous avez le possession de moi—let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed!—donc votre est France, et vous êtes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to speak so much more French. I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, le français que vous parlez, il est meilleur que l'anglais lequel je parle.

King H. No, faith, is't not, Kate. But thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly-falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English? Canst thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

King H. Can any of your neighbors tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me, and at night, when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me. and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart. But, good Kate, mock me mercifully, the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou beest mind, Kate, as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt, I get thee with scambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder. Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? Shall we not? What say'st thou, my fair flower-de-luce?

Kath. I do not know dat.

King H. No 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise. Do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavor for your French part of such a boy, and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon très cher et divin déesse?

Kath. Your majestee 'ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage damoiselle dat is en France.

King H. Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honor, in true English, I love thee, Kate; by which honor I dare not swear thou lovest me. Yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now beshrew my father's ambition! He was thinking of civil wars when he got me; therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that when I come to woo ladies, I fright them. But in faith, Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appear. My comfort is that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face.

126 mince it: speak affectedly 128 wear . . . suit: exhaust my petition (quibble). 129 clap: clasp 133 undid: would undo 134, 135 measure . . . measure: triple pun: 'meter' . . . 'stately court dance' . . . 'amount' 136 vawting: vaulting; cf. n. 137 under . . . of: subject to correction for 139 buffet: box bound my horse: make my horse prance 140 jackanapes: monkey 141 greenly: foolishly 142 cunning: skill protestation: protesting (his love). 144 temper: disposition 145 not . . . sunburning: i.e. already as brown as possible 146 let . . . cook: let your eye dress this plain dish as it wishes 150 uncoined: genuine; not minted nor passing current 155 ballad: doggerel fall: shrink 160 his: its

174-177 Je . . . mienne: When I [have] possession of France, and when you have possession of me . . . then France is yours and you are mine 176 Saint Denis: patron saint of France 181-182 Sauf . . . parle: Saving your honor, the French that you speak is better than the English that I speak 185 at one: alike 190 closet: private apartment 195 with scambling: by scuffling, fighting 199 the Turk: the Grand Turk, the Sultan 200 flower-de-luce: fleur-de-lis, the emblem of France 204 moiety: share 205 bachelor: young knight 205, 206 la plus . . déesse: the most beautiful Katharine in the world, my very dear and divine goddess 211 blood: natural impulse 212 untempering: unsoftening, unattractive 213 beshrew: confound 214 got: begot 215 stubborn: rude, rough

Thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst, and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better. And therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes, avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress, take me by the hand, and say 'Harry of England, I am thine.' Which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal but I will tell thee aloud 'England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine'—who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music, for thy voice is music, and thy English broken. Therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English. Wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is as it sall please de roi mon père.

King H. Nay, it will please him well, Kate. It shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it sall also content me.

King H. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez! Ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaissiez votre grandeur en baisant la main d'une de votre seigneurie indigne serviteur. Excusez-moi, je vous supplie, mon très-puissant seigneur.

King H. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames et damoiselles pour être baisées devant leur noces, il n'est pas la coutume de France.

King H. Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashon pour les ladies of France—I cannot tell vat is 'baiser' en Anglish.

King H. To kiss.

Alice. Your majestee entendre bettre que moi.

King H. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

Alice. Oui, vraiment.

King H. O Kate, nice customs cursy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confin'd within the weak list of a country's fashion. We are the makers of manners, Kate, and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouth of all find-faults, as I will do yours for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss. Therefore, patiently and yielding. [Kisses her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate. There is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them than in the tongues of the French council, and they should sooner persuade Harry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Enter the French Power, [the French King and Queen, Burgundy,] and the English Lords.

Burg. God save your majesty! My royal cousin, teach you our princess English?

King H. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her, and that is good English.

Burg. Is she not apt?

King H. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her that he will appear in his true likeness.

Burg. Pardon the frankness of my mirth if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle; if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked and blind. Can you blame her, then, being a maid yet ros'd over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to.

King H. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Burg. They are then excus'd, my lord, when they see not what they do.

King. H. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.

Burg. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning. For maids well summer'd and warm kept are like flies at Bartholomewtide, blind, though they have their eyes. And then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

King H. This moral ties me over to time and a hot summer. And so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Burg. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

King H. It is so. And you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way.

French King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspectively—the cities turn'd into a maid, for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath never ent'red.

King H. Shall Kate be my wife?

French King. So please you.

King H. I am content, so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her. So the maid that stood in the way for my wish shall show me the way to my will.

French King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

King H. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The king hath granted every article:
His daughter first, and then in sequel all,
According to their firm proposed natures.

Exe. Only he hath not yet subscribed this: Where your majesty demands that the King of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form and with this addition, in French, 'Notre très-cher fils Henri, Roi d'Angleterre, Héritier de France'; and thus in Latin, 'Praeclarissimus filius noster Henricus, Rex Angliae et Haeres Franciae.'

French King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied,
But your request shall make me let it pass.

King H. I pray you, then, in love and dear alliance,
Let that one article rank with the rest,

222 avouch: declare 229 broken music: garbled English; music arranged for parts 231 break: reveal 233 roi mon père: king my father 239-242 Laissez . . . seigneur: Don't, my lord, don't, don't! I do not wish you to lower your greatness by kissing the hand of your unworthy servant. Excuse me, I beg you, my most powerful lord 244, 245 Les dames . . . France: For ladies and young girls to be kissed before their marriage—it is not the custom in France 250 Your . . . moi: Your majesty understands better than I 253 Oui, vraiment: Yes, truly 254 nice: fastidious, cursy: curtsy, bow 255 list: boundary 257 follows . . . places: goes with our position

270 condition: disposition 281 wink: shut the eyes 288 summer'd: nurtured 289 flies . . . Bartholomewtide: i.e. August 24, when flies are torpid in the late summer 292 This moral: i.e. the moral to be drawn from this 299 perspectively: as though seen through a 'perspective,' a glass which produces optical illusions 301 never: not in F 304 so: so long as 305 wait on: accompany (as dowry) 306 will: desire 310 then: F2; F and in sequel. 311 firm . . natures: the definite character of the terms proposed 312 subscribed: signed, assented to Where: whereas 314 matter of grant: i.e. documents conferring lands or titles 315 addition: title 317 Praeclarissimus: most renowned; cf. n.

And thereupon give me your daughter.
French King. Take her, fair son, and from her blood raise up
Issue to me, that the contending kingdoms
Of France and England, whose very shores look pale
With envy of each other's happiness,
May cease their hatred, and this dear conjunction
Plant neighborhood and Christianlike accord
In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance
His bleeding sword 'twist England and fair France.
Lords. Amen!
King H. Now welcome, Kate. And bear me witness all
That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen. Flourish.
Queen. God, the best maker of all marriages,
Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one!
As man and wife, being two, are one in love,
So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal
That never may ill office or fell jealousy,
Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage,
Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms
To make divorce of their incorporate league;
That English may as French, French Englishmen,
Receive each other. God speak this Amen!
All. Amen!
King H. Prepare we for our marriage, on which day,
My Lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath
And all the peers', for surety of our leagues.
Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me,
And may our oaths well kept and prosp'rous be!
Sennet. Exeunt.

Epilogue

[Enter Chorus]

Thus far, with rough and all-unable pen,
Our bending author hath pursu'd the story,
In little room confining mighty men,
Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.
Small time, but in that small most greatly liv'd
This star of England. Fortune made his sword,
By which the world's best garden he achiev'd,
And of it left his son imperial lord.
Henry the Sixth, in infant bands crown'd King
Of France and England, did this king succeed,
Whose state so many had the managing
That they lost France and made his England bleed.
Which oft our stage hath shown, and for their sake
In your fair minds let this acceptance take. [Exit.]

Finis

328 conjunction: union 338 spousal: marriage 339 ill office: any hostile act 341 paction: alliance; F Pation

348 surety: ratification SD Sennet: set of notes on a trumpet Epilogue: a sonnet 2 bending: i.e. under the weight of his task; bowing 4 Mangling by starts: marring by telling it in fits and starts 7 achiev'd: won 9 infant bands: swaddling clothes 13 oft . . . shown: clear proof of the popularity of the three parts of King Henry VI 14 let . . . take: may this receive your favor

Notes

The Actors' Names King Henry the Fifth: born 1387, became king 1413, died 1422; eldest son of Henry IV. His campaigns in France and his marriage to Princess Katharine mark the high point of Lancastrian rule in England.

Duke of Gloucester (1391–1447): Humphrey, youngest son of Henry IV and possibly the only one of Henry's brothers actually present at Agincourt; after Henry's death deputy-protector of England; patron of Lydgate (see 2 Henry IV and 1, 2 Henry VI).

Duke of Bedford (1389–1435): John of Lancaster, third son of Henry IV; left in England as lieutenant of the kingdom during the Agincourt campaign; later regent of France and protector of England under Henry VI; famous for his role in the burning of Joan of Arc (see 1, 2 Henry IV and 1 Henry VI).

Duke of Exeter: Thomas Beaufort, youngest son of John of Gaunt by Catherine Swynford; probably left by Henry in command at Harfleur, though in Shakespeare's sources Exeter leaves Sir John Fastolfe at Harfleur and rejoins the king (see 1 Henry VI).

Duke of York: son of Edmund, fifth son of Edward III; called 'Aumerle' in Richard II. After his death at Agincourt his title passed to the son of his brother Richard, Earl of Cambridge (see below). This son's claim to the throne in the next reign initiated the wars of York and Lancaster.

Earl of Salisbury: Thomas Montacute; slain at the siege of Orleans, 1428 (see 1 Henry VI).

Earl of Westmoreland: Ralph Neville, Warden of the Scotch Marches; supporter of Bolingbroke against Richard II (see 1, 2 Henry IV).

Earl of Warwick: a governor of the young king Henry VI (see 2 Henry IV and 1, 2 Henry VI).

Archbishop of Canterbury: Henry Chichele, founder of All Soul's College, Oxford; an opponent of Wycliffe and a warm advocate of the war in France.

Bishop of Ely: John Fordham, once the secretary of Richard II.

Earl of Cambridge: Richard, second son of Edmund, Duke of York (see Richard II); executed in 1415 for plotting to put the Earl of March on the throne; father of Richard, Duke of York (slain at Wakefield in 1460), whose youngest son became Richard III.

Lord Scroop: eldest son of Sir Stephen Scroop (see Richard II) and nephew of the Archbishop in the Henry IV plays; beheaded 1415.

Sir Thomas Grey: son-in-law of the Earl of Westmoreland; executed 1415.

Sir Thomas Erpingham: steward of the king's house; mentioned in Drayton's 'Ballad of Agincourt' as commander of the English archers.

Charles the Sixth, King of France: born 1368, became king 1380, died 1422. Since he survived Henry by two months, Henry never became King of France. His eldest daughter, Isabella, was the second queen of Richard II, and his youngest, Katharine the Fair, appears in this play. He was subject to prolonged fits of insanity and was present neither at Agincourt nor at Troyes, at the betrothal of his daughter.

Lewis, the Dauphin: His brother became Charles VII, who died in 1461. Actually there were three Dauphins during the period of this play.

Duke of Burgundy: in III.5.42 and IV.8.87 John the Fearless; in V.2 Philip the Good. After the murder of his father by adherents of the Dauphin Charles, Philip brought about the peace between Charles VI and Henry V, thus excluding the Dauphin from the succession.

Duke of Orleans: imprisoned in England for twenty-five years after Agincourt, where he wrote some of the finest French poetry of the century.

The Constable of France: Charles de la Bret, half-brother of Henry V; commanded the French army at Agincourt and was killed there.

Isabel, Queen of France: daughter of Stephen II of Bavaria. Unable to control the two parties fighting for power in France, led by the Duke of Burgundy and the Duke of Orleans (the Armagnacs), she consented to the treaty of Troyes, in which Henry V became heir to the French throne.

Katharine: married Henry V in 1420 and became the mother of Henry VI; by her second husband, Owen Tudor, grandmother of Henry VII of England.

Prologue. SD. This is a single figure, the 'chorus' of the play, who speaks a prologue before each of the acts. Nowhere else does Shakespeare employ the chorus so consistently as in this play.

Prologue. 9. spirits . . . hath. Shakespeare frequently employs singular forms of verbs with plural subjects.

Prologue. 11 cockpit. The round or octagonal theater was similar to the pits in which cockfights were held.

Prologue. 13. wooden O. Probably the Curtain (rather than the Globe) theater, where the play was performed.

Prologue 15. crooked figure. Curved, like a naught, which in the unit's place and along with other figures may represent a million.

I.i.7-19. It must . . the bill. The following passage from Shakespeare's principal source, Holinshed's Chronicles (see Sources), suggests the detailed nature of his borrowing. Shakespeare underplays (11 7-8, 79-85) the clergy's motive for wanting war. The bill recommended > that the temporall lands deuoutlie giuen, and disordinatlie spent by religious, and other spirituall persons, should be seized into the kings hands, sith the same might suffice to mainteine, to the honor of the king, and defense of the realme, fifteene earles, fifteen hundred knights, six thousand and two hundred esquiers, and a hundred almessehouses, for reliefe onelie of the poore, impotent, and needie persons, and the king to haue cleerelie to his coffers twentie thousand pounds, with manie other prouisions and values of religious houses, which I passe ouer.

>
> This bill was much noted, and more feared among the religious sort, whom suerlie it touched verie neere, and therefore to find remedie against it, they determined to assaie all waies to put by and ouerthrow this bill: wherein they thought best to trie if they might mooue the kings mood with some sharpe inuention, that he should not regard the importunate petitions of the commons.

On his deathbed, Henry's father had advised his son to 'busy giddy minds With foreign quarrels' (2 Henry IV, IV.5.215-216), in order to lessen the civil strife that had so shaken the previous reign. Shakespeare does not mention this reason for war in the next scene, nor does he render it easy for us to decide to what degree this king is like the 'politician,' his father. See the two long interviews between Henry IV and Prince Hal (1 Henry IV, III.2 and 2 Henry IV, IV.5).

I.i.16. corporal. As in rapid modern speech, the following three-syllable words (among others) probably had the value of dissyllables: opening (I.2.18), reverence (I.2.22), pilfering (I.2.145), prisoner (I.2.165), natural (I.2.185 and II.2.108), barbarous (I.2.277), treacherous (II.Pro.22), Covering (II.4.40), reverend (III.3.37), and so on. Similarly You would in 1. 42 is probably 'You'd.'

I.i.17. supplied. To prevent misreading, this text does not indicate elision in ied endings, e.g. mortified and satisfied.

I.i.25. courses . . . youth. In the two parts of Henry IV, the young prince is a drinking companion of Falstaff and the despair of his father the king. (See II.4.143; cf. n.)

I.i.30. offending Adam. This allusion to original sin, to sinfulness inherited from Adam, parallels closely the baptismal service from the Book of Common Prayer. Compare also Genesis 3:23-4.

I.i.34 flood. Probably an allusion to Hercules' cleansing of the Augean stables by turning a river through them.

I.i.93. Edward. Edward III of England, son of Isabella, the daughter of Philip IV of France. When Isabella, after the death of her brothers, claimed the throne of France for her son Edward, an assembly of French peers and barons barred inheritance through the female.

I.ii.13. law Salic. The Salic law forbade the succession of a woman to the French throne, as Canterbury explains below. (See I.1.93; cf. n.)

I.ii.29, 30. gives . . . makes. Another instance of the apparent lack of agreement between subject and verb. Compare is . . . wretches, 1. 247.

I.ii.48. Charles the Great. Ll. 37-102 are taken almost line by line from Holinshed. For closeness to the source they are probably unique in Shakespeare. The dates of the reigns of the sovereigns mentioned, in chronological order, are as follows: Clothair I, 558-61; Childeric III, 742-51 (last of the Merovingian kings, deposed by Pepin); Pepin, 752-68 (son of Charles Martel and founder of the Carlovingian dynasty); Charles the Great (Charlemagne), 768-814 (son of Pepin); Louis I, le Débonnaire, 814-40 (son of Charlemagne); Charles I, the Bald (called Charlemagne, 1. 75), 840-77; Hugh Capet, 987-96 (defeated Charles, Duke of Lorraine; was elected to the throne after the death of Louis V, and founded the dynasty which bears his name.); Louis IX (called Lewis the Tenth, 1. 79), 1226-70, Saint Louis.

I.ii.79. Lewis the Tenth. Actually Louis IX. Throughout this passage, as elsewhere in the play, Shakespeare is following Holinshed's Chronicles so closely that he reproduces entire phrases and several of Holinshed's errors.

I.ii.88-104. So that . . . ancestors. Compare simile, proper names, and phrasing (see 1. 133 ff.) with the following passage from Holinshed:

> . . . so that more cleere than the sunne it openlie appeareth, that the title of king Pepin, the claime of High Capet, the possession of Lewes, yea and the French kings to this daie, are deriued and conueied from the heire female, though they would vnder the colour of such a fained law, barre the kings and princes of this realme of England of their right and lawfull inheritance.

The archbishop further alledged out of the booke of Numbers this saieng: When a man dieth without a sonne, let the inheritance descend to his daughter. At length, hauing said sufficientlie for the proofe of the kings iust and lawfull title to the crowne of France, he exhorted him to aduance foorth his banner to fight for his right, to conquer his inheritance, to spare neither bloud, sword, nor fire, sith his warre was iust, his cause good, and his claime true.

I.ii.96. amply to imbare. Many editors follow imbar (F3), a variant of 'embar,' interpreting it variously to mean 'bar in,' 'secure,' 'exclude,' etc. The form imbar may be supported by the three occurrences of the word bar in the Archbishop's speech (Walter). F reads imbarre.

I.ii.176. tame. Many editors read tear (after Rowe); Q spoyle.

I.ii.191. honeybees. This was a familiar parallel in Shakespeare's day and is found among other places in Lyly's Euphues.

I.ii.225. Dolphin. The heir apparent to the French throne. The F spelling is retained throughout.

I.ii.236. Turkish mute. A slave whose tongue is removed to prevent his betraying royal secrets.

I.ii.264-272. Tennis . . . chases. This extended figure (and 11.255-257 above) is derived from Holinshed. The ambassadors

. . . brought with them a barrell of Paris balles, which from their maister they presented to him for a token that was taken in verie ill part, as sent in scorne, to signifie, that it was more meet for the king to passe the time with such childish exercise, than to attempt any worthie exploit. Wherefore the K. wrote to him, that yer ought long, he would tosse him some London balles that perchance should shake the walles of the best court in France.

I.ii.268-272. set . . . chases. These are terms from the popular court tennis of the day: hazard, places from which the ball cannot be returned; wrangler, opponent; chases, second bounds of the ball, a missed return.

II. Prologue. SD. Flourish. Act II is not indicated here in F. Act III is marked Secundus and Act IV Tertius. The F Flourish here and at the entry of the chorus before Act III possibly belongs with the final lines of Acts I and II.

II. Prologue. 7. winged . . . Mercuries. The herald and messenger of the gods, Mercury or Hermes, is represented as wearing winged sandals and a winged cap.

II. Prologue. 39-40. For . . . play. The original Prologue may have ended with this couplet. Ll. 41-2 may prepare for the later addition of scenes 1 and 3. (See Sources.)

II.i.16, 17. Nell Quickly. Hostess of Falstaff's favorite tavern, the Boar's Head, in Eastcheap. In Quickly, -ly rhymes with 'lie.'

II.i.22. Through . . . plod. 'To be patient is fatiguing, but it will achieve its object in the end.' F reads 'may, though . . . plodde, there' Many sentences in the prose of F are separated only by commas.

II.i.26. tyke. All of Pistol's following speeches (except ll. 61-63) are printed as prose in F.

II.i.48. Pistol's cock. The 16th-century pistol was a small, noisy, inaccurate weapon. A pistólfo was a rogue who lived by his wits.

II.i.55. humor. Humor could mean anything from 'temperament' to 'whim.' Through Nym's repetitions of this word and other phrases, Shakespeare seems to be parodying their excessive use in his day.

II.i.69-73. No . . . espouse. Doll is Falstaff's girl in 2 Henry IV, and the Hostess once disliked her present husband. These are possible signs that this scene and II.3 were added later. (See II.3.10; cf. n.) A 'tear sheet' was a sheet of high quality (quibble).

II.i.71. lazar . . . kind. Cressida, proverbial after (though not in) Chaucer as a prostitute, was frequently referred to in such terms as lazar (beggar, leper) and kite (a bird of prey) or kit (Kate, a loose woman). Doll was sent to prison in 2 Henry IV, V.4.

II.i.78, 79. face . . . pan. See 1 Henry IV, III.3.26-55, for Bardolph's fiery face.

II.i.82. kill'd his heart. See the famous rejection of Falstaff in 2 Henry IV, V.5.39 ff.

II.i.85. divel. The spellings deuil, diuel, and deule are used interchangeably in F.

II.i.101. noble. A third of a pound (6*s.* 8*d.*), less than the eight shillings Nym asked for, because this is to be cash payment.

II.i.112, 113. quotidian tertian. The Hostess is as usual confused. The fever called the quotidian recurs daily, the tertian every other day. The Q tashan contigian suggests Mrs. Quickly's pronunciation.

II.i.118. fracted. Pistol's flair for high-sounding terms prompts him to give such words meanings of his own. The two words here may mean 'broken and contrite' (or 'corrupted'), or 'humbled and full of grace' (Walter).

II.i.120. passes . . . careers. He gives his temperament free reign. Passes means 'indulges in.' A career is a short fast gallop.

II.ii.115-118. suggest . . . piety. Tempt to damnable acts with a patchwork of arguments, to give a deceptive appearance of righteousness.

II.ii.128-141. Show . . . suspicion. Compare this portrait of (what Henry thought to be) a kind of ideal man with the terms in which Shakespeare characterizes Richard II's folly, Henry IV's policy, Falstaff's fatness and rioting, John of Gaunt's leanness and sense of responsibility, and the virtues of the 'mirror' of kings, Henry V.

II.ii.160. sufferance. This word and heartily here and dangerous in ll. 163 and 188 are probably dissyllabic. Also read 'discov'ry' in l. 163.

II.ii.168-182. You have . . . hence. Holinshed gives Henry's speech this form:

Having thus conspired the death and destruction of me, which am the head of the realme and gouernour of the people, it maie be (no doubt) but that you likewise haue sworne the confusion of all that are here with me, and also the desolation of your owne countrie. to what horror (O Lord) for any true English hart to consider, that such an execrable iniquitie should euer so bewrap you, as for pleasing of a forren enemie to imbrue your hands in your bloud, and to ruine your owne natiue soile. Reuenge herein touching my person, though I seek not; yet for the safegard of you my deere freends, & for due preseruation of all sorts, I am by office to cause example to be shewed. Get ye hence therefore ye poore miserable wretches to the receiuing of your iust reward, wherein Gods maiestie giue you grace of his mercie and repentance of your heinous offenses.

II.iii.10. A'. The frequency of the occurence of this form of 'he' (fourteen times) and the appearance of other characteristic Shakespearean colloquialisms and spellings in this scene in F (e g, brissle, vp-peer'd, Deules, rumatique, shogg) suggest that the scene (and others) may have been added in Shakespeare's hand to an earlier manuscript of the play copied out by a scribe (Walter; see Introduction).

II.iii.11-12. christome. This word is probably a fusion of 'chrisomchild' and 'christened child' (Kökeritz). Q reads crysombd.

II.iii.15. a' babbled . . . fields. F prints 'a Table of greene fields.' Theobald's emendation given here is perhaps the most famous ever made on a Shakespearean test. Table is probably, however, a misprint for 'talke' (Harrison) or 'talkt' (Prouty). Q reads 'And talk of floures.'

II.iii.24. sack. Falstaff's favorite drink. See 2 Henry IV, IV.3.88-113.

II.iv.26. Whitsun . . . dance. Whitsuntide in the spring was an occasion for festivities and open-air folk dancing.

II.iv.39. Brutus. Brutus the Liberator planned to drive King Tarquin out of Rome, while pretending to be an idiot.

II.iv.57. Cressy battle. The spelling in F of several French proper names (Harflew, Callice, Roan) is retained throughout this text.

II.iv.104. fierce. This reading of F and Q may be a printer's error for 'fierie.' The word fierce is probably dissyllabic here.

II.iv.138. Louvre. The F Louer suggests pronunciation and the point of the next line. See I.2.258-66; cf. n.

II.iv.143. weighs time. The significance of Henry's weighing of time should be seen in the light of the many earlier references to Prince Hal's need to 'redeem' the time he wasted in his youth (1 Henry IV, I.2.187 ff., III.2.130 ff., V.3.50 ff.; 2 Henry IV, II.4.319 ff., V.2.129 ff., etc.). See also Warwick's defense of the Prince's idling (2 Henry IV, IV.4.70 ff.), partly echoed by the two bishops in the first scene of this play. Passages which suggest the relationship between time and Richard II (Richard II, II.1.198 ff., V.5.45 ff., etc.), Hotspur (1 Henry IV, V.2.82 ff., and V.3.81 ff.), and Falstaff are especially illuminating.

II.iv.SD. Flourish. In F. This SD is transferred to the end of the scene by most editors, but the king may rise here, thus dismissing the embassy.

III.i.7. summon. The Arden edition suggests that the generally accepted summon is a far less likely emendation for the F commune than the more probable 'coniure' or 'conjure' (see V.2.271, 274, 275).

III.i.25 yeomen. The longbowmen drawn from these freeholders were unbeatable at Crécy, Poitiers, and Agincourt.

III.i.27. mettle . . . pasture. The F mettell brings both 'mettle' and 'metal' to life in this word. This play is especially rich in puns and equivocations of this kind, only a few of which can be indicated in the glosses.

III.ii.9-12. Knocks . . . fame. F prints these lines and 11. 13-19 and 22-25 below as prose.

III.ii.21. cullions. The strangeness of this speech in Fluellen's mouth and Pistol's replying with great duke, the infrequency of Fluellen's substituting p's for b's (only in Plow, perhaps, 1. 57), the unusual number of oaths (nine by Cheshu or Chrish, from 1. 72 to 1.120), and the speech headings in F (Welch, Scot, Irish)—all may suggest that this independent scene is a later addition to the play. (See Introduction.)

III.ii.51. Gloucester. Holinshed records that

> . . . the duke of Glocester, to whome the order of the siege was committed, made three mines vnder the ground, and approaching to the wals with his engins and ordinance, would not suffer them within to take anie rest. For although they with their countermining som what disappointed the Englishmen, & came to fight with them hand to hand within the mines, so that they went no further forward with that worke; yet they were so inclosed on ech side, as well by water as land, that succour they saw could none come to them.

III.ii.62. Fluellen. F reads Welch. Throughout this scene for Jamy F reads Scot, and for Macmorris F reads Irish. (See III.6.SD; cf. n.)

III.ii.76. Jamy Jamy's speech gives us a good example of the Scots employed in plays of Shakespeare's time.

III.iii.2. latest parle. This passage and a few others in the play (see IV.6.38; cf. n.) probably prompted Yeats to say what others have said in varying ways, that Henry 'has the gross vices, the coarse nerves, of one who is to rule among violent people. . . . He is as remorseless and undistinguished as some natural force.' The king of this scene must be viewed, however, with the Henry of the choruses and of IV.1.

III.iv.3. Un peu. F En peu. The curious French of F has been clarified and normalized by many editors. Some of the F forms, like this one, perhaps, suggest attempts at phonetic spelling. A great many represent older French (frequently provincial) forms: este for êtes, parlas for parles, doyts for doights, escholier for écolier, dict for dites, apprins for appris, vostre for vôtre, desia for deja, Anglois for anglais, and so on. Many other odd forms in F are attributable too Shakespeare's handwriting and to the compositor's ignorance of French. This scene is reproduced in full in the French of F at the end of Introduction.

III.iv.8. Et les doigts. F assigns these words to Alice, the following speech to Katharine, and part of the next ('La main . . . écolier') to Alice. Much of the humor of this scene derives from the sound in French of several of the English words—foot (foutre), and count (con[t]) for 'gown'— and form translations like nick (pudendum) for 'neck' and sin for 'chin.'

III.v.SD. Britaine. Not in F. Most editors give the Q Burbon here, but the following relevant speeches are headed Brit. in F, and Holinshed names Britaine, not Bourbon, as of the king's council.

III.v.9. overlook . . . grafters. Shall slips (scions) taken from French stock overtop the parent trees? The Dauphin is referring to the uniting of Norman French and native Anglo-Saxon blood after 1066.

III.v.44. Faulconbridge. Often given as Fauconbridge or Fauconberg. Holinshed suggests the correct forms of F Loys and Lestrale in the next line. (See IV.8.89.)

III.vi.SD. English and Welsh. By such tags Shakespeare points up the national characteristics of the leaders united under Henry. However, the duplication in this entry notice (Welsh . . . Fluellen), and the substitution in Fluellen's speeches here of p for b only once (pridge, 1. 12) suggest possible revision of the first part of this scene. After Pistol leaves the stage at 1. 55 there are ten such substitutions. (See Introduction.) The bridge in 1. 2 is over the little river Ternoise at Blangy. Henry and his army crossed it on October 24, 1415, the night before the battle of Agincourt.

III.vi.8. live . . . living. The first word may be an anticipation of the second, but live occurs at III.7.55 for 'lief' and liveless at IV.2.55 for 'lifeless.'

III.vi.41. pax. A plate stamped with a picture of Christ, the Virgin, or a saint. Holinshed mentions the stealing of a pyx, the vessel containing the consecrated wafer, by an unnamed soldier: 'Yet in this great necessitie, the poore people of the countrie were not spoiled, nor anie thing taken of them without paiment, nor anie outrage or offense doone by the Englishmen, except one, which was, that a souldiour took a pix out of a church, for which he was apprehended, & the king not once remooued till the box was restored, and the offender strangled.'

III.vi.53. figo. The accompanying insulting gesture is made by inserting the thumb between two closed fingers or into the mouth. The gesture is repeated with 'fig of Spain,' at 1. 55.

III.vi.148-150. If we . . . Discolor. This phrasing is directly from Holinshed. Henry says 'If anie of your nation attempt once to stop me in my iournie now towards Calis, at their ieopardie be it; and yet wish I not anie of you so vnaduised, as to be the occasion that I die your tawnie ground with your red bloud.'

III.vii.SD. Dolphin. In III.5.65, 67 the French king requests that the Dauphin not go to battle.

III.vii.13. as if . . . hairs. The word may be 'hares' (F hayres). This passage, like several in French in this play, is very similar to one in John Eliot's lively English and French conversation manual, Ortho-epia Gallica, 1593.

III.vii.22. jades. Many of the words in this passage have double meanings—e.g. jade (a term of contempt for a woman or a horse), and horse-whores. (See III.4.7; cf. n.)

III.vii.59, 60. Le . . . bourbier. 'The dog is turned to his own vomit again, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.' (2 Peter 2:22.)

III.vii.101, 102. hooded . . . bate. 'It is never very apparent, and when it does appear it rapidly diminishes.' The metaphor is from falconry. The hawk was carried with a hood over its head, and when this was removed it would bate, i.e. flap its wings before flight. But bate here also means 'abate,' 'diminish.'

III.vii.135, 136. give . . . devils. The claim that Shakespeare consulted Edward Hall's chronicle (1548) in writing this play is supported by parallels like the following (not in Holinshed). Hall's Constable says '. . . keepe an Englishman one moneth from his warme bed, fat befe and stale drynke, and let him that season tast colde and suffre hunger, you then shall se his courage abated.'

IV. Prologue. 13. rivets. Knights were literally riveted into parts of their armor and could not get out without help.

IV. Prologue. 43. like the sun. See Prince Hal's comparing of himself with the sun (1 Henry IV, I.2.172 ff.) and the use of sun imagery to characterize Richard II.

IV. Prologue. 50-2. With . . . Agincourt. Unless Shakespeare (improbably) is referring to Pistol and the Frenchman (IV.4) or Fluellen and Williams (IV.8), we do not see these foils or this brawl. Perhaps some encounter has been omitted.

IV.i.3. Good. Though the choruses and his friends pay Henry unqualified and convincing personal tribute from the beginning, the following scene affords us the first sustained inward view of the king as man and soldier in the play. Compare the tone of the king's speeches here with that of his soliloquies as prince (1 Henry IV, I.2.201 ff. and 2 Henry IV, IV.5.22 ff.).

IV.i.SD. Erpingham. The king's request to Sir Thomas to assemble the nobles at his tent is repeated twice (ll. 27 and 264), and ll. 32, 33 prepare us for a soliloquy which is delayed until l. 207. Since this first soliloquy is closely related to the previous conversation, it may have been that only the second (ll. 267-284, after Erpingham's return) appeared in a possible first form of the play. (See Sources.)

IV.i.36. Qui va là. F Che vous la?; Q Ke ve la? 'Kivala' was Elizabethan thieves' argot for 'Who goes there?' (See III.7.112; cf. n.) F prints Pistol's speeches as prose.

IV.i.71. Pompey's camp. Fluellen is mistaken, for Pompey's camp before Pharsalia was notoriously undisciplined.

IV.i.202-205. Indeed . . . clipper. Crowns means both 'heads' and 'coins.' The French, outnumbering the English, may lay ('bet') more crowns on their victory. But it's not treason for an Englishman to 'clip' (cut off) French crowns. 'Clipping' (cutting off the edges of) English crowns (coins) was punishable by death, because it made them lighter and debased their value.

IV.i.209-213. We must . . . enjoy. F 'We . . . all./O . . . Greatnesse,/Subiect . . . sence/No . . . wringing./What . . . neglect,/That . . . enioy?'

IV.i.221. soul of adoration. F 'What? is thy Soule of Odoration?' (adoration has five syllables and condition, 1. 210, has four.)

IV.i.269. reck'ning. if Possibly 'reck'ning or'; F 'reckning of'; Q 'rekconing,/ That . . . May not appall their courage.'

IV.i.270-283. Not today . . . pardon. See 2 Henry IV, IV.5.187-221. Henry's father was a usurper and responsible for the murder of Richard II. With this prayer, Henry seems to free England at least temporarily from the blight prophesied by the Bishop of Carlisle (Richard II, IV.1.117 ff.). Holinshed writes that Henry 'caused the bodie of king Richard to be remooued with all funerall dignitie conuenient for his estate, from Langlie to Westminster, where he was honorablie interred with queene Anne his first wife, in a solemne toome erected and set vp at the charges of this king.'

IV.iii.11-14. Farwell . . . valor. In F ll. 13-14 follow l. 11, and all are attributed to Bedford. Then follows l. 12, which is given to Exeter.

IV.iii.16-18. O . . . today. Shakespeare heightens a passage in Holinshed:

> It is said, that as he heard one of the host vtter his wish to another thus: I would to god there were with vs now so manie good soldiers as are at this houre within England! the king answered: I would not wish a man more here than I haue . . . But let no man ascribe victorie to our owne strength and might, but onelie to Gods assistance, to whome I haue no doubt we shall worthilie haue cause to giue thanks therefore. And if so be that for our offenses sakes we shall be deliuered into the hands of our enimies, the lesse number we be, the lesse damage shall the realme of England susteine.

IV.iii.28-9. But if . . . alive. Compare with this speech Hotspur and Falstaff on honor (1 Henry IV, I.3.205-212 and V.1.132-139).

IV.iii.40. Crispian. Crispinus and Crispianus, patron saints of shoemakers were martyred 287 A.D. Their day and that of the battle of Agincourt fell on October 25.

IV.iii.44. live. Most editors, following Pope, transpose see and live. Greg and others suggest 'live t' old.'

IV.iv.SD. Excursions. In Q the order of IV.4 and IV.5 is reversed. Compare Pistol's capturing the Frenchman in this scene and the showing up of Pistol in V.1 with Falstaff's claiming the victory over Hotspur (1 Henry IV, V.4) or his capturing Colevile (2 Henry IV, IV.3) and the attempts to show up Falstaff (1 Henry IV, II.4 and III.3 and so on). Shakespeare patterned Part 2 of Henry IV very closely after Part 1, and he repeated some of the patterns of both in this play.

IV.iv.4. Qualtitie . . . me. Thus the F. Possibly 'Calen o custure me' (Malone) or 'Callino, castore me' (Boswell). Probably the Irish refrain to a popular Elizabethan song, recited by Pistol to mock the Frenchman.

IV.iv.7-11. O . . . ransom. F prints these lines and the following speeches of Pistol as prose: ll 13-15, 17-19, 21-23, 35-37, 45, 46, 60-61.

IV.iv.33. à cette heure. The spelling in F (asture) was a frequent English form of the French phrase. (See III.7.13-14; cf. n.)

IV.iv.35. Owy . . . permafoy. See 'Couple a gorge!' at II.1.73.

IV.iv.36, 37. roaring . . . dagger. Pistol is like the bragging but cowardly Devil of the old morality plays, whose nails the Vice or clown insultingly offered to pare with a wooden dagger.

IV.v.12. die in honor. Once F reads 'dye in once'; Q 'Lets dye with honour.' Honor is the word most frequently adopted (after Q) to supply F's missing word. Wilson suggests the more idiomatic 'in harness'; Mason and Walter read 'in arms.'

IV.vi.38. kill his prisoners. The sudden attack of the French and Henry's orders are historical, and Henry's severity has been variously defended in the light of military codes of the day. Note the reasons for this order given in the following scene, ll. 1-11 and 46-56. Holinshed writes that:

> certeine Frenchmen on horssebacke . . . to the number of six hundred horssemen, which were the first that fled, hearing that the English tents & pauilions were a good waie distant from the armie, without anie sufficient gard to defend the same . . . entred vpon the kings campe and there spoiled the hails, robbed the tents, brake vp chests, and carried away caskets and slue such seruants as they found to make anie resistance. . . . But when the outcrie of the lackies and boies which ran away for feare of the Frenchmen thus spoiling the campe, came to the kings eares, he doubting least his enimies should gather togither againe, and begin a new field; and mistrusting further that the prisoners would be an aid to his enimies . . . contrarie to his accustomed gentleness, commanded by sound of trumpet that euerie man (vpon paine of death) should incontinentlie slaie his prisoner.

IV.vii.SD. Bourbon. This appears in F. He does not speak (but neither do several of those who enter at V.2 and elsewhere), and most editors omit his name.

IV.vii.46-56. I was . . . them so. This appears in Holinshed but not in Hall:

> Some write, that the king perceiuing his enimies in one part to assemble togither, as though they meant to giue a new battell for preseruation of the prisoners, sent to them an herald, commanding them either to depart out of his sight, or else to come forward at once, and give battell: promising herewith, that if they did offer to fight againe, not onelie those prisoners which his people alreadie had taken; but also so manie of them as in this new conflict, which they thus attempted should fall into his hands, should die the death without redemption.

IV.vii.57-84. Here comes . . . Agincourt. Shakespeare is here very close to Holinshed:

> In the morning, Montioie king at armes and foure other French heralds came to the K. to know the number of prisoners, and to desire buriall for the dead. Before he made them answer (to vnderstand what they would saie) he demanded of them whie they made to him that request, considering that he knew not whether the victorie was his or theirs? When Montioie by true and iust confession had cleered that doubt to the high praise of the king, he desired of Montioie to vnderstand the name of the castell neere adioining: when they had told him that it was called Agincourt, he said, Then shall this conflict be called the battell of Agincourt.

IV.vii.93-94. Welshmen . . . caps. Nothing else is known of this incident nor of the Welsh custom of wearing leeks in these round, brimless, high-crowned caps. The custom is supposed to commemorate a victory of the Welsh over the Saxons on St. David's Day, March 1, 540. David (Tavy) is the patron saint of Wales.

IV.viii.100, 101. Welsh plood. Henry's great-grandmother was a Welsh princess. queen Elizabeth herself was descended from Owen Tudor, a Welshman who married Queen Katharine, Henry's widow.

IV.vii.110-111. Bring . . . parts. The king's request is not satisfied until sc. 8, l. 64, when a herald returns with the information. Since the intervening 135 lines complete the episode of the glove, which may have been added later, it is possible that this scene also underwent revision. Fluellen's apparent failure to recognize Williams at sc. 8, l. 10, after he had confronted him at ll. 123 ff., and the king's sending twice for Gower (at l. 142 and l. 154—thus, however, enabling Fluellen and Williams to meet) may indicate alterations.

IV.vii.149. doo's. This form (perhaps suggesting pronunciation) is not peculiar to Fluellen's speech, for the king (also Welsh) uses it at III.6.127 and V.2.185 and 211.

IV.viii.97. But . . . twenty. Historically the differences between the French and English losses were apparently staggering. Through their failure to adapt their techniques of conducting mass charges in full armor to the English defensive lines of protected archers, the French, according to Hall and Holinshed, lost 10,000 men (though the latest estimate is 7,000), against a recently estimated English loss of from 400 to 500.

V. Prologue. 3. excuse. Between Agincourt and the Treaty of Troyes (1420) five years have elapsed, during which Henry has conducted a second campaign in France.

V. Prologue. 17-22. Where . . . God. This appears as follows in Holinshed: 'The king like a graue and sober personage, and as one remembering from whom all victories are sent, seemed little to regard such vaiue [six] pompe and shewes as were in triumphant sort deuised for his welcoming home from so prosperous a iournie, in so much that he would not suffer his helmet to be carried with him, whereby might haue appeared to the people the blowes and dints that were to be seene in the same.'

V. Prologue. 30. general. The Earl of Essex left London on March 27, 1599, and returned, his attempt to suppress Tyrone's rebellion a failure, on the following September 28. (See Introduction.)

V. Prologue. 38. emperor's coming. In May 1416 the Holy Roman Emperor, Sigismund, came to England to negotiate between the French king and Henry.

V.i.71-88. Doth .. . wars. Pistol refers to Nell Quickly (see II.1.16, 17) as Doll here (in both F and O), and much in this speech may suggest Falstaff. A 'doll' was, however, a woman of easy virtue. (See Introduction.)

V.i.78. steal. Pronounced 'stale,' with probable puns on 'urinate' and 'prostitute.' See III.2.39.

V.ii.17. balls . . . basilisks. A double pun: balls refers to both eyesballs and cannon balls, and basilisks to large cannon and fabulous serpents, whose glance means death.

V.ii.36. best garden. Compare the following portrait of a disordered garden with two others in Richard II—Gaunt's picture of England, the 'other Eden' (II.1), and the Gardener's exact parallel between the commonwealth and nature (III.4.).

V.ii.136. vawting. Many of the words in the following passages have double meanings—e.g. uncoined constancy, tongue, rhyme, reason, wear, and later conjure up, circle, hard, and so on.

V.ii.317. Praeclarissimus: Shakespeare copied a misprint in Holinshed. The French très-cher should be paralleled by praecarissimus, 'very dear' Holinshed places this meeting between the French and the English in St. Peter's Church, 'where was a verie ioious meeting betwixt them (and this was on the twentith daie of Maie) and there the king of England, and the ladie Katharine were affianced. After this, the two kings and their councell assembled togither diuerse daies, wherein the first concluded agreement was in diuerse points altered and brought to a certeintie.'

The Life of King Henry the Eighth

Edited by JOHN M. BERDAN
and
TUCKER BROOKE

Dramatis Personae

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH
CARDINAL WOLSEY
CARDINAL CAMPEIUS
CAPUCIUS, Ambassador from the Emperor Charles V
CRANMER, Archbishop of Canterbury
DUKE OF NORFOLK
DUKE OF SUFFOLK
DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM
EARL OF SURREY
LORD CHANCELLOR
LORD CHAMBERLAIN
GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester
BISHOP OF LINCOLN
LORD ABERGAVENNY
LORD SANDYS
SIR THOMAS LOVELL
SIR HENRY GUILFORD
SIR ANTHONY DENNY
SIR NICHOLAS VAUX

CROMWELL, Servant to Wolsey
GRIFFITH, Gentleman-Usher to Queen Katharine
DOCTOR BUTTS, Physician to the King
BRANDON, AND A SERGEANT-AT-ARMS
QUEEN KATHARINE, Wife to King Henry
ANNE BULLEN, her Maid of Honour; later Queen
AN OLD LADY, Friend to Anne Bullen
PATIENCE, Woman to Queen Katharine

SECRETARIES TO WOLSEY; THREE GENTLEMEN; GARTER KING-AT-ARMS; SURVEYOR TO THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM; DOOR-KEEPER OF THE COUNCIL CHAMBER; PORTER, AND HIS MAN; PAGE TO GARDINER; A CRIER; SEVERAL LORDS AND LADIES IN THE DUMB SHOWS; WOMEN ATTENDING UPON THE QUEEN; SPIRITS WHICH APPEAR TO HER; SCRIBES, OFFICERS, GUARDS, ETC.

SCENE—London and Westminster; once at Kimbolton.

The Life of King Henry the Eighth

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The sources of Henry VIII are Holinshed's Chronicle for the first four acts and the last scene of the fifth act, and Foxe's Book of Martyrs for the first four scenes of the fifth act. Mr. Chambers[1] posits an earlier version of the play called by the name of Buckingham. This does not seem probable because Holinshed is not the 'source' in the rather vague sense applicable to the other plays. Here much of the play is merely Holinshed's scenes dramatized and his words put into blank verse. A fair illustration is the speech of the First Gentleman, II.i.173–177.

> Yes, but it held not;
> For when the king once heard it, out of anger
> He sent command to the lord mayor straight
> To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
> That durst disperse it.

Compare this passage with Holinshed:

'The king was offended with those tales, and sent for Sir Thomas Seimor maior of the citie of London, secretlie charging him to see that the people ceased from such talke.'

But as the play covers a period of twenty-four years, over a hundred folio pages in Holinshed, the playwrights selected passages to dramatize. From this condition three criticisms follow:

(1) The chronology is hopelessly confused, as the action is compressed into six or seven days. This confusion is partly unavoidable; the changes which occur during a quarter of a century must be ignored. The characters of the first act would have actually been old men or have died at the time the last must be dated. But also the playwrights did not care about the actual sequence of events, and the historical order of events is unnecessarily disarranged in the play.

(2) The characters neither develop, nor are they consistent. An illustration of the first point may be found in the treatment of the character of Henry himself. In 1520, the date of the opening of the play, he was twenty-nine years old, in the full vigor of his young manhood, athletic, fond of pleasure, and still tricked by the external; in 1544, the latest date in the play, he was old, sick, with an indomitable will and a shrewd sense that made him the most powerful personality in Europe. But the King Henry of the play is the same from the first act to the fifth. This may be due to the fact that the writers are frankly disregarding the lapse of time. The explanation for the inconsistency of the characters is quite different. The best illustration of this is to be found in the character of Wolsey. The fallen Wolsey of Act III has little in common with the arrogant prelate that plotted the fall of Buckingham. In Act III he is a heroic character with whose misfortunes the audience sympathizes; in Act I he is a tyrant, and there is no attempt to bridge this gap. These opposing interpretations of the same person are to be found in the original authority. Holinshed's work is not a history in the modern sense. A modern historian studies the period, determines the relative values of the various incidents, and presents us with a unified interpretation of the events. But this is not the method of the old chroniclers. Holinshed copies previous writers, stating the fact in the margin, but he makes no attempt to reconcile them. For the character of Wolsey he relies first upon the narrative of Polydore Vergil. The latter was an Italian who came to England about 1501. He got into trouble with Wolsey and was put into prison by the latter. Consequently when he wrote his history of England, he gave an unfavorable account of Wolsey and imputed base motives for his actions. This account Holinshed followed. But toward the end of his account he ran into the life of Wolsey written by George Cavendish, who had been Wolsey's gentleman usher. Naturally to Cavendish Wolsey was ideal magnificence personified. Consequently when Holinshed grafted Cavendish's opinion of Wolsey's character upon the narrative of Polydore Vergil it formed an unexpected conclusion. In one scene of the play the two points of view are brought into sharp contrast. In Act IV, scene ii, Katharine is giving vent to ideas of Polydore Vergil, whereas Griffith replies by talking Cavendish.

(3) In any drama the scenes should have an organic relation, the succeeding scene should develop from those preceding, until in the last act the audience perceives the drama as a unified whole. That is far from the case here. The leading personage of the first part is Buckingham; then Wolsey takes the stage, then Katharine, and we end with Cranmer and the christening of Elizabeth. Thus the drama is not a drama at all; it is a series of almost unrelated scenes, describing events that occurred in the reign of Henry VIII, and with him as vaguely felt center. This again is due to the writers' dependence upon Holinshed. He had no philosophical conception of the reign, and they did little more than dramatize selected scenes as they came to them. According to the statements in the Prologue they regarded this dependence as a virtue. That is the obvious meaning of the line and the emphasis upon truth in line 9. In other words, they felt that they were following Holinshed as carefully as possible.

> 'To make that only true we now intend,'

The History of the Play

On June 29, 1613, the Globe Theatre, the theatre with which Shakespeare was connected, burned to the ground, 'the house being filled with people to behold the play, viz. of Henry the

1 E. K. Chambers, The Elizabethan Stage, Vol. 2, p. 202.

Eighth.' Such is Stowe's brief account. The day following Thomas Lorkin wrote to Sir Thomas Puckering:

'No longer since than yesterday, while Burbage's company were acting at the Globe the play of Henry VIII, and there shooting off certain chambers [cannon] in way of triumph, the fire catched and fastened upon the thatch of the house, and there burned so furiously, as it consumed the whole house, all in less than two hours, the people having enough to do to save themselves.'

The most famous account is that written on July 2 by Sir Henry Wotton to his nephew:

'Now, to let matters of state sleep, I will entertain you at the present with what has happened this week at the Bankside. The King's players had a new play, called All is True, representing some principal pieces of the reign of Henry VIII, which was set forth with many extraordinary circumstances of pomp and majesty, even to the matting of the stage; the Knights of the Order with their Georges and garters, the Guards with their embroidered coats, and the like: sufficient in truth within a while to make greatness very familiar, if not ridiculous. Now, King Henry making a masque at the Cardinal Wolsey's house, and certain chambers being shot off at his entry, some of the paper, or other stuff, wherewith one of them was stopped, did light on the thatch, where being thought at first but an idle smoke, and their eyes more attentive to the show, it kindled inwardly, and ran round like a train, consuming within less than an hour the whole house to the very grounds. This was the fatal period of that virtuous fabric, wherein yet nothing did perish but wood and straw, and a few forsaken cloaks; only one man had his breeches set on fire, that would perhaps have broiled him, if he had not by the benefit of a provident wit put it out with bottle ale.'

There are other contemporary allusions to the famous fire, but the foregoing are the most precise. Thus there is no question that the Globe was set on fire during the performance of a play dealing with the reign of Henry VIII. Although there were other plays centering around Henry VIII at this time, the probability is that the particular play is, certainly for the most part, the one we have. Contemporary verses mention both Heminges and Condell as being the actors in it; and Heminges and Condell ten years later printed our play as belonging to the Shakespearean repertoire. In 1623 they could scarcely have forgotten the play that had proved so disastrous to them. If this is the play, either Sir Henry Wotton was mistaken about the title, or it was advertised under an alternative title All is True, and the lines of the Prologue may allude to this alternative title. There are two slight corroborative details. In Act I, scene iv, a stage direction reads 'chambers discharged'; the Globe would seem, then, to have burned at the end of the first act. And the 'business' of the part of King Henry was said after the Restoration to have been handed down from Shakespeare himself.

The suggestion of Chambers and others that it was an old play revamped does not seem probable. Sir Henry Wotton speaks of it as a 'new play.' This seems borne out by internal evidence. The play apparently was thrown together hurriedly, without much planning, to meet some emergency. What that emergency was it is impossible to tell at this late date. It has been suggested that the play was written to celebrate the marriage of the Princess Elizabeth with the Elector Palatine, which took place on the fourteenth of February, 1613. But as runs were very brief in that age, it is questionable whether Wotton would have described it four months later as 'new' if that had been the case. There is no need for positing a great ceremonial, or an affair of state, to call for the play. The emergency may equally well have been purely theatrical: that the manager was disappointed in a play for which he had contracted, or that the play he had intended to produce was unavailable for one of a hundred reasons, and a new play had to be substituted. At least, Henry VIII shows signs of hurried work. As we do not have the manuscript, it is always possible that the obvious errors in the text are due to the mistakes of the typesetter. That is not true in some cases here. The authors themselves must be held responsible for imprisoning Wolsey in Asher House, the residence of the Bishop of Winchester, when Wolsey was himself Bishop of Winchester. Such a slip can mean only that the authors had read their Holinshed rapidly. The banquet after the coronation is plainly stated to have been held in Westminster Hall; on a preceding page, following the account of a previous procession, Holinshed tells us that Anne retired to Whitehall. Presumably the authors lost the place in the chronicle and they have put the coronation banquet in Whitehall. Sandys, who was 'Lord' Sandys in Act I, is degraded to mere knighthood in Act II. Such mistakes as these are not due to an ignorant typesetter; they are due to a writer that cares vastly more for the theatrical significance of the scene than for historical accuracy. Other errors, while possibly typographical, are probably due to careless composition. Reading the black letter of Holinshed hastily, the authors transformed his phrase 'bottom of my conscience' into 'bosom of my conscience' (II.iv.195) and his noun chattels, which he spells 'cattels,' into 'castles' (III.ii.406). Slips like these all favor the assumption that for some reason a new play was required and authors set to work at full speed to produce one. It was written to be played, not to be read, and such errors as the foregoing, are, from the point of view of the audience, immaterial. The wonder is, not that the play is so poor, but that it is so good. The authors have succeeded in constructing a drama with pageant-like scenes and a few opportunities for good actors. These were the characteristics of it from the very beginning. According to contemporary accounts Burbage himself played in it, and Wotton stresses the elaborateness of the costumes. And these are the characteristics that have caused it to be revived over and over again. Pepys saw the great production in 1664, when Betterton played the King; Harris, Wolsey; Smith, Buckingham; and Mrs. Betterton, Queen Katharine. His comment is unfavorable:

'But my wife and I rose from table, pretending business, and went to the Duke's house (Lincoln's Inn Fields), the first play I have been at these six months, according to my last vowe, and here saw the so much cried-up play of "Henry the Eighth"; which, though I went with resolution to like it, is so simple a thing made up of a great many patches, that, besides the shows and procession in it, there is nothing in the world good or well done. Thence mightily dissatisfied back at night to my uncle Wight's. . . .'

Four years later, however, he is not so fastidious.

'After dinner, my wife and I to the Duke's playhouse, and there did see "King Harry the Eighth"; and was mightily pleased, better than I ever expected, with the history and the shows of it.'

There were at least twelve revivals in the eighteenth century. In 1727 was the famous one at Drury Lane, at which the management spent £1000 on the coronation scene alone. Most of the great actors and actresses are associated with it, and theatrical anecdote concerning the business used by them is still current. When Colley Cibber declaimed the lines

This candle burns not clear; 'tis I must snuff it;
Then out it goes . . . (III.ii.127–128)

he imitated snuffing a candle with a pair of snuffers!

The same popularity continued in the nineteenth century; Kemble, Kean and Macready starred in it, and Mrs. Siddons made a traditionally great Queen Katharine. In more recent times Irving gave a great production of it in 1892 at the Lyceum; he himself played Wolsey; Ellen Terry, Katharine; and Forbes Robertson, Buckingham. And it was Henry VIII that Beerbohm Tree brought to New York to celebrate Shakespeare's tercentenary in 1916, a choice that must have made Shakespeare turn in his grave! This production, also, stressed the scenic values of the play, more than the acting.

Authorship of the Play

The question of the authorship of Henry VIII is still partly unsolved. It is assigned to Shakespeare chiefly because it appears in the First Folio of 1623. That was edited by Heminges and Condell, two actors who had been in Shakespeare's company and who, by contemporary reports, had had parts in this particular play. The assumption is that when it is classed by them among Shakespeare's plays, they knew what they were talking about. On the other hand, it has been pointed out that the publication of the First Folio was a commercial venture, involving separate copyrights, and that, while the play, Henry VIII, was undoubtedly played by Shakespeare's company, it does not necessarily follow that he wrote the whole of it, the major part of it, or even any of it at all. As early as 1758 it was remarked that certain parts of the play have metrical peculiarities unlike Shakespeare's style. But it was not until a hundred years later that James Spedding, led by a remark of the poet Tennyson, made a careful investigation, and published his results in the Gentleman's Magazine, in 1850. Aside from subtler criteria, the great test is the proportionately large use of the eleven syllable line, the so-called feminine ending. As an example chosen at random, take the Chamberlain's speech in I.iii. The extra syllables are italicized.

*'As far as I can see, all the good our Eng*lish
*Have got by the late voyage is but mere*ly
A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;
*For when they hold 'em, you would swear direct*ly
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.'

It is easy to rewrite this without many such endings.

*'As far as I can see, all the good our Eng*lish
Have got by the late voyage is but slight,
A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd;
For when they hold 'em, you would swear at once
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they so keep state.'

It is not the question whether one type of verse is better than the other,—in the passage selected, neither is particularly good,—the point is that whereas Shakespeare in his known works uses this extra syllable comparatively rarely, such frequent use of the extra syllable is the characteristic of the style of Shakespeare's great contemporary dramatist, John Fletcher. The reader can amuse himself by testing the lines. Spedding drew up the following table from his edition:

Act	Scene	Lines	Red. Syll.	Proportion	Author
1	1	225	63	1 to 3.5	Shakespeare
	2	215	74	1 to 2.9	Shakespeare
	3 & 4	172	100	1 to 1.7	Fletcher
2	1	164	97	1 to 1.6	Fletcher
	2	129	77	1 to 1.6	Fletcher
	3	107	41	1 to 2.6	Shakespeare
	4	230	72	1 to 3.1	Shakespeare
3	1	166	119	1 to 1.3	Fletcher
	2 (to King's exit)	193	62	1 to 3	Shakespeare
	3	257	152	1 to 1.6	Fletcher
4	1	116	57	1 to 2	Fletcher
	2	80	51	1 to 1.5	Fletcher
	3	93	51	1 to 1.8	Fletcher
5	1	176	68	1 to 2.5	Shakespeare (altered)
	2	217	115	1 to 1.8	Fletcher
	3 almost all prose				Fletcher
	4	73	44	1 to 1.6	Fletcher

To account for the conditions as shown in the table above there are only three possible explanations. (1) Shakespeare wrote the whole play but for some unaccountable reason in many of the scenes imitated the style of Fletcher. This is the explanation given by Sir Sidney Lee. (2) Shakespeare and Fletcher collaborated. Collaboration between two or more playwrights was very common in the Elizabethan age. But here almost every great scene is written by Fletcher. If Henry VIII was a 'new' play in 1613, Shakespeare had already written Macbeth, Hamlet, and Lear; he was a veteran dramatist with an established reputation. The question consequently arises why under these circumstances the younger writer should take all the great opportunities and the older do merely the filling in. (3) Shakespeare had no hand in the play whatever; it was merely played under his direction. The non-Fletcherian scenes are not by Shakespeare, but by Massinger. This explanation was suggested in the 1880s by Mr. Robert Boyle. It was later argued by Mr. H. Dugdale Sykes, largely on the ground of coincidences of phrasing between Henry VIII and Massinger's known plays. It may be interesting to compare the table made by Mr. Sykes with the table of Spedding.

Prologue		Fletcher
Act 1, Sc. 1		Massinger
2		Massinger
3		Massinger & Fletcher
4		Massinger & Fletcher
Act 2, Sc. 1		Massinger & Fletcher
2		Fletcher
3		Massinger
4		Massinger
Act 3, Sc. 1		Massinger & Fletcher
2	(to exit of King)	Massinger
	(from exit of King)	Fletcher
Act 4, Sc. 1		Massinger
2		Massinger & Fletcher
Act 5, Sc. 1		Massinger
2		Fletcher
3		Massinger & Fletcher
4		Fletcher
5		Fletcher
Epilogue		Massinger

As a possible explanation of the peculiarities fo the play and its passing under Shakespeare's name, Mr. Leicester Bradner suggests that Shakespeare's company suddenly required a play on the general subject of Henry VIII to balance the successful performance of Rowley's When You See Me, You Know Me at a rival theatre. This is, of course, only guesswork.

In conclusion: The play was hastily thrown together. It shows no one creative mind. It is a series of scenes, taken from well-known books, scenes which have little relation, even chronological, between them. It has no development of character. And its versification is, in the main, non-Shakespearean. Therefore the conclusion seems inevitable that whatever Shakespeare's share may have been in its composition, it was the minimum amount necessary to have it included by his first editors among his works.

The Prologue

I come no more to make you laugh: things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it. Such as give
Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too. Those that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling
Richly in two short hours. Only they
That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,
Will be deceiv'd; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, besides forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known
The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make ye: think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living; think you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng and sweat
Of thousand friends; then in a moment see
How soon this mightiness meets misery:
And if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding day.

Act First ❧ Scene First

[London. An Antechamber in the Palace]
Enter the Duke of Norfolk at one door; at the other, the Duke of Buckingham and the Lord Abergavenny.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have you done,
Since last we saw in France?
Nor. I thank your Grace,
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.
Buck. An untimely ague
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Andren.
Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde:
I was then present, saw them salute on horseback;
Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung
In their embracement, as they grew together;
Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd
Such a compounded one?
Buck. All the whole time
I was my chamber's prisoner.
Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: men might say,
Till this time pomp was single, but now married
To one above itself. Each following day
Became the next day's master, till the last
Made former wonders its. To-day the French
All clinquant, all in gold, lie heathen gods,
Shone down the English; and to-morrow they Made Britain India: every man that stood
Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
As cherubins, all gilt: the madams, too,
Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear
The pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them as a painting. Now this masque
Was cried incomparable; and the ensuing night
Made it a fool and beggar. The two kings,
Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
As presence did present them; him in eye
Still him in praise; and, being present both,
'Twas said they saw but one; and no discerner
Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns—
For so they phrase 'em—by their heralds challeng'd
The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story,
Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
That Bevis was believ'd.
Buck. O, you go far!
Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In honour honesty, the tract of everything
Would by a good discourser lose some life,
Which action's self was tongue to.
Buck. All was royal;
To the disposing of it nought rebell'd,
Order gave each thing view; the office did
Distinctly his full function. Who did guide,
I mean, who set the body and the limbs
Of this great sport together?
Nor. As you guess.
One certes, that promises no element
In such a business.
Buck. I pray you, who, my lord?
Nor. All this was order'd by the good discretion
Of the right reverend Cardinal of York.
Buck. The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed
From his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder
That such a keech can with his very bulk
Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun,
And keep it from the earth.
Nor. Surely, sir,
There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends;

The Prologue; cf. n. 3 Sad: serious working: full of pathos state: dignity 9 truth; cf. n. 12 shilling; cf. n. 16 In . . . coat; cf. n. guarded: trimmed 19 As fool and fight is; cf. n. 20 opinion: reputation, intention 21 intend: undertake 22 Will leave us; cf. n. 25, 26 Cf. n. Scene First S. d. Duke of Norfolk, Duke of Buckingham, Lord Abergavenny; cf. n. 2 saw: met 8 Those suns of glory; cf. n. 9 vale of Andren; cf. n.

16 All the whole time; cf. n. 23 its; cf. n. 24 clinquant: glittering 35 him in eye: the one present 43 That: so that Bevis; cf. n. 45 worship: noble rank 46 tract: course 47, 48 Would . . . tongue to: could not be presented even by a skilful narrator with the vividness which the reality expressed 48–54 Cf. n. 63 fierce: extravagant 64 keech: lump of fat

For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose grace
Chalks successors their way, nor call'd upon
For high feats done to the crown; neither allied
To eminent assistants; but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, a' gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way;
A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
A place next to the king.
Aber. I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him: let some graver eye
Pierce into that; but I can see his pride
Peep through each part of him: whence has he that?
If not from hell, the devil is a niggard,
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.
Buck. Why the devil,
Upon this French going-out, took he upon him,
Without the privity o' the king, to appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes up the file
Of all the gentry; for the most part such
To whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon,—and his own letter
(The honourable board of council out)
Must fetch him in,—he papers.
Aber. I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.
Buck. O, many
Have broke their backs with laying manors on 'em
For this great journey. What did this vanity
But minister communication of
A most poor issue?
Nor. Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not values
The cost that did conclude it.
Buck. Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy: That this tempest,
Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded
The sudden breach on 't.
Nor. Which is budded out;
For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd
Our merchants' goods at Bordeaux.
Aber. Is it therefore
Th' ambassador is silenc'd?
Nor. Marry, is 't.
Aber. A proper title of a peace; and purchas'd
At a superfluous rate!
Buck. Why, all this business
Our reverend cardinal carried.
Nor. Like it your Grace,
The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,—
And take it from a heart that wishes towards you
Honour and plenteous safety,—that you read
The cardinal's malice and his potency
Together; to consider further that
What his high hatred would effect wants not
A minister in his power. You know his nature,
That he's revengeful; and I know his sword
Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and 't may be said,
It reaches far; and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel,
You'll find it wholesome. Lo where comes that rock
That I advise your shunning.

Enter Cardinal Wolsey,—the Purse borne before him,—certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Car. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor, ha?
Where's his examination?
Secr. Here, so please you.
Car. Is he in person ready?
Secr. Ay, please your Grace.
Car. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham
Shall lessen this big look. [Exeunt Cardinal and his Train.]
Buck. This butcher's cur is venom'd-mouth'd, and I
Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore best
Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book
Outworths a noble's blood.
Nor. What! are you chaf'd?
Ask God for temperance; that's th' appliance only
Which your disease requires.
Buck. I read in's looks
Matter against me; and his eye revil'd
Me as his abject object: at this instant
He bores me with some trick. He's gone to the king:
I'll follow, and outstare him.
Nor. Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choler question
What 'tis you go about. To climb steep hills
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like
A full hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself
As you would to your friend.
Buck. I'll to the king;
And from a mouth of honour quite cry down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence, or proclaim
There's difference in no persons.
Nor. Be advis'd;
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself. We may outrun
By violent swiftness that which we run at,
And lose by overrunning. Know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till 't run o'er,
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd:
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself,
If with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

73 Out . . . web; cf. n. a': he 86 privity: knowledge 88–92 Cf. n. 92 fetch him in: cheat papers: lists 98 with . . . on 'em: by selling manorial estates in order to buy personal equipments 100 minister communication: cf. n. 106 hideous storm; cf. n. 112 For . . . league; cf. n. 115 Th' ambassador is silenc'd; cf. n. 121 Like . . . Grace: may it please your Grace

137 Cf. n. 143 This butcher's cur; cf. n. venom'd: venomous 145 book: learning 148 temperance: moderation appliance: remedy 152 abject object: object of his contempt 153 bores: cheats 165 Ipswich; cf. n.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankful to you, and I'll go along
By your prescription: but this top-proud fellow
Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but
From sincere motions,—by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravel,—I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.
Nor. Say not 'treasonous.'
Buck. To the king I'll say 't; and make my vouch as strong
As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both,—for he is equal ravenous
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief
As able to perform 't, his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally,
Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king our master
To this last costly treaty: th' interview,
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' the rinsing.
Nor. Faith, and so it did.
Buck. Pray give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal
The articles o' the combination drew
As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified
As he cried, 'Thus let be,' to as much end
As give a crutch to the dead. But out count-cardinal
Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,—
Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam, treason,—Charles the emperor,
Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,
For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came
To whisper Wolsey,—here makes visitation:
His fears were that the interview betwixt
England and France might, through their amity,
Breed him some prejudice; for from this league
Peep'd harms that menac'd him. He privily
Deals with our cardinal, and, as I trow,—
Which I do well; for I am sure the emperor
Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his suit was granted
Ere it was ask'd;—but when the way was made,
And pav'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd:
That he would please to alter the king's course,
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king know—
As soon he shall by me—that thus the cardinal
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.
Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in 't.
Buck. No, not a syllable:
I do pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.

Enter Brandon; a Sergeant-at-Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serg. Sir,
My Lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I
Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.
Buck. Lo you, my lord,
The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish
Under device and practice.
Bran. I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business present. 'Tis his highness' pleasure
You shall to the Tower.
Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence, for that dye is on me
Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of heaven
Be done in this and all things! I obey.
O, my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well!
Bran. Nay, he must bear you company. [To Abergavenny.]
The King
Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know
How he determines further.
Aber. As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure
By me obey'd!
Bran. Here is a warrant from
The king t' attach Lord Montacute; and the bodies
Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—
Buck. So, so;
These are the limbs o' the plot: no more, I hope.
Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.
Buck. O! Nicholas Hopkins?
Bran. He.
Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal
Hath show'd him gold. My life is spann'd already:
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham,
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on,
By dark'ning my clear sun. My lord, farewell. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Council Chamber]

Cornets. Enter King Henry, leaning on the Cardinal's shoulder, the nobles and Sir Thomas Lovell; the Cardinal places himself under the King's feet on his right side.

King. My life itself, and the best heart of it,
Thanks you for this great care: I stood i' the level
Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks
To you that chok'd it. Let be call'd before us
That gentleman of Buckingham's; in person
I'll hear him his confessions justify;
And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate.

180 top-proud: supremely insolent 182 motions: motives 187 vouch: proof 194 suggests: tempts 200 combination: agreement 203 count-cardinal; cf. n. 207 Charles the emperor; cf. n. 209 colour: excuse 214 He privily; cf. n. 227 mistaken: misjudged S. d. Enter Brandon; cf. n.

234 Hereford; cf. n. 237 Lo you: behold! 239 device and practice: plot and trick 240–242 I am sorry, etc; cf. n. 248 Lord Abergavenny; cf. n. 258 John de la Car; cf. n. 259 Gilbert Peck, his chancellor; cf. n. 263 Nicholas Hopkins; cf. n. 268 instant: moment; cf. n. 269 My lord; cf. n. Scene Second S. d. Cf. n. 2 level: range, aim 3 confederacy: conspiracy 5 That . . . Buckingham's: the surveyor

A noise within, crying, 'Room for the Queen, ushered by the Duke of Norfolk.' Enter the Queen, Norfolk and Suffolk: she kneels. King riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him.

Queen. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.
King. Arise, and take place by us: half your suit
Never name to us; you have half our power:
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
Repeat your will, and take it.
Queen. Thank your majesty.
That you would love yourself, and in that love
Not unconsider'd leave your honour nor
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.
King. Lady mine, proceed.
Queen. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance: there have been commissions
Sent down among 'em, which hath flaw'd the heart
Of all their loyalties: wherein, although,
My good Lord Cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter-on
Of these exactions, yet the king our master,—
Whose honour heaven shield from soil!—even he escapes not
Language unmannerly; yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears
In loud rebellion.
Nor. Not almost appears,
It doth appear; for, upon these taxations,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them longing, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
Daring th' event to the teeth, are all in uproar,
And danger serves among them.
King. Taxation?
Wherein? and what taxation? My Lord Cardinal,
You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?
Car. Please you, sir,
I know but of a single part in aught
Pertains to the state; and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.
Queen. No, my lord?
You know no more than others; but you frame
Things that are known alike; which are not wholesome
To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions,
Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are
Most pestilent to the hearing; and to bear 'em,
The back is sacrifice to the load. They say
They are devis'd by you, or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.
King. Still exaction!
The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

S. d. Suffolk; cf. n. state; cf. n. 12 moiety: half 13 Repeat your will: say what you desire 22 commissions; cf. n. 35 longing: belonging 47 front but in that file: only march in the front rank 58 exclamation: reproach

Queen. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd
Under your promis'd pardon. The subjects' grief
Comes through commissions, which compels from each
The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this
Is nam'd, your wars in France. This makes bold mouths:
Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegiance in them; their curses now
Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass,
This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would your highness
Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.
King. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.
Car. And for me,
I have no further gone in this than by
A single voice, and that not pass'd me but
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am
Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further
Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State-statues only.
King. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trembling contribution! Why, we take
From every tree, lop, bark, and part o' the timber;
And though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is question'd, send our letters, with
Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission. Pray, look to 't;
I put it to your care.
Car. [To the Secretary.] A word with you.
Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons
Hardly conceive of me; let it be nois'd
That through our intercession this revokement

83, 84 yet . . . doing: yet presume to know all that I do 88 cope: encounter 92 sick: envious of us 93 allow'd: approved 101 example: precedent issue: consequences 105 stick . . . in: make dependent upon will: arbitrary caprice 106 trembling: tremendous, fearful 107 lop: branches 117 Hardly conceive: think hardly

And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you
Further in the proceeding. Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Queen. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.
King. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker,
To nature none more bound; his training such
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet see,
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,
Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,
Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black
As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear—
This was his gentleman in trust—of him
Things to strike honour sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices, whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.
Car. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.
King. Speak freely.
Surv. First, it was usual with him,—every day
It would infect his speech,—that if the king
Should without issue die, he'd carry it so
To make the sceptre his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Abergavenny, to whom by oath he menac'd
Revenge upon the cardinal.
Car. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.
Queen. My learn'd Lord Cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.
King. Speak on:
How grounded he his title to the crown
Upon our fail? to this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?
Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Henton.
King. What was that Henton?
Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor, who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.
King. How know'st thou this?
Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France,
The duke being at the Rose, within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners
Concerning the French journey: I replied,
Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently the duke
Said, 'twas the fear, indeed; and that he doubted
'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk; 'that oft,' says he,
'Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after under the confession's seal
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke,
My chaplain to no creature living but
To me should utter, with demure confidence
This pausingly ensu'd: neither the king nor 's heirs—
Tell you the duke—shall prosper: bid him strive
To [gain] the love o' the commonalty: the duke
Shall govern England.'
Queen. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office
On the complaint o' the tenants: take good heed
You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul. I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.
King. Let him on.
Go forward.
Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 'twas dangerous for him
To ruminate on this so far, until
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do. He answer'd, 'Tush!
It can do me no damage'; adding further,
That had the king in his last sickness fail'd,
The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.
King. Ha! what, so rank? Ah, ha!
There's mischief in this man. Canst thou say further?
Surv. I can, my liege.
King. Proceed.
Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reprov'd the duke
About Sir William Bulmer,—
King. I remember
Of such a time: being my sworn servant,
The duke retain'd him his. But on; what hence?
Surv. 'If,' quoth he, 'I for this had been committed,
As, to the Tower, I thought, I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon
Th' usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in's presence; which if granted,
As he made semblance of his duty, would
Have put his knife into him.'
King. A giant traitor!
Car. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom,
And this man out of prison?
Queen. God mend all!

125 To . . . bound: no one more gifted by nature 129 dispos'd: directed 140 practices: plots 142 Stand forth; cf. n. 148 carry it so: so arrange matters as 162 Upon our fail: if we should die 165 Henton; cf. n. 171–191 Cf. n.

177 Presently: at once 184 confession's seal; cf. n. 190 To gain; cf. n. 193 You were the duke's surveyor; cf. n. 195 spleen: malice 200–210 Cf. n. 203 for him; cf. n. 217 Bulmer; cf. n. 222 As . . . thought: to the Tower, as I thought I should be 226 would: i.e. my father would

King. There's something more would out of thee? what sayst?

Surv. After 'the duke his father,' with 'the knife,'
He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger,
Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour
Was, were he evil us'd, he would outgo
His father by as much as a performance
Does an irresolute purpose.

King. There's his period:
To sheathe his knife in us. He is attach'd;
Call him to present trial: if he may
Find mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not seek 't of us: by day and night!
He's traitor to the height. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A Room in the Palace]
Enter Lord Chamberlain and Lord Sandys.

L. Ch. Is 't possible the spells of France should juggle
Men into such strange mysteries?

L. San. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

L. Ch. As far as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late voyage is but merely
A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;
For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.

L. San. They have all new legs, and lame ones: one would take it,
That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin
Or springhalt reign'd among 'em.

L. Ch. Death! my lord
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they've worn out Christendom.

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.

How now!
What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?

Lov. Faith, my lord,
I hear of none but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

L. Ch. What is 't for?

Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants,
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors.

L. Ch. I'm glad 'tis there: now I would pray our monsieurs
To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either—
For so run the conditions—leave those remnants
Of fool and feather that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto,—as fights and fireworks;
Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom;—renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis and tall stockings,
Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel,
And understand again like honest men;
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it,
They may, cum privilegio, wear away
The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.

L. San. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases
Are grown so catching.

L. Ch. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whoresons
Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;
A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.

L. San. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they're going:
For, sure, there's no converting of 'em: now
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plainsong
And have an hour of hearing; and, by 'r lady,
Held current music too.

L. Ch. Well said, Lord Sandys;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

L. San. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

L. Ch. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a-going?

Lov. To the cardinal's:
Your lordship is a guest too.

L. Ch. O! 'tis true:
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies; there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed,
A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;
His dews fall everywhere.

L. Ch. No doubt he's noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of him.

L. San. He may, my lord; h'as wherewithal: in him
Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine:
Men of his way should be most liberal;
They are set here for examples.

L. Ch. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;
Your lordship shall along. Come, good Sir Thomas,
We shall be late else; which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guilford,
This night to be comptrollers.

L. San. I am your lordship's.

Exeunt.

241 period: ultimate purpose 245 by day and night; cf. n. Scene Third; cf. n. 8 A fit . . . face: a grimace or two 11 Pepin or Clotharius: early French kings 14, 15 spavin . . . springhalt; cf. n. 32 fool and feather: light-brained folly; cf. n.

34 fireworks; cf. n. 37 tall stockings; cf. n. 38 blister'd: swollen, puffy 39 understand: an obvious pun 41 cum privilegio: by special privilege 53, 54 beaten . . . play: long ignored 54 plainsong: homely ditty, simple wooing 56 Held current music: be held fashionable 58 colt's tooth: youthful wildness 66 makes: gives 73 had: would have 74 h'as: he has 79 My barge stays; cf. n. 83 comptrollers: masters of ceremonies

Scene Fourth

[The Presence-chamber in York-Place]
Hautboys. A small table under a state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the guests. Then enter Anne Bullen, and divers other ladies and gentlemen, as guests, at one door; at another door enter Sir. Henry Guilford.

Guil. Ladies, a general welcome from his Grace
Salutes ye all; this night he dedicates
To fair content and you. None here, he hopes,
In all this noble bevy, has brought with her
One care abroad; he would have all as merry
As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome
Can make good people.

Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord Sandys, and Lovell.

O, my lord, y' are tardy!
The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.
L. Ch. You are young, Sir Harry Guilford.
L. San. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
I think would better please 'em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones.
Lov. O that your lordship were but now confessor
To one or two of these!
L. San. I would I were;
They should find easy penance.
Lov. Faith, how easy?
L. San. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.
L. Ch. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry,
Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this;
His Grace is entering. Nay you must not freeze;
Two women plac'd together makes cold weather:
My Lord Sandys, you are one will keep 'em waking;
Pray, sit between these ladies.
L. San. By my faith,
And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet ladies
If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.
Anne. Was he mad, sir?
L. San. O very mad, exceeding mad; in love too:
But he would bite none; just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath. [Kisses her.]
L. Ch. Well said, my lord.
So, now y' are fairly seated. Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies
Pass away frowning.
L. San. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter Cardinal Wolsey and takes his state.

Car. Y' are welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady,
Or gentleman, that is not freely merry,
Is not my friend. This, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all, good health. [Drinks.]
L. San. Your Grace is noble:
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.
Car. My lord Sandys,
I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbours.
Ladies, you are not merry: gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?
L. San. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'em
Talk us to silence.
Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My Lord Sandys.
L. San. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship; and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing,—
Anne. You cannot show me.
L. San. I told your Grace they would talk anon.
Drum and trumpet; chambers discharged.
Car. What's that?
L. Ch. Look out there, some of ye.
Car. What warlike voice,
And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear not;
By all the laws of war y' are privileg'd.

Enter a servant.

L. Ch. How now, what is 't?
Serv. A noble troop of strangers;
For so they seem: they've left their barge and landed;
And hither make, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.
Car. Good Lord Chamberlain,
Go, give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue;
And, pray, receive 'em nobly, and conduct 'em
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty
Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him.
All rise, and tables removed.
You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend it.
A good digestion to you all; and once more
I shower a welcome on ye; welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter King, and Others, as masquers, habited like shepherds, ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures?
L. Ch. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd
To tell your Grace: that, having heard by fame
Of this so noble and so fair assembly
This night to meet here, they could do no less,
Out of the great respect they bear to beauty,
But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct,
Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat
An hour of revels with 'em
Car. Say, Lord Chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay 'em
A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their pleasures.
Choose ladies. The King and Anne Bullen.
King. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O beauty,
Till now I never knew thee! Music. Dance.
Car. My lord.

Scene Fourth; cf. n. 14 running banquet: slight repast, but with a pun 37 Well said: that's right 41 cure: remedy (?); charge (?) 48 may: as may be large enough to win 51 beholding: indebted 59 make my play: win S. d. chambers discharged: small cannon fired; cf. n. 94 The fairest hand; cf. n.

L. Ch. Your Grace?
Car. Pray tell 'em thus much from me:
There should be one amongst 'em, by his person,
More worthy this place than myself; to whom,
If I but knew him, with my love and duty
I would surrender it.
L. Ch. I will, my lord. Whisper.
Car. What say they?
L. Ch. Such a one, they all confess,
There is indeed; which they would have your Grace
Find out, and he will take it.
Car. Let me see then.
By all your good leaves, gentlemen, here I'll make
My royal choice.
King. Ye have found him, cardinal.
You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord:
You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily.
Car. I am glad
Your Grace is grown so pleasant.
King. My Lord Chamberlain,
Prithee, come hither. What fair lady's that?
L. Ch. An 't please your Grace, Sir Thomas Bullen's daughter,
The Viscount Rochford, one of her highness' women.
King. By heaven, she is a dainty one. Sweetheart,
I were unmannerly to take you out,
And not to kiss you. A health, gentlemen!
Let it go round.
Car. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready
I' the privy chamber?
Lov. Yes, my lord.
Car. Your Grace,
I fear, with dancing is a little heated.
King. I fear, too much.
Car. There's fresher air, my lord,
In the next chamber.
King. Lead in your ladies, every one. Sweet partner,
I must not yet forsake you. Let's be merry:
Good my Lord Cardinal, I have half a dozen healths
To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure
To lead 'em once again; and then let's dream
Who's best in favour. Let the music knock it.
Exeunt with trumpets.

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Westminster. A Street]
Enter two Gentlemen at several doors.

1. Gent. Whither away so fast?
2. Gent. O! God save ye.
E'en to the hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great Duke of Buckingham.
1. Gent. I'll save you
That labour, sir. All's now done but the ceremony
Of bringing back the prisoner.
2. Gent. Were you there?
1. Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.
2. Gent. Pray speak what has happen'd.
1. Gent. You may guess quickly what.
2. Gent. Is he found guilty?
1. Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon 't.
2. Gent. I am sorry for 't.
1. Gent. So are a number more.
2. Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?
1. Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke
Came to the bar; where to his accusations
He pleaded still not guilty, and alleg'd
Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.
The king's attorney on the contrary
Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions
Of divers witnesses, which the duke desir'd
To have brought, vivâ voce, to his face:
At which appear'd against him his surveyor;
Sir Gilbert Peck, his chancellor; and John Car,
Confessor to him; with that devil-monk,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.
2. Gent. That was he
That fed him with his prophecies?
1. Gent. The same.
All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain
Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not:
And so his peers, upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all
Was either pitied in him or forgotten.
2. Gent. After all this how did he bear himself?
1. Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear
His knell rung out, his judgment, he was stirr'd
With such an agony, he sweat extremely,
And something spoke in choler, ill and hasty:
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.
2. Gent. I do not think he fears death.
1. Gent. Sure, he does not;
He never was so womanish; the cause
He may a little grieve at.
2. Gent. Certainly
The cardinal is the end of this.
1. Gent. 'Tis likely
By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attainder,
Then deputy of Ireland; who remov'd,
Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,
Lest he should help his father.
2. Gent. That trick of state
Was a deep envious one.
1. Gent. At his return,
No doubt he will requite it. This is noted,
And generally, whoever the king favours,
The cardinal instantly will find employment,
And far enough from court too.
2. Gent. All the commons

114 unhappily: censoriously; i.e. I should think you flirtatious 116 pleasant: light-hearted, humorous 119–121 Sir Thomas . . . Rochford: daughter of Sir Thomas Bullen, Viscount Rochford 123 take you out: choose you as dancing partner 124 And . . . kiss you; cf. n. 137 measure: stately dance 139 knock it: strike up Scene First; cf. n. S. d. several: different

14 upon 't: upon the verdict 22 on the contrary: on the opposite side 25 To have brought; cf. n. 55, 56 Earl Surrey . . . his father; cf. n. 58 envious: malicious

Hate him perniciously, and o' my conscience,
Wish him ten fathom deep: this duke as much
They love and dote on; call him bounteous Buckingham,
The mirror of all courtesy—

Enter Buckingham from his arraignment—Tipstaves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side—accompanied with Sir Thomas Lovell, Sir Nicholas Vaux, Sir William Sandys, and common people, etc.

1. Gent. Stay there, sir,
And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.
2. Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.
Buck. All good people,
You that thus far have come to pity me,
Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me.
I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment,
And by that name must die: yet heaven bear witness,
And if I have a conscience, let it sink me,
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful!
The law I bear no malice for my death,
'T has done upon the premises but justice;
But those that sought it I could wish more Christians:
Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em.
Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men;
For then my guiltless blood must cry against 'em.
For further life in this world I ne'er hope,
Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies
More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me,
And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, o' God's name.
Lov. I do beseech your Grace, for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.
Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you
As I would be forgiven: I forgive all.
There cannot be those numberless offences
'Gainst me that I cannot take peace with: no black envy
Shall make my grave. Commend me to his Grace;
And if he speak of Buckingham, pray, tell him
You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers
Yet are the king's; and, till my soul forsake,
Shall cry for blessings on him: may he live
Longer than I have time to tell his years!
Ever belov'd and loving may his rule be!
And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!
Lov. To the water side I must conduct your Grace;
Then give my charge up to Sir. Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.
Vaux. Prepare there!
The duke is coming. See the barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.
Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas,
Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Constable,
And Duke of Buckingham; now poor Edward Bohun:
Yet I am richer than my base accusers,
That never knew what truth meant: I now seal it;
And with that blood will make 'em one day groan for 't.
My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first raised head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Banister,
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without trial fell: God's peace be with him!
Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Now his son,
Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And must needs say, a noble one; which makes me
A little happier than my wretched father:
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes; both
Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most:
A most unnatural and faithless service!
Heaven has an end in all; yet, you that hear me,
This from a dying man receive as certain:
Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels
Be sure you be not loose; for those you make friends
And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye. All good people,
Pray for me! I must now forsake ye: the last hour
Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell:
And when you would say something that is sad,
Speak how I fell. I have done; and God forgive me!
Exeunt Duke and Train.
1. Gent. O this is full of pity! Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.
2. Gent. If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe; yet I can give you inkling
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.
1. Gent. Good angels keep it from us!
What may it be? You do not doubt my faith, sir?
2. Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require
A strong faith to conceal it.
1. Gent. Let me have it;
I do not talk much.
2. Gent. I am confident:
You shall, sir. Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation
Between the king and Katharine?
1. Gent. Yes, but it held not;
For when the king once heard it, out of anger

65 perniciously: with a deadly hatred 68 mirror of all courtesy; cf. n. S. d. with the edge towards him; cf. n. Sir William Sandys; cf. n. 74 lose: forget 79 bear no malice: do not blame 84 evils: crimes; cf. n.

122 Edward Bohun; cf. n. 124 seal it: i.e. with my blood 126 My noble father; cf. n. 127 head: an armed force 146 loose: careless 148 rub: obstacle 170 shall: shall hear it 171–177 Cf. n.

He sent command to the lord mayor straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.
2. Gent. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now; for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain
The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal,
Or some about him near, have, out of malice
To the good queen, possess'd him with a scruple
That will undo her. To confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately;
As all think, for this business.
1. Gent. 'Tis the cardinal;
And merely to revenge him on the emperor
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd.
2. Gent. I think you have hit the mark: but is 't not cruel
That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal
Will have his will, and she must fall.
1. Gent. 'Tis woeful.
We are too open here to argue this!
Let's think in private more. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[An antechamber in the Palace]
Enter Lord Chamberlain, reading this letter.

L. Ch. 'My lord, The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinal's, by commission and main power, took 'em from me; with this reason: His master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir.' I fear he will indeed. Well, let him have them:
He will have all, I think.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlain the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Nor. Well met, my Lord Chamberlain.
L. Ch. Good day to both your Graces.
Suf. How is the king employ'd?
L. Ch. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.
Nor. What's the cause?
L. Ch. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife
Has crept too near his conscience.
Suf. No; his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.
Nor. 'Tis so:
This is the cardinal's doing: the king-cardinal,
That blind priest, like the eldest son of Fortune,
Turns what he list. The king will know him one day.
Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know himself else.
Nor. How holily he works in all his business,
And with what zeal! for, now he has crack's the league
Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew,
He dives into the king's soul, and there scatters
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience,
Fears, and despairs; and all these for his marriage:
And out of all these, to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce; a loss of her,
That like a jewel has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;
Of her that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with; even of her,
That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king: and is not his course pious?
L. Ch. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true
These news are everywhere; every tongue speaks 'em,
And every true heart weeps of 't. All that dare
Look into these affairs see his main end,
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open
The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man.
Suf. And free us from his slavery.
Nor. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages. All men's honours
Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.
Suf. For me, my lords,
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed.
As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the king please; his curses and his blessings
Touch me alike, they're breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the pope.
Nor. Let's in;
And with some other business put the king
From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him.
My lord, you'll bear us company?
L. Ch. Excuse me;
The king has sent me otherwhere: besides,
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him:
Health to your lordships.
Nor. Thanks, my good Lord
Chamberlain.

Exit Lord Chamberlain, and the King draws the curtain and sits reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.
King. Who's there? Ha?
Nor. Pray God he be not angry.
King. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves
Into my private meditations?
Who am I? Ha?
Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences
Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty this way
Is business of estate; in which we come
To know your royal pleasure.
King. Ye are too bold.
Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business.
Is this an hour for temporal affairs? Ha?

Enter Wolsey and Campeius with a commission.

176 allay: quiet 185 Cardinal Campeius; cf. n. 190 The archbishopric of Toledo; cf. n. 18, 19 No . . . lady; cf. n. 22 blind; cf. n. 53 pitch: height (?), black defilement (?) S. d.; Cf. n. 79 estate: state

Who's there? my good Lord Cardinal? O, my Wolsey,
The quiet of my wounded conscience!
Thou art a cure fit for a king. [To Campeius.] You're welcome,
Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:
Use us, and it. [To Wolsey.] My good lord, have great care
I be not found a talker.
Wol. Sir, you cannot.
I would your Grace would give us but an hour
Or private conference.
King. [To Norfolk and Suffolk.] We are busy: go.
Nor. [Aside to Suffolk.] This priest has no pride in him!
Suf. [Aside to Norfolk.] Not to speak of;
I would not be so sick though for his place:
But this cannot continue.
Nor. [Aside to Suffolk.] If it do,
I'll venture one have-at-him.
Suf. [Aside to Norfolk.] I another.

Exeunt Norfolk and Suffolk.

Wol. Your Grace has given a precedent of wisdom
Above all princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voice of Christendom.
Who can be angry now? what envy reach you?
The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,
Must now confess, if they have any goodness,
The trial just and noble. All the clerks,
I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms
Have their free voices. Rome, the nurse of judgment,
Invited by your noble self, hath sent
One general tongue unto us, this good man,
This just and learned priest, Cardinal Campeius;
Whom once more I present unto your highness.
King. And once more in mine arms I bid him
welcome,
And thank the holy conclave for their loves:
They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for.
Cam. Your Grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,
You are so noble. To your highness' hand
I tender my commission, by whose virtue,—
The court of Rome commanding,—you, my Lord
Cardinal of York, are join'd with me, their servant,
In the unpartial judging of this business.
King. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted
Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?
Wol. I know your majesty has always lov'd her
So dear in heart, not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law:
Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her.
King. Ay, and the best she shall have; and my favour
To him that does best: God forbid else. Cardinal,
Prithee, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary:
I find him a fit fellow.

Enter Gardiner.

Wol. [Aside to Gardiner.] Give me your hand; much joy and favour to you;
You are the king's now.
Gard. [Aside to Wolsey.] But to be commanded
For ever by your Grace, whose hand has rais'd me.
King. Come hither, Gardiner.

Walks and whispers [with Gardiner].

Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace
In this man's place before him?
Wol. Yes, he was.
Cam. Was he not held a learned man?
Wol. Yes, surely.
Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then
Even of yourself, Lord Cardinal.
Wol. How? of me?
Cam. They will not stick to say, you envied him,
And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous,
Kept him a foreign man still, which so griev'd him
That he ran mad and died.
Wol. Heaven's peace be with him!
That's Christian care enough: for living murmurers
There's places of rebuke. He was a fool,
For he would needs be virtuous. That good fellow,
If I command him, follows my appointment:
I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother,
We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.
King. Deliver this with modesty to the queen.

Exit Gardiner.

The most convenient place that I can think of
For such receipt of learning is Blackfriars;
There ye shall meet about this weighty business.
My Wolsey, see it furnished. O my lord!
Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience!
O 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[An Antechamber in the Queen's Apartments]
Enter Anne Bullen and an Old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither: here's the pang that pinches:
His highness having liv'd so long with her, and she
So good a lady that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her—by my life,
She never knew harm-doing—O! now, after
So many courses of the sun enthroned,
Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which
To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than
'Tis sweet at first t' acquire: after this process
To give her the avaunt, it is a pity
Would move a monster.
Old La. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her.
Anne. O God's will! much better
She ne'er had known pomp: though 't be temporal,
Yet if that quarrel, Fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance panging
As soul and body's severing.
Old La. Alas! poor lady,
She's a stranger now again.

89 talker: boaster, i.e. he means what he says 96 sick: sick with pride 99 have-at-him; cf. n. 116 holy conclave: the college of Cardinals 123 unpartial: impartial 124 equal: just 125 Gardiner; cf. n. 128 Cf. n.

140 Doctor Pace; cf. n. 153 Christian care: to wish him peace is all a Christian need do 157 none ... else: no others so near the king 161 Blackfriars; cf. n. Scene Third; cf. n. 1-11 Cf. n. 10 the avaunt: the order to be off 16 quarrel: quarreler, the abstract for the concrete 17 sufferance: suffering panging: causing pangs

Anne. So much the more
Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content,
Than to be perk'd up in a glist'ring grief
And wear a golden sorrow.
Old La. Our content
Is our best having.
Anne. By my troth and maidenhead
I would not be a queen.
Old La. Beshrew me, I would,
And venture maidenhead for 't; and so would you,
For all this spice of your hypocrisy.
You, that have so fair parts of woman on you,
Have too a woman's heart; which ever yet
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty:
Which, to say sooth, are blessings, and which gifts—
Saving your mincing—the capacity
Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive,
If you might please to stretch it.
Anne. Nay, good troth.
Old La. Yes, troth, and troth; you would not be a queen?
Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.
Old La. 'Tis strange: a three-pence bow'd would hire me,
Old as I am, to queen it. But, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? have you limbs
To bear that load of title?
Anne. No, in truth.
Old La. Then you are weakly made. Pluck off a little:
I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to: if your back
Cannot vouchsafe this burthen, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a boy.
Anne. How you do talk!
I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.
Old La. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an emballing: I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd
No more to the crown but that. Lo! who comes here?

Enter Lord Chamberlain.

L. Ch. Good morrow, ladies. What were 't worth to know
The secret of your conference?
Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking:
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.
L. Ch. It was a gentle business, and becoming
The action of good women: there is hope
All will be well.
Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!
L. Ch. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings
Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady,
Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's
Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty
Commends his good opinion of you, and
Does purpose honour to you no less flowing
Than Marchioness of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.
Anne. I do not know
What kind of my obedience I should tender.
More than my all is nothing, nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes
Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience,
As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness,
Whose health and royalty I pray for.
L. Ch. Lady,
I shall not fail t' approve the fair conceit
The king hath of you. [Aside.] I have perus'd her well;
Beauty and honour in her are so mingled
That they have caught the king; and who knows yet
But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle? [To her.] I'll to the king,
And say I spoke with you.
Anne. My honour'd lord.
Exit Lord Chamberlain.
Old La. Why, this it is; see, see!
I have been begging sixteen years in court,
Am yet a courtier beggarly, nor could
Come pat betwixt too early and too late
For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
A very fresh-fish here—fie, fie, upon
This compell'd fortune!—have your mouth fill'd up
Before you open it.
Anne. This is strange to me.
Old La. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no.
There was a lady once,—'tis an old story,—
That would not be a queen, that would she not
For all the mud in Egypt: have you heard it?
Anne. Come, you are pleasant.
Old La. With your theme I could
O'ermount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke!
A thousand pounds a year, for pure respect!
No other obligation! By my life,
That promises moe thousands: honour's train
Is longer than his fore-skirt. By this time
I know your back will bear a duchess. Say,
Are you not stronger than you were?
Anne. Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on 't. Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood a jot: it faints me,
To think what follows.
The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard to her.
Old La. What do you think me? Exeunt.

25 perk'd up: trimmed out 28 having: possession 39 cheveril: kid-leather, a type of flexibility 44 bow'd: made crooked, worthless; cf. n. 49 Pluck off a little: come down to a lower rank 52 vouchsafe: be willing to accept 53 Ever to get a boy: cf. n. 57 little England: cf. n. 58 emballing: cf. n. 59 Carnarvonshire: cf. n. 64 Not your demand: not worth your question

74 Commends: sends to you; cf. n. 76 Marchioness of Pembroke: cf. n. 81, 82 nor . . . not: the usual double negative 84 Beseech: I beseech 89 conceit: opinion 93 a gem: cf. n. 101 suit of pounds: petition for money 102 Cf. n. 103 compell'd: unsought, violent 106 forty pence: a customary amount for a wager 109 mud in Egypt: cf. n. 115 moe: other, more 116 fore-skirt: front of gown 122 salute: affect it faints me: I am depressed

Scene Fourth

[A Hall in Blackfriars]

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of doctors; after them, the Bishop of Canterbury, alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and Saint Asaph; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-Arms, bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two Cardinals; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.
King. What's the need?
It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides th' authority allow'd;
You may then spare that time.
Wol. Be 't so. Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry King of England, come into the court.
Crier. Henry King of England, &c.
King. Here.
Scribe. Say, Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.
Crier. Katharine Queen of England, &c.

The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.

Queen. Sir, I desire you do me right and justice;
And to bestow your pity on me; for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir,
In what have I offended you? What cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness,
I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry
As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour
I ever contradicted your desire,
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends
Have I not strove to love, although I knew
He were mine enemy? What friend of mine,
That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I
Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd. Sir, call to mind
That I have been your wife, in this obedience
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you. If, in the course
And process of this time, you can report,
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name
Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharp'st kind of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
And unmatch'd wit and judgment. Ferdinand,
My father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many
A year before. It is not to be question'd
That they had gather'd a wise council to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly
Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may
Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel
I will implore. If not, i' the name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!
Wol. You have here, lady,—
And of your choice,—these reverend fathers; men
Of singular integrity and learning,
Yea, the elect o' the land, who are assembled
To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless
That longer you desire the court, as well
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.
Camp. His Grace
Hath spoken well and justly. Therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed,
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produc'd and heard.
Queen. Lord Cardinal,
To you I speak.
Wol. Your pleasure, madam?
Queen. Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that
We are a queen,—or long have dream'd so,—certain
The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.
Wol. Be patient yet.
Queen. I will, when you are humble; nay, before,
Or God will punish me. I do believe,
Induc'd by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy; and make my challenge
You shall not be my judge; for it is you
Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,
Which God's dew quench! Therefore I say again,
I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul
Refuse you for my judge, whom, yet once more,
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not
At all a friend to truth.
Wol. I do profess
You speak not like yourself; who ever yet

Scene Fourth S. d.: cf. n. 8 &c.: i.e. the Crier recites the formal summons 14 Sir, I desire: cf. n. 18 indifferent: impartial 33 to him deriv'd: drawn upon himself 38 many children: cf. n. 50 by: in the course of 64 That . . . court: i.e. that you request the court to delay its proceedings 83 potent circumstances: strong evidences 84 challenge: a law term still used in claiming an objection to a juryman 87 God's dew: i.e. of mercy 88 abhor: protest against

Have stood to charity, and display'd th' effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom
O'ertopping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong:
I have no spleen against you; nor injustice
For you or any: how far I have proceeded,
Or how far further shall, is warranted
By a commission from consistory,
Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me
That I have blown this coal: I do deny it.
The king is present: if it be known to him
That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my falsehood; yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know
That I am free of your report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me; and the cure is to
Remove these thoughts from you: the which before
His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking,
And to say so no more.
Queen. My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. Y' are meek and humble-mouth'd;
You sign your place and calling, in full seeming,
With meekness and humility; but your heart
Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune and his highness' favours,
Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted
Where powers are your retainers, and your words,
Domestics to you, serve your will as 't please
Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell you,
You tender more your person's honour than
Your high profession spiritual; that again
I do refuse you for my judge; and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness,
And to be judg'd by him.
She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.
Camp. The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and
Disdainful to be tried by 't: 'tis not well.
She's going away.
King. Call her again.
Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.
Gent. Ush. Madam, you are call'd back.
Queen. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way:
When you are call'd, return. Now, the Lord help!
They vex me past my patience. Pray you, pass on:
I will not tarry; no, nor ever more
Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts. Exeunt Queen, and her Attendants.
King. Go thy ways, Kate:
That man i' the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted,
For speaking false in that: thou art, alone,—
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saintlike, wifelike government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out,—
The queen of earthly queens. She's noble born;
And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.
Wol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness,
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing
Of all these ears,—for where I am robb'd and bound
There must I be unloos'd, although not there
At once and fully satisfied,—whether ever I
Did broach this business to your highness, or Laid any scruple in your way, which might
Induce you to the question on 't? or ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such
A royal lady, spake one the least word that might
Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person?
King. My Lord Cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour,
I free you from 't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but, like to village curs,
Bark when their fellows do. By some of these
The queen is put in anger. Y' are excus'd:
But will you be more justified? You ever
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never Desir'd it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd, oft,
The passages made toward it. On my honour,
I speak my good lord Cardinal to this point,
And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to 't,
I will be bold with time and your attention:
Then mark th' inducement. Thus it came; give heed to 't:
My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness,
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador,
Who had been hither sent on the debating
A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and
Our daughter Mary. I' the progress of this business,
Ere a determinate resolution, he—
I mean, the bishop—did require a respite,
Wherein he might the king his lord advertise
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager,
Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook
The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me,
Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble
The region of my breast; which forc'd such way,
That many-maz'd considerings did throng,
And press'd in with this caution. First, methought
I stood not in the smile of heaven, who had
Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should
Do no more offices of life to 't than
The grave does to the dead; for her male issue
Or died where they were made, or shortly after

94 stood to: taken the side of 111 in: in reference to, upon 112 unthink your speaking: disabuse your mind of what you have said 117 sign: mark seeming: feigning 121 slightly: easily 111 powers: powers incidental to your high offices 122–124 your words . . . office; cf. n. 125 tender: regard 132 apt: readily inclined 137 Gent. Ush.; cf. n.

149 government: behavior 167 touch . . . person: sullying of her good reputation 179 speak: bear witness in favor of 181 I ask time and your attention while I explain 185 Bishop of Bayonne; cf. n. 191 advertise: inform 194 Sometimes: sometime, formerly 195 bosom of my conscience; cf. n. 198 many-maz'd: intricate

This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought,
This was a judgment on me; that my kingdom,
Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should not
Be gladded in 't by me. Then follows that
I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in
By this my issue's fail; and that gave to me
Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer
Toward this remedy, whereupon we are
Now present here together; that's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience, which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,
By all the reverend fathers of the land
And doctors learn'd. First, I began in private
With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you remember
How under my oppression I did reek,
When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

King. I have spoke long: be please'd yourself to say
How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a state of mighty moment in 't,
And consequence of dread, that I committed
The daring'st counsel that I had to doubt,
And did entreat your highness to this course
Which you are running here.

King. I then mov'd you,
My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave
To make this present summons. Unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded
Under your hands and seals; therefore go on,
For no dislike i' the world against the person
Of the good queen; but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons drives this forward.
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her,
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That's paragon'd o' the world.

Camp. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till further day:
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness.

King. [Aside.] I may perceive
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-beloved servant Cranmer,
Prithee, return: with thy approach, I know,
My comfort comes along. Break up the court:
I say, set on. Exeunt, in manner as they entered.

212 hulling: drifting without sail at the mercy of the waves 228 state: political issue 241 drives: drive; cf. n. 246 paragon'd: set forth as a model 256 Cranmer; cf. n.

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The Palace at Bridewell. A Room in the Queen's Apartment]
Enter the Queen and her women as at work.

Queen. Take thy lute, wench; my soul grows sad with troubles;
Sing and disperse 'em, if thou canst. Leave working.

Song

'Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves, when he did sing:
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung, as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring.

'Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep or, hearing, die.'

Enter a Gentleman.

Queen. How now!

Gent. An 't please your Grace, the two great cardinals
Wait in the presence.

Queen. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They will'd me say so, Madam.

Queen. Pray their Graces
To come near. [Exit Gentleman.] What can be their business
With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from favour?
I do not like their coming, now I think on 't.
They should be good men, their affairs as righteous;
But all hoods make not monks.

Enter the two Cardinals, Wolsey and Campeius.

Wol. Peace to your highness!

Queen. Your Graces find me here part of a housewife,
I would be all, against the worst may happen.
What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw
Into your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.

Queen. Speak it here.
There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,
Deserves a corner: would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!
My lords, I care not—so much I am happy
Above a number—if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em,
I know my life so even. If your business
Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima,—

Queen. O, good my lord, no Latin!

Scene First; cf. n. 9 as: as if 18 An't: if it 19 presence: presence-chamber 27 all . . . monks; cf. n. 29 part of: in part 32 May it: if it may 44 that way I am wife in: i.e. how I behave as a wife 46–47 Cf. n.

I am not such a truant since my coming
As not to know the language I have liv'd in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious;
Pray, speak in English: here are some will thank you,
If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake:
Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord Cardinal,
The willing'st sin I ever yet committed
May be absolv'd in English.
Wol. Noble lady,
I am sorry my integrity should breed,—
And service to his majesty and you,—
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses,
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow;—
You have too much, good lady: but to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference
Between the king and you; and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions
And comforts to your cause.
Camp. Most honour'd madam,
My Lord of York, out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your Grace,
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him,—which was too far,—
Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.
Queen. [Aside.] To betray me.
My lords, I thank you both for your good wills;
Ye speak like honest men,—pray God, ye prove so!—
But how to make ye suddenly an answer
In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,—
More near my life, I fear,—with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,
In truth I know not. I was set at work
Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking
Either for such men or such business.
For her sake that I have been,—for I feel
The last fit of my greatness,—good your Graces,
Let me have time and counsel for my cause:
Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless.
Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears:
Your hopes and friends are infinite.
Queen. In England
But little for my profit. Can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,—
Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,—
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here:
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence
In mine own country, lords.
Camp. I would your Grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.
Queen. How, sir?
Camp. Put your main cause into the king's protection;
He's loving and most gracious: 'twill be much
Both for your honour better and your cause;
For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,
You'll part away disgrac'd.
Wol. He tells you rightly.
Queen. Ye tell me what ye wish for both: my ruin.
Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge
That no king can corrupt.
Camp. Your rage mistakes us.
Queen. The more shame for ye! holy men I thought ye,
Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;
But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye.
Mend 'em, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?
The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady,
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
I will not wish ye half my miseries,
I have more charity; but say, I warn'd ye:
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once
The burthen of my sorrows fall upon ye.
Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.
Queen. Ye turn me into nothing: woe upon ye,
And all such false professors! Would you have me—
If you have any justice, any pity;
If ye be anything but churchmen's habits—
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?
Alas! h'as banish'd me his bed already,
His love too long ago! I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? all your studies
Make me a curse like this.
Camp. Your fears are worse.
Queen. Have I liv'd thus long—let me speak myself,
Since virtue finds no friends—a wife, a true one?
A woman, I dare say without vainglory,
Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections
Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven? obey'd him?
Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'Tis not well, lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
One that ne'er dreamed a joy beyond his pleasure,
And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour, a great patience.
Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.
Queen. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,
To give up willingly that noble title
Your master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.
Wol. Pray hear me.
Queen. Would I had never trod this English earth,
Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.
What will become of me now, wretched lady?
I am the most unhappy woman living.
[To her women.] Alas! poor wenches, where are now your fortunes?
Shipwrack'd upon a kingdom, where no pity,

68 your cause; cf. n. 83 was set: was sitting 96 so . . honest: so reckless as to be honest 98 weigh out: outweigh (?), ponder (?)

127 envy: malice 140 speak myself; cf. II.iv179 149 a constant . . . husband: a woman constant to her husband 161 angel's faces; cf. n.

No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me;
Almost no grave allow'd me. Like the lily,
That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
I'll hang my head and perish.
Wol. If your Grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,
You'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady,
Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places,
The way of our profession is against it:
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em.
For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage.
The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm: pray think us
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.
Camp. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak women's fears: a noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever casts
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you;
Beware you lose it not: for us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.
Queen. Do what ye will, my lords: and, pray, forgive me,
If I have us'd myself unmannerly.
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray do my service to his majesty:
He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers
While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers,
Bestow your counsels on me. She now begs
That little thought, when she set footing here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Antechamber to the King's Apartment]
Enter the Duke of Norfolk, Duke of Suffolk, Lord Surrey, and Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,
And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
Cannot stand under them. If you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise
But that you shall sustain moe new disgraces
With these you bear already.
Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion that may give me
Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke,
To be reveng'd on him.
Suf. Which of the peers
Have uncontemn'd gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected? When did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person,
Out of himself?
L. Ch. My lords, you speak your pleasures:
What he deserves of you and me, I know;
What we can do to him,—though now the time
Gives way to us,—I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt
Anything on him, for he hath a witchcraft
Over the king in's tongue.
Nor. O fear him not!
His spell in that is out: the king hath found
Matter against him that for ever mars
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.
Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such news as this
Once every hour.
Nor. Believe it, this is true.
In the divorce his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears
As I would wish mine enemy.
Sur. How came
His practices to light?
Suf. Most strangely.
Sur. O how? how?
Suf. The cardinal's letters to the pope miscarried,
And came to th' eye o' the king; wherein was read,
How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness
To stay the judgment o' the divorce; for if
It did take place, 'I do,' quoth he, 'perceive
My king is tangled in affection to
A creature of the queen's, Lady Anne Bullen.'
Sur. Has the king this?
Suf. Believe it.
Sur. Will this work?
L. Ch. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts
And hedges his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
After his patient's death: the king already
Hath married the fair lady.
Sur. Would he had!
Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord!
For I profess, you have it.
Sur. Now all my joy
Trace the conjunction!
Suf. My amen to 't!
Nor. All men's.
Suf. There's order given for her coronation:
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears unrecounted. But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memoriz'd.
Sur. But will the king
Digest this letter of the cardinal's?
The Lord forbid!
Nor. Marry, amen!

179 carriage: behavior 185 Those we profess: what we profess to be 195 us'd: behaved Scene Second; cf. n. 2 force: urge 9 my father-in-law, the duke: i.e. the Duke of Buckingham

15 Out of: except 19 Gives way to us: favors us 27 Not to come off; cf. n. 32 contrary: inconsistent, devious 39 Cf. n. 54 Would he had; cf. n. 58 Trace: follow 66 some blessing; cf. n. 69 Digest: put up with

Suf. No, no;
There be moe wasps that buzz about his nose
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius
Is stol'n away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
Has left the cause o' the king unhandled; and
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you
The king cried 'Ha!' at this.
L. Ch. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry 'Ha!' louder.
Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer?
Suf. He is return'd in his opinions, which
Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom. Shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager,
And widow to Prince Arthur.
Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.
Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.
Nor. So I hear.
Suf. 'Tis so.

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

The cardinal!
Nor. Observe, observe; he's moody.
Car. The packet, Cromwell,
Gave 't you the king?
Crom. To his own hand, in's bedchamber.
Car. Look'd he o' th' inside of the paper?
Crom. Presently
He did unseal them; and the first he view'd,
He did it with a serious mind; a heed
Was in his countenance. You he bade
Attend him here this morning.
Car. Is he ready
To come abroad?
Crom. I think, by this he is.
Car. Leave me awhile. Exit Cromwell.
[Aside.] It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon,
The French King's sister; he shall marry her.
Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him:
There's more in 't than fair visage. Bullen!
No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish
To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Pembroke!
Nor. He's discontented.
Suf. May be he hears the king
Does whet his anger to him.
Sur. Sharp enough,
Lord, for thy justice!
Car. The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter,
To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!
This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must snuff it;
Then, out it goes. What though I know her virtuous
And well deserving? yet I know her for
A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to
Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of
Our hard-rul'd king. Again, there is sprung up
An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king,
And is his oracle.
Nor. He is vex'd at something.
Sur. I would 'twere something that would fret the string,
The master-cord on's heart!

Enter King, reading of a schedule.

Suf. The king, the king!
King. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated
To his own portion! and what expense by the hour
Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrift,
Does he rake this together? Now, my lords,
Saw you the cardinal?
Nor. My lord, we have
Stood here observing him. Some strange commotion
Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight
Springs out into fast gait; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard; and anon he casts
His eye against the moon: in most strange postures
We have seen him set himself.
King. It may well be,
There is a mutiny in's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd; and wot you what I found
There, on my conscience, put unwittingly?
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing:
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure,
Rich stuffs and ornaments of household, which
I find at such proud rate that it out-speaks
Possession of a subject.
Nor. It's heaven's will:
Some spirit put this paper in the packet
To bless your eye withal.
King. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still
Dwell in his musings: but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

King takes his seat, whispers Lovell, who goes to the Cardinal.

Car. Heaven forgive me!
Ever God bless your highness!
King. Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory
Of your best graces in your mind, the which
You were now running o'er: you have scarce time
To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span
To keep your earthly audit: sure, in that

74 Cardinal Campeius; cf. n. 84 return'd in his opinions: i.e. having forwarded the opinions of universities he was sent to get 89–91 Katharine ... Arthur; cf. n. 114 Duchess of Alençon; cf. n.

130 A spleeny Lutheran; cf. n. 134 Hath: who hath S. d.; cf. n. 162, 163 out-speaks ... subject: indicates more than a subject should possess 166 withal: therewith

I deem you an ill husband, and am glad
To have you therein my companion.
Car. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business which
I bear i' the state; and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which perforce
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.
King. You have said well.
Car. And ever may your highness yoke together,
As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying.
King. 'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well:
And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you:
He said he did, and with his deed did crown
His word upon you. Since I had my office,
I have kept you next my heart; have not alone
Employ'd you where high profits might come home,
But par'd my present havings, to bestow
My bounties upon you.
Car. [Aside.] What should this mean?
Sur. [Aside.] The Lord increase this business!
King. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me
If what I now pronounce you have found true;
And if you may confess it, say withal,
If you are bound to us or no. What say you?
Car. My sovereign, I confess your royal graces,
Shower'd on me daily, have been more than could
My studied purposes requite; which went
Beyond all man's endeavours. My endeavours
Have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet fil'd with my abilities. Mine own ends
Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed
To the good of your most sacred person and
The profit of the state. For your great graces
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks,
My prayers to heaven for you, my loyalty,
Which ever has and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.
King. Fairly answer'd:
A loyal and obedient subject is
Therein illustrated; the honour of it
Does pay the act of it, as i' the contrary
The foulness is the punishment. I presume
That as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour, more
On you than any; so your hand and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.
Car. I do profess,

181 an ill husband: a bad manager 201 par'd . . . havings: diminished my present possessions 210–215 Cf. n. 215 fil'd: kept pace with 216 so: in this sense only 220 allegiant: loyal 226, 227 the honour . . . act of it: a loyal subject's nobility of character rewards him for his actions 227 the contrary: a character of the opposite nature 233–235 Should . . . any; cf. n.

That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own; that am, have, and will be.
Though all the world should crack their duty to you,
And throw it from their soul; though perils did
Abound as thick as thought could make 'em, and
Appear in forms more horrid, yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.
King. 'Tis nobly spoken.
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open 't. Read o'er this;
[Giving him papers.]
And after, this: and then to breakfast with
What appetite you have.

Exit King, frowning upon the Cardinal; the nobles throng after him, smiling and whispering.

Car. What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes. So looks the chafed lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him:
Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper;
I fear, the story of his anger. 'Tis so:
This paper has undone me! 'Tis th' account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom,
And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence!
Fit for a fool to fall by: what cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune
Will bring me off again. What's this?—'To the Pope!'
The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to's holiness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness;
And from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting. I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Enter to Wolsey the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal: who commands you
To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands; and to confine yourself
To Asher-house, my Lord of Winchester's,
Till you hear further from his highness.
Car. Stay:
Where's your commission, lords? words cannot carry
Authority so weighty.
Suf. Who dare cross 'em,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?
Car. Till I find more than will or words to do it,—
I mean your malice,—know, officious lords,

238 that am, have, and will be; cf. n. 262 cross: perverse 263 main: chief 274 exhalation: falling star 279 Asher-house; cf. n.

I dare and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded, envy:
How eagerly ye follow my disgraces,
As if it fed ye! and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in everything may bring my ruin!
Follow your envious courses, men of malice;
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and, no doubt,
In time will find their fit rewards. That seal
You ask with such a violence, the king—
Mine and your master—with his own hand gave me;
Bade me enjoy it with the place and honours
During my life; and to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters-patents. Now who'll take it?
Sur. The king, that gave it.
Car. It must be himself then.
Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.
Car. Proud lord, thou liest:
Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue than said so.
Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals—
With thee and all thy best parts bound together—
Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy!
You sent me deputy for Ireland,
Far from his succour, from the king, from all
That might have mercy on the fault thou gave'st him;
Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an axe.
Car. This and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer is most false. The duke by law
Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
You have as little honesty as honour,
That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.
Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou shouldst feel
My sword i' the life-blood of thee else. My lords,
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility; let his Grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap like larks.
Car. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.
Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion:
The goodness of your intercepted packets,
You writ to the pope against the king: your goodness,
Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.
My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,

289 envy: namely, of envy 300 letters-patents: legal documents 328 Dare mate: I dare rival 335 jaded: befooled 337 dare: dazzle birds with a piece of scarlet cloth, to catch them

As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despis'd nobility, our issues,
Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life. I'll startle you
Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown wench
Lay kissing in your arms, Lord Cardinal.
Car. How much, methinks, I could despise this man,
But that I am bound in charity against it!
Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand;
But, thus much, they are foul ones.
Car. So much fairer
And spotless shall mine innocence arise
When the king knows my truth.
Sur. This cannot save you:
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry 'guilty,' cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.
Car. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections. If I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.
Sur. I had rather want those than my head. Have at you!
First, that, without the king's assent or knowledge,
You wrought to be a legate, by which power
You maim'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.
Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus
Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought the king
To be your servant.
Suf. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of king or council, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.
Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.
Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd
Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.
Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,—
By what means got, I leave to your own conscience,—
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are,
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.
L. Ch. O my lord!
Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him
So little of his great self.
Sur. I forgive him.
Suf. Lord Cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,
Because all those things you have done of late,
By your power legatine within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a præmunire:

348 issues: children 352 sacring bell: cf. n. 356 hand: possession 367 objections: accusations 370 First, that: cf. n. 371 wrought: contrived 381 Item: likewise 390 mere: absolute 403 præmunire: the accusation of maintaining the papal power in England

That therefore such a writ be su'd against you,
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the king's protection. This is my charge.
Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations
How to live better. For your stubborn answer
About the giving back the great seal to us,
The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall thank you.
So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinal.
Exeunt all but Wolsey.
Car. So farewell to the little good you bear me.
Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes; to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him;
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
And when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride
At length broke under me, and now has left me,
Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye.
I feel my heart now open'd. O how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have;
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

Enter Cromwell, standing amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell!
Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.
Car. What! amaz'd
At my misfortunes? Can thy spirit wonder
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,
I am fall'n indeed.
Crom. How does your Grace?
Car. Why, well:
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.
I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me,
I humbly thank his Grace; and from these shoulders,
These ruin'd pillars, out of pity taken
A load would sink a navy, too much honour.
O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven!
Crom. I am glad your Grace has made that right use of it.
Car. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks,—
Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,—
To endure more miseries and greater far
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?
Crom. The heaviest, and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the king.
Car. God bless him!
Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord Chancellor in your place.
Car. That's somewhat sudden:
But he's a learned man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favour, and do justice
For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones,
When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on him!
What more?
Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome,
Install'd Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.
Car. That's news indeed.
Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open as his queen,
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.
Car. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O
Cromwell!
The king has gone beyond me: all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever.
No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited
Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell;
I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master. Seek the king;—
That sun, I pray, may never set!—I have told him
What, and how true thou art: he will advance thee.
Some little memory of me will stir him—
I know his noble nature—not to let
Thy hopeful service perish too. Good Cromwell,
Neglect him not; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.
Crom. O my lord!
Must I then leave you? must I needs forgo
So good, so noble, and so true a master?
Bear witness all that have not hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.
The king shall have my service; but my prayers
For ever and for ever shall be yours.
Car. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries: but thou hast forc'd me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.
Let's dry our eyes: and thus far hear me, Cromwell;
And when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention
Of me more must be heard of, say, I taught thee:
Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour,
Found thee a way, out of his wrack, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.
Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me.
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition.
By that sin fell the angels: how can man then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by it?
Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;

406 Chattels; cf. n. 432 their ruin: i.e. the ruin they cause 434 Lucifer; cf. n. 440 an: if

476 in open: publicly

Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not:
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's. Then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. Serve the king;
And,—prithee, lead me in:
There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny: 'tis the king's. My robe,
And my integrity to heaven is all
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell!
Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.
Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Car. So I have. Farewell
The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell. Exeunt.

ACT FOURTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[A Street in Westminster]
Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

1. Gent. Y' are well met once again.
2. Gent. So are you.
1. Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold
The Lady Anne pass from her coronation?
2. Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter
The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial.
1. Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd sorrow;
This, general joy.
2. Gent. 'Tis well: the citizens,
I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds,
As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward,
In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants, and sights of honour.
1. Gent. Never greater;
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.
2. Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That paper in your hand?
1. Gent. Yes; 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day
By custom of the coronation.
The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high-steward; next, the Duke of Norfolk,
He to be earl marshal: you may read the rest.
2. Gent. I thank you, sir: had I not known those customs,
I should have been beholding to your paper.
But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,
The princess dowager? How goes her business?
1. Gent. That I can tell you too. The Archbishop
Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Ampthill, where the princess lay; to which
She was often cited by them, but appear'd not:
And, to be sort, for not appearance and
The king's late scruple, by the main assent
Of all these learned men was was divorc'd,
And the late marriage made of none effect:
Since which she was remov'd to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now sick.
2. Gent. Alas! good lady!
[Trumpets.]
The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.
Hautboys.

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION

1. A lively flourish of trumpets.
2. Then, two Judges.
3. Lord Chancellor, with purse and mace before him.
4. Choristers, singing. Music.
5. Mayor of London, bearing the mace. Then Garter, in his coat of arms, and on his head he wore a gilt copper crown.
6. Marquess Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronal of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of Esses.
7. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of Esses.
8. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports; under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair, richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.
9. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.
10. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold, without flowers.

Exeunt, first passing over the stage in order and state, and then, a great flourish of trumpets.

2. Gent. A royal train, believe me. These I know;
Who's that that bears the sceptre?
1. Gent. Marquess Dorset:
And that the Earl of Surrey with the rod.
2. Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be
The Duke of Suffolk?
1. Gent. 'Tis the same: high-steward.
2. Gent. And that my Lord of Norfolk?
1. Gent. Yes.
2. Gent. [Looking on the Queen.] Heaven bless thee!
Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.
Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel;
Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
And more and richer, when he strains that lady:
I cannot blame his conscience.
1. Gent. They that bear
The cloth of honour over her, are four barons
Of the Cinque-ports.
2. Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all are near her.
I take it, she that carries up the train

523 Thou . . . martyr; cf. n. 529–531 Cf. n. Scene First; cf. n. 5 last encounter; cf. n. 19 Of those that claim; cf. n. 31 Dunstable; cf. n.

38 Kimbolton; cf. n. S. d. The Order of the Coronation; cf. n. Collars of Esses; cf. n. in her hair: with flowing hair

Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk.
1. Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.
2. Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed;
And sometimes falling ones.
1. Gent. No more of that.

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling?
3. Gent. Among the crowd i' the Abbey; where a finger
Could not be wedg'd in more: I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.
2. Gent. You saw
The ceremony?
3. Gent. That I did.
1. Gent. How was it?
3. Gent. Well worth the seeing.
2. Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.
3. Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream
Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen
To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off
A distance from her; while her Grace sat down
To rest awhile, some half an hour or so,
In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.
Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman
That ever lay by man: which when the people
Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest,
As loud, and to as many tunes. Hats, cloaks,—
Doublets, I think,—flew up; and had their faces
Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy
I never saw before. Great-bellied women,
That had not half a week to go, like rams
In the old time of war, would shake the press,
And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living
Could say, 'This is my wife,' there; all were woven
So strangely in one piece.
2. Gent. But, what follow'd?
3. Gent. At length her Grace rose, and with modest paces
Came to the altar; where she kneel'd, and, saintlike,
Cast her fair eyes to heaven and pray'd devoutly.
Then rose again and bow'd her to the people:
When by the Archbishop of Canterbury
She had all the royal makings of a queen,
As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems
Laid nobly on her: which perform'd, the choir,
With all the choicest music of the kingdom,
Together sung Te Deum. So she parted,
And with the same full state pac'd back again
To York-place, where the feast is held.
1. Gent. Sir,
You must no more call it York-place, that's past;
For since the cardinal fell, that title's lost:
'Tis now the king's, and call'd Whitehall.
3. Gent. I know it;
But 'tis so lately alter'd that the old name
Is fresh about me.

70 rankness: exuberance 76 ff. Cf. n. 82 opposing: exposing 87 shrouds: sail-ropes 110 York-place; cf. n.

2. Gent. What two reverend bishops
Were those that went on each side of the queen?
3. Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner; the one of Winchester,—
Newly preferr'd from the king's secretary,—
The other, London.
2. Gent. He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,
The virtuous Cranmer.
3. Gent. All the land knows that:
However, yet there's no great breach; when it comes,
Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from him.
2. Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?
3. Gent. Thomas Cromwell:
A man in much esteem with the king, and truly
A worthy friend. The king
Has made him master o' the jewel house,
And one already of the privy-council.
2. Gent. He will deserve more.
3. Gent. Yes, without all doubt.
Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which
Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests:
Something I can command. As I walk thither,
I'll tell ye more.
Both. You may command us, sir. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Kimbolton]

Enter Katharine, Dowager, sick: led between Griffith her gentleman-usher and Patience her woman.

Grif. How does your Grace?
Kath. O Griffith! sick to death!
My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,
Willing to leave their burthen. Reach a chair:
So; now, methinks, I feel a little ease.
Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me,
That the great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey,
Was dead?
Grif. Yes, madam; but I think your Grace,
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to 't.
Kath. Prithee, good Griffith, tell me how he died:
If well, he stepp'd before me, happily,
For my example.
Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam:
For after the stout Earl Northumberland
Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,
As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
He could not sit his mule.
Kath. Alas! poor man.
Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester;
Lodg'd in the abbey, where the reverend abbot,
With all his covent, honourably receiv'd him;
To whom he gave these words: 'O father abbot,

120 Stokesly and Gardiner; cf. n. 131 Thomas Cromwell; cf. n. 140 Something I can command: I can order refreshments 7, 8 Cardinal Wolsey, Was dead; cf. n. 11 tell me how he died; cf. n. 12 happily: by good chance 21 roads: stages 23 covent: convent, body of monks

An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye:
Give him a little earth for charity.'
So went to bed, where eagerly his sickness
Pursu'd him still; and three nights after this,
About the hour of eight,—which he himself
Foretold should be his last,—full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.
Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him!
Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him,
And yet with charity. He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one that by suggestion
Tied all the kingdom. Simony was fair-play.
His own opinion was his law; i' the presence
He would say untruth, and be ever double
Both in his words and meaning. He was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful.
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing:
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.
Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness
To hear me speak his good now?
Kath. Yes, good Griffith,
I were malicious else.
Grif. This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour. From his cradle
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one:
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading;
Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not,
But to those men that sought him sweet as summer.
And though he were unsatisfied in getting,—
Which was a sin,—yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely. Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him,
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it;
The other though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little.
And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God.
Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour. Peace be with him!
Patience, be near me still, and set me lower:
I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

Sad and solemn music.

Grif. She is asleep: good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her. Softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision

Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces; branches of bays or palm in their hands. They first congee unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which, the other four make reverend curtsies. Then, the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order, at which,—as it were by inspiration,—she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone,
And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?
Grif. Madam, we are here.
Kath. It is not you I call for:
Saw ye none enter since I slept?
Grif. None, madam.
Kath. No? Saw you not even now a blessed troop
Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promis'd me eternal happiness,
And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall assuredly.
Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams
Possess your fancy.
Kath. Bid the music leave.
They are harsh and heavy to me. Music ceases.
Pat. Do you note
How much her Grace is alter'd on the sudden?
How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks,
And of an earthy cold? Mark her eyes!
Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.
Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An 't like your Grace,—
Kath. You are a saucy fellow:
Deserve we no more reverence?
Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing she will not lose her wonted greatness,
To use so rude behaviour; go to, kneel.
Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon;
My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying

35 So may he rest, etc.: cf. n. 36 speak him: describe him; cf. II.iv.179; III.i.140 38 stomach: pride 39, 40 by suggestion Tied: by trickery restricted the liberties of 40 Simony: the selling of positions in the church 41 i' the presence: before the king 55 This cardinal; cf. n. 57 From his cradle; cf. n. 66 Ipswich, and Oxford; cf. n. 67 did: i.e. founded

S. d. congee: bow changes: movements of the dance 101 shall: shall be worthy 104 music: musicians leave: leave off

A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.
Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: but this fellow
Let me ne'er see again. Exit Messenger.

Enter Lord Capucius.

If my sight fail not,
You should be lord ambassador from the emperor,
My royal nephew, and your name Capucius.
Cap. Madam, the same; your servant.
Kath. O, my lord,
The times and titles now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you knew me. But, I pray you,
What is your pleasure with me?
Cap. Noble lady,
First, mine own service to your Grace; the next,
The king's request that I would visit you,
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends you his princely commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort.
Kath. O, my good lord, that comfort comes too late!
'Tis like a pardon after execution:
That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd me;
But now I am past all comforts here but prayers.
How does his highness?
Cap. Madam, in good health.
Kath. So may he ever do, and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor name
Banish'd the kingdom. Patience, is that letter
I cause'd you write, yet sent away?
Pat. No, madam.
[Giving it to Katharine.]
Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.
Cap. Most willing, madam.
Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness
The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter:
The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!
Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding,—
She is young, and of a noble modest nature,
I hope she will deserve well,—and a little
To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd him,
Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition
Is, that his noble Grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
Of which there is not one, I dare avow,—
And now I should not lie,—but will deserve,
For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him be a noble;
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have 'em.
The last is, for my men: they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw 'em from me;
That they may have their wages duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by.
If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life
And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole contents: and, good my lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed,
Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king
To do me this last right.
Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man!
Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me
In all humility unto his highness:
Say his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world. Tell him, in death I bless'd him,
For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. Farewell,
My lord. Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet. I must to bed;
Call in more women. When I am dead, good wench,
Let me be us'd with honour: strew me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste wife to my grave. Embalm me,
Then lay me forth: although unqueen'd, yet like
A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more. Exeunt, leading Katharine.

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

[London. A Gallery in the Palace]
Enter Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovell.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is 't not?
Boy. It hath struck.
Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights: times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir Thomas!
Whither so late?
Lov. Came you from the king, my lord?
Gar. I did, Sir Thomas; and left him at primero
With the Duke of Suffolk.
Lov. I must to him too,
Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.
Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?
It seems you are in haste: and if there be
No great offence belongs to 't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business. Affairs, that walk—
As they say spirits do—at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature than the business
That seeks dispatch by day.
Lov. My lord, I love you,
And durst commend a secret to your ear
Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour,
They say, in great extremity; and fear'd
She'll with the labour end.
Gar. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may find
Good time, and live: but for the stock, Sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd up now.
Lov. Methinks I could
Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says

125 Capucius; cf. n. 152 model: memorial his young daughter: Mary Tudor 161 both my fortunes: prosperity and adversity

180 fashion: shape Act Fifth; cf. n. 9 primero: a game of cards 16 touch: hint late: i.e. nocturnal 23 fear'd: it is feared

She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does
Deserve our better wishes.
Gar. But, sir, sir,
Hear me, Sir Thomas: y' are a gentleman
Of mine own way. I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take 't of me,
Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves.
Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell,
Beside that of the jewel-house, is made master
O' the rolls, and the king's secretary; further, sir,
Stands in the gap and trade of moe preferments,
With which the time will load him. Th' archbishop
Is the king's hand and tongue; and who dare speak
One syllable against him?
Gar. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him: and indeed this day,
—Sir, I may tell it you,—I think I have Incens'd the lords o' the council that he is—
For so I know he is, they know he is—
A most arch heretic, a pestilence
That does infect the land: with which they mov'd
Have broken with the king, who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint,—of his great grace
And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons laid before him,—hath commanded
To-morrow morning to the council-board
He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long: good-night, Sir Thomas!
Lov. Many good-nights, my lord. I rest your servant.
Exeunt Gardiner and Page.

Enter King and Suffolk.

King. Charles, I will play no more to-night;
My mind's not on 't; you are too hard for me.
Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.
King. But little, Charles;
Nor shall not when my fancy's on my play.
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?
Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who return'd her thanks
In the great'st humbleness, and desir'd your highness
Most heartily to pray for her.
King. What sayst thou? Ha?
To pray for her? what, is she crying out?
Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made
Almost each pang a death.
King. Alas! good lady.
Suf. God safely quit her of her burthen, and
With gentle travail, to the gladding of
Your highness with an heir!
King. 'Tis midnight, Charles;
Prithee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
Th' estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone;
For I must think of that which company
Would not be friendly to.
Suf. I wish your highness
A quiet night, and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.
King. Charles, good-night.
Exit Suffolk.

Enter Sir Anthony Denny.

Well, sir, what follows?
Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,
As you commanded me.
King. Ha! Canterbury?
Den. Ay, my good lord.
King. 'Tis true: where is he, Denny?
Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.
King. Bring him to us.
[Exit Denny.]
Lov. [Aside.] This is about that which the bishop spake:
I am happily come hither.

Enter Cranmer and Denny.

King. Avoid the gallery.
Lovell seems to stay.
Ha! I have said. Begone.
What!— Exeunt Lovell and Denny.
Cran. I am fearful. Wherefore frowns he thus?
'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well.
King. How now, my lord! You do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.
Cran. [Kneeling.] It is my duty
T' attend your highness' pleasure.
King. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury.
Come, you and I must walk a turn together:
I have news to tell you. Come, come, give me your hand.
Ah! my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows.
I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord,
Grievous complaints of you; which, being consider'd,
Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us; where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,
But that, till further trial in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower: you, a brother of us,
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.
Cran. [Kneeling.] I humbly thank your highness;
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff
And corn shall fly asunder; for I know
There's none stands under more calumnious tongues
Than I myself, poor man.

35 way: way of thinking 42 that: the mastership; cf. IV.i.134 is: he is 44 gap and trade: the opening and track by which preferments come 52 Incens'd: impressed upon 55 with which they mov'd: moved by which they 56 broken with: communicated with 61 convented: summoned

86 estate: condition 102 happily: fortunately Avoid: go out from 127 you ... us: since you are of nearly royal rank (as head of the church)

King. Stand up, good Canterbury:
Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted
In us, thy friend. Give me thy hand, stand up:
Prithee, let's walk. Now, by my holidame,
What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd
You would have given me your petition, that
I should have ta'en some pains to bring together
Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard you,
Without indurance, further.
Cran. Most dread liege,
The good I stand on is my truth and honesty:
If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
Will triumph o'er my person, which I weigh not,
Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.
King. Know you not
How your state stands i' the world, with the whole world?
Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices
Must bear the same proportion; and not ever
The justice and the truth o' the question carries
The due o' the verdict with it. At what ease
Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt
To swear against you? Such things have been done.
You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice
Of as great size. Ween you of better luck,
I mean in perjur'd witness, than your Master,
Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd
Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to;
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction.
Cran. God and your majesty
Protect mine innocence! or I fall into
The trap is laid for me!
King. Be of good cheer;
They shall no more prevail than we give way to.
Keep comfort to you; and this morning see
You do appear before them. If they shall chance,
In charging you with matters, to commit you,
The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
Th' occasion shall instruct you. If entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them. Look! the good man weeps:
He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest mother!
I swear he is true-hearted; and a soul
None better in my kingdom. Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. Exit Cranmer.
He has strangled
His language in his tears.

Enter Old Lady.

Gent. within. Come back: what mean you?
Lady. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness manners. Now, good angels
Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!
King. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.
Lady. Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy: the God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her! 'Tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen
Desires your visitation, and to be
Acquainted with this stranger: 'tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.
King. Lovell!

[Enter Lovell.]

Lov. Sir!
King. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the queen.
Exit King.
Lady. An hundred marks! By this light, I'll ha' more.
An ordinary groom is for such payment.
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for this, the girl was like to him?
I will have more, or else unsay't; and now,
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue.
Exit Lady [with Lovell].

Scene Second

[The Lobby before the Council-Chamber]
Enter Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman,
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast? what means this? Ho!
Who waits there?

Enter Keeper.

Sure, you know me?
Keep. Yes, my lord;
But yet I cannot help you.
Cran. Why?
Keep. Your Grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor Butts.

Cran. So.
Butts. [Aside.] This is a piece of malice. I am glad
I came this way so happily. The king
Shall understand it presently.
Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butts,
The king's physician. As he pass'd along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me.
Pray heaven he sound not my disgrace! For certain,
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,—
God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice,—
To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me
Wait else at door, a fellow-counsellor

139 holidame: halidom, a customary oath 144 indurance: imprisonment 146 The good I stand on: my defense 148 my person . . . weigh not: my body which I do not value 149 Being: if it be nothing: not at all 154 practices: plots 155 bear . . . proportion: likewise be many and not small ever: in every case 161 Ween: dream 169 is: which is

17 sound: penetrate, discover

'Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the King and Butts at a window above.

Butts. I'll show your Grace the strangest sight,—
King. What's that, Butts?
Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day.
King. Body o' me, where is it?
Butts. There, my lord:
The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury,
Who holds his state at door 'mongst pursuivants,
Pages, and footboys
King. Ha! 'Tis he, indeed.
Is this the honour they do one another?
'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought
They had parted so much honesty among 'em,—
At least, good manners,—as not thus to suffer
A man of his place, and so near our favour,
To dance attendance on their lordship's pleasures,
And at the door too, like a post with packets.
By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery:
Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close;
We shall hear more anon. [Exeunt above.]

Scene Third

[The Council-Chamber]

A council-table brought in with chairs and stoves, and placed under the state. Enter Lord Chancellor, places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for Canterbury's seat; Duke of Suffolk, Duke of Norfolk, Surrey, Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner seat themselves in order on each side; Cromwell at lower end as Secretary.

Chan. Speak to the business, Master Secretary:
Why are we met in council?
Crom. Please your honours,
The chief cause concerns his Grace of Canterbury.
Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?
Crom. Yes.
Nor. Who waits there?
Keep. Without, my noble lords?
Gar. Yes.
Keep. My lord archbishop;
And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.
Chan. Let him come in.
Keep. Your Grace may enter now.
Cranmer approaches the council-table.
Chan. My good lord archbishop, I'm very sorry
To sit here at this present and behold
That chair stand empty: but we all are men,
In our own natures frail, and capable
Of our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,
Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a little:
Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling
The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains,—
For so we are inform'd,—with new opinions,
Divers and dangerous, which are heresies,
And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.
Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too,
My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses
Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle,
But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur 'em,
Till they obey the manage. If we suffer—
Out of our easiness and childish pity
To one man's honour—this contagious sickness,
Farewell all physic: and what follows then?
Commotions, uproars, with a general taint
Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours,
The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
Yet freshly pitied in our memories.
Cran. My good lords, hitherto in all the progress
Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,
And with no little study, that my teaching
And the strong course of my authority
Might go one way, and safely; and the end
Was ever, to do well: nor is there living,—
I speak it with a single heart, my lords,—
A man that more detests, more stirs against,
Both in his private conscience and his place,
Defacers of a public peace, than I do.
Pray heaven the king may never find a heart
With less allegiance in it! Men that make
Envy and crooked malice nourishment
Dare bit the best. I do beseech your lordships
That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
And freely urge against me.
Suf. Nay, my lord,
That cannot be: you are a counsellor,
And by that virtue no man dare accuse you.
Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,
We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' pleasure,
And our consent, for better trial of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower;
Where, being but a private man again,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More than, I fear, you are provided for.
Cran. Ah, my good Lord of Winchester, I thank you!
You are always my good friend: if your will pass,
I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
You are so merciful. I see your end;
'Tis my undoing. Love and meekness, lord,
Become a churchman better than ambition:
Win straying souls with modesty again,
Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt as you do conscience
In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
But reverence to your calling makes me modest.
Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary;
That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers,

S. d. at a window above: cf. n. 30 pursuivants: minor officers attendant upon heralds 35 parted: divided 39 post with packets: a messenger with letters 17, 18 capable . . . flesh: susceptible of being influenced by our fleshly nature

25 not: if not 30 manage: rider's control 35–37 as, of late days, etc.: cf. n. 74 Lay: though you lay 77 modest: moderate 78 sectary: a member of a religious sect, therefore hostile to the Church 79 discovers: reveals

To men that understand you, words and weakness.
Crom. My Lord of Winchester, y' are a little,
By your good favour, too sharp; men so noble,
However faulty, yet should find respect
For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty
To load a falling man.
Gar. Good Master Secretary,
I cry your honour mercy; you may worst
Of all this table say so.
Crom. Why, my lord?
Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer
Of this new sect? ye are not sound.
Crom. Not sound?
Gar. Not sound, I say.
Crom. Would you were half so honest!
Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.
Gar. I shall remember this bold language.
Crom. Do.
Remember your bold life too.
Chan. This is too much;
Forbear, for shame, my lords.
Gar. I have done.
Crom. And I.
Chan. Then thus for you, my lord: it stands agreed,
I take it, by all voices, that forthwith
You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner;
There to remain till the king's further pleasure
Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords?
All. We are.
Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?
Gar. What other
Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome.
Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Enter the Guard.

Cran. For me?
Must I go like a traitor thither?
Gar. Receive him,
And see him safe i' the Tower.
Cran. Stay, good my lords;
I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords;
By virtue of that ring I take my cause
Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it
To a most noble judge, the king my master.
Chan. This is the king's ring.
Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit?
Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven! I told ye all,
When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,
'Twould fall upon ourselves.
Nor. Do you think my lords,
The king will suffer but the little finger
Of this man to be vex'd?
Chan. 'Tis now too certain:
How much more is his life in value with him?
Would I were fairly out on 't.
Crom. My mind gave me,
In seeking tales and informations
Against this man—whose honesty the devil
And his disciples only envy at—
Ye blew the fire that burns ye: now have at ye!

Enter King, frowning on them: takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven
In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince,
Not only good and wise, but most religious:
One that in all obedience makes the Church
The chief aim of his honour; and to strengthen
That holy duty, out of dear respect,
His royal self in judgment comes to hear
The cause betwixt her and this great offender.
King. You were ever good at sudden commendations,
Bishop of Winchester; but know, I come not
To hear such flattery now, and in my presence
They are too thin and base to hide offences.
To me you cannot reach; you play the spaniel,
And think with wagging of your tongue to win me;
But, whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure
Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody.
[To Cranmer.] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest
He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee.
By all that's holy, he had better starve
Than but once think his place becomes thee not.
Sur. May it please your Grace,—
King. No, sir, it does not please me.
I had thought I had had men of some understanding
And wisdom of my council; but I find none.
Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,
This good man—few of you deserve that title,—
This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy
At chamber-door? and one as great as you are?
Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission
Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye
Power as he was a counsellor to try him,
Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see,
More out of malice than integrity,
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;
Which ye shall never have while I live.
Chan. Thus far,
My most dread sovereign, may it like your Grace
To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd
Concerning his imprisonment was rather—
If there be faith in men—meant for his trial
And fair purgation to the world, than malice,—
I'm sure, in me.
King. Well, well, my lords, respect him;
Take him, and use him well; he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him: if a prince
May be beholding to a subject, I
Am, for his love and service, so to him.
Make me no more ado, but all embrace him:
Be friends, for shame, my lords! My Lord of Canterbury,
I have a suit which you must not deny me;
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism:
You must be godfather, and answer for her.
Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory

80 words and weakness: weak verbosity 99 This is too much; cf. n. 125 right: genuine 134 My mind gave me: I suspected 159 his place; cf. n. 163 of: as members of 173 mean: opportunity

In such an honour: how may I deserve it,
That am a poor and humble subject to you?
King. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons.
You shall have two noble partners with you: the old Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady Marquess Dorset. Will these please you?
Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge you,
Embrace and love this man.
Gar. With a true heart
And brother-love I do it.
Cran. And let heaven
Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.
King. Good man! those joyful tears show thy true heart.
The common voice, I see, is verified
Of thee, which say thus: 'Do my Lord of Canterbury
A shrewd turn, and he's your friend for ever.'
Come, lords, we trifle time away: I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain;
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[The Palace-Yard]
Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals. Do you take the court for Parish-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.
[Voice] Within. Good Master Porter, I belong to the larder.
Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, ye rogue! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to 'em. I'll scratch your heads: you must be seeing christenings! Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?
Man. Pray, sir, be patient: 'tis as much impossible—
Unless we sweep 'em from the doors with cannons—
To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be.
We may as well push against Paul's as stir 'em.
Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?
Man. Alas, I know not; how gets the tide in?
As much as one sound cudgel of four foot—
You see the poor remainder—could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.
Port. You did nothing, sir.
Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,
To mow 'em down before me; but if I spar'd any
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker,
Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again;
And that I would not for a cow, God save her!
Within. Do you hear, Master Porter?
Port. I shall be with you presently, good Master puppy.
Keep the door close, sirrah.
Man. What would you have me do?
Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand: here will be father, godfather, and all together.
Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog days now reign in's nose: all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance. That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me: he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pinked porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I missed the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, 'Clubs!' when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope o' the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place; at length they came to the broomstaff to me; I defied 'em still; when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work. The devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely.
Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the Limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beadles, that is to come.

Enter Lord Chamberlain.

L. Ch. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!
They grow still too, from all parts they are coming,
As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters,
These lazy knaves? Y' have made a fine hand, fellows:
There's a trim rabble let in. Are all these
Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies,
When they pass back from the christening.
Port. An 't please your honour,
We are but men; and what so many may do,
Not being torn a-pieces, we have done:
An army cannot rule 'em.
L. Ch. As I live,
If the king blame me for 't, I'll lay ye all
By th' heels, and suddenly; and on your heads
Clap round fines for neglect: y' are lazy knaves;
And here ye lie baiting of bombards, when
Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound;
They're come already from the christening.
Go, break among the press, and find a way out
To let the troop pass fairly, or I'll find
A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months.
Port. Make way there for the princess.

195 spare your spoons: save christening presents 203 confirmation: assurance 207 shrewd: malicious (i.e. he returns good for evil) 2 Parish-garden; cf. n. 4 larder: the pantry (therefore he had the right to enter) 13 May-day morning; cf. n. 14 Paul's: St. Paul's Cathedral 21 Cf. n. 25 chine: roast of beef 26 for a cow; cf. n. 32 Moorfields; cf. n. 33 strange Indian; cf. n. 37 The spoons; cf. n. 38 brazier: worker in brass 40 under the line: under the equator (where it is hot) 41 fire-drake: fiery dragon (the man with the red nose) 43 mortar-piece: small cannon 45 pinked porringer: a bowl-shaped hat slashed with holes 47 Clubs; cf. n. 49 Strand: street in London 53 work: outwork 56, 57 Tribulation . . . Limehouse; cf. n. 58 Limbo Patrum: i.e. jail 60 running banquet; cf. n. 64 fine hand: pretty business 70, 71 what . . . a-pieces: what our number may do without being torn to pieces 76 round: heavy 77 baiting of bombards: drinking deep 82 Marshalsea: a prison

Man. You great fellow,
Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.
Port. You i' the camlet, get up o' the rail:
I'll pick you o'er the pales else. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

[The Palace]

Enter trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolk, with his marshal's staff, Duke of Suffolk, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening gifts: then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, godmother, bearing the child, richly habited in a mantle, &c., train borne by a Lady: then follows the Marchioness Dorset, the other godmother, and ladies. The troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty Princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter King and Guard.

Cran. [Kneeling.] And to your royal Grace, and the good queen,
My noble partners and myself thus pray:
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!
King. Thank you, good lord archbishop:
What is her name?
Cran. Elizabeth.
King. Stand up, lord.
[The King kisses the Child.]
With this kiss take my blessing; God protect thee!
Into whose hand I give thy life.
Cran. Amen.
King. My noble gossips, y' have been too prodigal:
I thank ye heartily: so shall this lady
When she has so much English.
Cran. Let me speak, sir,
For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter
Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em truth.
This royal infant,—heaven still move about her!—
Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness. She shall be—
But few now living can behold that goodness—
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was never
More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue
Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces,
That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her; truth shall nurse her;
Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her;
She shall be lov'd and fear'd. Her own shall bless her;
Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn,
And hang their heads with sorrow. Good grows with her.
In her days every man shall eat in safety
Under his own vine what he plants; and sing
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours.
God shall be truly known; and those about her
From her shall read the perfect ways of honour,
And by those claim their greatness, not by blood.
Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but as when
The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phœnix,
Her ashes new-create another heir
As great in admiration as herself,
So shall she leave her blessedness to one,—
When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness,—
Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour,
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror,
That were the servants to this chosen infant,
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him:
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
His honour and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations. He shall flourish,
And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches
To all the plains about him. Our children's children
Shall see this, and bless heaven.
King. Thou speakest wonders.
Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England,
An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Would I had known no more! but she must die,
She must, the saints must have her; yet a virgin,
A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.
King. O lord archbishop!
Thou hast made me now a man: never, before
This happy child, did I get anything.
This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me,
That when I am in heaven, I shall desire
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.
I thank ye all. To you, my good Lord Mayor,
And your good brethren, I am much beholding;
I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way, lords:
Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye;
She will be sick else. This day, no man think
H'as business at his house; for all shall stay:
This little one shall make it holiday. Exeunt.

86 i' the camlet: in the woolen suit 87 pick: pitch pales: palisade Scene Fifth: cf. n. S. d. Garter: the chief herald 6 My noble partners: the other sponsors 17 prodigal: generous 29 Saba: the Queen of Sheba 48 great in admiration: admirable 49 to one: James I, the successor of Elizabeth 7 that: so that

The Epilogue

'Tis ten to one, this play can never please
All that are here. Some come to take their ease
And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
We've frightened with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear
They'll say 'tis naught: others, to hear the city
Abus'd extremely, and to cry, 'That's witty!'
Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,
All the expected good we're like to hear

For this play at this time is only in
The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we show'd 'em: if they smile,
And say 'twill do, I know within a while
All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

FINIS

Notes

Dramatis Personæ, omitted in the Folio, were first supplied by Rowe in 1709.

The Prologue. For general discussion of authorship, see Authorship of the Play. It may be well, however, to state here that the question of the authorship of many parts of this play is undecided. For 150 years Shakespeare's authorship of the Prologue was denied. In the eighteenth century Dr. Samuel Johnson attributed it to Fletcher; in the nineteenth, it was given to Ben Johnson, and to Chapman; in the twentieth, to Massinger. Besides the Induction to 2 Henry IV there are only three other prologues in Shakespeare's works, those to Troilus and Cressida, Romeo and Juliet and Henry V. In each case the prologue serves to explain the play. Here it is actually misleading, since the last lines of the Prologue promise as a tragedy and the Fifth Act is far from tragic. And the tone of this Prologue is curiously apologetic.

Pro. 9. May here find truth too. The play of Henry VIII in 1613 had, as an alternative title, All is True. (See quotation from Sir Henry Wotton, The History of the Play.) Some critics find here and in

'To rank our chosen truth with such a snow' (l. 18) and
'To make that only true we now intend' (l. 21)

allusions to that title. If these lines contain allusions to that title, the question of the date is settled.

Pro. 12. shilling. The price of admission to the best seats in the theatre. It must be remembered, however, that the purchasing power of a shilling was over eight times that at present.

Pro. 16. In a long motley coat. The customary costume of the stage fool.

Pro. 19. As fool and fight is. Dr. Johnson and later critics have regarded this gratuitous attack upon the stage fool and the stage battle as decisive evidence of the non-Shakespearean authorship of the Prologue, because both fools and fights are very often used by Shakespeare. It is possible that the lines, 14-16, may be an attack upon Samuel Rowley's When you see me you know me. (See History of the Play.)

Pro. 22. Will leave us. Awkward construction. The whole line, 21, is in apposition with opinion. The passage, 17-22, may then be paraphrased: gentle hearers, you must understand that to rank our play with a foolish comedy is, besides forfeiting our intelligence and our reputation for presenting historical truth, to lose us our friends.

Pro. 25, 26. think ye see. see—story are bad rimes. Theobald emends think before ye—story; Heath, think ye see—history. Actually, these rimes indicate merely that the Prologue was written hastily, not that there was an error in the printing.

I.i. S.d. London. An Antechamber in the Palace. The Folio, here as elsewhere, omits any indication of place. Unlike our modern stage with its elaborate sets of scenery, the Shakespearean stage was comparatively bare, with an apron projecting out into the pit. In all probability the authors had no particular place here in mind. If a particular palace must be mentioned, it was presumably that at Greenwich, to which the King, according to Holinshed, returned after the Field of the Cloth of Gold, June, 1520. It could not have been Bridewell, as has been suggested, because that palace was not built until two years later. The question is of no importance.

I.i. S.d. Enter the Duke of Norfolk. Thomas Howard (1448-1524), was created Duke of Norfolk in 1514 in recognition of his having won the Battle of Flodden Field. His son, the father of the poet Surrey, married Elizabeth, the eldest daughter of the Duke of Buckingham in 1513. Thus there was a close tie between the Duke of Norfolk and the Duck of Buckingham, in spite of which it was Norfolk who presided at Buckingham's trial and received as recompense part of the latter's sequestered estates. The authors seem unaware of this connection between the two noblemen: Norfolk's part in Buckingham's trial is ignored, and they seem unconscious of the difference of thirty-five years between the two speakers. Norfolk is an old man, seventy-seven, and as he died in 1524 his appearance in III.ii. is an anachronism. Historically it was Buckingham, not Norfolk, that accompanied Henry to France.

I.i. S.d. Duke of Buckingham. Edward Stafford (1478-1521), third Duke of Buckingham. The authors follow Holinshed in attributing Buckingham's fall to the hatred of Wolsey; there is slight foundation for this idea.

I.i. S.d. Lord Abergavenny. George Neville (1471-1535) was a son-in-law of the Duke of Buckingham. He was imprisoned in 1521 for complicity in Buckingham's treason, but was pardoned in March, 1522.

I.i.8. Those suns of glory. Francis I, King of Franc, and Henry VIII, King of England.

I.i.9. vale of Andren. Altered in the Second Folio to Vale of Arde, but Andren is copied from Holinshed. It is the valley separating Guynes, a town in Picardy which then belonged to the English, from Arde (or Ardres), a town also in Picardy belonging to the French. It was the locality selected for the interview between the two kings, from the seventh to the fourteenth of June, 1520, called from the magnificence of the appointments the 'Field of the Cloth of Gold.' The interview had little political significance. The time of this scene is approximately the fall of 1520.

I.i.16. All the whole time. Incorrect. Buckingham was present at the Field of the Cloth of Gold; it was Norfolk that remained behind in England.

I.i.23. its. Both the First and Second Folios read it's. The neuter possessive pronoun its was at this time slowly replacing the older neuter pronoun his, as used, for example, in l. 52 of this scene. This is the only case in Shakespeare's works where its is used absolutely.

I.i.43. Bevis. The hero of the old tale Bevis of Hamptoun, a person that performs miraculous feats.

I.i.48–54. All was royal. The assignment of speeches here is that of the Folio. Since Theobald, every editor has accepted his change which gives All was royal . . . function to Norfolk and As you guess to Buckingham. The Folio reading is restored on the general principle that unnecessary tampering with the text as given is unjustifiable. In addition, there is a gain in the original reading. Buckingham's emphasis on royal gives the actor his first opportunity to show the character's love of rank. Buckingham's speech is, then, one of acquiescence; the performance has been carried out as it should have been. On the other hand, Norfolk, who knows of Buckingham's hatred to Wolsey, to this expressed approval replies maliciously 'As you would suppose when you consider you planned it.' The Folio reading consequently makes a more dramatic scene.

I.i.73. Out of his self-drawing web. The Folio here reads:

Out of his self-drawing web. O gives us note.

Capell's emendation is here followed. A' gives us note means that he himself tells us that, spider-like, he has created his own greatness.

I.i.88–92. for the most part such, etc. This speech is marked by the incoherence of anger. Such is the object of the verb papers; letter is the subject of the verb must fetch; such is the antecedent of him. The meaning is: generally he lists (papers) such persons as he both wishes to tax heavily and at the same time give little honor to, and his own handwriting (letter) cheats them into incurring this expense, now that the Board of the Council is out of the way. By putting this passage into blank verse the authors cannot be said to have improved upon the clarity of Holinshed:

'The peeres of the realme receiuing letters to prepare themselues to attend the king in this iournie, and no necessarie cause expressed, why nor wherefore; seemed to grudge, that such a costlie iournie should be taken in hand to their importunate charges and expenses, without consent of the whole boord of the councell.' Holinshed (1587), p. 855.

I.i.100. minister communication. These speeches of Buckingham seem to be derived from the passage from Holinshed continuing that quoted in the preceding note:

'But namelie the duke of Buckingham, being a man of a loftie courage, but not most liberall, sore repined that he should be at so great charges for his furniture foorth at this time, saieng; that he knew not for what cause so much monie should be spent about the sight of a vaine talke to be had, and communication to be ministred of things of no importance. Wherefore he sticked not to saie, that it was an intollerable matter to obeie such a vile and importunate person.'

I.i.106. hideous storm. Holinshed (1587), p. 860: 'On Mondaie, the eighteenth of June, was such an hideous storme of wind and weather, that manie coniectured it did prognosticate trouble and hatred shortlie after to follow between princes.'

I.i.112. For France hath flaw'd the league. Holinshed (1587), p. 872:

'Many complaints were made by the merchants to the king and his councell of the Frenchmen, which spoiled them by sea of their goods. . . . The sixt of March, the French king commanded all Englishmens goods being in Burdeaux to be attached, and put under arrest. . . . The king, understanding how his subiects were handled at Burdeaux by the French kings commandement, in breach of the league, the French ambassadour was called before the councell. . . .' As this was March, 1522, and Buckingham was executed on Friday, May 17, 1521, the authors of the play have muddled their dates.

I.i.115. Th' ambassador is silenc'd. Holinshed (1587), p. 873:

'The ambassadour in words so well as he could excused his master, but in the end hee was commanded to keepe his house.'

I.i.137. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor. Holinshed (1587), p. 862:

'. . . The cardinall boiling in hatred against the duke of Buckingham, and thirsting for his bloud, deuised to make Charles Kneuet, that had beene the dukes surueior, and put from him (as ye haue heard) an instrument to bring the duke to destruction.'

Holinshed borrowed this explanation of Buckingham's fall from Polydore Vergil, a personal enemy of Wolsey. Modern investigation has shown that Wolsey's hatred was not the chief cause of the tragedy.

I.i.143. This butcher's cur. Wolsey's father sold meat among other things. His will shows him to have been a successful retail grocer and butcher, and the Ipswich town records prove that he was not over-scrupulous. Wolsey was often taunted with his lowly origin.

'How be it the primordyall
Of his wretched originall,
And his base progeny,
And his gresy genealogy,
He came of the sank royall (royal blood),
That was the cast out of a bochers stall.'

Skelton's Why Come Ye not to Court.

I.i.165. Ipswich. Ipswich was Wolsey's birthplace.

I.i.172. count-cardinal. The title is hyphenated because a secular title is joined to an ecclesiastical one. Wolsey was both Archbishop of York and Count of Hexamshire.

I.i.207. Charles the emperor. Charles V, Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire and King of Spain. His mother, Joanna, was a sister of Katharine of Aragon, wife of Henry VIII. He landed at Dover, May 26, 1520. The real and pretended motives for this visit are taken form Holinshed.

I.i.214. He privily. He was omitted in the First Folio, but supplied in the Second.

I.i. S.d. Enter Brandon. A Sir Thomas Brandon is mentioned by Holinshed as Master of the King's Horse. Yet, according to Holinshed, the arrest was made by Sir Henry Marny, Captain of the King's Guard. There is no dramatic reason for this change of persons; it merely shows that the dramatists worked up the material for the play rapidly.

I.i.234. Hereford. The Folio misprints Hertford.

I.i.240–242. I am sorry, etc. Two coördinate clauses. I am sorry to see that you are taken prisoner and to be an eye-witness to the event.

I.i.248. Lord Abergavenny. The Folio spells the name Aburgany, a spelling that indicates the pronunciation. The fact of the arrest is taken from Holinshed, 'and so likewise was lord Montacute, and both led to the Tower.'

I.i.258. John de la Car. Taken from Holinshed, maister John de la Car alias de la Court.' John Delacourt acted as the intermediary between the Duke and Nicholas Hopkins, the Carthusian monk. Cf. n. on I.i.263.

I.i.259. One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor. Both Folios here read 'councellour.' This was corrected by Theobald from Holinshed. But there was a double error, since the name of the Duke's chancellor given by Holinshed is Gilbert Perke. Apparently 'Peck' is a misprint for Perk. Really the chancellor was Robert Gilbert. This mistake probably arose from the fact that in one of the state papers he is called 'Robert Gilbert clerk, then his chancellor.' Hall mistook 'clerk' for a name, and misprinted it Perke. Holinshed copied Hall, and the dramatists followed Holinshed. But a few paragraphs farther on. Holinshed gives both the name and title correctly: 'the said duke had sent his chancellour Robert Gilbert chapleine.' This is another indication that the dramatists had not read Holinshed carefully.

I.i.263. Nicholas Hopkins. The Folios read Michaell. Theobald corrected this to Nicholas, following Holinshed. Hopkins, a monk of the Charterhouse at Henton, was a religious enthusiast, with gift of prophecy. Unintentionally he brought the Duke into danger and died broken-hearted.

I.i.268. instant. These lines, 267–269, develop an elaborate meteorological figure. This very instant, eclipsing the clear sun of my prosperity, throws a cloud upon my figure and makes me only the shadow of what I was.

I.i.269. My lord. The Folio, which reads lords, is obviously incorrect, because, as Abergavenny is arrested with him and Brandon accompanies him, there is only one person, Norfolk, left on the stage.

I.ii. S.d. The Council Chamber. These locations of the scenes are later additions. On the Elizabethan stage there was no front curtain and ordinarily no intermission. As Buckingham and Abergavenny are led off at one side, with Norfolk following, trumpets are heard and the King enters from the other side. Sir Thomas Lovell was the Constable of the Tower. The scene follows the long account of the charges against Buckingham as given in Holinshed, with the important exception that the petition of Katharine and her attack upon Wolsey are the creation of the dramatists.

I.ii. S.d. Suffolk. Charles Brandon, created Duke of Suffolk in 1514, married Mary Tudor, Henry's sister, the dowager Queen of France.

I.ii. S.d. King riseth from his state. The 'state' was a raised throne with a canopy. This had been brought on by stage hands after the end of the first scene.

I.ii.22. there have been commissions. This account is taken from Holinshed (1587), p. 891. But the chronology is confused. The commissions were sent in March, 1525, four years after Buckingham's death. But for this there is the dramatic reason that antedating these events enables Katharine to plead both for the people and for Buckingham, and by so doing to intensify Wolsey's dislike of her.

I.ii.142. Stand forth. J. S. Brewer comments on this scene as follows:

'It will be remembered that in Shakespeare's play the Duke is declared guilty by the King at a meeting of the Privy Council, even before his regular trial had taken place;—a process altogether informal. In the Council Chamber in which Queen Katharine and Wolsey are present, the King is represented as conducting the examination of the Duke's surveyor, Charles Knyvet, in person. The Duke has no one there to defend him; the witnesses are not subjected to cross-examination, nor is any attempt made to ascertain the accuracy of their charges, or to test their honesty and good faith by the methods now adopted in similar cases. The Duke's guilt is assumed upon their unsupported assertions. In this travesty of justice, the Queen is the only person who appears to retain any sense of what is due to reason and equity; but she is too feeble an advocate, too much bewildered by the sophistry which she feels, but is unable to unravel, to render the accused any effectual help. Besides, when kings sit in council, who shall contradict them? When their minds are already made up, "God mend all," is the natural and sole reflection which presents itself to the thoughts of inferiors. Strange as this proceeding may appear, it is not due merely to the poet's imagination. It presents us with a general likeness of State prosecutions in the Tudor times. The presumption that men are innocent until they are legally proved to be guilty, the facilities granted to the accused for substantiating his innocence by retaining the ablest advocate, the methods for sifting evidence now in use, had no existence then. In crimes against the sovereign, real or supposed, men were presumed to be guilty until they proved themselves to be innocent, and that proof was involved in endless difficulties. What advocate or what witness would have ventured to brave the displeasure of a Tudor king, by appearing in defense of a criminal, on whose guilt the King had pronounced already? With the exception of making Wolsey present at the examination of the Duke's servants and surveyor, Shakespeare has strictly adhered to facts in this preliminary examination of the Duke's servants.'

(J. S. Brewer, The Reign of Henry VIII, I. 383.)

I.ii.165. Henton. This, the Folio reading, was altered by Theobald to 'Hopkins.' But as he was often called Henton from the monastery to which he belonged, 'there is no need to amend the text.' (Gollancz.) Cf. I.i.263 and note.

I.ii.171–191. These twenty lines are merely Holinshed (1587), p. 864, in blank verse.

I.ii.184. confession's seal. Theobald's emendation of the Folio's reading Commissions seal. It comes from Holinshed, 'under the seal of confession.'

I.ii.190. To gain. The word gain was added in the Fourth Folio to complete the meter.

I.ii.193. You were the duke's surveyor. The accusation against Knyvet is taken from Holinshed.

I.ii.200–210. This speech is versified Holinshed.

I.ii.203. for him. Capell's emendation for the for this of the Folio.

I.ii.217. Bulmer. The Folio printer transposed the letters, so that the name reads Blumer.

I.ii.245. by day and night. An exclamation. Cf. Hamlet, I.v.182, 'O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!'

I.iii. The third scene, which serves only as a prelude to the fourth, is typical of Fletcher's style. It has been explained by some commentators as being an attack upon the courtiers of James I. Although there is no dramatic reason for its existence, it is an expansion of one paragraph of Holinshed (1587), p. 850, and of another on p. 852. Owing to the fact that the dramatists skipped back and forth in versifying the passages from Holinshed, the chronology is hopeless. This scene was in 1519. At this time the Lord Chamberlain was Charles Somerset, Earl of Worcester, and Sir William Sands (or Sandys) had not been raised to the nobility.

I.iii.14,15. spavin Or springhalt. Verplanck's emendation for the Folio,

. . . the Spauen
A Spring-halt . . .

because the two diseases are different, although each causes lameness in a horse.

I.iii.32. Of fool and feather. Alluding to the long feathers worn in the hats.

I.iii.34. as fights and fireworks. There had been jousting at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, and the interview had ended with a display of fireworks.

I.iii.37. tall stockings. The extreme of the fashion was very short puffed trousers and long stockings, reaching above the knee.

I.iii.79. My barge stays. Before the Victoria Embankment was built, the palaces along the river front had steps leading down to the river, because the ordinary means of travel was by boat.

I.iv. This scene, also by Fletcher, is a dramatization of the passage from Holinshed (1587), pp. 921 ff. But Holinshed's Chronicle is itself a compilation from a number of previous works. this particular passage is an almost verbatim reprint from George Cavendish's Life of Cardinal Wolsey. According to Hall, the entertainment took place January 3, 1527. Consequently chronological order in the play is incorrect in placing it before Buckingham's death. This error arose from the fact that Holinshed, after he had finished a year-by-year account of Wolsey's career, summarized his character, drawing from Cavendish. Consequently in this part of Holinshed no dates are given to the events described. This error in dating causes another, namely, that in 1527 the Lord Chamberlain and Lord Sandys were not different persons, as Sandys had become Lord Chamberlain the year before. Sir. Henry Guilford was Master of Horse.

York Place, then the residence of Wolsey, later became Whitehall, the royal palace. Cf. IV.i.112–114.

I.iv. S.d. Chambers discharged. This appears to have been the occasion of the conflagration which destroyed the Globe Theatre. See History of the Play.

I.iv. 94. The fairest hand. Anne Boleyn's presence at this entertainment is an invention of the dramatists. There is no indication in Holinshed that she was there.

I.iv.124. And not to kiss you. Kissing before the dance was the custom. If he had not kissed her, he would have been 'unmannerly.'

II.i. This scene (by Fletcher), while scarcely advancing the action of the drama, is yet finely effective, taken by itself. It is a close dramatization from Holinshed (1587), p. 865, even to the extent of keeping many of the original phrases.

II.i.25. To have brought. The first three Folios read To him brought; the correction was made in the Fourth.

II.i.55, 56. Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too, Lest he should help his father. Thomas Howard, Earl of Surrey and in 1524 Duke of Norfolk, had married Elizabeth Stafford, the eldest daughter of the Duke of Buckingham.

II.i.68. The mirror of all courtesy. 'He is tearmed in the books of the law in the said thirteenth yeare of Henrie the eight (where his arreignement is liberallie set downe) to be the floure and mirror of all courtesie.' Holinshed (1587), p. 870.

II.i. S.d. the axe with the edge towards him. This indicated that the prisoner had been condemned.

II.i. S.d. Sir William Sandys. The same character that has figured in Act I as Lord Sandys, only here his title is correctly given. Theobald corrected the Folio, which reads Walter.

II.i.84. evils. Some commentators have wished to take evils in this passage and in Measure for Measure, II.ii.209, in the Elizabethan sense of privy or outhouse. This meaning at best is doubtful. Here, however, where the style is both elliptical and metaphorical, the usual sense of crimes seems the simpler reading.

II.i.122. Edward Bohun. Buckingham's surname was Stafford, although he was a remote descendant of the Bohun family. The mistake, however, is in Holinshed.

II.i.126. My noble father. Henry Stafford, High Constable of England and Duke of Buckingham, raised a revolt against Richard III, was betrayed by his servant, Humphrey Banaster, and beheaded in 1483, 'without arreignement or iudgement.'

II.i.171-177. This passage is versified Holinshed (1587), p. 897.

II.i.160. Cardinal Campeius. Cardinal Lorenzo Campeggio was sent by the Pope, Clement VII, to judge the question jointly with Wolsey. As the Pope had withheld the power to make a decision, the trial was necessarily adjourned.

II.i.190. The archbishopric of Toledo. This motivation of Wolsey's conduct is taken from Holinshed.

II.ii.18, 19. No; his conscience Has crept too near another lady. As has been pointed out by Mr. Vaughan, this speech of Suffolk is an aside, and Norfolk's ' 'Tis so' is in agreement with the opinion of the Chamberlain. This speech is incongruous coming from the mouth of the historical Duke of Suffolk!

II.ii.22. That blind priest. Reckless, because he cannot see. But the adjective suggests the familiar figure of Fortune, with her wheel.

II.ii. S.d. At the back of the Elizabethan stage there was a gallery. Under the gallery was a recess, screened by curtains. This recess here is used as the King's study. And it is upon the gallery that the King and Butts play in Act V.ii.

II.ii.99. have-at-him. A thrust. This is Dyce's emendation of the Folio 'If it doe; Ile venture one; haue at him.'

II.ii.125. Gardiner. Stephen Gardiner (1483-1555), Trinity College, Cambridge, early distinguished himself as a student in Civil and Canon Law. As such, he was employed by Henry as an agent in the divorce proceedings. After Wolsey's death he was rewarded by being made Bishop of Winchester (1531). He later became an opponent of Cranmer and the Reformation, was imprisoned throughout the reign of Edward VI, and was one of the chief counsellors of Mary. Since it was in her reign that the Protestants were persecuted, Gardiner was popularly held responsible and generally hated.

II.ii.128. Taken from Holinshed.

II.ii.140. Doctor Pace. Richard Pace (1482?-1536), a celebrated scholar and writer, succeeded the famous John Colet as Dean of St. Paul's. He was also Dean of Exeter and of Salisbury. He had been sent on many embassies, but in 1525 he was forced to return to England owing to mental derangement. Holinshed is reporting popular gossip in crediting this insanity to the persecutions of the Cardinal, but an examination of the state papers does not justify such a conclusion.

II.ii.161. Blackfriars. Before the Reformation the monastic establishment of the Dominicans, between Ludgate Hill and the Thames. The locality is still marked by Blackfriars Bridge.

II.iii. This scene, which has no structural importance in the play, is used to characterize Anne Boleyn. Except for the brief conversation in I.iv. and her appearance in the procession in IV.i., this is her only scene. The contrast between the dramatic importance given to Katharine by the dramatist and that given to Anne, the mother of Queen Elizabeth, is curious.

II.iii.1-11. The ejaculatory form of Anne's speech expresses her emotion, and also marks the reappearance of Shakespeare's style.

II.iii.44. three-pence. This is an anachronism, because 'the first large and regular coinage of three-pence took place in the reign of Elizabeth' (Fairholt).

II.iii.53. Ever to get a boy. An allusion to Henry's desire for a male heir.

II.iii.46. little England. Steevens suggested that 'little England' may be Pembrokeshire. This interpretation is over-subtle as the Old Lady is not supposed to know that Anne was about to be created Marchioness of Pembroke and certainly the audience does not know it.

II.iii.58. emballing. Explained by commentators as a reference to the ball, the symbol of power, place in the hand of the sovereign at the coronation. It was not used at the coronation of a queen-consort; Anne was given a dove upon an ivory staff. Merely an indelicate joke.

II.iii.59. Carnarvonshire. A barren county in Wales, in contrast to fertile England.

II.iii.74. of you. The Folio reads

'Commends his good opinion of you, to you;'

Presumably the 'to you' is an error of the typesetter, although the verse of this play is so ragged that the dramatists may have written it so.

II.ii.76. Marchioness of Pembroke. Taken from Holinshed.

II.iii.93. a gem. An allusion to Queen Elizabeth.

II.iii.102. fie, fie. The Folio gives three fie's; but the third is an extra syllable in the line.

II.iii.109. mud in Egypt. The wealth of Egypt is due to the mud deposited by the overflowing Nile.

II.iv. S.d. The location of this scene is taken from Holinshed. Bishop of Canterbury is an obvious error for Archbishop of Canterbury. At this time, June 21, 1529, the Archbishop of Canterbury was William Warham; the Bishop of Lincoln, John Longland; the Bishop of Ely, Nicholas West; the Bishop of Rochester, John Fisher; and the Bishop of Saint Asaph was Henry Standish. The details of this procession are taken from Holinshed. In an uneducated age, the meaning of events was explained to the crowd by symbols. The purse was carried to represent the Treasury; the great seal signified that Wolsey was Lord Chancellor; the hat, that he was a cardinal; the two crosses represented his archbishopric and his commission from the Pope as legate; the silver mace was the emblem of authority; the two pillars, the insignia of a cardinal. The procession, then, was a visible representation of Wolsey's position in the Church and in the State. The scene is a dramatization of Holinshed (1587), pp. 907, 908; the speeches are little more than a versifying of Holinshed's prose.

II.iv.14. Sir, I desire. Compare this speech with Holinshed: 'Sir (quoth she) I desire you to doo me justice and right, and take some pitie upon me, for I am a poore woman, and a stranger, borne out of your dominion, having here no indifferent counsell, and assurance of freendship. Alas sir, what have I offended you, or what occasion of displeasure have I shewed you, intending thus to put me from you after this sort? I take God to my judge, I have beene to you a true and humble wife, ever conformable to your will and pleasure, that never contrar-ied or gainesaid any thing thereof, and being alwaies contented with all things wherein you had any delight, whether little or much, without grudge or displeasure, I loved for your sake all them whom you loved, whether they were my freends or enimies,' etc., etc. The other speeches are equally close.

II.iv.38. many children. Of the five children that Katharine had borne, only one survived, Mary. She succeeded her half-brother, Edward VI, on the throne.

II.iv.122–124. your words, Domestics to you, etc. Your words, like household servants, perform any service that your will desires.

II.iv.137. Gent. Ush. From Holinshed, the name of the gentleman usher is Griffith. He appears again in IV.ii.

II.iv.185. Bishop of Bayonne. As a matter of fact, Cavendish, who is Holinshed's authority here, was mistaken; it was not Du Bellay, Bishop of Bayonne, but Grammont, Bishop of Tarbes, that came on this embassy.

II.iv.195. bosom of my conscience. Holinshed's phrase is 'bottom of my conscience.'

II.iv.241. drives. The old Northern English plural, common in Shakespeare. Compare 'compels' in I.ii.65.

II.iv.256. Cranmer. Cranmer was then abroad, collecting opinions concerning the validity of the King's marriage.

III.i. The location of this scene is taken from Holinshed, and is dramatized from the account there given.

III.i.27. But all hoods make not monks. The Latin form of this proverb, cucullus non facit monachum, is quoted also in Measure for Measure and in Twelfth Night.

III.i.46–47. Tanta est erga te, etc. 'So great is the honesty of our purpose toward you, most noble Queen.' As Holinshed says only that they started to speak Latin, these words are the creation of the dramatists.

III.i.68. your cause. The Second Folio corrects the First, which reads our cause.

III.i.161. Ye have angels' faces. Katharine is a Spaniard. She is here alluding to Pope Gregory's famous exclamation, Non Angli sed angeli.

III.ii. This scene, with the possible exception of the death of Katharine, IV. ii, is the most famous one in the play. Nichol Smith divides it into: (1) the interview between the King and Wolsey; (2) the interview between the nobles and Wolsey; (3) the interview between Wolsey and Cromwell. Of these three only the second is taken directly from Holinshed, but details in the first and third are from Holinshed's summary of Wolsey's character.

The chronology is hopelessly confused. 'Lord' Surrey, the Earl of Surrey, was after 1524 the poet Surrey, because his grandfather, the Norfolk of the First Act, had died in that year and transmitted the ducal title to the poet's father, the Norfolk of this scene. More's appointment as Chancellor followed Wolsey's death, and Cranmer was consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury, March 30, 1533. For dramatic effect events thus separated by years are condensed into one scene.

III.ii.27. Not to come off. In the speech, the pronouns are ambiguous. No, he (Wolsey) is settled in his (the King's) displeasure, not to escape.

III.ii.39. The cardinal's letters. Holinshed (1587), p. 909: 'he required the pope by letters and secret messengers, that in anie wise he should defer the iudgement of the diuorce, till he might frame the kings mind to his purpose.'

III.ii.54. Would he had! As Anne Boleyn was the niece of the 'Lord Surrey' of the play, the exclamation is natural enough. The dramatists, however, show no knowledge of this relationship. Apparently the only value of the information is its relation to the fall of Wolsey.

III.ii.66. Will fall some blessing. An obvious allusion to Queen Elizabeth.

III.ii.74. Cardinal Campeius. The dramatists here abandon Holinshed, who expressly states that Campeggio took a formal leave of the King. Boswell-Stone suggests that this idea comes from Foxe, according to whose account Campeggio 'craftily shifted hym self out of the realme before the day came appointed for determination, leauing his suttle felow behynd hym to wey with the king in the meane time.'

III.ii.89–91. Katharine no more Shall be call'd queen, etc. Holinshed (1587), p. 929: 'It was also enacted the same time that queene Katharine should no more be called queene, but princesse Dowager, as the widow of prince Arthur.'

III.ii.114. Duchess of Alençon. This is an anachronism, since Margaret, Duchess of Alençon, was married to Henry d'Albret, King of Navarre, January, 1527.

III.ii.130. A spleeny Lutheran. According to Foxe, and the Elizabethan tradition, Anne Boleyn was an enthusiastic champion of the Protestant Reformation.

III.ii. S.d. Enter King, reading of a schedule. This incident never happened to Wolsey, but, as Steevens first pointed out, Holinshed chronicles one like it that did happen to the Bishop of Durham in 1523. After Wolsey's fall, however, an elaborate inventory of the contents of Hampton Court was made by the King's order.

III.ii.210–215. My sovereign, etc. The English here is careless, but the meaning is obvious. My sovereign, I confess that your royal favors, which were showered upon me daily, have been more than my earnest efforts could requite; your favors went beyond any man's endeavors; my endeavors have always come short of my desires, but they have kept pace with my ability.

III.ii.233–235. Should, not from duty, but from a supreme love, belong to me above all men.

III.ii.238. that am, have, and will be. This, the reading of the Folio, has been the cause of more emendation than any line of the play. Yet in all probability the line is as the authors wrote it. The expression is elliptical with the forms of the verb 'labour' omitted. The passage in full means: 'I do profess, that for your highness' good I ever laboured more than for my own good: that I am labouring, have laboured, and will be labouring.'

III.ii.279. Asher-house. A curious error, because Asher (or Esher) House was the official residence of the Bishop of Winchester and at this time the Bishop of Winchester was Wolsey himself. Of course, the authors meant by 'Bishop of Winchester' Stephen Gardiner, but he did not become Bishop until 1531, after Wolsey's death. Wolsey did go to Asher, according to Holinshed.

III.ii.352. Worse than the sacring bell. In the Roman Catholic service, the sacring bell is rung at the elevation of the Host during the Mass, or before the Sacraments when they are carried through the streets. There is no historical truth to this particular accusation, although Wolsey's life was not chaste.

III.ii.370. First, that, etc. This list of accusations is taken from Holinshed.

III.ii.406. Chattels. Theobald's emendation for the Folio reading, Castles, taken from Holinshed's enumeration: 'to forfeit all his lands, tenements, goods, and cattels.'

III.ii.434. he falls like Lucifer. Isaiah 14. 12: 'How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning!'

III.ii.523. Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. This line is prophecy, after the event. Cromwell, who from his suppression of the monasteries was considered to be a supporter of the Reformation, was executed in 1540.

III.ii.529–531. Had I but serv'd my God, etc. This, the most quoted passage in the play, is adapted from Holinshed (1587, p. 917): 'Master Kinston (quoth the cardinall) I see the matter how it is framed: but if I had serued God as diligentlie as I haue doone the king, he would not haue given me ouer in my greie haires.'

IV.i. The locality of this scene is inferred from the scene itself. The coronation took place June 1, 1533.

IV.i.5. At our last encounter. The two gentlemen last appeared in II.i., when Buckingham came forth after his trial. Historically twelve years separated these two events.

IV.i.19. Of those that claim. By long custom the right to perform the various services is vested in certain families. Holinshed (1587), p. 930:

> 'In the beginning of Maie, the king caused open proclamations to be made, that all men that claimed to doo anie seruice, or execute anie office at the solemne feast of the coronation by the waie of tenure, grant, or prescription, should put their grant three weeks after Easter in the Starre-chamber before Charles duke of Suffolke, for that time high steward of England, and the lord chancellor and other commissioners. The duke of Norfolke claimed to be erle mershall, and to exercise his office at that feast; the erle of Arundell claimed to be high butler, and to exercise the same; the erle of Oxford claimed to be chamberlain; the viscount Lisle claimed to be pantler; the lord Aburgauennie to be chief larderer; and the lord Braie claimed to be almoner, and sir Henrie Wiat knight claimed to be ewrer. All these noble personages desired their offices with their fees.
>
> 'Beside these, the maior of London claimed to serue the queene with a cup of gold, and a cup of assaie of the same, and that twelve citizens should attend on the cupboard, and the maior to have the cup and cup of assaie for his labor: which petition was allowed. The five ports claimed to beare a canopie ouer the queens head the daie of the coronation with foure guilt belles, and to haue the same for a reward, which to them was allowed. Diuerse other put in petie claimes which were not allowed, bicause they seemed onlie to be doone at the kings coronation.'

IV.i.31. Dunstable. The court was held at Dunstable Priory, in Bedfordshire, six miles from Ampthill Castle, a royal residence.

IV.i.48. Kimbolton. In the fall of 1535 Katharine at her own request had been removed to Kimbolton Castle in Huntingdonshire, then belonging to the Wingfield family. The Folio spells the word 'Kymmalton.'

IV.i. S.d. The Order of the Coronation. The details of this procession, which is the reason for the scene, are taken from Holinshed. But they are somewhat changed to suit the stage. Thus the Earl of Surrey carries the rod with the dove, instead of the Earl of Arundell, and the Duke of Norfolk the staff of marshalship, instead of Sir. William Howard, probably, as Wright suggests, to avoid introducing two new characters. Possibly to avoid confusion in the personages, the Earl of Oxford, then High Chamberlain, who carries the crown on a cushion, is also omitted.

The 'Collars of Esses' were so called because the links in the chains were in the shape of the letter S.

The 'Cinque-ports,' Dover, Hastings, Romney, Hythe and Sandwich, have the privilege of sending representatives to carry the canopy at the coronation. Cf. note on IV.i.19.

IV.i.76 ff. The 'third Gentleman' is obviously introduced to give an account of the coronation to the audience. The details of the scene follow Holinshed, as usual.

IV.i.110. York-place, where the feast is held. After Wolsey's fall, York-place, the official residence of Wolsey as Archbishop of York, was annexed to the property of the Crown, and became the royal palace of Whitehall. It served as a royal residence until it burned in 1697. Only the banqueting hall remained. The coronation feast, however, was not held in Whitehall; as Holinshed correctly states, it was held in Westminster Hall. The confusion in the play may have arisen from the fact that in Holinshed there is also a long detailed account of the procession escorting the Queen from the Tower to Westminster. At the end of that, the first procession, he states that Anne 'withdrew herself with a few ladies to the Whitehall and so to her chamber.'

IV.i.120. Stokesly and Gardiner. John Stokesly was made Bishop of London in 1530; Stephen Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester in 1531. As Gardiner was considered an enemy of the Reformation, he was 'no great good lover' of Cranmer. Thus l. 125 prepares for the first scene in Act V.

IV.i.131. Thomas Cromwell. Cromwell was made a member of the Privy Council in 1531 and Master of the Jewel House in 1532.

IV.ii.7, 8. Cardinal Wolsey, Was dead. For dramatic reasons the death of Wolsey precedes that of Katharine by only a short interval. Historically, Wolsey died November 29, 1530, whereas this scene would have occurred in January, 1536.

IV.ii.11. tell me how he died. This account is condensed from Holinshed (1587), p. 917.

IV.ii.35. So may he rest, etc. Katharine's characterization of Wolsey is, point by point, taken from Holinshed (1587), p. 922. 'This cardinall (as you may perceive in this storie) was of a great stomach, for he compted himselfe equall with princes, & by craftie suggestion gat into his hands innumerable treasure: he forced little on simonie, and was not pittifull, and stood affectionate in his owne opinion: in open presence he would lie and saie untruth, and was double both in speach and meaning: he would promise much and performe little: he was vicious of his bodie, & gaue the clergie euill example. . . .'

IV.ii.55 ff. Griffith's commendation of Wolsey is equally taken from Holinshed (1587), p. 917: 'This cardinall (as Edward Campian in his historie of Ireland describeth him) was a man undoubtedly borne to honor: I thinke (saith he) some princes bastard, no butchers sonne, exceeding wise, faire spoken, high minded, full of reuenge, vitious of his bodie, loftie to his enemies, were they neuer so big, to those that accepted and sought his freendship woonderfull courteous, a ripe schooleman, thrall to affections, brought a bed with flatterie, insatiable to get, and more princelie in bestowing, as appeareth by his two colleges at Ipswich and Oxenford, the one ouerthrowne with his fall, the other unfinished, and yet as it lieth as an house for students, considering all the appurtenances incomparable thorough Christendome, whereof Henrie the eight is now called founder, bicause he let it stand . . . neuer happie till this his ouerthrow. Wherein he shewed such moderation, and ended so perfectlie, that the houre of his death did him more honor, than all the pompe of his life passed.'

IV.ii.57. From his cradle. Many editors prefer Theobald's punctuation, which puts a period after 'cradle' instead of after 'honour.'

IV.ii.66. Ipswich, and Oxford. The college founded by Wolsey at Ipswich remains only in a gatehouse; Christ Church at Oxford was founded by Wolsey and originally called Cardinal College.

IV.ii.125. Capucious. Holinshed (1587), p. 939: 'The princesse Dowager lieng at Kimbolton, fell into hir last sicknesse, whereof the king being aduertised, appointed the emperors ambassador that was legier here with him named Caputius, to go to visit hir, and to do his commendations to hir, and will hir to be of good comfort.'

V. The first four scenes of this act dramatize an anecdote told by Foxe in his Acts and Monuments of Martyrs (usually called briefly the Book of Martyrs) (1583), pp. 1866 and 1867. The fifth scene is taken from Holinshed (1587), pp. 934-935.

There is no attempt at chronology. Sir Thomas Lovell died in 1524; Elizabeth was born 1533; Cromwell was executed in 1540; and the scene with Cranmer must have been in 1544 or 1545.

V.ii. S.d. Enter the King and Butts at a window above. In the Folio there is no division between this scene and the one following. This was unfortunately introduced by White to conform to our modern stage conventions. The King and Butts appeared upon the gallery across the back of the Elizabethan stage. Then, with them in full view of the audience but out of the sight of the actors upon the stage, the council assembled below.

V.iii.35-37. Doubtless as allusion to the Anabaptist rising in Münster under John of Leyden, 1534-1535.

V.iii.99. This is too much. The Folio gives all the speeches in this scene, here assigned to the Lord Chancellor, to the Lord Chamberlain. As was pointed out by Capell, they belong rather to the Lord Chancellor because he was the presiding officer. The error was probably due to a misreading of the abbreviation Chan. into Cham. Some modern editors, however, assign one of the seven speeches to the Lord Chamberlain, since otherwise he would be silent.

V.iii.159. his place. This is the reading of the Folio. Paraphrased, it means: now let the proudest deny that thou art his equal, that his position becomes thee. Some modern editors, however, follow Rowe's emendation, 'this place.'

V.iv.2. Parish-garden. The corrupt pronunciation for Paris-garden, a place of unruly entertainment near the site of the Globe Theatre.

V.iv.13. May-day morning. On the first of May it was customary to go out early into the fields to gather flowers and dew, which was considered good for the complexion.

V.iv.21. I am not Samson, etc. The allusion to the proverbial strength of Samson as told in the Old Testament story is obvious. Sir Guy of Warwick is the hero of the medieval romance of the same name; one of his adventures is the killing of the giant Colbrand.

V.iv.26. for a cow. A proverbial expression, still in use, it is said.

V.iv.32. Moorfields. The exercising ground of the London militia.

V.iv.33. strange Indian. It was the Jacobean custom to exhibit Indians, much as we do Hottentots. If the date of exhibition of such an Indian could be ascertained, it would be a clue to the troubled question of the date of the play. Compare The Tempest, II.ii.28-34.

V.iv.37. The spoons will be the bigger. Spoons were favorite gifts at christenings. See V.iii.195.

V.iv.47. Clubs. 'Clubs' was the rallying cry of the London apprentices.

V.iv.56, 57. Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the Limbs of Limehouse. These are fanciful names, alluding to unruly districts of London.

V.iv.60. running banquet. The two beadles (officers of the law) will chase them, whipping them, after the prison term of three days has expired.

V.v. Elizabeth was christened September 10, 1533.

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is based, by permission of the Oxford University Press, upon that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig. Craig's text has been carefully collated with the Shakespeare Folio of 1623, and the following deviations have been introduced:

1. The stage directions of the Folio have been restored. Necessary words and directions, omitted by the Folio, are added within square brackets.

2. Spelling has been normalized to accord with modern English practice; e.g., Blackfriars, Sandys, everywhere, warlike, vainglory, reverend, sovereign (instead of Black-Friars, Sands, every where, war-like, vain-glory, rev'rend, sov'reign). The punctuation has been largely revised, and a number of old-fashioned Folio forms restored; e.g., th' effects, t' aspire, y' are (you're), burthen (burden).

3. The following changes of text have been introduced, usually in accordance with Folio authority. The readings of the present edition precede the colon, while Craig's readings follow it.

I.i.49–52 All was royal . . . his full function (assigned to Buckingham F): (assigned to Norfolk)
55 As you guess (assigned to Norfolk F): (assigned to Buck.)
73 a' (O F): he
90 upon,—: upon;
92 in,—: in
143 venom'd-mouth'd F: venom-mouth'd
172 till 't F: till it
ii.35 longing F: 'longing
65 compels F: compel
165, 166 Henton F: Hopkins
217 Bulmer: Blumer F
iii.74 h'as (Ha's F): he has

iv.93 'em F: them
111 Ye F: You
II.i. S.d. (Follows line 69 in Craig)
125 'em F: them
ii.5 'em F: them
66 has (ha's F): hath
72 Who's F: Who is
114 mine F: my
123 unpartial F: impartial
iii.115 moe (mo F): more
iv.137 Gent. Ush. F: Grif.
198 many-maz'd: many maz'd F
233 I then F: Then I
241 drives F: drive
III.i.74 in a F: in
129, 130 you F: ye
133 h'as (ha's F): he has
176 'em F: them
ii.39 letters F: letter
41 How that F: That
103 in's F: in his
133 An F: A
282 lords F: lord
469 him F: 'em
516 by it F: by 't
IV.i.94 before 'em F: before them
ii.56 an humble F: a humble
57 honour. From F: honour from
V.i.14 and F: an
204 an F: a
iii.81 y' are F: you are
131 Chan.: Cham. F
159 his F: this
207 he's F: he is
iv.2 Parish-garden (Parish Garden F): Paris-garden
5 ye F: you
76 y' are F: ye' re
v.82 H'as ('Has F): He has

The Tragedy of Titus Andronicus

Edited by
A. M. Witherspoon

Dramatis Personae

Saturninus, Son to the late Emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared Emperor
Bassianus, Brother to Saturninus, in love with Lavinia
Titus Andronicus, a Roman, General against the Goths
Marcus Andronicus, Tribune of the People, and Brother to Titus
Lucius, Quintus, Martius, Mutius } Sons to Titus Andronicus
Young Lucius, a Boy, Son to Lucius
Publius, Son to Marcus Andronicus
Sempronius, Caius, Valentine } Kinsmen to Titus

Aemilius, a noble Roman
Alarbus, Demetrius, Chiron } Sons to Tamora
Aaron, a Moor, beloved by Tamora
A Clown

Tamora, Queen of the Goths
Lavinia, Daughter to Titus Andronicus
A Nurse, and a black Child

Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants

Scene—Rome, and the Country near it.

The Tragedy of Titus Andronicus

Introduction

Sources of the Play

No single and direct source of the story of Titus Andronicus has ever been discovered. It is probable that the play as we have it was based on an older play, but there is no conclusive evidence of the existence of any version, English or foreign, prior to the text that we now have. The plot seems, however, to combine many themes and incidents found in other forms of literature. The story proper is apparently without any historical basis, and is curiously anachronistic in arrangement. A Roman emperor and a tribune are made contemporary; the emperor is engaged, as no Roman emperor ever was, in warring upon the Goths; and the Rome in which the scene is laid is, according to Aaron the Moor, the seat of 'Popish ceremonies.' As for the surname, Andronicus, no Roman emperor ever bore it, although there was a Byzantine emperor, Andronicus Comnenus, of the twelfth century A.D., and it is not without significance that he is represented by Nicetas Choniata as having shot arrows with certain devices attached in the siege of Prusa. It may be worth noting, too, that after the removal of the empire to Byzantium in the fourth century there were wars with the Goths, and thus a remote historical background for some of the incidents of the play may be postulated. Finally, the similarity of the name Tamora to that of Tomyris, the vengeful queen of the Getæ, has been pointed out.

Baildon (Arden ed.) suggests an Oriental origin for the story, in view of its peculiar cruelty and lavish bloodshed, and the presence in it of those two Bashibazouks, Chiron and Demetrius. But if the story came from the Orient, it has undergone many modifications in transit.

The different threads of the plot of Titus Andronicus bear striking resemblance to other well-known themes and legends. The author frequently likens Lavinia's fate to that of Philomela, which Ovid's Metamorphoses had made known to England. The cruelty and villainy of Aaron suggest at once the deeds of Barabas and Ithamore in Marlowe's Jew of Malta. There is, furthermore, in Evans's Old Ballads and in the Roxburghe Ballads, a poem of about 1570 entitled, 'A Lamentable Ballad of the Tragical End of a Gallant Lord and of his Beautiful Lady, with the untimely death of their children, wickedly performed by a heathen Blackamore, their servant: The like seldom heard before.' The theme of the 'heathen blackamore' was very popular. Professor Koeppel (in Englische Studien, 16. 370) points out several other versions of it: a Latin version by Pontano, an adaptation by Bandello in the twenty-first novel of his third book, a French paraphrase by Belleforest in the second volume of his Histoires Tragiques. And there are other versions in other languages.

When Titus Andronicus was entered on the Stationers' Register on February 6, 1593-4, there was entered also 'by warrant from Mr. Woodcock, the ballad thereof.' It is now generally agreed that this ballad is the same as that reprinted in Percy's Reliques, entitled Titus Andronicus's Complaint, and that it is not a source of the play but instead is based on the play. It cannot, according to Chappell, be earlier, in its extant form, than 1600.

In connection with the question of the sources of the play, several other facts now enter. Henslowe in his Diary records a play, 'tittus & vespacia' (which he calls elsewhere 'tittus') as having been performed by Strange's men on April 11, 1592, and frequently thereafter. No copy of this play now exists. There is, furthermore, a volume, Englische Comedien und Tragedien, 1620, which comprises the repertory of a group of English comedians acting in Germany in the early seventeenth century, and which contains a play entitled Eine sehr Klägliche Tragœdia von Tito Andronico und der hoffertigen Kayserin.[1] In this play Titus's son is called Vespasianus instead of Lucius. It has been assumed, therefore, in some quarters that Henslowe's 'tittus & vespacia' was the original of the German play and at the same time an earlier version of our English Titus Andronicus.[2] But such assumptions are more or less gratuitous. There may have been an earlier play than our Titus Andronicus on the same subject. But in all probability the 'tittus & vespacia' of Henslowe had nothing to do with the play recorded elsewhere by him as 'titus & ondronicus' (our Titus Andronicus), but dealt instead with the heroic theme of the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus Vespasian, the second of the Flavian emperors, and the hero of later tragedies by Corneille and Racine. The German play is quite certainly a translation, albeit a very free one, of our Titus Andronicus. The fact that Titus's son, Lucius, is given the name Vespasian in the German play can be easily explained, as Mr. R. Crompton Rhodes points out (Times Literary Supplement, May 22, 1924): Lucius is the son of Titus and an emperor of Rome, and the mental association of his name with Vespasian is explicable. The other changes of name in the German play have similarly associative reasons. Aaron the Moor becomes Morion, and Lavinia becomes Andronica.

About a quarter of a century ago there were numerous lengthy and learned discussions as to the existence of earlier versions and editions of Titus Andronicus, and the interrelations of the English, German, and Dutch versions of plays on similar themes. They were occasioned largely by the fact that until 1904 no copy of Titus Andronicus earlier than the Quarto of 1600 was known, and editors and commentators were much exercised to explain the identity of the 'titus & ondronicus' mentioned in Henslowe's

1 Reprinted in Cohn's Shakespeare in Germany, 1865, pp. 156-235.

2 There are extant also a Dutch play, Aran en Titus, by Jan Vos, printed first in 1642, and a program of a German play acted at Linz in 1699 which agrees substantially with the Dutch play. The connections and relations between these two plays, and the whole question of the relationship of the Shakespearean Titus Andronicus to continental plays on similar themes, is discussed at length by H. de W. Fuller and G. P. Baker in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assn., 16. 1-76, 1901.

Diary under the date of January 23, 1594. Fortunately in 1904 a copy of the 1594 Quarto, the first edition of the play, came to light, settling many vexatious questions. It is now generally conceded that this 1594 edition of Titus Andronicus is the play recorded in Henslowe's Diary as 'titus & ondronicus' and that it is also identical with the 'Titus and Andronicus' and 'Tytus Andronicus' of the Stationers' Register.

The History of the Play

The earliest known mention of a work with the title of Titus Andronicus is contained in an entry in the Stationers' Register on February 6, 1593-4: 'John Danter. A booke entitled A noble Roman historye of Tytus Andronicus.' Philip Henslowe's Diary, under the dates of January 23 and 28, and February 6 of the same year, records a new play, 'titus & ondronicus,' as having been acted by 'the earle of susex his men.' Two later entries, made on June 5 and June 12, 1594, note the performance of a play called 'andronicous' by the Lord Admiral's and the Lord Chamberlain's men. Finally, in this same year, there was printed at London a quarto edition[3] of the play now known as Titus Andronicus, bearing the following title-page: 'The Most Lamentable Romaine Tragedie of Titus Andronicus: As it was Plaide by the Right Honourable the Earle of Darbie, Earle of Pembrooke, and Earle of Sussex their Servants. . . . London, Printed by Iohn Danter . . . 1594.'

A second quarto, based on the 1594 edition, was published in 1600, and contains only slight changes in the text. One passage of six lines is omitted from the first scene of the 1600 edition, and another of five lines is omitted from the last scene of the play (cf. notes on I.i.35 and V.iii.166), while the last four lines of the 1600 edition are not found in the First Quarto. On the title-page of the Second Quarto the name of the Lord Chamberlain's company is added to those of the three companies mentioned on the title-page of the First Quarto.

A third quarto, of which the 1600 edition was the original, was printed in 1611. Fourteen copies of the Third Quarto are known, one of which is in the Elizabethan Club at Yale.

The text of the First Folio of 1623 was printed from the Third Quarto with MS. additions, and contains one scene (III. ii.) which does not appear in any of the Quartos.

The history of Titus and Aaron on the stage falls into two general divisions: the period of about a quarter of a century after its composition until the death of Shakespeare, and the three centuries since that time. During the first three decades of its existence, Titus was one of the most popular of all the plays attributed to Shakespeare; for the last three hundred years it has had almost the scantiest stage-history of them all. The First Quarto bears the motto, Aut nunc aut nunquam, and never was a more appropriate motto affixed to a play. There was only one period in the history of the English stage when Titus Andronicus ever could have been popular, and popular it was then beyond all precedent.

The title-page of the Third Quarto assures us that the tragedy had 'sundry times beene plaide by the Kings Majesties Servants,' and from the other title-pages and Henslowe's Diary we learn that three different companies continued to play it, two of which changed their names at two different periods of their career; but under whatever name or sovereign, they continued to play Titus. The play is entered in Henslowe's Diary no less than fifteen times, if we may assume that all the Titus and Andronicus plays which he records are identical. Numerous other contemporary allusions also attest its popularity. The events with which the first act of Titus concerns itself were familiar enough to furnish a simile for the author of the play, A Merry Knack to Know a Knave, which was published anonymously in 1594:

> 'Osrick. My gracious lord, as welcome shall you be,
> To me, my daughter, and my son-in-law,
> As Titus was unto the Roman senators,
> When he had made a conquest on the Goths;
> That, in requital of his service done,
> Did offer him the imperial diadem.
> As they in Titus, we in your grace, still find
> The perfect figure of a princely mind.[4]

In 1614, twenty years after the First Quarto, Ben Jonson takes occasion in the Induction to his Bartholomew Fair to censure those (of whom there were presumably a goodly number) who still 'swear that Jeronimo or Andronicus are the best plays yet.' Whether Jonson is referring to our Titus Andronicus or not, the vogue of Titus would thus seem to have passed by this time with men of Jonson's tastes, but the contemptuous tone of his statement testifies that there were those to whom such blood-and-thunder plays still appealed. The Shakspere Allusion-Book records other references to the play from time to time. At the middle of the century strands of its gory locks were still in evidence. In 1648 an anonymous writer, J. S., issued a compilation of 'wise and learned sentences and phrases' from favorite authors under the title, Wit's Labyrinth. Of the half-dozen or more Shakespearean plays from which the compiler culled his phrases, only Titus Andronicus is honored by having as many as three sentences quoted.

As the century wore on, however, the performances of Titus grew fewer and fewer. In 1678, 'about the time of the Popish-plot,' says Gerard Langbaine, the play was 'revived' and refurbished to suit the tastes and exigencies of the stage, and produced by Edward Ravenscroft. This revised version of the tragedy was published in 1687 with the following title: Titus Andronicus or the Rape of Lavinia. Acted at the Theatre Royall, A Tragedy Alter'd from Mr. Shakespear's Works. In his introduction, Ravenscroft speaks of the success which had matched the labor of revising the play, a process which left Titus with 'the language not only refin'd, but many scenes entirely new: besides most of the principal characters heighten'd and the plot much encreas'd.' It is instructive to see in what manner the characters were 'heightened.' As if the original play were not horrible enough, Ravenscroft adds infanticide to Tamora's crimes, and has Aaron offer to eat his dead child's body. The Moor is tortured and finally burned to death on the stage.

Ravenscroft's revision was still the accepted version at the close of the century, according to the list of Shakespeare's plays given by Charles Gildon in 1698 in his continuation of Langbaine's work, previously mentioned. After the turn of the century we first hear definitely of a performance of Titus in 1717. There were at least three performances, on August 13, 20, and 23, of that year, at Drury Lane. The advertisement in the Daily Courant of the 20th states that the play had been given 'but twice these fifteen years.' The most interesting fact recorded in the notice is that the part of Aaron was taken by the celebrated James Quin, who repeated the performance again in 1720 and 1721, at Lincoln's Inn Fields. The version of Ravenscroft still obtained, the play being announced in all cases as 'Titus Andronicus with the Rape of Lavinia, alter'd from Shakspeare.'

3 The 1594 Quarto of Titus was recorded by Gerard Langbaine in 1691 in the list of Shakespeare's plays in his Account of the English Dramatick Poets, but no copy of the edition seems to have been known during the next two hundred years, and Langbaine's testimony was generally discredited. At last, in 1904, a copy was discovered in Lund, Sweden, vindicating Langbaine, and settling various disputes.

4 Dodsley's Old English Plays, ed. Hazlitt, 1874, 6. 572.

A century and a quarter elapsed before Titus and Aaron again walked the boards. Another much-altered version of the text was used, prepared for the occasion by C. A. Somerset, the author of Shakespeare's Early Days, a popular work of the time. The play was performed at the Britannia Theatre in London, the opening performance taking place on March 15, 1852. In this new version, the tragedy was given intermittently for some five years, with performances both in London and Dublin. The rôle of Aaron was taken by the famous negro tragedian, Ira Aldridge, 'the African Roscius.' Into the version employed by Aldridge there was incorporated a scene from a play called Zaraffa, the Slave King, which had been written especially for Aldridge.

It is significant with regard to the tastes of the audiences of the times that both in 1717 and in 1852 the producers of Titus felt it necessary to follow the performance of the tragedy with a farce. In 1717, 'by the desire of some Persons of Quality,' so the stage-bill informs us, Farquhar's one-act farce, The Stage-Coach, was added. In 1852 Aldridge offered a farce entitled 'Mummy' and some negro songs which he had brought from his native Maryland.

After 1857 it was sixty-six years before any producer had the desire or the hardihood to present the lamentable Roman tragedy. Under the management of Miss Lilian Baylis, the entire cycle of Shakespeare's plays was given between 1914 and 1924 at the Old Vic Theatre on the Surrey side of the Thames, an achievement which had not been accomplished since the days of Shakespeare. Titus Andronicus was produced here by Mr. Robert Atkins on October 8, 1923, the thirty-fifth of the cycle of Shakespeare's thirty-seven plays. That Titus should have been included in the repertory is due, of course, not to any inherent virtues in the play itself, but to Miss Baylis's ambition to make the Shakespearean wheel, for once at least, come full circle. A large audience was drawn to the Old Vic through curiosity, and the comments of the spectators and the newspapers were at one in declaring the play impossibly bad. The Times mentioned among the qualities which make it tolerable at all the swiftness and firmness of the telling, and the extraordinary dexterity with which the plot moves from death to death. 'It could never have appealed to the cultured classes,' said the Morning Post, 'but had all the elements of popular success. . . . It is very repulsive, but workmanlike.' The text used was the original version of the First Folio, with one noteworthy and very effective emendation: a laughing-scene for Aaron was introduced in Act III just before his exit, after he has cut off Titus's hand. The Moor's satanic laughter is not specifically referred to in the text, but is justified by his remarks. (Cf. V.i.113-115.) A very fine stage-setting by Hubert Hine was used in the production at the Old Vic.

Titus has been produced only once in America. It was performed by the Yale Chapter of the Fraternity of Alpha Delta Phi, in New Haven, on April 14 and 15, 1924, under the direction of Mr. E. M. Woolley and Professor J. M. Berdan. The production was the annual performance of a series of Elizabethan plays, given in the Elizabethan manner, with the original text.

The Prinzregententheater in Munich was the scene of the latest performance of Titus, on October 15, 1924. The German version used was the translation of Nicolaus Delius, and very elaborate scenery by Eugen Keller was employed.

Titus Andronicus is the only play of the Shakespearean canon that has not been performed at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre in Stratford.

The Authorship of the Play

The external evidence for the Shakespearean authorship of Titus Andronicus rests on its inclusion in the Folio of 1623 by Heminges and Condell, friends and fellow actors of Shakespeare, and its mention by Francis Meres in a list of Shakespeare's plays in his Palladis Tamia in 1598, four years after the appearance of the First Quarto. It is again listed as Shakespeare's by Gerard Langbaine[5] in 1691. Such evidence is not easily contestable, especially in view of the close connection between Shakespeare and the editors of the Folio, and the fact that Meres seems to have been sufficiently familiar with Shakespeare to have known of his privately circulated sonnets some eleven years before they were first printed. But in spite of these facts, the play, largely because of its repulsive theme, the crudeness of workmanship displayed throughout, the un-Shakespearean quality of many of its lines, and the presence in the text of numerous traces of the work of other authors, has been a storm-centre in Shakespearean criticism for over two centuries, and to-day it finds itself rejected, either partially or wholly, by far the greater number of editors and critics.

The first doubt as to Shakespeare's authorship of which we have any record is contained in the preface to Edward Ravenscroft's revision of the play in 1687, wherein he says: 'I have been told by some anciently conversant with the stage that it was not originally his, but brought by a private author to be acted, and he only gave some master-touches to one or two of the principal parts or characters; this I am apt to believe, because 't is the most incorrect and indigested piece in all his works. It seems rather a heap of rubbish than a structure.'

The integrity of Ravenscroft is discredited by Langbaine, who intimates that Ravenscroft was merely trying to belittle Shakespeare in order to exalt himself. He quotes part of the prologue which Ravenscroft originally prefixed to his revision of Titus in 1678, in which he called the play Shakespeare's and produced it as such, saying of his own part in it that he had

> 'but winnow'd Shakespeare's corn,
> So far he was from robbing him of 's treasure,
> That he did add his own, to make full measure.'

Ravenscroft's statement is, however, accepted in substance by the majority of critics since his day.

External evidence against Shakespeare's authorship of Titus has been found in the absence of his name from all three Quartos of the play. The conclusiveness of this evidence is impaired, however, by the fact that the poet's name does not appear on any of the Quartos of Henry V, or on any of the first three Quartos of Romeo and Juliet.

5 In the work referred to in the History of the Play.

Eighteenth-century critics and editors, with the exception of Capell, denied the Shakespearean authorship of the play. Theobald thought Shakespeare might have added 'a few fine touches' to the play. Johnson, Farmer, and Steevens, reject the Shakespearean theory entirely. Johnson says of it: 'All the editors and critics agree in supposing this play spurious. I see no reason for differing from them; for the colour of the style is wholly different from that of the other plays, and there is an attempt at regular versification, and artificial closes, not always inelegant, yet seldom pleasing. The barbarity of the spectacles and the general massacre, which are here exhibited, can scarcely be conceived tolerable to any audience, yet we are told by Jonson that they were not only borne but praised. That Shakespeare wrote any part of it, though Theobald declares it incontestable, I see no reason for believing. . . . I do not find Shakespeare's touches very discernible.' Malone thought that Shakespeare might have written a few lines in the play, or perhaps have given some assistance to the author in revising it.

In the nineteenth century, critics were more widely divided in their opinions. Seymour, Drake, Singer, the Coleridges, Hallam, Dyce, Fleay, and others denied that Shakespeare had any part in its composition. Furnivall (Introduction to Leopold Shakspere), Ingleby (Shakespeare: The Man and the Book), Dowden (Shakspere: His Mind and Art), Herford (Introduction to Eversley Shakespeare), Hudson, and Rolfe, agreed that very little of the play could have been written by Shakespeare. On the other hand, a group of critics of whom we may name Collier (Annals of the Stage, 1831), Verplanck (Illustrated Shakespeare, 1847), Knight (Pictorial Shakespeare, 1867), Appleton Morgan (Bankside Shakespeare, 1890), and Crawford ('The Date and Authenticity of "Titus Andronicus," ' Shakespeare Jahrbuch, 1900), considered the play the work of Shakespeare, his earliest and crudest composition, produced when he was still under the influence of his predecessors. The latter view was concurred in almost unanimously by the German school: Schlegel, Delius, Bodenstedt, Franz Horn, Ulrici, Kurz, Sarrazin, Brandl, Creizenach, and Schröer. Gervinus, as in other matters of Shakespearean criticism, dissented from the opinion of his countrymen, and sided with the British school which denied Shakespeare's authorship of Titus.

The twentieth century brought with it the discovery of the First Quarto of Titus, and consequent fresh and lengthy discussions as to its authorship. There was a revival in certain quarters of the tendency to consider the play a work of Shakespeare's earlier days, and among the adherents of this opinion were Collins, Boas, Saintsbury, McCallum, and Raleigh. Courthope, in the appendix, 'On the Authenticity of Some of the Early Plays Assigned to Shakespeare, and their Relationship to the Development of his Dramatic Genius,' to his History of English Poetry, vol. iv, 1903, espouses the theory of the Shakespearean authorship of Titus. His formal conclusion is 'That there are no sufficient internal reasons to warrant us in resisting the testimony of the folio of 1623 that Titus Andronicus and King Henry VI. are the work of Shakespeare.' Greg, in his edition of Henslowe's Diary (II. 161), gives his opinion of the circumstances of Shakespeare's connection with Titus: 'I fail to discover any clear internal evidence of Shakespeare having touched the play at all, though there are a few lines whose Shakespearian authorship I do not think impossible. . . . The Chamberlain's men, following their practice in the case of the other Pembroke's plays, Hamlet and the Taming of a Shrew, caused Titus to be worked over by a young member of their company named William Shakespeare. Thus revised the piece achieved sufficient success to call for notice by Francis Meres in 1598, and thenceforth passed as one of the "works" of the favourite playwright-actor. This MS. perished in the fire at the Globe in 1613. Wishing to replace their prompt copy the King's men procured a copy of the printed edition (1611), a device to which they certainly resorted in other cases too. In this they made certain alterations in the stage directions, and in doing so noticed the absence of one scene at least (III.ii.) which they were in the habit of acting and which had proved popular. This the actors were able to reconstruct from memory, and a manuscript insertion of some 85 lines was made in the quarto. Ten years later this doctored prompt copy was sent to press for the text of the collected folio.'

So far as there may be said to be a prevailing theory among American students, it is that Shakespeare is the reviser, to some extent, of an older play. But as to the author or authors of the original work, and as to the nature and extent of the revision, there is considerable latitude of opinion. Among American students of the play there are to be mentioned Schelling, Fuller, Baker, Wendell, Stoll, H. D. Gray, and Parrott. J. Q. Adams, in his Life of Shakespeare, 1923 (p. 134), pictures Shakespeare shortly after the death of Marlowe 'exercising his skill in touching up several of the old stock pieces belonging to the company, plays, no doubt, in which he himself had been called upon to act. Perhaps one of these was Titus Andronicus, mainly, if not entirely, by George Peele. . . . Shakespeare could hardly have had a genuine artistic interest in the bloody Titus, but his business shrewdness showed him the opportunity of turning it into a great money-maker for his company.'

The two lengthiest recent discussions of the authorship of the play are by H. B. Baildon (Arden Shakespeare, 1904), who believes the play to be substantially and essentially the work of Shakespeare, and J. M. Robertson, whose elaborate study, Did Shakespeare Write 'Titus Andronicus'?, 1905, revised in 1924 as An Introduction to the Study of the Shakespeare Canon, Proceeding on the Problem of 'Titus Andronicus,' rejects in toto the theory that the play is the work of Shakespeare.

The arguments concerning the Shakespearean authorship of Titus turn largely on the consideration of questions of the metrical construction, versification, vocabulary, characters, theme, and general style of the play. Few hard and fast conclusions can be drawn from all the evidence produced, however, as there is little agreement among critics as to its proper interpretation. Studies of the metre of the play, with special attention to the number of double and triple endings, riming lines, and the quality of the blank verse employed in it, have been made in endeavors to throw light on the question of authorship, but nothing definitely conclusive has come of it, so varied are the constructions placed upon the data obtained. Again, the elaborate investigations of the style of the play and the innumerable similarities of idea and expression between Titus and other Elizabethan plays have resulted in the discovery of much valuable information as to the wholesale borrowings of the writers of the time, but the findings are construed in widely different ways. What seems to one critic or school convincing evidence of Shakespearean workmanship, is often quite as convincing to another that Shakespeare had nothing to do with the play. Flügel, for instance, thought Aaron as un-Shakespearean as could be, whereas Saintsbury, Collins, Parrott, and others have found him genuinely Shakespearean. Schröer and Parrott, again, consider the classical allusions quite in Shakespeare's manner; but, says Robertson, who finds the classical allusions thoroughly pre-Shakespearean, 'what is obviously non-Shakespearean is the classicism of the play.' Not only are the critics in disagreement with one another, but they are not consistent with themselves. Schröer, whose study, Über Titus Andronicus, 1891, is the most comprehensive of the German arguments advocating Shakespeare's authorship of the play, contends, as Robertson notes, that 'verbal coincidence between two poems speaks rather against than for identity of authorship—' (p. 73), and yet some fifty-two pages later he argues that Aaron's praise of blackness (IV.ii.74, 102) is a favorite idea with Shakespeare, because we have it again in Love's Labour's Lost (V.ii.20, 41).

The attempts at choosing what in the play is genuinely Shakespearean, as distinguished from what may be considered the work of his supposed collaborators, have not met with any greater success. Almost every editor who accepts in part the Shakespearean hypothesis has his favorite list of selections which he believes authentic. Such passages consist in most cases of the more lyrical sections, and include, of course, all the better lines of the tragedy. But there is a remarkable disagreement among them, and such selections, if put together properly, would constitute almost the whole of the play. Coleridge, from a poet's point of view, considered as worthy of Shakespeare only some forty lines from the 'Revenge' scene (V.ii.21-60), whereas Swinburne, from another poet's point of view, disregarded all but the 'Clown' scene (IV. iii.). The one scene on which there has been more general agreement, perhaps, than on any other, is the second scene of Act III, which appeared for the first time in the Folio, and therefore attracts attention to itself as having perhaps come from Shakespeare's own copy or his MSS. The whole process of picking and choosing must be considered futile, however, and especially since half of the passages tagged as certainly Shakespearean have been shown to be similar to, or identical with, passages in Peele, Greene, Marlowe, and others.

Nor do we find any grounds for more definite conclusions when we examine the passages in Titus which are most strikingly suggestive of lines and scenes in Shakespeare's authenticated works. The theme of Lucrece is similar to that of the plot in which Lavinia figures, but we cannot therefore conclude that Shakespeare is necessarily the author of Titus because he is the author of Lucrece. The poem may, indeed, have been suggested by the play, or the play by the poem, but identity of authorship is no more requisite in such a supposition than it is if we suppose the plot of Shylock to have been suggested by Marlowe's Jew of Malta. It must be admitted that Aaron's lines (IV.ii.104, 105),

'For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,'

suggest those of Richard II (III.ii.54, 55),

'Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm off from an anointed king,'

and still further the cry of Lady Macbeth (Macbeth, II.ii.60, 61),

'Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood
Clean from my hand?'

But we are not justified in concluding that the author of the two later passages is necessarily the author of the first. Shakespeare was as imitative as he was repetitive, even if we assume that he had Aaron's lines in mind when he was composing the two later passages.

There is a clear verbal parallel between lines in Tamora's speech (II.iii.17-19),

'And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once, . . .'

and two lines (695, 696) of Venus and Adonis,

'Thus do they [the hounds] spend their mouths:
Echo replies
As if another chase were in the skies.'

As Parrott points out,[6] these parallels, and others which he gives, are unmistakable, and he accordingly assigns the paralleled lines and Tamora's speech to Shakespeare; but, as Robertson observes, it does not follow necessarily that Shakespeare must himself have written Tamora's speech. Any of his contemporaries would have copied such a fine passage without scruple if he had wished to do so.

The studies of the characters of the play in relation to those of others of Shakespeare's plays have been no more conclusive in their results. Aaron, for example, is quite generally considered, by all who uphold Shakespeare's intimate connection with the play, as a first draft and prototype of Shylock, Iago, Richard III, Edmund, and most of Shakespeare's villains. It is by external and superficial implications, however, rather than by inherent likenesses that he is connected with them. He is a Moor, and the tragedy of Othello the Moor is at once suggested, wherein, as it happens, there is Iago, a villain in the popular sense, and certain similarities in the characters of Iago and Aaron begin to appear. But fundamentally and essentially Aaron and Iago are not of the same stripe. Aaron is pre-Shakespearean rather than Shakespearean, and belongs to the tribe of Tamburlaine, Barabas, Ithamore, Eleazar, and Peele's Moor, Muly Muhamet, rather than to that of Iago. His melodramatic rant and braggadocio, and his comic-opera frenzy for evil-doing, form a striking contrast to the tragically sinister and motiveless malignity of Iago. As for his relation to Shylock, is not the apparent connection between them based subconsciously on the circumstance of their being members respectively of races alike alien and despised from the Elizabethan point of view? Similarities and parallels between Tamora, and the Margaret of the Henry VI trilogy (who is fundamentally non-Shakespearean), on the one hand, and Lady Macbeth on the other, seem equally superficial. The three have little in common but their imperiousness. The treatment of the character of Titus certainly does not suggest Shakespeare's handling of the characters of Lear, Othello, and Macbeth. Nor does young Lucius seem to have more than his tender years in common with Prince Arthur and the young princes of Richard III. There is, however, one character, the Clown, in Titus, who is quite in the manner and tradition of Shakespeare, but even he is not distinctively and exclusively Shakespearean. Elizabethan and Tudor drama have clowns and to spare, and the clown of Titus is not more like the clowns of Shakespeare than he is like those of his contemporaries. But he is the one typically Shakespearean thing in the entire play, and he may very well be conceded to Shakespeare as being of a piece with Launce, Launcelot Gobbo, and Elbow, and as constituting one of the 'master-touches' which Ravenscroft represents Shakespeare as imparting to the play.

6 'Shakespeare's Revision of "Titus Andronicus,"' Mod. Lang. Rev., xiv. 27, 28.

Previous study of characters, metre, phrasing, and general stylistic qualities cannot, therefore, be said to have produced any conclusive or convincing reasons for considering Titus Shakespeare's. The work of critics, ranging from the early observations of Steevens and Malone down to the exhaustive researches of Robertson, have proved that the play is a collection of materials drawn from a common stock used by all Elizabethan dramatists, and that, in particular, it is a tissue of words, phrases, and sentiments taken largely from Peele, Greene, Kyd, Marlowe, and Lodge. The author, or authors, of Titus Andronicus, whoever they were, simply followed the common habit of turning to other authors and similar works: what they thought they might require, they went and took to furnish out a lamentable Roman tragedy.

Close examination of the text of Titus, therefore, reveals no more reason for including it in the canon of Shakespeare's plays than could be found for including many of those pre-Shakespearean plays with which it is organically and spiritually connected—the Spanish Tragedy, Lust's Dominion, Selimus, the Battle of Alcazar, the Troublesome Reign, the Chronicle History of King Leir, and others.

But it is not merely or chiefly the negative argument—that Titus is lacking in distinctive and convincing Shakespearean characteristics—that justifies the rejection of the play as Shakespeare's, but the more fundamental and positive fact that it contains much that is certainly not Shakespeare's and that is as certainly the work of other Elizabethans. That the version of the play which was printed in the 1594 Quarto could not have been completed earlier than the middle of the year 1593 is proved by the fact that it copies directly or indirectly many phrases and passages of Peele's Honour of the Garter, which was written to celebrate an event that occurred on June 26, 1593; and yet the language, the metre, and the style of Titus is noticeably different from that of the works which Shakespeare had already written and was writing during this particular period—the Comedy of Errors, Love's Labour's Lost, Two Gentlemen of Verona, Richard III, and A Midsummer Night's Dream, and the poems, Venus and Adonis and Lucrece. As late as 1593 he would hardly have written such bad lines or constructed so poor a play. If he had written it as early as 1589 or 1590, he could hardly have written in a style so wholly unlike that of the Comedy of Errors and Love's Labour's Lost, which he was presumably engaged in composing at that time.

Moreover, the language of Titus is shot through with words and expressions which Shakespeare did not use in any of his unquestioned works. A list of these words peculiar to Titus, first begun by Fleay, and corrected and added to by Grosart, Verity, and latterly by Robertson, contains upwards of a hundred terms which are the common property of Peele, Greene, and Kyd, respectively, but are never used by Shakespeare. If to these be added the host of classical allusions and tags found in Titus and in no other Shakespearean work, the linguistic medium of the play becomes a thing apart in the language of the Shakespearean canon.

But more fundamental than all these considerations of style, metre, vocabulary, and characterization, is the fact that the theme and the author's handling of it, and the general atmosphere and spirit of Titus Andronicus, are wholly unlike and utterly alien to anything we have of Shakespeare, or could expect from him. A theme of such unmitigated horror never appealed to Shakespeare in his later career as a dramatist, and least of all could it have appealed to the young Shakespeare of Love's Labour's Lost and the Midsummer Night's Dream. He came closest to such themes in Romeo and Juliet in the year following the first publication of Titus, and in Hamlet, a few years later, and his method of handling them in those plays is the best evidence of what he could do and would do with the type of tragedy bequeathed to him by Seneca and Kyd. In none of his tragedies does he deal with blood for blood's sake, but in Titus there is no relief from bloodletting, either by the inevitable Shakespearean interspersion of comic scenes, or by the interjection of another and more romantic plot. Horrors are heaped on horrors in a way that would have sickened the sentimental author of Shakespeare's early plays, and would have disgusted the author of Othello and King Lear. And all to no purpose. In Romeo and Juliet, the tragedy and the bloodshed result in the burying of the parents' strife; in Othello, it is the cause which leads a man great of heart to slay Desdemona, not without recognizing the pity of it; in King Lear, the evil consumes itself, and a clear morning follows the storm of passion and tragedy. But in Titus Andronicus it is all

'Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse
Without all hope of day.'

The tragic energy all goes for nothing; Titus's madness is without any redeeming element. Shakespeare might have been capable of producing the bad lines of the play, its crude construction, its feeble characterization, and its poor workmanship in general, but that he could have written at any time a play so wholly unlike any of his other work seems incredible. If Titus Andronicus be Shakespeare's, we shall have to posit a complete change in his mental, spiritual, and artistic processes and attitudes between the time of its composition and the date when he began to produce his other dramatic work.

If Shakespeare, then, did not write Titus, who was the author of the piece? Any one of a half-dozen of his contemporaries is a more likely candidate for the questionable honor. Its Senecanism and melodrama it has in common with a score of other tragedies of the time. Its mannerisms of style, versification, and vocabulary are those of Kyd, Marlowe, Greene, Peele, and Lodge. Accordingly, four at least of these have been suggested as its possible author, and none of them has wanted defenders among the critics to make good his claim.

In the process of looking for specific traces of different hands in the play, however, many difficulties present themselves. Some idea of the general state of criticism with regard to this particular matter may be gained from a glance at the various interpretations placed on a single passage from Aaron's speech (II.i.1-9):

'Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of Fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash,
Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora.'

Bullen, in his edition of Marlowe's plays, was of the opinion that this passage was written by Marlowe, in view of Marlowe's having written, in the third chorus of Act III of Faustus, the line,

'Did mount himself to scale Olympus' top.'

Appleton Morgan (Bankside Shakespeare) thinks the passage Shakespeare's without question, and considers it a remarkably good imitation of Marlowe's style. Crawford, however, sees in lines 3-5 of the passage an echo of Peele's Honour of the Garter (line 410),

'Out of Oblivion's reach or Envy's shot,'

while Robertson finds in line 7 a direct echo of a line from Peele's Anglorum Feriæ,

'Gallops the zodiac in his fiery wain,'

and notes other lines from Peele's David and Bethsabe strikingly parallel in structure and abounding in verbal coincidences. Such resemblances are, indeed, very striking, but do they definitely prove more than that there was a singular community of thought and similarity of expression, and no little amount of imitation, among Elizabethan poets? And what, to give only one instance, shall be said of the lines in the Merchant of Venice (IV.i.10, 11),

'no lawful means can carry me
Out of his envy's reach'?

That they are Shakespeare's has never been questioned, but if they had occurred in Titus, would they not certainly be catalogued as Peele's or Marlowe's by just such reasoning? If mere similarity or identity of thought or expression is to be accepted as a criterion of authorship, then almost any Elizabethan dramatist may be proved to have written parts of almost any play of the time.

The play is so patently of the same species as the Spanish Tragedy, that Kyd was early suggested by Farmer as author of Titus. Hartley Coleridge concurred in this, and Fleay, Sir Sidney Lee, Parrott, and Robertson have since thought Kyd a probable first draftsman of the play. Boswell preferred to consider Marlowe, and Fleay also inclined to this opinion. The character of Aaron is by almost all critics conceded to be modeled on Marlowe's Barabas and Ithamore. Much of the verse also, if not Marlowe's, is close imitation of that poet's lines. The share of Robert Greene in Titus has received more attention than that of any other of the possible authors except Peele. In a long and scholarly article[7] Grosart set forth his many claims to the authorship, and he has received the serious consideration of every critic since. The play unquestionably contains much that was written by Greene, but whether his passages got into it by his own pen, or whether his imitators put them there is a problem that cannot be solved. Parrott and Robertson agree substantially in conceding to Greene's authorship the first scene of Act II, and traces of his manner are not wanting throughout the play. Grant White thought Titus was written by Greene, Marlowe, and Shakespeare, and later revised by Shakespeare.

But of all those for whom the authorship of Titus is claimed, George Peele is the foremost. His influence and his mannerisms are evident throughout the play, which is as Peelean in spirit as it is non-Shakespearean. Indeed, if the play were not specially credited to Shakespeare, there can be little doubt that it would be readily assigned to Peele by the majority of students of Elizabethan drama. 'Almost every page,' says Dugdale Sykes, 'exhibits traces of Peele's vocabulary and phrasing.[8] At least one third of the entire play has been shown to be directly or indirectly copied from his works. The most important developments in the study and criticism of Titus during the present century have centered in the question of Peele's connection with the play, and to the earlier proofs of Fleay, Verity, and Crawford of his great share in its text, abundant evidence has been added by the exhaustive researches of Sykes and Robertson. J. Q. Adams adheres to the theory of Peele's authorship of the play in his Life, and it is not unreasonable to expect that future critics may consider the evidence sufficient to establish his claim to the play. When all allowances are made for the Elizabethan tendency toward imitation of other works, the play still remains characteristically Peelean, exhibiting all his sentimentality, his weakness for rodomontade, his fondness for the historical background in tragedy, his peculiar interest in Oriental themes, his love of martial exploits and exploiters, and his glorification of the fatherland, identical here with Rome, as it is in David and Bethsabe with Judæa. Surely there was no one so likely as Peele to have chosen such a subject for a tragedy, and, given the theme here found, there can be little doubt that he would have written substantially what we have in Titus Andronicus.

What conclusions, then, are to be drawn from all the mass of critical discussion on the authorship of Titus Andronicus, and the scores of conflicting interpretations and opinions of the play which have arisen during the two centuries and a half since Ravenscroft gave to the world the story of the 'private author'? There are certain general conclusions that do no violence to such facts as we have, and can be brought into reasonable conformity with the evidence available. First, the tragedy as it stands in the Folio of 1623 does not seem at all Shakespearean in substance, or treatment, or spirit. What we know of the mind and the tastes of Shakespeare forbids the ascription of this play to his pen, even as its earliest and crudest production. Secondly, from what is known of the manner, tastes, and workmanship of his contemporaries, the presumption is that George Peele is substantially the author of Titus Andronicus, with assistance, perhaps, from Robert Greene. Thirdly, the fact that the play was listed as Shakespeare's by Meres, and was printed as Shakespeare's in the Folio by Heminges and Condell, warrants the conclusion that Shakespeare retouched it to some extent. And thus we arrive, by a most circuitous process of reasoning, exactly where the controversy started, with Ravenscroft's statement in 1687. The most that Shakespeare could have had to do with Titus Andronicus is, we must believe, no more than what those 'anciently conversant with the stage' gave as their testimony—'he only gave some master-touches to one or two of the principal parts or characters.'

The Ballad of Titus Andronicus's Complaint

The following ballad, referred to in Sources of the Play, is found in Book II of the first volume of Percy's Reliques. 'Throughout the ballad,' says Grant White, 'there is evident effort to compress all the incidents of the story within as brief a relation as possible; and this is not the style of a ballad written for the ballad's sake.'

7 'Was Robert Greene Substantially the Author of "Titus Andronicus"?' Englische Studien, xxii. 389-436.

8 Sidelights on Shakespeare, 1919, p. 125.

Titus Andronicus's Complaint

You noble minds, and famous martiall wights,
That in defence of native country fights,
Give eare to me, that ten yeeres fought for Rome,
Yet reapt disgrace at my returning home.

In Rome I lived in fame fulle threescore yeeres,
My name beloved was of all my peeres;
Full five and twenty valiant sonnes I had,
Whose forwarde vertues made their father glad.

For when Rome's foes their warlike forces bent,
Against them stille my sonnes and I were sent;
Against the Goths full ten yeeres weary warre
We spent, receiving many a bloudy scarre.

Just two and twenty of my sonnes were slaine
Before we did returne to Rome againe:
Of five and twenty sonnes, I brought but three
Alive, the stately towers of Rome to see.

When wars were done, I conquest home did bring,
And did present my prisoners to the king,
The queene of Goths, her sons, and eke a moore,
Which did such murders, like was nere before.

The emperour did make this queene his wife,
Which bred in Rome debate and deadlie strife;
The moore, with her two sonnes did growe soe proud,
That none like them in Rome might bee allowd.

The moore soe pleas'd this new-made empress' eie,
That she consented to him secretlye
For to abuse her husbands marriage bed,
And soe in time a blackamore she bred.

Then she, whose thoughts to murder were inclinde,
Consented with the moore of bloody minde
Against myselfe, my kin, and all my friendes,
In cruell sort to bring them to their endes.

Soe when in age I thought to live in peace,
Both care and griefe began then to increase:
Amongst my sonnes I had one daughter bright,
Which joy'd, and pleased best my aged sight:

My deare Lavinia was betrothed than
To Cesars sonne, a young and noble man:
Who in a hunting by the emperours wife
And her two sonnes, bereaved was of life.

He being slaine, was cast in cruel wise,
Into a darksome den from light of skies:
The cruell moore did come that way as then
With my three sonnes, who fell into the den.

The moore then fetcht the emperour with speed,
For to accuse them of that murderous deed;
And when my sonnes within the den were found,
In wrongfull prison they were cast and bound.

But nowe, behold! what wounded most my mind,
The empresses two sonnes of savage kind
My daughter ravished without remorse,
And took away her honour, quite perforce.

When they had tasted of soe sweete a flowre,
Fearing this sweete should shortly turn to sowre,
They cutt her tongue, whereby she could not tell
How that dishonoure unto her befell.

Then both her hands they basely cutt off quite,
Whereby their wickednesse she could not write;
Nor with her needle on her sampler sowe
The bloudye workers of her direfull woe.

My brother Marcus found her in the wood,
Staining the grassie ground with purple bloud,
That trickled from her stumpes, and bloudlesse armes:
Noe tongue at all she had to tell her harmes.

But when I sawe her in that woefull case,
With teares of bloud I wet mine aged face:
For my Lavinia I lamented more
Then for my two and twenty sonnes before.

When as I sawe she could not write nor speake,
With grief mine aged heart began to breake;
We spred an heape of sand upon the ground,
Whereby those bloudy tyrants out we found.

For with a staffe, without the helpe of hand,
She writt these wordes upon the plat of sand:
"The lustfull sonnes of the proud emperesse
Are doers of this hateful wickednesse."

I tore the milk-white hairs from off mine head,
I curst the houre wherein I first was bred,
I wisht this hand, that fought for countrie's fame,
In cradle rockt, had first been stroken lame.

The moore delighting still in villainy
Did say, to sett my sonnes from prison free
I should unto the king my right hand give,
And then my three imprisoned sonnes should live.

The moore I caused to strike it off with speede,
Whereat I grieved not to see it bleed,
But for my sonnes would willingly impart,
And for their ransome send my bleeding heart.

But as my life did linger thus in paine,
They sent to me my bootlesse hand againe,
And therewithal the heades of my three sonnes,
Which filld my dying heart with fresher moanes.

Then past reliefe I upp and downe did goe,
And with my teares writ in the dust my woe:
I shot my arrowes towards heaven hie,
And for revenge to hell often did crye.

The empresse then, thinking that I was mad,
Like Furies she and both her sonnes were clad,
(She nam'd Revenge, and Rape and Murder they)
To undermine and heare what I would say.

I fed their foolish veines a certaine space,
Untill my friendes did find a secret place,
Where both her sonnes unto a post were bound,
And just revenge in cruell sort was found.

I cut their throates, my daughter held the pan
Betwixt her stumpes, wherein the bloud it ran:
And then I ground their bones to powder small,
And made a paste for pyes streight therewithall.

Then withe their fleshe I made two mighty pyes,
And at a banquet served in stately wise:
Before the empresse set this lothsome meat;
So of her sonnes own flesh she well did eat.

Myself bereav'd my daughter then of life,
The empresse then I slewe with bloudy knife,
And stabb'd the emperour immediatelie,
And then myself: even soe did Titus die.

Then this revenge against the moore was found,
Alive they sett him halfe into the ground,
Whereas he stood untill such time he starv'd.
And soe God send all murderers may be serv'd.

Act First ❧ Scene First

[Rome. Before the Capitol. The Tomb of the Andronici appearing] Flourish. Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft; and then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one door, and Bassianus and his Followers at the other, with drum and colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords:
I am his first-born son that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.
Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right,
If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol,
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility;
But let desert in pure election shine,
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus, aloft, with the crown.

Mar. Princes, that strive by factions and by friends
Ambitiously for rule and empery,
Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand
A special party, have, by common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius,
For many good and great deserts to Rome;
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls;
He by the senate is accited home
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths;
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yok'd a nation, strong, train'd up in arms.
Ten years are spent since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride: five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field;
And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us entreat, by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
That you withdraw you and abate your strength;
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.
Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!
Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons,
And her to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends,
And to my fortunes and the people's favour
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.
Exeunt Soldiers [of Bassianus].
Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,
I thank you all and here dismiss you all;
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause.
[Exeunt Soldiers of Saturninus.]
Rome, be as just and gracious unto me
As I am confident and kind to thee.
Open the gates, and let me in.
Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.
Flourish. They go up into the Senate-house.

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way! the good Andronicus,
Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd
From where he circumscribed with his sword,
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Sound drums and trumpets, and then enter two of Titus's Sons [Martius and Mutius]; after them two Men bearing a Coffin covered with black; then two other Sons [Lucius and Quintus]. After them, Titus Andronicus; and then Tamora, the Queen of Goths, and her three Sons, [Alarbus,] Chiron, and Demetrius, with Aaron the Moor, and Others, [Prisoners,] as many as can be. They set down the Coffin, and Titus speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!
Lo! as the bark, that hath discharg'd her fraught,
Returns with precious lading to the bay
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,
Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears,
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!
Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that King Priam had,
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead!
These that survive, let Rome reward with love;
These that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial among their ancestors.
Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my sword.
Titus, unkind and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?
Make way to lay them by their brethren. They open the tomb.
There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars!
O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,

Scene One, S. d. aloft: cf. n. 4 successive title: title to the succession 8 age: seniority 9 Romans: cf. n. 16 pure election: free choice 19 empery: imperial power 22 election: nomination 27 accited: summoned 35 In coffins from the field: cf. n. 42 pretend: profess 47 affy: have faith

64 Cf. n. 68 circumscribed: restrained 70 weeds: garments 71 fraught: freight 73 anchorage: anchor 77 great defender: Jupiter Capitolinus, to whom the Capitol was sacred

How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more!
Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,
That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthy prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.
Tit. I give him you, the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen.
Tam. Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror,
Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son:
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O! think my sons to be as dear to me.
Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs and return,
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke,
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O! if to fight for king and commonweal
Were piety in thine, it is in these.
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood!
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful;
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge:
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son!
Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.
These are their brethren, whom your Goths beheld
Alive and dead, and for their brethren slain
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:
To this your son is mark'd, and die he must,
T'appease their groaning shadows that are gone.
Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

Exeunt [Titus's] Sons with Alarbus.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!
Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?
Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.
Alarbus goes to rest, and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threatening look.
Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal
The self-same gods, that arm'd the Queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora, the Queen of Goths—
When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen—
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Enter the Sons of Andronicus again.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites. Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.
Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren,
And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.
Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

Flourish. Then sound trumpets, and lay the coffin in the tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned grudges, here are no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:
In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Enter Lavinia.

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long;
My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears
I render for my brethren's obsequies;
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome.
O! bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud.
Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd
The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

[Enter, below, Marcus Andronicus and Tribunes; re-enter Saturninus, Bassianus, and Others.]

Mar. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!
Tit. Thanks, gentle Tribune, noble brother Marcus.
Mar. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars,
You that survive, and you that sleep in fame!
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your swords;
But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,
This palliament of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late-deceased emperor's sons:
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.
Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness.
What should I don this robe, and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to-day,
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country.
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world:

98 Ad manes fratrum: to the shades of [our] brothers; cf. n. 106 passion: suffering 117-119 Cf. n. 121 Patient: quiet 131 Scythia; cf. n. 132 Oppose: compare 136 Queen of Troy: Hecuba 138 Thracian tyrant; cf. n. 141 quit: requite

154 grudges; cf. n. 165 reserv'd: preserved 168 date: duration; cf. n. 177 Solon's happiness; cf. n. 182 palliament: cloak (Lat. pallium), Roman robe of state 183 name thee in election: nominate thee 185 candidatus: a candidate 189 What: why

Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.
Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.
Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?—
Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.
Sat. Romans, do me right:
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not
Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor.
Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!
Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That noble-minded Titus means to thee!
Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee
The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.
Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die;
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be; and thanks to men
Of noble minds is honourable meed.
Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes here,
I ask your voices and your suffrages:
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?
Tribunes. To gratify the good Andronicus,
And gratulate his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.
Tit. Tribunes, I thank you; and this suit I make,
That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this commonweal:
Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say, 'Long live our emperor!'
Mar. With voices and applause of every sort,
Patricians and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor,
And say, 'Long live our Emperor Saturnine!'
A long flourish till they come down.
Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day,
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness:
And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress,
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse.
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?
Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this match
I hold me highly honour'd of your Grace:
And here in sight of Rome to Saturnine,
King and commander of our commonweal,
The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;
Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord:
Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.
Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts
Rome shall record, and, when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.
Tit. [To Tamora.] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;
To him that, for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly and your followers.
Sat. [Aside.] A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue
That I would choose, were I to choose anew.
[To Tamora.] Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance:
Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer,
Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome:
Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comforts you
Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths.
Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?
Lav. Not I, my lord; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.
Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us go;
Ransomless here we set our prisoners free:
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum.
[Flourish. Saturninus courts Tamora in dumb show.]
Bas. [Seizing Lavinia.] Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine.
Tit. How, sir! Are you in earnest then, my lord?
Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolv'd withal
To do myself this reason and this right.
Mar. Suum cuique is our Roman justice:
This prince in justice seizeth but his own.
Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live.
Tit. Traitors, avaunt! Where is the emperor's guard?
Treason, my lord! Lavinia is surpris'd.
Sat. Surpris'd! By whom?
Bas. By him that justly may
Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.
[Exeunt Marcus and Bassianus with Lavinia.]
Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,
And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.
[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.]
Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.
Mut. My lord, you pass not here.
Tit. What! villain boy; Barr'st me my way in Rome? He kills him.
Mut. Help, Lucius, help!

[Exeunt, during the fray, Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron, and Aaron. Re-enter Lucius.]

Luc. My lord, you are unjust; and, more than so,
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.
Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine;
My sons would never so dishonour me.
Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.
Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife
That is another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit.]

Enter, aloft, the Emperor with Tamora and her two Sons, and Aaron the Moor.

201 obtain and ask: obtain by merely asking 218 people's tribunes; cf. n. 222 gratulate: celebrate 225 create: elect 227 Titan's: the sun god's 238 gentleness: noble conduct 239 onset: beginning

266 cheer: countenance 271 Can: who can 273 sith: since 283 Suum cuique: to every man his due

Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock:
I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once;
Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me.
Was none in Rome to make a stale
But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus,
Agreed these deeds with that proud brag of thine,
That saidst I begg'd the empire at thy hands.
Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these!
Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece
To him that flourish'd for her with his sword.
A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy;
One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,
To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.
Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart.
Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of Goths,
That like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her nymphs,
Dost overshine the gallant'st dames of Rome,
If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,
Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
And will create thee Empress of Rome.
Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?
And here I swear by all the Roman gods,
Sith priest and holy water are so near,
And tapers burn so bright, and everything
In readiness for Hymenæus stand,
I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
Or climb my palace, till from forth this place
I lead espous'd my bride along with me.
Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear,
If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths,
She will a handmaid be to his desires,
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.
Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon. Lords, accompany
Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,
Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered:
There shall we consummate our spousal rights.
Exeunt omnes [but Titus].
Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.
Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Enter Marcus and Titus's Sons.

Mar. O Titus, see! O, see what thou hast done!
In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.
Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,
Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed
That hath dishonour'd all our family:
Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!
Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes;
Give Mutius burial with our brethren.
Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb.
This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified:
Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors
Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls.
Bury him where you can; he comes not here.
Mar. My lord, this is impiety in you.
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him;
He must be buried with his brethren.
Titus's two Sons speak.
[Quin.] / [Mart.] And shall, or him we will accompany.
Tit. And shall! What villain was it spake that word?
Titus's Son [Quintus] speaks.
[Quin.] He that would vouch it in any place but here.
Tit. What! would you bury him in my despite?
Mar. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.
Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,
And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded:
My foes I do repute you every one;
So trouble me no more, but get you gone.
1. Son [Mart.] He is not with himself; let us withdraw.
2. Son [Quin.] Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.
The Brother and the Sons kneel.
Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead,—
2. Son. Father, and in that name doth nature speak,—
Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.
Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—
Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all,—
Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter
His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.
Thou art a Roman; be not barbarous:
The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax
That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son
Did graciously plead for his funerals.
Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.
Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise.
The dismal'st day is this that e'er I saw,
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.
They put him in the tomb.
Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,
Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb.
They all kneel and say,
[All.] No man shed tears for noble Mutius;
He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.
[Exeunt all but Marcus and Titus.]
Mar. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—
How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths
Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?
Tit. I know not, Marcus; but I know it is;
Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell.
Is she not, then, beholding to the man
That brought her for this high good turn so far?
[Mar.] Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Enter the Emperor, Tamora and her two Sons, with the Moor, at one door. Enter, at the other door, Bassianus and Lavinia, with Others.

307 I'll . . . leisure: I'll be in no hurry to trust 310 stale: laughing-stock 315 piece: wench 318 bandy: contend; cf. n. 319 ruffle: be disorderly 329 priest and holy water: cf. n. 331 Hymenæus: Hymen, the god of marriage 344 bid: invited 346 challenged: accused 357 re-edified: restored

375 not with himself: beside himself 379 will speed: wish to succeed Ajax: cf. n. 386 upon advice: after deliberation 387 Laertes' son: Ulysses 388 funerals: obsequies 399 dumps: low spirits 403 device: scheming 404 beholding: beholden

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize:
God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride.
Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say no more,
Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.
Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power,
Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.
Bas. Rape call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
My true-betrothed love and now my wife?
But let the laws of Rome determine all;
Meanwhile, I am possess'd of that is mine.
Sat. 'Tis good, sir: you are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.
Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,
Answer I must and shall do with my life.
Only thus much I give your Grace to know:
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd;
That, in the rescue of Lavinia,
With his own hand did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you and highly mov'd to wrath
To be controll'd in that he frankly gave:
Receive him, then, to favour, Saturnine,
That hath express'd himself in all his deeds
A father and a friend to thee and Rome.
Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds:
'Tis thou and those that have dishonour'd me.
Rome and the righteous heavens by my judge,
How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine!
Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me speak indifferently for all;
And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.
Sat. What, madam! be dishonour'd openly,
And basely put it up without revenge?
Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome forfend
I should be author to dishonour you!
But on mine honour dare I undertake
For good Lord Titus' innocence in all,
Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs.
Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,
Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.
[Aside to Saturninus.] My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last;
Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:
You are but newly planted in your throne;
Lest, then, the people, and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so supplant you for ingratitude,
Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,
Yield at entreats, and then let me alone.
I'll find a day to massacre them all,
And raze their faction and their family,
The cruel father, and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life;
And make them know what 'tis to let a queen
Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.
[Aloud.] Come, come, sweet emperor—come, Andronicus—
Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.
Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevail'd.
Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord.
These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.
Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.
This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;
And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.
For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor,
That you will be more mild and tractable.
And fear not, lords, and you, Lavinia:
By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his majesty.
[Marcus, Lavinia, and the Sons of Titus kneel.]
Luc. We do; and vow to heaven and to his highness,
That what we did was mildly as we might,
Tend'ring our sister's honour and our own.
Mar. That, on mine honour, here I do protest.
Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.
Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends:
The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace;
I will not be denied: sweetheart, look back.
Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's here,
And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults:
Stand up.
[Marcus, Lavinia, and the Others rise.]
Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend, and sure as death I sware
I would not part a bachelor from the priest.
Come; if the emperor's court can feast two brides,
You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.
Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your Grace bon jour.
Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too. Exeunt.

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Rome. Before the Palace]
Flourish. Enter Aaron alone.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of Fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash,
Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,

407 play'd your prize: cf. n. 424 opinion: reputation 428 controll'd: restrained, hindered frankly: freely 432 leave: cease 438 indifferently: impartially 441 put it up: put up with it 442 forfend: forbid 443 author . . . you: author of your dishonor 444 undertake: vouch 448 suppose: supposition 457 at entreats: to entreaties let me alone: leave everything to me

470 incorporate: incorporated, established 483 mildly as we might: as gently as possible 484 Tend'ring: having a tender regard for 493 Stand up: cf. n. 494 churl: a mean, worthless person 496 part: depart 499 love-day: cf. n. 501 To hunt the panther: cf. n. 502 bon jour: good morning 503 gramercy: many thanks (Fr. grand merci) 3 Secure of: safe from

Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora.
Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains,
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.
Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress.
To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
This siren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwrack and his commonweal's.
Hollo! what storm is this?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge
And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd,
And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.
Chi. Demetrius, thou dost overween in all
And so in this, to bear me down with braves.
'Tis not the difference of a year or two
Makes me less gracious or thee more fortunate:
I am as able and as fit as thou
To serve, and to deserve, my mistress' grace;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,
And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.
Aar. Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.
Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd,
Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side
Are you so desperate grown, to threat your friends?
Go to; have your lath glu'd within your sheath
Till you know better how to handle it.
Chi. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I have,
Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.
Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave? They draw.
Aar. Why, how now, lords!
So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly?
Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge:
I would not for a million of gold
The cause were known to them it most concerns;
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.
For shame, put up.
Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and withal
Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

7 Gallops: gallops over 8 overlooks: looks down on 14 pitch; cf. n. 16 charming: having power to charm, or cast a spell 17 Prometheus; cf. n. 18 weeds: garments 22 Semiramis; cf. n. S. d. braving: defying each other 27 grac'd: favored 28 affected: loved 29 dost overween: art presumptuous 30 braves: brags 35 approve: prove 37 Clubs, clubs!; cf. n. 38 unadvis'd: thoughtlessly, rashly 39 dancing-rapier: a sword worn only for ornament 41 lath: contemptuous term for sword; cf. n. 49 wot: know 54 put up: sheathe your swords 55 Not I; cf. n.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd,
Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform!
Aar. Away, I say!
Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.
Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous
It is to jet upon a prince's right?
What! is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
Without controlment, justice, or revenge?
Young lords, beware! an should the empress know
This discord's ground, the music would not please.
Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world:
I love Lavinia more than all the world.
Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:
Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.
Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not in Rome
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brook competitors in love?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.
Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love.
Aar. To achieve her! how?
Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore may be won;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
What, man! more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know:
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.
Aar. [Aside.] Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.
Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it.
With words, fair looks, and liberality?
What! hast thou not full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?
Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.
Chi Ay, so the turn were serv'd.
Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.
Aar. Would you had hit it too!
Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.
Why, hark ye, hark ye! and are you such fools
To square for this? Would it offend you, then,
That both should speed?
Chi. Faith, not me.
Dem. Nor me, so I were one.
Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar:
'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect; and so must you resolve
That what you cannot as you would achieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may.

64 brabble: squabble, brawl 66 jet: encroach 72 ground; cf. n. 83 propose: risk, undertake achieve: win 86 She is a woman; cf. n. 89 water glideth by the mill; cf. n. 91 shive: slice 93 Vulcan's badge; cf. n. 106 square: put oneself in a boxing attitude, quarrel 110 that you jar: that which you are quarreling about 112 affect: desire

Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.
A speedier course than ling'ring languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.
My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:
The forest walks are wide and spacious,
And many unfrequented plots there are
Fitted by kind for rape and villainy:
Single you thither, then, this dainty doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words:
This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit
To villainy and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend;
And she shall file our engines with advice,
That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
But to your wishes' height advance you both.
The emperor's court is like the house of Fame,
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears:
The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull;
There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns;
There serve your lusts, shadow'd from heaven's eye,
And revel in Lavinia's treasury.
Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.
Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream
To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
Per Styga, per manes vehor. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[A Forest near Rome]
Enter Titus Andronicus and his three Sons, making a noise with hounds and horns, and Marcus.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,
The fields are fragrant and the woods are green.
Uncouple here and let us make a bay,
And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,
And rouse the prince and ring a hunter's peal,
That all the court may echo with the noise.
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the emperor's person carefully:
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd. Wind horns.

Here a cry of hounds, and wind horns in a peal, then enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia, Chiron, Demetrius, and their Attendants.

Many good morrows to your majesty;
Madam, to you as many and as good;
I promised your Grace a hunter's peal.
Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lord;
Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

115 Lucrece: cf. n. 117 ling'ring languishment: a long-drawn-out courtship 119 solemn: formal, grand 123 by kind: by nature 127 sacred; cf. n. 130 file our engines: sharpen, or finish off, our designs 131 square yourselves: settle it between yourselves 133 house of Fame; cf. n. 140 Sit fas aut nefas: Be it right or wrong 142 Per Styga, per manes vehor: I am borne across the Styx, and among the shades of the dead; cf. n. 1 grey; cf. n. 3 Uncouple here; cf. n. bay: barking 9 I have been troubled; cf. n.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?
Lav. I say, no;
I have been broad awake two hours and more.
Sat. Come on, then; horse and chariots let us have,
And to our sport.—[To Tamora.] Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting.
Mar. I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.
Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game
Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.
Dem. [Aside.] Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A lonely part of the Forest]
Enter Aaron alone [with a bag of gold].

Aar. He that had wit would think that I had none,
To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villainy:
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest
That have their alms out of the empress' chest.
[Hides the gold.]

Enter Tamora to the Moor.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,
When everything doth make a gleeful boast?
The birds chant melody on every bush,
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun,
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground.
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down and mark their yelping noise;
And after conflict, such as was suppos'd
The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;
Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds
Be unto us as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.
Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is dominator over mine:
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence and my cloudy melancholy,

25 horse: horses 26 Makes way: opens up a passage 3 inherit: possess 9 alms . . . chest; cf. n. 17 echo mocks the hounds, etc.; cf. n. 22 The wandering prince: Æneas (cf. Vergil, Æneid 4. 165 ff.) 23 happy: lucky 31 Saturn is dominator; cf. n. 32 deadly-standing: fixedly staring like that of the dead

My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls
Even as an adder when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution?
No, madam, these are no venereal signs:
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee:
This is the day of doom for Bassianus;
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day,
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.
Now question me no more; we are espied;
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Enter Bassianus and Lavinia.

Tam. Ah! my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!
Aar. No more, great empress; Bassianus comes:
Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be. [Exit.]
Bas. Whom have we here? Rome's royal empress,
Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop?
Or is it Dian, habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?
Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!
Had I the power that some say Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actæon's; and the hounds
Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art!
Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning;
And to be doubted that your Moor and you
Are singled forth to try experiments.
Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day!
'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.
Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cimmerian
Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detested, and abominable.
Why are you sequester'd from all your train,
Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you?
Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness. I pray you, let us hence,
And let her joy her raven-colour'd love;
This valley fits the purpose passing well.
Bas. The king my brother shall have note of this.
Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long:
Good king, to be so mightily abus'd!
Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

37 venereal: erotic 43 Philomel; cf. n. 49 parcel: part 56 well-beseeming troop: the guard of honor suitable to an empress 62 presently: immediately 63 horns . . . Actæon's; cf. n. 64 drive upon: rush upon 72 Cimmerian; cf. n. 83 joy: enjoy 86 slips: offences; cf. n. 87 abus'd: deceived

Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!
Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?
Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?
These two have 'tic'd me hither to this place:
A barren detested vale, you see, it is;
The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
O'ercome with moss and baleful mistletoe:
Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven:
And when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here, at dead time of the night,
A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,
Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal body hearing it
Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straight they told me they would bind me here
Unto the body of a dismal yew,
And leave me to this miserable death:
And then they call'd me foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
That ever ear did hear to such effect;
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed.
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.
Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.
Stabs him [i.e. Bassianus].
Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.
[Also stabs Bassianus, who dies.]
Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, nay, barbarous Tamora;
For no name fits thy nature but thy own.
Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know, my boys,
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.
Dem. Stay, madam; here is more belongs to her:
First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw.
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope braves your mightiness:
And shall she carry this unto her grave?
Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.
Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.
Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.
Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
That nice-preserved honesty of yours.
Lav. O Tamora! thou bear'st a woman's face,—
Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her!
Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.
Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your glory
To see her tears; but be your heart to them
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.
Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?

92 'tic'd: enticed 93 barren detested vale; cf. n. 97 fatal: evil-omened 101 urchins: hedgehogs 110 Lascivious Goth; cf. n. 124 minion: saucy person stood: prided herself 126 painted: unreal, false (?); cf. n. 135 nice-preserved: prudishly preserved

O! do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee;
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble;
Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:
[To Chiron.] Do thou entreat her show a woman pity.
Chi. What! wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard?
Lav. 'Tis true! the raven doth not hatch a lark:
Yet have I heard—O could I find it now!—
The lion mov'd with pity did endure
To have his princely paws par'd all away.
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,
The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:
O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful!
Tam. I know not what it means; away with her!
Lav. O, let me teach thee! for my father's sake,
That gave thee life when well he might have slain thee,
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.
Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,
Even for his sake am I pitiless.
Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain
To save your brother from the sacrifice;
But fierce Andronicus would not relent:
Therefore, away with her, and use her as you will:
The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.
Lav. O Tamora! be call'd a gentle queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place;
For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long;
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.
Tam. What begg'st thou, then? fond woman, let me go.
Lav. 'Tis present death I beg; and one thing more
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell.
O keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit,
Where never man's eye may behold my body!
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.
Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:
No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.
Dem. Away! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.
Lav. No grace! no womanhood! Ah, beastly creature,
The blot and enemy to our general name.
Confusion fall—
Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband:
This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[Demetrius throws the body of Bassianus into the pit; then exeunt Demetrius and Chiron, dragging off Lavinia.]

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see that you make her sure.
Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed
Till all the Andronici be made away.
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull deflower. Exit.

Enter Aaron, with [Quintus and Martius,] two of Titus's Sons.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before:
Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit
Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes.
Mart. And mine, I promise you: were 't not for shame,
Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.
[Falls into the pit.]
Quin. What! art thou fall'n? What subtle hole is this,
Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briers,
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers?
A very fatal place it seems to me.
Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?
Mart. O brother! with the dismal'st object hurt
That ever eye with sight made heart lament.
Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find them here,
That he thereby may give a likely guess
How these were they that made away his brother.
Exit Aaron.
Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out
From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole?
Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear;
A chilling sweat o'erruns my trembling joints:
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.
Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,
Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.
Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise.
O tell me how it is! for ne'er till now
Was I a child, to fear I know not what.
Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.
Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?
Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,
And shows the ragged entrails of the pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.
O brother! help me with thy fainting hand—
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath—
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.
Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.
Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.
Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose again,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below.
Thou canst not come to me: I come to thee. Both fall in.

Enter the Emperor, [with] Aaron the Moor.

Sat. Along with me: I'll see what hole is here,
And what he is that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou that lately didst descend

143 learn: teach 152 paws: i.e. claws; cf. n. 153 ravens . . . children; cf. n. 172 fond: foolish 173 present: instant 183 blot . . . name: a blot on, and enemy to, the good name of women in general 192 spleenful: hot, eager trull: loose woman

212 uncouth: strange, horrible 223 embrewed: soaked in blood 224 on a heap: in a heap 228 A precious ring; cf. n. 232 Pyramus; cf. n. 237 Cocytus: the river of lamentation in Hades 244 loose: loose my hold

Into this gaping hollow of the earth?
Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.
Sat. My brother dead! I know thou dost but jest:
He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'Tis not an hour since I left him there.
Mart. We know not where you left him all alive;
But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter Tamora [with Attendants], [Titus] Andronicus, and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?
Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief.
Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?
Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound:
Poor Bassianus here lies murthered.
Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ,
The complot of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.
She giveth Saturnine a letter. Saturninus reads the letter.
Sat. 'And if we miss to meet him handsomely,
Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean,
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him:
Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward
Among the nettles at the elder-tree
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus:
Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.'
O Tamora! was ever heard the like?
This is the pit, and this the elder-tree.
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out
That should have murther'd Bassianus here.
Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.
Sat. [To Titus.] Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind,
Have here bereft my brother of his life.
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison:
There let them bide until we have devis'd
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.
Tam. What! are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!
How easily murder is discovered!
Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon with tears not lightly shed;
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,
Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them,—
Sat. If it be prov'd! you see it is apparent.
Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?
Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.
Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail;
For, by my father's reverend tomb, I vow
They shall be ready at your highness' will
To answer their suspicion with their lives.
Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see thou follow me.
Some bring the murther'd body, some the murtherers:
Let them not speak a word; the guilt is plain;
For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,
That end upon them should be executed.
Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king:
Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough.
Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them.
Exeunt.

256 chase: hunting-ground 263 search: probe 266 complot: plot timeless: untimely 275 decreed: determined

Scene Fourth

[Another part of the Forest]
Enter the Empress's Sons, with Lavinia, her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out, and ravished.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,
Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.
Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so;
An if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.
Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrowl.
Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.
Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;
And so let's leave her to her silent walks.
Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.
Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.
Exeunt [Demetrius and Chiron].
Wind horns.

Enter Marcus, from hunting, to Lavinia.

Mar. Who's this? my niece, that flies away so fast?
Cousin, a word; where is your husband?
If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!
If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep!
Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
Hath lopp'd and hew'd and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments,
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,
And might not gain so great a happiness
As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?
Alas! a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.
But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee,
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut they tongue.
Ah! now thou turn'st away thy face for shame;
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face
Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.
Shall I speak for thee? shall I say 'tis so?
O that I knew thy heart! and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind.
Sorrow conceal'd, like to an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind:
But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;

307 Fear not: fear not for 5 scrowl: scrawl (?); cf. n. 6 sweet: perfumed 12 Cousin: near relation, of either sex 17 Hath: have 26 Tereus: cf. n. 31 Titan's: the sun's 34 thy heart: what is in thy mind 39 mind: meaning; cf. n. 40 mean: means

A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew'd than Philomel.
O! had the monster seen those lily hands
Tremble, like aspen-leaves, upon a lute,
And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,
He would not, then, have touch'd them for his life;
Or had he heard the heavenly harmony
Which that sweet tongue hath made,
He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep,
As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.
Come, let us go, and make thy father blind;
For such a sight will blind a father's eye:
One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads;
What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes?
Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee:
O could our mourning ease thy misery! Exeunt.

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Rome. A Street]

Enter the Judges and Senators [and Tribunes], with Titus's two Sons, bound, passing on the Stage to the place of execution; and Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!
For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd;
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks:
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.
For two-and-twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed.
For these, tribunes, in the dust I write
Andronicus lieth down, and the Judges pass by him [and exeunt].
My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad tears.
Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite;
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.
Exeunt [Senators, Tribunes, and the Others, with the Prisoners].
O earth! I will befriend thee more with rain,
That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
Than youthful April shall with all his showers:
In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still;
In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow,
And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter Lucius, with his weapon drawn.

O reverend tribunes! O gentle, aged men!
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death:
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.
Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain:
The tribunes hear you not, no man is by;
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.
Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead!
Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you,—
Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.
Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did hear,
They would not mark me, or if they did mark,
They would not pity me, yet plead I must,
And bootless, unto them.
Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones,
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale.
When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;
And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.
A stone is as soft wax, tribunes more hard than stones;
A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. [Rises.]
But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn?
Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death;
For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd
My everlasting doom of banishment.
Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee.
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?
Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey
But me and mine: how happy art thou then,
From these devourers to be banished!
But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break:
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.
Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it then.
Mar. This was thy daughter.
Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.
Luc. Ay me! this object kills me.
Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her.
Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?
What fool hath added water to the sea,
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
My grief was at the height before thou cam'st;
And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds.
Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too;
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain;
And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life;
In bootless prayer have they been held up,
And they have serv'd me to effectless use:
Now all the service I require of them
Is that the one will help to cut the other.
'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands,
For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.
Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?
Mar. O! that delightful engine of her thoughts,

51 Cerberus . . . feet; cf. n. 10 two-and-twenty sons; cf. n. 34-37 Cf. n. 72 Nilus: the river Nile 77 effectless: ineffectual 83 engine: instrument

That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear.
Luc. O! say thou for her, who hath done this deed?
Mar. O! thus I found her straying in the park,
Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,
That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.
Tit. It was my dear; and he that wounded her
Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me dead:
For now I stand as one upon a rock
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea,
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man,
And here my brother, weeping at my woes:
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight
It would have madded me: what shall I do
Now I behold thy lively body so?
Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:
Thy husband he is dead, and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.
Look, Marcus! ah! son Lucius, look on her:
When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.
Mar. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband;
Perchance because she knows them innocent.
Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,
Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.
No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;
Or make some sign how I may do thee ease.
Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain,
Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks
How they are stain'd, like meadows yet not dry,
With miry slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows
Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues,
Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come.
Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for at your grief
See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.
Mar. Patience, dear niece. Good Titus, dry thine eyes.
Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus, brother! well I wot
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.
Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs:
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee:
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
O what a sympathy of wòe is this!
As far from help as limbo is from bliss.

Enter Aaron the Moor, alone.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor
Sends thee this word: that, if thou love thy sons,
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king: he for the same
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive;
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.
Tit. O gracious emperor! O gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?
With all my heart, I'll send the emperor my hand:
Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?
Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine,
That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent; my hand will serve the turn:
My youth can better spare my blood than you;
And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.
Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?
O! none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been but idle; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.
Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along,
For fear they die before their pardon come.
Mar. My hand shall go.
Luc. By heaven, it shall not go!
Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such wither'd herbs as these
Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.
Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son,
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.
Mar. And for our father's sake, and mother's care,
Now let me show a brother's love to thee.
Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my hand.
Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.
Mar. But I will use the axe.
Exeunt [Lucius and Marcus].
Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them both:
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.
Aar. [Aside.] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass.
He cuts off Titus's hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus again.

Tit. Now stay your strife: what shall be is dispatch'd.
Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:

91 unrecuring: incurable 97 envious: malignant 98 his: its 102 spurn: pang 141 napkin: handkerchief

150 limbo: i.e. hell; cf. n. 170 the enemy's castle; cf. n. 171 both: both of you 192 sort: fashion

Tell him it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers; bid him bury it:
More hath it merited; that let if have.
As for my sons, say I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.
Aar. I go, Andronicus; and for thy hand,
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee.
[Aside.] Their heads, I mean. O how this villainy
Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it!
Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face. Exit.
Tit. O! here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth:
If any power pities wretched tears,
To that I call!—[To Lavinia.]—What! wilt thou kneel with me?
Do, then dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers,
Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.
Mar. O brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.
Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom?
Then be my passions bottomless with them.
Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament.
Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes.
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow?
If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swoll'n face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?
I am the sea; hark how her sighs do flow!
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd;
For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
Then give me leave, for losers will have leave
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid
For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons,
And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back:
Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd;
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my father's death. Exit.
Mar. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell!
These miseries are more than may be borne.
To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal,
But sorrow flouted at is double death.
Luc. Ah! that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet destested life not shrink thereat!
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe!
[Lavinia kisses Titus.]
Mar. Alas! poor heart; that kiss is comfortless
As frozen water to a starved snake.
Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end?
Mar. Now, farewell, flattery: die, Andronicus;
Thou dost not slumber: see, thy two sons' heads,
Thy warlike hand, thy mangled daughter here;
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,
Even like a stony image, cold and numb.
Ah! now no more will I control my griefs.
Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight
The closing up of our most wretched eyes!
Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?
Tit. Ha, ha, ha!
Mar. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this hour.
Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed:
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes,
And make them blind with tributary tears:
Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me I shall never come to bliss
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do.
You heavy people, circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear.
Lavinia, thou shalt be employ'd in these things:
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.
As for thee, boy, go get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
Hie to the Goths and raise an army there:
And if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.
Exeunt. Manet Lucius.
Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woefull'st man that ever liv'd in Rome:
Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
O would thou wert as thou tofore hast been!
But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives
But in oblivion and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs,
And make proud Saturnine and his empress
Beg at the gates like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
Too be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine. Exit Lucius.

214 welkin: sky 217 with: within the range of 227 coil: confusion 233 For why: because 242 That: so that 247 some deal: somewhat; cf. n.

254 starved: benumbed with cold 259 dear sight: a sight that touches him very closely 263 Rent: rend 279 heavy: sorrowful 296 tofore: heretofore 302 power: army

Scene Second

[The Same. A Room in Titus's House] A Banquet [set out] Enter Andronicus, Marcus, Lavinia, and the Boy [young Lucius].

Tit. So, so; now sit; and look you eat no more
Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus, unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot:
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
And cannot passionate our ten-fold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
Who, when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.
[To Lavinia.] Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!
When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run into that sink, and, soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears.
Mar. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.
Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?
Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life?
Ah! wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands?
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt and he made miserable?
O handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still that we have none!
Fie, fie! how franticly I square my talk,
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If Marcus did not name the word of hands.
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:
Here is no drink. Hark, Marcus, what she says;
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs:
She says she drinks no other drink but tears,
Brew'd with her sorrow, mash'd upon her cheeks.
Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect
As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I of these will wrest an alphabet,
And by still practice learn to know thy meaning.
Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments:
Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.
Mar. Alas! the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.
Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears,
And tears will quickly melt thy life away.
Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.
What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

Mar. At that that I have kill'd, my lord,—a fly.
Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my heart;
Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:
A deed of death, done on the innocent,
Becomes not Titus' brother. Get thee gone;
I see thou art not for my company.
Mar. Alas! my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.
Tit. 'But!' How, if that fly had a father and mother?
How would he hang his slender gilded wings
And buzz lamenting doings in the air!
Poor harmless fly,
That, with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry! and thou hast kill'd him.
Mar. Pardon me, sir; it was a black ill-favour'd fly,
Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd him.
Tit. O, O, O!
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor
Come hither purposely to poison me.
There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.
Ah, sirrah!
Yet I think we are not brought so low,
But that between us we can kill a fly
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.
Mar. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought on him,
He takes false shadows for true substances.
Tit. Come, take away. Lavinia, go with me:
I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee
Sad stories chanced in the times of old.
Come, boy, and go with me: thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read when mine begin to dazzle. Exeunt.

Scene Two: cf. n. 4 sorrow-wreathen knot; cf. n. 12 map: picture 15 Wound it with sighing; cf. n. 31 square: shape, fashion 36 martyr'd signs: signs of her martyrdom 38 Brew'd . . . mash'd; cf. n. 40 be as perfect: show as perfect an understanding 44 of these: from these 45 still: constant

62 lamenting doings: stories of lamentable deeds 71 insult on: exult over 76 Yet . . . low: we are not yet brought so low 81 take away: clear the table 85 mine: mine eyes 12 Cornelia: the mother of the Gracchi 14 Tully's Orator: Cicero's De Oratore

Act Fourth

Scene First

[Rome. Titus's Garden] Enter young Lucius, and Lavinia running after him, and the Boy flies from her, with his books under his arm. [Then] enter Titus and Marcus.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia
Follows me everywhere, I know not why.
Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes:
Alas, sweet aunt! I know not what you mean.
Mar. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.
Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.
Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did.
Mar. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?
Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat doth she mean.
See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee;
Somewhither would she have thee go with her.
Ah, boy! Cornelia never with more care
Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee
Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator.

[Mar.] Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?
Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,
Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her;
For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,
Extremity of griefs would make men mad;
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy
Ran mad through sorrow; that made me to fear,
Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt
Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,
And would not, but in fury, fright my youth;
Which made me down to throw my books and fly,
Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt;
And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,
I will most willingly attend your ladyship.
Mar. Lucius, I will.

[Lavinia turns over with her stumps the books which Lucius has let fall.]

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means this?
Some book there is that she desires to see.
Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy.
But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd;
Come, and take choice of all my library,
And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens
Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.
Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?
Mar. I think she means that there was more than one.
Confederate in the fact: ay, more there was;
Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.
Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?
Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses;
My mother gave it me.
Mar. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps, she cull'd it from among the rest.
Tit. Soft! so busily she turns the leaves! Help her.
What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?
This is the tragic tale of Philomel,
And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape;
And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.
Mar. See, brother, see! note how she quotes the leaves.
Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,
Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was,
Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?
See, see!
Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt,—
O had we never, never hunted there!—
Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,
By nature made for murthers and for rapes.
Mar. O! why should nature build so foul a den,
Unless the gods delight in tragedies?
Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none but friends,
What Roman lord it was durst do the deed:
Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,
That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?
Mar. Sit down, sweet niece: brother, sit down by me.
Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,
Inspire me, that I may this treason find!
My lord, look here; look here, Lavinia:
This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,
This after me.

He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with feet and mouth.

I have writ my name
Without the help of any hand at all.
Curs'd be that heart that forc'd us to this shift!
Write thou, good niece, and here display at last
What God will have discover'd for revenge.
Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,
That we may know the traitors and the truth!

She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.

Tit. O! do ye read, my lord, what she hath writ?
'Stuprum, Chiron, Demetrius.'
Mar. What, what! the lustful sons of Tamora
Performers of this heinous, bloody deed?
Tit. Magni dominator poli,
Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?
Mar. O calm thee, gentle lord! although I know
There is enough written upon this earth
To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts
And arm the minds of infants to exclaims.
My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;
And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope;
And swear with me, as, with the woeful fere
And father of that chaste dishonour'd dame,
Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece' rape,
That we will prosecute by good advice
Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,
And see their blood, or die with this reproach.
Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how;
But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware:
The dam will wake, an if she wind you once:
She's with the lion deeply still in league,
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And when he sleeps will she do what she list.
You're a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry northern wind
Will blow these sands like Sibyl's leaves abroad,
And where's your lesson then? Boy, what say you?
Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man,
Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe
For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome.
Mar. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft
For his ungrateful country done the like.
Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.
Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury:
Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal my boy
Shall carry from me to the empress' sons
Presents that I intend to send them both:
Come, come! thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not?
Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.
Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.
Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my house;

15 plies: importunes 20, 21 Hecuba . . . sorrow; cf. n. 24 fury: madness 37 in sequence: one after the other; cf. n. 39 fact: deed 48 Philomel; cf. n. on II.iii. 43 49 annoy: suffering 51 quotes: examines 58 Pattern'd by: fashioned after 64 erst: formerly

80 Stuprum: rape 83 Magni dominator, etc.: Ruler of the great heaven, dost thou so calmly hear crimes, so calmly look upon them? Cf. n. 88 exclaims: exclamations 89–93 My lord, kneel down, etc.; cf. n. 91 fere: mate 99 wind: scent 105 gad: point 107 Sibyl's leaves; cf. n.

Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court:
Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited on.
Exeunt [Titus, Lavinia, and young Lucius].
Mar. O heavens! can you hear a good man groan,
And not relent or not compassion him?
Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy,
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart
Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd shield;
But yet so just that he will not revenge.
Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus! Exit.

Scene Second

[The same. A Room in the Palace]
Enter Aaron, Chiron, and Demetrius at one door; and at another door young Lucius and another, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;
He hath some message to deliver us.
Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.
Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus;
[Aside.] And pray the Roman gods, confound you both!
Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: what's the news?
Boy. [Aside.] That you are both decipher'd, that's the news,
For villains mark'd with rape. [Aloud.] May it please you,
My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury,
To gratify your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome, for so he bade me say;
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that whenever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well.
And so I leave you both: [Aside.] like bloody villains.
Exit [with Attendant].
Dem. What's here? A scroll, and written round about?
Let's see:—
[Reads.] 'Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus,
Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu.'
Chi. O! 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it well:
I read it in the grammar long ago.
Aar. Ay, just, a verse in Horace; right, you have it.
[Aside.] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt
And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines,
That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick;
But were our witty empress well afoot,
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit:
But let her rest in her unrest awhile.
[To them.] And now, young lords, was't not a happy star
Led us to Rome, strangers and more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good before the palace gate
To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.
Dem. But me more good, to see so great a lord
Basely insinuate and send us gifts.

126 compassion: have compassion on 127 ecstasy: frenzy 10 well-advis'd: in his right mind 16 appointed: equipped 20 Integer vitæ, etc.: cf. n. 24 just: just so 26 sound jest: cf. n.

Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly?
Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames
At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.
Chi. A charitable wish and full of love.
Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.
Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.
Dem. Come, let us go and pray to all the gods
For our beloved mother in her pains.
Aar. [Aside.] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over. Flourish [within].
Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish thus?
Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.
Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter Nurse with a blackamoor Child.

Nur. Good morrow, lords. O! tell me, did you see
Aaron the Moor?
Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all,
Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?
Nur. O gentle Aaron! we are all undone.
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!
Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep!
What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?
Nur. O! that which I would hide from heaven's eye,
Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's disgrace!
She is deliver'd, lords, she is deliver'd.
Aar. To whom?
Nur. I mean, she is brought a-bed.
Aar. Well, God give her good rest! What hath he sent her?
Nur. A devil.
Aar. Why, then she's the devil's dam: a joyful issue.
Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue.
Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.
The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.
Aar. 'Zounds, ye whore! is black so base a hue?
Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.
Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?
Aar. That which thou canst not undo.
Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.
[Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.]
Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.
Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice!
Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend!
Chi. It shall not live.
Aar. It shall not die.
Nur. Aaron, it must; the mother wills it so.
Aar. What! must it, nurse? then let no man but I
Do execution on my flesh and blood.
Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point:
Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon dispatch it.
Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up.
[Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws.]
Stay, murtherous villains! will you kill your brother?
Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shone so brightly when this boy was got,

42 At such a bay: under such circumstances 51 Belike: probably 74 'Zounds: cf. n. 75 blowse: cf. n. 88 broach: spit

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point
That touches this my first-born son and heir.
I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threat'ning band of Typhon's brood,
Nor great Alcides, not the god of war,
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.
What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!
Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alehouse painted signs!
Coal-black is better than another hue,
In that it scorns to bear another hue;
For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,
Although she lave them hourly in the flood.
Tell the empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own, excuse it how she can.
Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?
Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this myself;
The vigour, and the picture of my youth:
This before all the world do I prefer;
This maugre all the world will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.
Dem. By this our mother is for ever sham'd.
Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.
Nur. The emperor in his rage will doom her death.
Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy.
Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears.
Fie, treacherous hue! that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of the heart.
Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer:
Look how the black slave smiles upon the father,
As who should say, 'Old lad, I am thine own.'
He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed
Of that self blood that first gave life to you;
And from that womb where you imprison'd were
He is enfranchised and come to light:
Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face.
Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?
Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice:
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.
Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.
My son and I will have the wind of you:
Keep there; now talk at pleasure of your safety. [They sit.]
Dem. How many women saw this child of his?
Aar. Why, so, brave lords! when we join in league,
I am a lamb; but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,
The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.
But say, again, how many saw the child?
Nur. Cornelia the midwife, and myself,
And no one else but the deliver'd empress.
Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:
Two may keep counsel when the third's away.
Go to the empress; tell her this I said:
He kills her.

96 Enceladus: one of the Titans confined under Mt. Ætna 97 Typhon's brood; cf. n. 98 Alcides: Hercules 100 sanguine: blood-colored 101 white-lim'd: white-washed 106 lave: wash 113 maugre: in spite of 116 escape: escapade 118 ignomy: ignominy 121 enacts: workings 122 leer: complexion 125 sensibly: manifestly 126 self: selfsame 132 Advise thee: consider 136 have the wind of you: keep an eye upon you

'Weke, weke!'
So cries a pig prepared to the spit.
Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore didst thou this?
Aar. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy:
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours,
A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no, lords, no.
And now be it known to you my full intent.
Not far, one Muli lives, my countryman;
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed.
His child is like to her, fair as you are:
Go pack with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all,
And how by this their child shall be advanc'd,
And be received for the emperor's heir,
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court;
And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Hark ye, lords; ye see, I have given her physic,
[Pointing to the Nurse.]
And you must needs bestow her funeral;
The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms.
This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me.
The midwife and the nurse well made away,
Then let the ladies tattle what they please.
Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets.
Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.
Exeunt [Demetrius and Chiron, bearing off the Nurse's body].
Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies:
There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,
And secretly to greet the empress' friends.
Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you hence;
For it is you that puts us to our shifts:
I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave, and bring you up
To be a warrior, and command a camp. Exit.

156 one Muli lives; cf. n. 159 pack: plot 160 circumstance of all: all the details 167 bestow her funeral: give her burial 169 no longer days: no more time 170 presently: instantly 178 dispose: dispose of

Scene Third

[The same. A Public Place]
Enter Titus, old Marcus, young Lucius, and other gentlemen, [Publius, Sempronius, and Caius] with bows; and Titus bears the arrows, with letters on the ends of them.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come; kinsmen, this is the way.
Sir boy, let me see your archery:
Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight.
Terras Astræa reliquit:
Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.
Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;
Haply you may find her in the sea;

4 Terras Astræa reliquit: Astræa has left the earth; cf. n. 5 Be you remember'd: be mindful

Yet there's as little justice as at land.
No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;
'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,
And pierce the inmost centre of the earth:
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition;
Tell him, it is for justice and for aid,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.
Ah, Rome! Well, well; I made thee miserable
What time I threw the people's suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me.
Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd:
This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her hence;
And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Mar. O Publius! is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns
By day and night to attend him carefully,
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some careful remedy.

Mar. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
John with the Goths, and with revengeful war
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters!
What! have you met with her?

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you word,
If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall:
Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,
He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else,
So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.
I'll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.
Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we;
No big-bon'd men fram'd of the Cyclops' size;
But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back,
Yet wrung with wrongs more than our backs can bear:
And sith there's no justice in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven and move the gods
To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs.
Come, to this gear. You are a good archer, Marcus.

He gives them the arrows.

Ad Jovem, that's for you: here, ad Apollinem:
Ad Martem, that's for myself:
Here, boy, to Pallas: here, to Mercury:
To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine;
You were as good to shoot against the wind.
To it, boy! Marcus, loose when I bid.
Of my word, I have written to effect;
There's not a god left unsolicited.

Mar. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court:
We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O! well said, Lucius!
Good boy, in Virgo's lap: give it Pallas.

Mar. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon;
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha, ha! Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?
See, see! thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Mar. This was the sport, my lord: when Publius shot,
The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock
That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court;
And who should find them but the empress' villain?
She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not choose
But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes: God give his lordship joy!

Enter the Clown, with a basket, and two pigeons in it.

News! news from heaven! Marcus, the post is come.
Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters?
Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clo. O! the gibbet-maker? He says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clo. Alas! sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven! alas! sir, I never came there. God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the emperial's men.

Mar. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither: make no more ado,
But give your pigeons to the emperor:
By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.
Hold, hold; meanwhile, here's money for thy charges.
Give me pen and ink.
Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir; let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it.
Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration;
For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant:
And when thou hast given it the emperor,
Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clo. God be with you, sir; I will. Exit.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me. Exeunt.

13 Pluto's region: the infernal regions 24 pipe: whistle 30 careful remedy: remedy obtained through the exercise of care (?). 33 wreak: revenge 39 for: as for 43, 44 burning lake ... Acheron; cf. n. 46 Cyclops: giants, servants of Vulcan 51 wreak: revenge 52 gear: business 53, 54 Ad Jovem, etc.: to Jupiter, to Apollo, to Mars 58 loose: shoot 59 Of my word: upon my word to effect: to the purpose 63 well said: well done

64-70 Virgo ... Taurus ... Aries: constellations; cf. n. 90 tribunal plebs: tribune of the people (properly, tribunus plebis) 91 take up: make up 92 emperial's: emperor's 109 bravely: in good style

Scene Fourth

[The Same. Before the Palace]
Enter the Emperor and Empress, and her two Sons [Lords and Others]. The Emperor brings the arrows in his hand that Titus shot at him.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these! Was ever seen
An emperor in Rome thus overborne,
Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent
Of egal justice, us'd in such contempt?
My lords, you know, [as do] the mightful gods,—
However these disturbers of our peace
Buzz in the people's ears,—there nought hath pass'd,
But even with law, against the wilful sons
Of old Andronicus. And what an if
His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wreaks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?
And now he writes to heaven for his redress:
See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury;
This to Apollo; this to the god of war;
Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome!
What's this but libelling against the senate,
And blazoning our injustice everywhere?
A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?
As who would say, in Rome no justice were.
But if I live, his feigned ecstasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages;
But he and his shall know that justice lives
In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep,
He'll so awake, as she in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.
Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,
Th' effects of sorrow for his valiant sons,
Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scarr'd his heart;
And rather comfort his distressed plight
Than prosecute the meanest or the best
For these contempts.—[Aside.] Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloze with all:
But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
Thy life-blood out: if Aaron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak with us?
Clo. Yea, forsooth, an your mistership be emperial.
Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.
Clo. 'Tis he. God and Saint Stephen give you good den.
I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.
He [Saturninus] reads the letter.
Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.
Clo. How much money must I have?
Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hanged.
Clo. Hanged! By'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. Exit [guarded].

Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs!
Shall I endure this monstrous villainy?
I know from whence this same device proceeds:
May this be borne? As if his trait'rous sons,
That died by law for murther of our brother,
Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully!
Go, drag the villain hither by the hair;
Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege.
For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughterman,
Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter Nuntius Æmilius.

What news with thee, Æmilius?
Æmil. Arm, my lords! Rome never had more cause.
The Goths have gather'd head, and with a power
Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,
They hither march amain, under conduct
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;
Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.
Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths?
These tidings nip me, and I hang the head
As flowers with frost or grass beat down with storms.
Ay, now begins our sorrows to approach:
'Tis he the common people love so much.
Myself hath often heard them say,
When I have walked like a private man,
That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.
Tam. Why should you fear? is not your city strong?
Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me to succour him.
Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name.
Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it?
The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings
He can at pleasure stint their melody;
Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit; for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep,
Whenas the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious food.
Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.
Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will:
For I can smooth and fill his aged ear
With golden promises, that, were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.
[To Æmilius.] Go thou before, be our ambassador:
Say that the emperor requests a parley
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting,
Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.
Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably:
And if he stand on hostage for his safety,

3, 4, extent Of egal justice: maintenance of equal justice 7 Buzz: whisper 8 even with: in accord with 11 wreaks: revenges 21 ecstasies: insanity 25 as: that 35 High-witted: cunning gloze: beguile 40 mistership: the clown's attempt at 'mistress-ship' 42 good den: good evening

56 shape privilege: constitute exemption from punishment 66 in course of: in carrying out 67 Coriolanus: cf. n. 71 begins: begin 85 stint: stop 90 honey-stalks; cf. n. 91 Whenas: when 95 smooth: flatter 104 stand on hostage: demand hostages

Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.
Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. Exit.
Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths.
And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.
Sat. Then go successantly, and plead to him. Exeunt.

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

[Plains near Rome]
Flourish. Enter Lucius with an Army of Goths, with drum and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends,
I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signify what hate they bear their emperor,
And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs;
And wherein Rome hath done you any scath,
Let him make treble satisfaction.
[1.] Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,
Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort;
Whose high exploits and honourable deeds
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt;
Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day
Led by their master to the flower'd fields,
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.
[All the Goths.] And, as he saith, so say we all with him.
Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.
But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading of Aaron, with his Child in his arms.

[2.] Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd,
To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall.
I made unto the noise; when soon I heard
The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:
'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam!
Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,
Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor:
But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,
They never do beget a coal-black calf.
Peace, villain, peace!'—even thus he rates the babe—
'For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Who, when he knows thou art the empress' babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake.'
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,
Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither,
To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate devil
That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand:
This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye,
And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.
Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither wouldst thou convey
This growing image of thy fiend-like face?
Why dost not speak? What! deaf? not a word?
A halter, soldiers! hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy.
Aar. Touch not the boy; he is of royal blood.
Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;
A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder.

[A ladder is brought, which Aaron is made to ascend.]

Aar. Lucius, save the child;
And bear it from me to the empress.
If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear:
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more but 'Vengeance rot you all!'
Luc. Say on; and if it please me which thou speak'st,
Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.
Aar. And if it please thee! why, assure thee, Lucius,
'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
For I must talk of murthers, rapes, and massacres,
Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
Complots of mischief, treason, villainies
Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd:
And this shall all be buried by my death,
Unless thou swear to me my child shall live.
Luc. Tell on thy mind: I say, thy child shall live.
Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.
Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believ'st no god:
That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?
Aar. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not;
Yet, for I know thou art religious,
And hast a thing within thee called conscience,
With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies,
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thy oath; for that I know
An idiot holds his bauble for a god,
And keeps the oath which by that god he swears,
To that I'll urge him: therefore thou shalt vow
By that same god, what god soe'er it be,
That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,
To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up:
Or else I will discover nought to thee.
Luc. Even by my god I sear to thee I will.
Aar. First, know thou, I begot him on the empress.
Luc. O most insatiate, luxurious woman!
Aar. Tut! Lucius, this was but a deed of charity
To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.
'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus;
They cut thy sister's tongue and ravish'd her,
And cut her hands and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.
Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?

108 temper: influence 112 successantly: in succession (?). 1 Approved: tried 7 scath: harm 9 slip: scion 26 controll'd: restrained 33 rates: scolds 42 pearl . . . eye: cf. n. 44 wall-ey'd: white-eyed 50 for ever being: ever to be 67 piteously: pitiably 75 for: because 79 urge: insist upon 80 idiot . . . bauble: cf. n. 89 luxurious: lustful

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd, and 'twas
Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.
Luc. O barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!
Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them.
That codding spirit had they from their mother,
As sure a card as ever won the set;
That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,
As true a dog as ever fought at head.
Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole
Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay;
I wrote the letter that thy father found,
And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,
Confederate with the queen and her two sons:
And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,
Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?
I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand,
And, when I had it, drew myself apart,
And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.
I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall
When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads;
Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his:
And when I told the empress of this sport,
She sounded almost at my pleasing tale,
And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses.
[1.] Goth. What! canst thou say all this, and never blush?
Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.
Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?
Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.
Even now I curse the day, and yet, I think,
Few come within the compass of my curse,
Wherein I did not some notorious ill:
As kill a man, or else devise his death;
Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it;
Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself;
Set deadly enmity between two friends;
Make poor men's cattle break their necks;
Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their tears.
Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,
And set them upright at their dear friends' doors,
Even when their sorrows almost were forgot;
And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,
Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,
'Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.'
Tut! I have done a thousand dreadful things
As willingly as one would kill a fly,
And nothing grieves me heartily indeed
But that I cannot do ten thousand more.
Luc. Bring down the devil, for he must not die
So sweet a death as hanging presently.
Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue!
Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

[Enter a Goth.]

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome
Desires to be admitted to your presence.
Luc. Let him come near.

Enter Æmilius.

Welcome, Æmilius! what's the news from Rome?
Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,
The Roman emperor greets you all by me;
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages,
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.
[1.] Goth. What says our general?
Luc. Æmilius, let the emperor give his pledges
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
And we will come. March away. Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Rome. Before Titus's House]
Enter Tamora and her two Sons, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment,
I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say I am Revenge, sent from below
To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps,
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge;
Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies.
They knock. Titus opens his study door [above].
Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
Is it your trick to make me ope the door,
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect?
You are deceiv'd; for what I mean to do,
See here, in bloody lines I have set down;
And what is written shall be executed.
Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.
Tit. No, not a word; how can I grace my talk,
Wanting a hand to give it action?
Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.
Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me.
Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well enough:
Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines;
Witness these trenches made by grief and care;
Witness the tiring day and heavy night;
Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora.
Is not thy coming for my other hand?
Tam. Know, thou sad man, I am not Tamora;
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend:
I am Revenge, sent from th' infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,
By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.
Come down, and welcome me to this world's light;

101 codding: lecherous 106 train'd: enticed 111 what not done: what was not done 121 sounded: swooned 124 like a black dog; cf. n. 126 ff. Cf. n. 147 Bring down the devil; cf. n.

162 Willing: desiring 2 encounter with: meet 11 sad decrees: serious resolutions 32 wreakful: wrathful

Confer with me of murder and of death.
There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place,
No vast obscurity or misty vale,
Where bloody murther or detested rape
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offenders quake.
Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me,
To be a torment to mine enemies?
Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.
Tit. Do me some service ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands;
Now give some surance that thou art Revenge:
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot-wheels,
And then I'll come and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globes.
Provide thee two proper palfreys, black as jet,
To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murtherers in their guilty caves:
And when thy car is loaden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel
Trot like a servile footman all day long,
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east
Until his very downfall in the sea:
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.
Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me.
Tit. Are these thy ministers? what are they call'd?
Tam. Rape and Murder; therefore called so,
'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.
Tit. Good Lord, how like the empress' sons they are,
And you the empress! but we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge! now do I come to thee;
And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,
I will embrace thee in it by and by. [Exit above.]
Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy.
Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius his son;
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

[Enter Titus, below.]

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:
Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house:
Rapine and Murther, you are welcome too.
How like the empress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted had you but a Moor:
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?
For well I wot the empress never wags
But in her company there is a Moor;
And would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil.
But welcome, as you are. What shall we do?
Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?
Dem. Show me a murtherer, I'll deal with him.
Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,
And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.
Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong,
And I will be revenged on them all.
Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,
And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murtherer.
Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him; he's a ravisher.
Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court
There is a queen attended by a Moor;
Well mayst thou know her by thy own proportion,
For up and down she doth resemble thee:
I pray thee, do on them some violent death;
They have been violent to me and mine.
Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do.
But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son,
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths,
And bid him come and banquet at thy house:
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes,
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device?
Tit. Marcus, my brother! 'tis sad Titus calls.

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths:
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him, the emperor and the empress too
Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.
This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.
Mar. This will I do, and soon return again. [Exit.]
Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.
Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me;
Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.
Tam. [Aside to her sons.] What say you, boys? will you bide with him,
Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth, and speak him fair,
And tarry with him till I turn again.
Tit. [Aside.] I know them all, though they suppose me mad;
And will o'erreach them in their own devices:
A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam.

36 obscurity: obscure place 46 surance: assurance 56 Hyperion: the old sun-god 59 Rapine: rape 65 worldly: living in the world 70 closing: agreeing 77 practice: stratagem

107 up and down: completely 140 govern'd ... jest: managed our proposed deception 142 turn: return

Dem. [Aside to Tamora.] Madam, depart at pleasure; leave us here.
Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now goes
To lay a complot to betray thy foes. [Exit Tamora.]
Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell.
Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd?
Tit. Tut! I have work enough for you to do.
Publius, come hither, Caius and Valentine!

[Enter Publius and Others.]

Pub. What is your will?
Tit. Know you these two?
Pub. The empress' sons,
I take them, Chiron [and] Demetrius.
Tit. Fie, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceiv'd;
The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name;
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
Caius and Valentine, lay hands on them;
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it: therefore bind them sure,
[And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.]
[Exit. Publius and the Others lay hold on Chiron and Demetrius.]
Chi. Villians, forbear! we are the empress' sons.
Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.
Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word.
Is he sure bound? look that you bind them fast.

Enter Titus Andronicus with a knife, and Lavinia with a basin.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.
Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me,
But let them hear what fearful words I utter.
O villains, Chiron and Demetrius!
Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud,
This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.
You kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault
Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off and made a merry jest:
Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more dear
Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,
Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.
What would you say if I should let you speak?
Villains! for shame you could not beg for grace.
Hark, wretches! how I mean to martyr you.
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats,
Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold
The basin that receives your guilty blood.
You know your mother means to feast with me,
And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad.
Hark! villains, I will grind your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it I'll make a paste;
And of the paste a coffin I will rear,
And make two pasties of your shameful heads;
And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,
Like to the earth swallow her own increase.
This is the feast that I have bid her to,
And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;
For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,
And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd.
And now prepare your throats. Lavinia, come.
Receive the blood: and when that they are dead,
Let me go grind their bones to powder small,
And with this hateful liquor temper it;
And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.
Come, come, be every one officious
To make this banquet, which I wish might prove
More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.
He cuts their throats.
So, now bring them in, for I'll play the cook,
And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.
Exeunt [bearing the dead bodies].

Scene Third

[The Same. The Court of Titus's House]
Enter Lucius, Marcus, and the Goths [with Aaron prisoner].

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind
That I repair to Rome, I am content.
[1.] Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.
Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor,
This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil;
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the empress' face,
For testimony of her foul proceedings:
And see the ambush of our friends be strong;
I fear the emperor means no good to us.
Aar. Some devil whisper curses in my ear,
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth
The venomous malice of my swelling heart!
Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.
[Exeunt Goths, with Aaron.] Flourish [within].
The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Sound trumpets. Enter Emperor and Empress, with [Æmilius,] Tribunes, [Senators,] and Others.

Sat. What! hath the firmament more suns than one?
Luc. What boots it thee, to call thyself a sun?
Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle;
These quarrels must be quietly debated.
The feast is ready which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome:
Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.
Sat. Marcus, we will. Hautboys.

A table brought in. [The Company sit down at table.] Enter Titus, like a Cook, placing the meat on the table; and Lavinia with a veil over her face [and young Lucius with Others].

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen;
Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius;
And welcome, all. Although the cheer be poor,

191 coffin: pie-crust; cf. n. 194 increase: offspring 198 worse than Progne; cf. n. 202 temper: mix 204 officious: active 206 Centaurs' feast; cf. n. 3 ours with thine: our will is one with thine 19 break the parle: stop the parley

'Twill fill your stomachs, please you eat of it.
Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus?
Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well
To entertain your highness, and your empress.
Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus.
Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.
My lord the emperor, resolve me this:
Was it well done of rash Virginius
To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd?
Sat. It was, Andronicus.
Tit. Your reason, mighty lord?
Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,
And by her presence still renew his sorrows.
Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,
For me most wretched, to perform the like.
Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;
And with thy shame thy father's sorrow die! He kills her.
Sat. What hast done, unnatural and unkind?
Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.
I am as woeful as Virginius was,
And have a thousand times more cause than he
[To do this outrage: and it now is done.]
Sat. What! was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.
Tit. Will 't please you eat? will 't please your highness feed?
Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?
Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius:
They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue:
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.
Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently.
Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie;
Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.
'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point.
He stabs the Empress.
Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed!
[Kills Titus.]
Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?
There's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed!
[Kills Saturninus. A great tumult. The people in confusion disperse. Marcus, Lucius, and their partisans go up into the balcony.]
Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,
By uproars sever'd, like a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O! let me teach you how to knit again
This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body;
Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,
And she whom mighty kingdoms curtsy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate castaway,
Do shameful execution on herself.
But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,
[To Lucius.] Speak, Rome's dear friend, as erst our ancestor,
When with his solemn tongue he did discourse
To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear
The story of that baleful burning night
When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam's Troy;
Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in
That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.
My heart is not compact of flint nor steel,
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,
But floods of tears will drown my oratory,
And break my very utterance, even in the time
When it should move you to attend me most,
Lending your kind commiseration.
Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak.
Luc. This, noble auditory, be it known to you,
That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdered our emperor's brother;
And they it was that ravished our sister.
For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded,
Our father's tears despis'd, and basely cozen'd
Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel out,
And sent her enemies unto the grave:
Lastly, myself unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relief among Rome's enemies;
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend:
And I am turn'd forth, be it known to you,
That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood,
And from her bosom took the enemy's point,
Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body.
Alas! you know I am no vaunter, I;
My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is just and full of truth.
But, soft! methinks I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me!
For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.
Mar. Now is my turn to speak. Behold this child;
[Pointing to the Child in the arms of an Attendant.]
Of this was Tamora delivered,
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes.
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge
These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say you Romans?
Have we done aught amiss, show us wherein,
And, from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronici
Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak! and if you say we shall,
Lo! hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.
Æmil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,

33 beholding: beholden 35 resolve me: tell me 36, 37 rash Virginius . . . his daughter; cf. n. 38 enforc'd: violated 66 meed for meed: measure for measure 71 mutual: united 77 chaps: wrinkles 80 our ancestor: Æneas

85 Sinon; cf. n. 88 compact: composed 93-97 Cf. n. 100 fell: cruel 101 and basely cozen'd: and [he] basely cheated 124 Damn'd as he is; cf. n. 134 closure: end

And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius, our emperor; for well I know
The common voice do cry it shall be so.
[Romans.] Lucius, all hail! Rome's royal emperor!
Mar. [To Attendants.] Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house,
And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg'd some direful slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.
[Exeunt Attendants.]
[Lucius, Marcus, and the Others descend.]
[Romans.] Lucius, all hail! Rome's gracious governor!
Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans: may I govern so,
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!
But, gentle people, give me aim awhile,
For nature puts me to a heavy task.
Stand all aloof; but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk.
O! take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,
[Kisses Titus.]
These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face,
The last true duties of thy noble son!
Mar. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:
O! were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them.
Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us
To melt in showers: thy grandsire lov'd thee well:
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet and agreeing with thine infancy;
In that respect, then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender spring,
Because kind nature doth require it so:
Friends should associate friends in grief and woe.
Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart
Would I were dead, so you did live again.
O Lord! I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me if I ope my mouth.

[Re-enter Attendants with Aaron.]

[1.] Roman. You sad Andronici, have done with woes:
Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.
Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him;
There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food:
If any one relieves or pities him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.
Aar. O, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?
I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
I should repent the evils I have done.
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will:
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.
Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor hence,
And give him burial in his father's grave.
My father and Lavinia shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,
No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds!
No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey.
Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;
And, being so, shall have like want of pity.
See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:
Then, afterwards, to order well the state,
That like events may ne'er it ruinate. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS

150 give me aim; cf. n. 153 obsequious tears: tears befitting a funeral 166–170 Cf. n. 170 associate: accompany

201 Cf. n.

Notes

Dramatis Personæ. A list of characters was first given in Rowe's edition of 1709. The First Folio divides the play into acts, of which the first is headed Actus Primus. Scæna Prima. There is no further division into scenes.

I.i.S.d. aloft. The tribunes and senators enter on the gallery which was situated at the back of the Elizabethan stage, and served a variety of purposes. It was, e.g., the balcony from which Juliet speaks to Romeo in Romeo and Juliet, and in The Taming of the Shrew it served as the gallery from which Christopher Sly and his attendants watch the play performed on the lower stage. Cf. also below, I.i. 304 and V.ii.8.

I.i.9. Romans. 'As a matter of orthoepy, it is perhaps worthy of notice that throughout this play, and generally in English books printed before the middle of the seventeenth century, this word is spelled Romaines or Romanes. "Romaine" could hardly have been pronounced Roman.' (White.)

I.i.35. In coffins from the field. After these words in the Quarto of 1594, there is a passage of three and a half lines which was omitted from the later texts. Lines 35-38 in the 1594 Quarto read as follows:

'In coffins from the field, and at this day
To the Monument of that Andronicy
Done sacrifice of expiation
And slaine the Noblest prisoner of the Gothes.'

I.i.64. Because of the fact that there is a distinct break here between the action that has just finished and that now commencing, Pope, Capell, Malone, and other editors begin a new scene with line 64. There is no change of place, however, and later editors prefer to make no change in the scene.

I.i.98. Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh. Human sacrifices to propitiate the shades of the dead were, of course, unknown in Rome, but neither the author nor his audience was scrupulous with respect to historical or geographical accuracy. Cf. note on I.i.329.

I.i.117-119. Wilt thou draw near . . . nobility's true badge. It is hardly necessary to mention the resemblance between this sentiment of Tamora's and that expressed by Portia, Merchant of Venice, IV.i.88-106.

I.i.131. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous? Cf. King Lear, I.i.118-120:

'The barbarous Scythian
Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite.'

I.i.138. the Thracian tyrant. Polymnestor, upon whom Hecuba, Queen of Troy, took vengeance for the death of her son, Polydorus. It was not in his tent, however, but in her own, to which she had induced Polymnestor to come, that she made the 'opportunity of sharp revenge.' The allusion is to the Hecuba of Euripides, which had not been translated into English in Shakespeare's time.

I.i.154. grudges. The Quarto of 1600 has drugs, but the Quarto of 1611 and the First Folio have grudges, a word which seems to be more in keeping with the sense of the preceding line.

I.i.168. fame's eternal date. Cf. Sonnets, 18.4:

'And summer's lease hath all too short a date.'

Dr. Johnson remarks: 'To outlive an eternal date is, though not philosophical, yet poetical sense. He wishes that her life may be longer than his, and her praise longer than fame.'

I.i.177. Solon's happiness. Alluding to the remarks of the philosopher Solon to Crœsus, king of Lydia, to the effect that true happiness is dependent on honor, and that no man can be finally adjudged happy until after his death. Cf. Herodotus, 1.32.

I.i.218. people's tribunes. The First Folio has 'noble tribunes.' It may be that it was originally written 'people's,' and changed to 'noble' when the play was acted, as the latter word is somewhat more sonorous.

I.i.318. bandy. A term from the game of tennis, meaning to strike the ball to and fro.

I.i.329. priest and holy water. Such references to Christian ritual are, of course, anachronistic, but in the true Shakespearean manner. Cf. the 'popish tricks and ceremonies' of V.i.77 below.

I.i.386. Ajax. This seems to be an allusion to the Ajax of Sophocles, in which Ulysses pleads with Agamemnon for permission to bury the body of Ajax. So far as is known the Ajax had not been translated into English in Shakespeare's day.

I.i.407. you have play'd your prize. Won what you were competing for. 'A metaphor borrowed from the fencing schools, prizes being played for certain degrees in the schools where the art of defence was taught—degrees of Master, Provost, and Scholar.' (Dyce's Glossary.)

I.i.493. Stand up. These two words were regarded as stage directions by Pope and by several editors after him. In the quartos and folios, they form the first part of what in our text is line 494.

I.i.499. love-day. A day appointed by the Church for the settlement of disputes amicably out of court, by an umpire. Cf. Gower, Confessio Amantis, I.39.

'Hell is full of such discord
That there may be no loveday.'

I.i.501. To hunt the panther. The same type of imagination which infested the Roman forest with panthers introduced the lioness to the forest of Arden, and brought the bear to the seacoast of Bohemia and to the woods of Crete.

II.i.14. mount her pitch. Pitch = point. A technical expression in falconry denoting the height to which a falcon soars before attacking the prey. Cf. Romeo's remarks, Romeo and Juliet, I.iv.19ff.

'I am too sore enpierced with his shaft,
To soar with his light feathers; and so bound,
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe.'

Aaron means that he will soar to whatever height Tamora attains.

II.i.17. Prometheus tied to Caucasus. No other play of Shakespeare's is so full of allusions to classical mythology, or contains so many Latin expressions and Latinized forms as Titus Andronicus.

II.i.22. Semiramis. This legendary queen of Assyria was famous alike for her cruelty and her voluptuousness.

II.i.37. Clubs, clubs! A call for men armed with clubs to put down a disturbance. It was a familiar cry in the streets of Elizabethan London. Originally the rallying cry of the apprentices, it became later the regular call for the policemen.

II.i.41. lath. The stage sword or dagger used by the Vice in the old moralities was made of a lath, and the latter term came quite naturally to be used for an ineffective weapon. Cf. Twelfth Night, IV.ii.119 ff.

II.i.55. Not I. Warburton suggested that this speech be given to Chiron, and the following to Demetrius, on the not very plausible ground that it is Chiron who has made the 'reproachful speeches.'

II.i.72. This discord's ground. 'There is a play upon the musical sense of ground (="plain-song" or theme).' (Rolfe.)

II.i.86. She is a woman, etc. A quasi-proverbial expression found in several plays of Shakespeare, as well as elsewhere. Cf. 1 Henry VI, V.iii.78, 79:

'She's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd,
She is a woman, therefore to be won.'

II.i.89-91. more water glideth by the mill, Than wots the miller of; and easy it is Of a cut loaf to steal a shive. Collier noted the fact that both of these proverbs occur within a page of each other in The Cobler of Canterburie, 1590: 'Much water runnes by the mill that the miller wots not on. . . . The Prior perceived that the scull had cut a shive on his loafe.' (Cf. Ouvry's reprint, London, 1862, pp. 12 ff.) Both The Cobler of Canterburie and Titus Andronicus have been attributed to Greene. Cf. Authorship of the Play. Rolfe quotes the Scottish proverb, 'Mickle water goes by the miller when he sleeps.'

II.i.93. Vulcan's badge. The cuckold's horns. The allusion is to the intrigue of Mars and Venus, the wife of Vulcan.

II.i.115. Lucrece was not more chaste. The story of Tarquin's rape of Lucrece seems to have been much in the mind of the author at this time. Cf. below IV. i.64, 91 ff. Shakespeare's Rape of Lucrece was printed first in 1594, the date also of the first Quarto of Titus Andronicus. On the similarities between the two works, see Authorship of the Play.

II.i.127. sacred wit. Although sacred is usually taken here as a Latinism meaning accursed, there is, as has been noted in some quarters, an ironical sound about the word in this connection which accords well with Aaron's character.

II.i.133. house of Fame. An obvious allusion to Chaucer's Hous of Fame, III. 291-300. A still earlier version, of course, is that of Vergil; cf. Æneid, Iv. 183 ff.

II.i.142. Per Styga, etc. The poet is apparently quoting from memory a line from Seneca, with whose tragedies he was undoubtedly familiar. In this connection, cf. Seneca's Hippolytus, 1180:

'Per Styga, per amnes igneos amens sequar,'

and Hercules Furens, 90, 91:

'I am Styga et manes feros
Fugisse credis?'

II.ii.1. the morn is bright and grey. Much pedantic discussion has taken place as to the precise meaning of the term grey, which Shakespeare uses constantly in describing the morning sky. But from the context here and elsewhere, there seems no reason for thinking that it means anything but bright, and that in the expression in our text, as in the other cases, it is not synonymous with the word bright. Cf. Much Ado About Nothing, V.iii.25 ff.:

'the gentle day . . .
Dapples the drowsy east with spots of grey.'

By the same token, the grey-ey'd morn of Romeo and Juliet, II.i.247, is the bright-eyed morn.

II.ii.3. Uncouple here. Loose the hounds. This passage with its reference to hunting and the joy of being in the open is strikingly suggestive of the descriptions of the hunt in Venus and Adonis. The latter was printed in 1593, one year before the publication of Titus Andronicus, and a date not so far removed from Shakespeare's own hunting days in Warwickshire. Cf. below, II.iii.17–19.

II.ii.9. I have been troubled. There is nothing more suggestive of the Shakespearean authorship of the play than these presentiments of evil, of which the poet constantly makes use in all his tragedies. Cf. below, II.iii.196 ff.

II.iii.9. alms out of the empress' chest. Rather obscure, but apparently meaning, as Stoll suggests, that Aaron has taken the gold from Tamora's chest.

II.iii.17-19. babbling echo mocks the hounds . . . a double hunt were heard at once. Cf. the strikingly similar lines in Venus and Adonis, 695, 696:

'Then do they spend their mouths: Echo replies,
As if another chase were in the skies.'

For other similarities between this play and Venus and Adonis, cf. Introduction.

II.iii.31. Saturn is dominator. According to the mediæval theory, persons born under the domination of the planet Saturn were of a morose, or saturnine, disposition. Collins quotes Greene, Planetomachia, 1585: 'The star of Saturn is especially cooling.' The planet Venus, which, according to Aaron, governs Tamora's disposition, has an entirely different influence.

II.iii.43. Philomel. Philomela, daughter of Pandion, was ravished by Tereus, king of Thrace, who was the husband of her sister, Progne. Tereus then cut out her tongue to prevent her exposing him. That the story had made a deep impression on the poet's mind is witnessed by the frequent allusions to it in this play (cf. below, II.iv.43, IV.i.48 ff., and V.ii.197). Cf. also in this connection the Rape of Lucrece, 1128-1134.

II.iii.63. With horns, as was Actæon's. Actæon, a Theban prince, while hunting, accidentally saw Diana bathing, and was transformed by her into a stag, to be slain immediately by his dogs. The 'horns' which Tamora would fain see on Bassianus' temples are, of course, those of the cuckold.

II.iii.72. swarth Cimmerian. Homer (cf. Odyssey, XI.14) describes the Cimmerians as dwelling on the confines of the earth, 'shrouded in mist and darkness . . . and never does the shining sun look down on them.' Cf. Milton's 'dark Cimmerian desert' (L'Allegro, 10).

II.iii.86. these slips have made him noted long. Dr. Johnson points out the fact that Tamora and Saturninus have presumably been married but one night.

II.iii.93. barren detested vale. Tamora's description of this place here and in the lines immediately following is rather at variance with her description of it above (II.iii.12-16). Or are we to assume that the scene has changed during the action?

II.iii.110. Lascivious Goth. The Elizabethans pronounced Goth to sound like goat, and Shakespeare frequently quibbles on the word. Cf. As You Like It, III. iii. 5, 6: 'I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.' (Capricious is from the Latin capra, goat.)

II.iii.126. And with that painted hope braves your mightiness. The line stands thus in all the quartos and in the First Folio. The second, third, and fourth folios insert 'she' before 'braves.' It presents a crux as famous as any in Shakespeare. Various emendations have been suggested, and White suggests with reservations the reading, 'And with that faint hope braves, etc.' C. D. Stewart, in Some Textual Difficulties in Shakespeare, p. 156, offers the following interpretation: 'A painting occupies a position half way between the unsubstantial, uncertain, self-supported vision of a thing and the thing itself. Now when Lavinia gave him [Demetrius] such refusals his hope of success became more vivid. When she spoke of her chastity and gave excuses that were no real excuses to him, she only aggravated his passion and seemed to be artfully drawing him on; and only to refuse him. It was as if she had painted the picture of his success with her own hands, or in her own person, and held it up before him. She made herself a "painted hope." This is simply a hope whose pictures are more vivid, more real, than the uncertain visions of hope unassisted.'

II.iii.151,152. The lion, mov'd with pity, did endure To have his princely paws par'd all away. Probably an allusion to the story of Androclus and the lion.

II.iii.153. Some say that ravens foster forlorn children. Doubtless a bit of folklore. Cf. The Winter's Tale, II.iii.219, 220:

'Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens
To be thy nurses.'

The Biblical story of the feeding of Elijah by ravens may have given rise to it. Cf. 1 Kings 17. 3-6.

II.iii.228. A precious ring, that lightens all the hole. Probably an allusion to the carbuncle, formerly believed to emit radiance of its own in the dark.

II.iii.232. So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus. Cf. Midsummer Night's Dream, III.i.43 ff.

II.iv.5. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrowl. Ironically enough, Demetrius here suggests the very means by which Lavinia later exposes his crime, thus inciting her father to kill him. Cf. King Lear, III.vii.64-66, where Gloucester unwittingly pictures to Regan, in speaking of her treatment of Lear, the torture which Cornwall and she are to inflict upon him immediately afterward.

II.iv.26. some Tereus hath deflower'd thee. Cf. note on II.iii.43.

II.iv.39. in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind. Philomela, after being ravished and mutilated by Tereus, made known her condition by working a sampler on which she told the story.

II.iv.51. Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet. Orpheus, when he descended into Hades to seek his wife, Eurydice, was able by his music to charm Cerberus, the triple-headed watch-dog of the infernal regions.

III.i.10. two-and-twenty sons. Is Titus here including among the two-and-twenty who died 'in honour's lofty bed' his son Mutius, whom he has slain (cf. I.i.296) for what he considered a dishonorable deed? If not, he was the father of twenty-six sons instead of the five-and-twenty of I.i.79. Baildon suggests (Arden Shakespeare) that 'Shakespeare had invented the Mutius episode and forgotten to alter the original number.'

III.i.34-37. They would mot mark me . . . tell my sorrows to the stones. This passage as it stands in the First Folio is manifestly corrupt, reading as follows:

'if they did heare
They would not marke me: oh if they did heare
They would not pitty me.
Therefore I tell my sorrowes bootles to the stones.'

The reading in our text is from the Quarto of 1600, and although perhaps slightly corrupt, seems the most nearly satisfactory of the various readings.

III.i.150. limbo. Popularly used for hell, but, in the strict sense of the term, limbo is not hell or any place of punishment, but, according to mediæval theology, a region bordering hell, where dwelt the patriarchs, who died before the resurrection of Christ. They were believed to have been carried to heaven with our Lord at his ascension. The souls of unbaptized infants are, according to other theories, also assigned to limbo.

III.i.170. Writing destruction on the enemy's castle. This line, as might be expected from the unusual expression, has caused much trouble to commentators. Nares explains the word castle as meaning a kind of helmet, quoting unconvincingly from Troilus and Cressida (V.ii.212):

'Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head.'

III.i.247. some deal. Deal is from the O. E. Dæl, part. Cf. Chaucer, Legend of Good Women, 1182, 1183:

'Her suster Anne, as she that coude her good,
Seide as her thoughte, and somdel hit withstood.'

The word survives to-day in such expressions as a good deal, etc.

III.ii. This scene appears for the first time in the First Folio.

III.ii.4. sorrow-wreathen knot. Marcus' arms, which are crossed on his breast in an attitude of profound grief. Cf. The Tempest, I.ii.261, 'His arms in this sad knot.'

III.ii.15. Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans. It was formerly thought that a heavy sigh draws a drop of blood from the heart. Cf. Midsummer Night's Dream, III.ii.97, 98:

'All fancy-sick she is and pale of cheer,
With sighs of love, that costs the fresh blood dear.'

III.ii.38. Brew'd with her sorrow, mash'd upon her cheeks. A rather prosaic allusion to the mash-tub and the operations of the brewing-house.

IV.i.20,21. Hecuba of Troy Ran mad through sorrow. After avenging the death of her son, Polydorus, Hecuba, wife of Priam, ran mad. Cf. above, note on I.i.138.

IV.i.37. Immediately before this line in the Folio occur the words, 'What booke?' Most modern editors omit them from the text, concurring in Dyce's opinion that 'the transcriber had inadvertently passed on to the line, Lucius, what book, etc., and when he afterwards perceived his mistake, and drew his pen through the misplaced line, he may have left two words of it not fully blotted out.'

IV.i.83, 84. Magni dominator poli, etc. Cf. Seneca's Hippolytus, 671, 672:

'Magne regnator deum,
Tam lentus audis scelera? Tam lentus vides?'

The poet is probably trying to quote from memory, and gets his terms confused. Seneca's tragedies abound in such similar epithets as regnator deum, dominator poli, gubernator poli, etc.

IV.i.89–93. My lord, kneel down . . . Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece' rape. Cf. the very similar lines in the Rape of Lucrece (1846-1848):

'Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow;
And that deep vow, which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.'

IV.i.107. Sibyl's leaves. The leaves of the prophetic books of the Cumæan Sibyl, a woman of oracular powers, who, in classical mythology, appeared before Tarquin the Proud, offering him her nine books for three hundred pieces of gold. He refused to buy them, whereupon she burned three of the books and then returned, offering the remaining six for the original price. Tarquin again refused. The Sibyl again burned three books, and returned with a final offer of the remaining three for the price of the original nine. Tarquin, advised by his augur, then paid the three hundred pieces of gold for the three books, and the Sibyl disappeared. In times of political trouble, the Romans used to consult the Sibylline books. Cf. Æneid, VI.1-75.

IV.ii.20, 21. Integer vitæ, etc. The beginning of the famous twenty-second ode of the first book of Horace. 'He who is pure in life and unstained from sin, needs not the darts of the Moor, nor the bow.' Shakespeare is much more likely than Chiron to have 'read it in the grammar long ago.'

IV.ii.26. no sound jest. 'No joking matter.' The quartos have found, which Theobald considered a misprint for fond.

IV.ii.74. 'Zounds. The oath, 'Zounds ('God's wounds'), which is found in all the quartos, is replaced in the First Folio by the expression 'Out!' because of the statute of 1606 forbidding swearing, blasphemy, etc., on the stage.

IV.ii.75. blowse. 'If "blowsy" mean ruddy and fat-faced, which it seems to do, the substantive would seem not correctly applied to a new-born black-a-moor child. Perhaps it had passed into a familiar term of jocose endearment for a child.' (White.)

IV.ii.97. Typhon's brood. Typhon, or Typheus, one of the Titans, who, with his brood, dwelt in the infernal regions and waged war against Zeus and the other Olympian gods.

IV.ii.156. Not far, one Muli lives. Steevens was the first to correct the reading of the old editions, 'Not far, one Muliteus.'

IV.iii.4. Terras Astræa reliquit. Cf. Ovid, Metamorphoses, I.150. Astræa, the goddess of justice, was the last of all the gods to forsake mankind.

IV.iii.43, 44. I'll dive into the burning lake below, And pull her out of Acheron by the heels. Acheron, the river of woe in Hades, is here referred to as a burning lake, doubtless by confusion with the Christian lake of fire and brimstone. Titus' rant reminds the reader at once of Hotspur's intention (1 Henry IV, I.iii.203 ff.) to 'dive into the bottom of the deep, . . .

And pluck up drowned honour by the locks.'

IV.iii.64-70. Virgo . . . Taurus . . . Aries. The constellation Virgo (the Virgin) was supposed to represent Astræa after she had left the earth (cf. IV.iii.4). Taurus (the Bull) and Aries (the Ram) are also zodiacal constellations.

IV.iv.67. Coriolanus. This is the theme of Shakespeare's last tragedy, Coriolanus, which was written about 1608 or 1609.

IV.iv.90. honey-stalks. According to Dr. Johnson, honey-stalks are sweet-clover flowers.

V.i.42. The pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye. Alluding to an old proverb, which Shakespeare uses in Two Gentlemen of Verona (V.ii.11, 12),

'the old saying is,
Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes.'

V.i.80. An idiot holds his bauble for a god. The bauble was the carved head with asses' ears that surmounted the baton which was carried by the court fool as a mock emblem of his office.

V.i.124. like a black dog, as the saying is. 'To blush like a black dog' is one of the old proverbs in Ray's collection.

V.i.126 ff. Aaron's circumstantial account of his misdeeds suggests at once the similar list of offences for which Barabas claims credit in Marlowe's Jew of Malta (II.iii.177 ff.).

V.i.147. Bring down the devil. Aaron's speech has evidently just been made from the top of the ladder on which he was to be hanged.

V.ii.191. of the paste a coffin I will rear. In early English cookery books the crust of a pie was always known as the coffin. According to Selden (cf. Table-Talk, under Christmas), Christmas pies were baked originally in a long coffin-shaped crust, in imitation of the manger in which our Lord was laid at his birth.

V.ii.198. worse than Progne I will be reveng'd. The author's absorbing interest in the story of the ravishment and mutilation of Philomela by Tereus has been mentioned (cf. note on II.iii.43). After Tereus had cut out her tongue, Philomela embroidered the story of her wrongs on a sampler, which she sent to her sister, Progne, wife of Tereus. The two sisters then revenged themselves on the guilty husband by murdering his son, Itylus, and serving his body at a banquet to his father. As a result of the horrible affair, Philomela was changed into a nightingale, Progne into a swallow, and Tereus into a hawk.

V.ii.206. the Centaurs' feast. A reference to the story in classical mythology (told by Ovid in the twelfth book of the Metamorphoses) of the battle between the Centaurs and the Lapithæ, at the wedding-feast of Hippodamia and Pirithous. Cf. Misdummer Night's Dream, V.i.44.

V.iii.36-38. Was it well done of rash Virginius To slay his daughter . . . stain'd and deflower'd? In 449 B.C., Virginius, a centurion, slew his daughter, Virginia, to save her from Appius Claudius, the decemvir, who had attempted to violate her. The story was a favorite with the Elizabethans, and a drama on the subject, The Tragicall Comedie of Apius and Virginia, appeared about 1563. See Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome. The story is incorrectly given in the text.

V.iii.85. Sinon. The Greek who persuaded the Trojans to admit the wooden horse into Toy.

V.iii.93-97. In the 1594 Quarto these lines read as follows:

'And force you to commiseration,
Here's Rome's young captain, let him tell the tale,
While I stand by and weep to hear him speak.
Lucius. then, gracious auditory, be it known to you,
That Chiron and the damn'd Demetrius,' etc.

V.iii.124. Damn'd as he is. The quartos and folios have And as he is, which Theobald emended to the reading given in the text. Cf. Brabantio's remark (Othello, I.ii.63),

'Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her.'

V.iii.150. give me aim awhile. Stand by and observe the result of my efforts. A figure from archery. The person who 'gave aim' stood near the target and reported the success of the shots. White suggests, 'Give me air awhile.' Schmidt, retaining the original reading, paraphrases, 'Give room and scope to my thoughts.'

V.iii.166-170. These lines appear for the first time in the Quarto of 1600. In their place, the Quarto of 1594 has the following five lines:

'And bid thee bear his pretty tales in mind,
And talk of them when he was dead and gone.
Mar. How many thousand times hath these poor lips,
When they were living, warmed themselves on thine!
O now, sweet boy, give them their latest kiss;' etc.

V.iii.201. In the Quarto of 1594 this line reads,

'And being dead let birds on her take pity.'

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, except for the following deviations:

1. The stage directions of the First Folio have been restored, necessary modern additions being enclosed in square brackets. Passages of text for which the Folio offers no equivalent are similarly bracketed.

2. Many minor changes in punctuation have been made, and the spelling of certain words normalized in accordance with English usage; e.g. everything, swoll'n, villainy. The old forms, murther, murtherer, etc., which occur in the Folio beside murder, murderer, etc., have been retained.

3. The following alterations, most of them reversions to the readings of the First Folio, have been made in the text, the reading of the present text preceding the colon, and that of Craig following it:

I.i.108 sons F: son
126 T'appease F: to appease
154 grudges F: drugs
495 sware F: swore
II.i.25 Hollo! F: Holla!
iii.55 whom F: who 126 braves F: she braves
iv.17 Hath F: have
III.i.12 these, tribunes F: these, these, tribunes
36 And bootless,: All bootless
228 flow F: blow
262 my F: thy
ii.9 Who, when F: And when
60 'But!' How, if that fly had a father and mother? F: But how if that fly had a father and a mother?
85 begin F: begins
IV.i.46 so busily she turns the leaves! Help her. F: see how busily she turns the leaves! [Helping her.
79 ye F: you
131 Revenge the heavens F: Revenge, ye heavens, ii.65 she is F: she's
152 Lord F: lord
166 ye F: you
iii.2 let me see F: now let me see
8 Haply F: Happily
67 Ha, ha! F: Ha!
113 an humble suppliant F: a humble suppliant
114 given it the emperor F: given it to the emperor
iv.2 emperor in Rome F: emperor of Rome
30 Th'effects F: The effects
61 Arm, my lords. F: Arm, arm, my lord.
71 begins F: begin
92 food F: feed
V.i.62 And if F: An if
89 luxurious F: luxurious and
121 sounded F: swounded
ii.30 th'infernal F: the infernal
40 offenders F: offender
49 globes F: globe
50 Provide thee F: Provide
62 Rape F: Rapine
137 bide F: abide
198 Progne F: Procne
205 might F: may
207 I'll F: I will
iii.1 'tis F: it is 11 my F: mine
38 enforc'd F: enforced
48 hast F: hast thou
52 now is F: is now
68 uproars F: uproar
96 This F: then
109 I am turn'd forth F: I am the turn'd forth

The Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet

Edited by
RICHARD HOSLEY

Dramatis Personae

ESCALUS, Prince of Verona
PARIS, a young Nobleman, Kinsman to the Prince
MONTAGUE, CAPULET } Heads of two opposed Houses
2. CAPULET, Cousin to Capulet
ROMEO, Son to Montague
MERCUTIO, Kinsman to the Prince, BENVOLIO, Nephew to Montague } Friends to Romeo
TYBALT, Nephew to Capulet's Wife
FRIAR LAWRENCE, FRIAR JOHN } Franciscans
BALTHASAR, Servant to Romeo
ABRAM, Servant to Montague
SAMPSON, GREGORY } Servants to Capulet
PETER, Servant to Juliet's nurse
AN APOTHECARY
THREE MUSICIANS
PAGE TO PARIS
CHIEF WATCHMAN
CHORUS

MONTAGUE'S WIFE
CAPULET'S WIFE
JULIET, Daughter to Capulet
NURSE TO JULIET

CITIZENS OF VERONA, KINSFOLK OF BOTH HOUSES, MASKERS, SERVINGMEN, PAGES, WATCHMEN, AND THE PRINCE'S TRAIN

The Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet

Introduction

Text and Date

The most authoritative source of the text of Romeo and Juliet is the 'good' Second Quarto, printed 'by Thomas Creede for Cuthbert Burby' in 1599.[1] That the copy consisted mainly of Shakespeare's 'foul papers' (working manuscript) is in part suggested by the inconsistent designation of characters in speech headings, for it seems likely that a character's dramatic function rather than his proper name would occasionally suggest itself to the author as he wrote out his manuscript.[2] Capulet's Wife, for example, is designated by such various speech headings as Wife, Mother, Old Lady, and Lady; and on the two occasions when Capulet speaks to Juliet his normal heading changes to Father. In a promptbook, on the other hand, such irregularities of designation would necessarily have been normalized in order to simplify the book-keeper's task of regulating performances. Additional evidence that Shakespeare's foul papers served as copy for Q2 is provided by a number of duplicate versions of individual words, phrases, and passages throughout the 'text proper' of the play. In each case one version appears to be the author's revision of the other, which he had not (or had not clearly) deleted from his manuscript and which was therefore set up along with its revision by the Q2 compositor. An example of 'revisional duplication' is the phrase 'I will believe,' printed in Q2 immediately before the 'Shall I believe' which the context demands and which editors customarily print as the revision, after deleting Shakespeare's first thought (V.3.103). Since the book-keeper or his scribe would recognize such duplications as stigmata of the author's composition, it is unlikely that the revisional duplications would have been reproduced in the promptbook.[3] Another kind of Q2 duplication, chiefly in stage directions but also in speech headings, suggests that the book-keeper, in preparation for transcribing the promptbook, had looked over Shakespeare's foul papers and added to them occasional notes clarifying the location of entrances and the designation of characters, without however deleting Shakespeare's original notation. Examples are afforded by the duplication of directions for the Friar's entrance at the beginning of V. 2, and by the speech heading 'M. Wife. 2.' at I.1.76. Thus the copy for Q2 appears to have been a text of Romeo and Juliet from which the promptbook was subsequently derived, either by direct transcription of the foul papers or by transcription of a 'fair copy' itself transcribed from the foul papers. The statement on the title page of Q2 that the text in that edition is 'newly corrected, augmented, and amended' does not mean that Q2 is the revision of an earlier version of Romeo and Juliet but rather that the authentic text is now being published to replace the pirated edition of 1597. The title page of Q2 also records that Romeo and Juliet had been 'sundry times publicly acted by the right Honorable the Lord Chamberlain his Servants.' Neither Q2 nor the 1597 Quarto was entered in the Stationers' Register.

The debased state of the text in the 'bad' First Quarto of Romeo and Juliet, printed 'by John Danter' in 1597,[4] suggests that this edition is one of the 'stolen and surreptitious copies' mentioned by Heminge and Condell in their epistle to the reader of the First Folio (1623). Although in the 18th century Q1 was thought to be an early draft of Romeo and Juliet, during the following century the view gradually prevailed that Q1 is a stenographic or memorial report; and the theory is now generally accepted that Q1 is a memorial reconstruction of Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, made by players who were familiar with the promptbook version of Shakespeare's company. (Although there were probably at least two reporters, for convenience they will be here referred to collectively as the Q1 reporter.) Because of gaps in the Q1 text and cuts in the number of necessary players, it has been suggested that Q1 is a memorial report of an abbreviated acting version made by Shakespeare's company from their promptbook.[5] Such a shortened version might well have been prepared for performance in the provinces, and if Romeo and Juliet was indeed written by 1592, Shakespeare's company may have performed it there during the period from 1592 to 1594 when the London theaters were closed because of plague. However, it is also possible that many of the lacunae observable in Q1 are memorial errors and that others are cuts stemming from the theatrical use to which the reconstruction itself may have been put, whether in London or the provinces is not clear. The uncertainty is complicated by our ignorance of the purpose for which the text of Q1 was reconstructed. The report may have been made for the specific purpose of providing printer's copy, but since we do not know the price an Elizabethan publisher would pay for a dramatic manuscript, we can only speculate on whether reporting for publication would have been profitable. Or, on the other hand, the report may have been made in order that a group of players without access to a Shakespearian manuscript might give performances of Romeo and Juliet, in which case the copy for Q1 may originally have been a promptbook or the foul papers of one. The latter explanation seems perhaps the more probable, but one cannot dogmatize; and difficult as they are, the problems posed by Q1 are only part of the more difficult larger question of Elizabethan bad quartos in general. In any case, Q1, although it was printed two years earlier than Q2, is derived from the promptbook version and therefore represents the text of Romeo and Juliet at a later rather than an earlier stage of its

1 Romeo and Juliet, Second Quarto, 1599, London, 1949 (fac. ed.).

2 See R. B. McKerrow, 'A Suggestion Regarding Shakespeare's Manuscripts,' The Review of English Studies, 11 (1935), 459-65.

3 The revisional duplications are briefly discussed in the notes to II.1.247-250 and V.3.103; and a full discussion appears in the present writer's article, 'The Corrupting Influence of the Bad Quarto on the Received Text of Romeo and Juliet,' Shakespeare Quarterly, 4 (1953), 28-32 (hereafter referred to as 'The Received Text').

4 Romeo and Juliet by William Shakspere, the First Quarto, 1597, London, 1886 (fac. ed.).

5 H. R. Hoppe, The Bad Quarto of Romeo and Juliet, Cornell University Press, 1948.

history than does Q2.[6] Moreover, the text of Q1, deriving as it does from actual performances, reflects in considerable detail the staging and stage business of a contemporary production in an Elizabethan public playhouse.[7] It is, of course, not the reported Q1 version but rather the promptbook version of Shakespeare's company which is referred to on the title page of Q1, in the statement that Romeo and Juliet had been 'often (with great applause) played publicly by the right Honorable the Lord of Hunsdon his Servants,' for the Chamberlain's Men were so styled from July 1596 to April 1597.

The general nature of the variations between Q1 and Q2 can be only briefly illustrated here. The text of Mercutio's death speech, for example, corresponding to III.1.86–105 in Q2 and the present edition, reads in Q1 as follows:

Tybalt under Romeo's arm thrusts Mercutio in, and flies.

Mercutio. Is he gone? hath he nothing? A pox on your houses.
Romeo. What! art thou hurt, man? The wound is not deep.
Mercutio. No, not so deep as a well, not so wide as a barn door—but it will serve, I warrant. What meant you to come between us? I was hurt under your arm.
Romeo. I did all for the best.
Mercutio. A pox of your houses, I am fairly dress'd. Sirrah, go fetch me a surgeon.
Boy. I go, my lord.
Mercutio. I am pepper'd for this world, I am sped. I' faith, he hath made worms' meat of me. And ye ask for me tomorrow, you shall find me a grave man. A pox of your houses! I shall be fairly mounted upon four men's shoulders— For your house of the Montagues and the Capulets! And then some peasantly rogue, some sexton, some base slave shall write my epitaph— that Tybalt came and broke the Prince's laws, and Mercutio was slain for the first and second cause. Where's the surgeon?
Boy. He's come, sir.
Mercutio. Now he'll keep a mumbling in my guts on the other side. come Benvolio, lend me thy hand. A pox of your houses!
Exeunt.

Although this passage varies considerably from Q2, one feels that the Q1 reporter here imitated at least the spirit if not the letter of Shakespeare's words; but elsewhere, and as a rule, the reporter grossly mistakes or subtly debases Shakespeare's original text. Two further examples will suffice to illustrate these effects of memorial transmission. One is the substitution in Q1 of the name Francis for Lawrence, obviously suggested by the Friar's invocations of the founder of his order (II.2 SD); and the other is the garbling of 'Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill,' which appears in Q1 as 'Mercy to all but murd'rers, pardoning none that kill' (III.1.198). Other examples may be culled at random from one of the parallel-text editions.[8]

Q2 and Q1 are both 'substantive' editions in the sense that each was printed from a manuscript, and all other editions are 'derivative' from these two.[9] However, Q2 may be more precisely described as a 'mixed' text,[10] since in the course of printing it suffered 'contamination' by Q1. That is, in addition to Shakespeare's foul papers, an exemplar of Q1 was in part used as copy for Q2, as is evident from sporadic 'bibliographical links' between the two editions.[11] The most striking of these are common typographical peculiarities such as italic print for the Nurse's speeches in I.3 and identical turnovers in prose lineation at I.3.4 and 16. In fact, the 85-line passage from I.2.55 to I.3.32 appears to have been printed directly from Q1 without editorial correction, for, in addition to the bibliographical links between them, the two editions here vary in only four trivial readings. But the contamination is not limited to this passage. In other sections of the text, although Q2 additions and extensive textual variants suggest that the Q2 compositor worked chiefly from Shakespeare's manuscript, bibliographical links occasionally reveal the influence of Q1. Two hypotheses have been suggested in explanation of this contamination. One is that an edited exemplar of Q1 served in part as copy for Q2, and the other is that an unedited exemplar of Q1 was occasionally consulted by the Q2 compositor. The hypothesis of an 'edited quarto' assumes that an editor was given Shakespeare's foul papers, an exemplar of Q1, and the task of preparing copy for Q2. According to a tentatively proposed form of the hypothesis, the editor tore occasional 'good' leaves out of his First Quarto, corrected them with pen and ink so as to bring their text into conformity with that of Shakespeare's manuscript, and interleaved them with manuscript leaves transcribed from that manuscript.[12] Elsewhere the present writer has advanced objections to this hypothesis of 'composite' copy and in its place developed the hypothesis of 'occasional consultation.'[13] This hypothesis, which has been adopted in the present edition, abandons the postulate of an editor. It assumes, rather, that the Q2 compositor was provided with Shakespeare's foul papers and (because of a defect in them) with an uncorrected exemplar of Q1. The compositor set most of his text from the foul papers, but because of a defective or missing leaf in that manuscript he set up the 85-line passage from I.2.55 to I.3.32 directly from Q1. (If we assume that Shakespeare's foul papers contained about fifty lines to a page, or a hundred to a leaf,[14] the passage in question may have been written on the fourth leaf of Shakespeare's manuscript, since the preceding text of the play amounts to about three hundred lines.) Having therefore an exemplar of Q1 at hand, in other parts of the text the Q2 compositor occasionally consulted Q1, either to verify a difficult reading in Shakespeare's foul papers (such as Rosaline at II.3.5) or to derive from Q1 a stage direction absent from the foul papers (such as that at II.3.88). Then, wishing to avoid the unnecessary labor of immediately returning to his manuscript copy only to locate the same

6 This view, a corollary to the memorial-reconstruction theory, is supported by a comparison of the revisional duplications in Q2 with their corresponding passages in Q1, for in each of the three longer examples it is substantially the revised version which appears in Q1 (II.1.247-250, III.3.41-44, and V.3.109-121). This situation apparently came about because the revisions (rather than the original versions) were incorporated in the promptbook when it was transcribed from the foul papers which later became the copy for Q2; and accordingly the revisions, having been used in the theater, were substantially reproduced in the copy for Q1 by a reporter familiar with performances. The evidence of the revisional duplications thus disproves the theory that Q1 represents an early draft of Q2, for Shakespeare, in writing out the manuscript which later became the copy for Q2, would not in three separate instances have revised a passage in a source-manuscript (which later became the copy for Q1) and then have made of his first revision a second revision in which he returned substantially to the original text of his source.

7 See Richard Hosley, 'The Use of the Upper Stage in Romeo and Juliet,' Shakespeare Quarterly, 5 (1954).

8 Romeo and Juliet, Parallel Texts of the First Two Quartos, ed. P. A. Daniel, London, 1874, or Shakespeare's Romeo and Julia,' ed. Tycho Mommsen, Oldenburg. 1859.

9 See R. B. McKerrow, Prolegomena for the Oxford Shakespeare, Oxford, 1939, p. 8.

10 See Sir Walter Greg, The Editorial Problem in Shakespeare, Oxford, 1942, pp. xiv-xvii.

11 Sidney Thomas, 'The Bibliographical Links Between the First Two Quartos of Romeo and Juliet,' The Review of English Studies, 25 (1949), 110-14.

12 G. I. Duthie, 'The Text of Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet,' Studies in Bibliography, 4 (1952), 3-18.

13 'The Received Text,' pp. 12-16.

14 See Greg, The Editorial Problem in Shakespeare, p. 24.

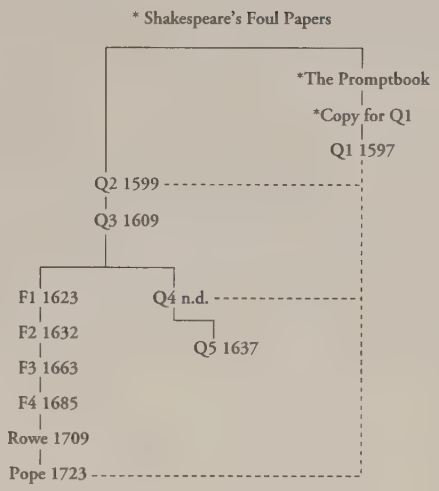
place he had just found in his quarto copy, the compositor set up directly from Q1 the line or two he could carry in his head; and when, after doing so, he again needed to consult copy, he returned to his chief copy, Shakespeare's foul papers. Thus the Q2 compositor occasionally reproduced, in the text which he was setting mainly from manuscript, certain of Q1's typographical peculiarities and perhaps some of its textual readings.

The first of the early 'derivative' editions was Q3, printed from Q2 in 1609 with a scattering of corrections. It seems likely that the editor was the Q3 compositor since he generally emended only misprints and of Q2's larger errors only corrected one, the omission of a speech heading at II.1.243. Q3 served as copy for the First Folio (1623), where the text was further corrected but carelessly printed.[15] The F1 editor's corrections appear to be conjectural emendations without Shakespearian or playhouse authority. F1 in turn served as copy for F2 (1632), whose editor made 114 deliberate editorial changes in the text, more than in any other play in the First Folio.[16] Again it seems clear that the corrections have no substantive authority. The F2 editor's emendations initiated an editorial tradition which passed more or less unchanged through F3 (1663) and F4 (1685) to Rowe's edition of 1709. None of these editions was contaminated by Q1. On the other hand, the editor of the undated Q4 (printed from Q3 between 1609 and 1637) occasionally consulted Q1 and on its authority vigorously emended the text.[17] Thus he also established an editorial tradition, which passed to Q5 (1637) and to Pope's edition of 1723. Considering that it is a derivative edition, Q4 has had an unusually great influence on the received text through the use made of it by Pope, who, presumably being ignorant of its derivation from Q3, may well have assumed it to be earlier than Q1, with which it agrees in many important particulars to the exclusion of Q2. Pope consulted Q1 as well as Q4, and, since in any case he appears to have considered Q2's variations from Q1 to be spurious changes and additions by the players,[18] he not surprisingly omitted from his edition some sections of the text originating with Q2 and freely introduced to it attractive Q1 variants and the assignment of speeches in Q1 and Q4. An example of Pope's eclecticism is the Q1 variant name, traditionally substituted for Q2's word in 'a rose By any other word would smell as sweet' (II.1.90, 91). This eclecticism was somewhat curbed by Theobald (1733) and succeeding editors, and in the 19th and 20th centuries editors have tended to use fewer and fewer Q1 variants. However, the text was finally purged of such subjective eclecticism only in an edition of 1947,[19] and the present edition is the first to challenge Pope's assignment of a number of speeches. Examples of Pope's considerable influence on the modern editorial tradition are discussed in the notes to II.1. 242-246 and 247-250.

The interrelationship of the various early editions of Romeo and Juliet is summarized by the following stemma, in which an asterisk indicates a lost manuscript (hypothetical in the case of the promptbook), a solid line direct transmission, a double line memorial transmission, and a broken line contamination:



In preparing the present edition, the editor has used Q2 as copy text. Compositor's errors and corruptions originating with Shakespeare's foul papers are corrected, silently where obvious but with a footnote where the change affects the substance of the reading. Abbreviations are expanded. The designation of characters is generally normalized in speech headings and stage directions, and the punctuation and spelling are modernized, except for occasional forms like umpeer which reflect an Elizabethan pronunciation (IV.1.65). The passage from I.2.55 to I.3.32 is reprinted from Q1, the only substantive source of this section of the text.[20] Two lines omitted from Q2 are supplied from Q1 (I.4.7-8). The Q1 stage directions are generally incorporated in the present text, enclosed however in angle brackets in order to remind the reader that, while most of them probably indicate the action and stage business of Shakespeare's company, some of them may have originated with another group of players. The editor has not hesitated to emend a reading common to the two substantive editions where Q1 appears to be corrupt and Q2 to have been contaminated by Q1; but where a good Q2 reading varies from Q1 he has generally assumed that Q2 reproduces the reading of Shakespeare's foul papers and Q1 the reporter's memorial error. About forty Q1 variants are used, in each case the debt to Q1 being recorded in a note at the foot of the page. This eclecticism is, however, deliberately limited to the use of Q1 variants where Q2 is corrupt; and where both editions appear to be corrupt although variant, the editor has conjecturally emended the Q2 reading to a third reading, without regard to Q1.[21] Examples of the principle of Q2 emendation without reference to Q1 are discussed in the notes to II.1.40, 242-246, and 247-250.

There is no external evidence for the date of composition of Romeo and Juliet. It had undoubtedly been written by 1596, for the title page of Q1 records that Romeo and Juliet had been 'often' played by Lord Hunsdon's Men—a designation of Shakespeare's company which was superseded in April 1597. It is usually assigned to 1595, on the evidence of stylistic resemblances to the sonnets and to plays traditionally dated between 1594 and 1596: The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Love's Labour's Lost, Richard II, and A Midsummer Night's Dream. However, the dating of 15 Charlton Hinman, 'The Proof-Reading of the First Folio Text of Romeo and Juliet,' Studies in Bibliography, 6 (1954), 61-70.

16 M. W. Black and M. A. Shaaber, Shakespeare's Seventeenth-Century Editors 1632-1685, New York, 1937, p.32.

17 Romeo and Juliet by William Shakspere, the Undated Quarto, London, 1887 (fac.ed.) Examples of individual Q1 readings which the Q4 editor substituted for those of Q2 and Q3 are agill for aged (III.1.166), thou for then (III.3.53), pronounce for prouaunt (II.1.12), doue for day (II.1.12), and open Et cætera for open (II.1.40).

18 The Works of Shakespeare, 6 vols., London, 1723-25, 1, xvi.

19 The Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet, ed. H. R. Hoppe, Crofts Classics, New York, 1947.

20 Duthie, 'The Text of Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet,' pp. 22-3.

21 See 'The Received Text,' pp. 20-1.

some of these works is equally conjectural as that of Romeo and Juliet, and the argument of style is inconclusive, since it could also be maintained that parts of Romeo and Juliet resemble Shakespeare's earliest work, traditionally dated in the opening years of the 1590s. If in the future Shakespeare's sonnets and first few plays are redated somewhat earlier, more respect may be accorded the date of 1591 which, since there was an earthquake in England in 1580, is suggested by the Nurse's statement that Juliet's weaning is 'since the earthquake now eleven years' (I.3.23). The implication of this topical allusion is usually rejected, in part because Romeo and Juliet was a popular play and there are no extant references to it before 1598. However, if the play was written in 1591 or 1592, it might have been performed only a few times before the plague closed London theaters in 1592,[22] and thus its popularity may date from the reopening of theaters in 1594. A conservative conjecture for the date of composition is 1591 or 1592.

Sources of the Play

Although 'separation' and 'potion' romances analogous to Romeo and Juliet can be traced back to Ovid and the early Christian Xenophon of Ephesus, the essential features of Shakespeare's plot first appear in the thirty-third story of Masuccio Salernitano's Novellino, published at Naples in 1476.[23] In Masuccio, however, there is no mention of rival families, so that the secrecy of the lovers' marriage is unmotivated. Mariotto is banished from Siena for killing a fellow citizen, and by means of a friar's potion Giannozza escapes being forced into a second marriage. After the friar restores her to consciousness, Giannozza follows Mariotto to Alexandria; but in the meanwhile Mariotto, ignorant of her action, has returned to Siena, only to be apprehended and executed. Giannozza retires to a convent where she dies of grief.

Directly or indirectly, Masuccio's story of Mariotto and Giannozza became the source of over a dozen versions of the legend of Romeo and Juliet in half a dozen languages of Renaissance Europe.[24] It is the direct source of Luigi da Porto's Historia novellamente ritrovata di due nobili amanti, con la lor pietosa morte, published at Venice around 1530.[25] Here the lovers are first called Romeo and Giulietta, and fiction is first confounded with history by da Porto's associating their families with the historical Montecchi and Cappelletti, mentioned as examples of civil dissension by Dante in the Purgatorio (VI. 106). (The Montecchi appear to have been a 13th-century faction in Verona and the Cappelletti a party in Cremona during the same century. The erroneous conception of the two unrelated political groups as opposed Veronese families originates with late 14th-century commentators on Dante.) Since da Porto asserts that the events of his story occurred in Verona during the reign of Bartolommeo della Scala (Shakespeare's Prince Escalus), the legend of Romeo and Juliet came ultimately to be accepted as history. Thus a Renaissance historian of Verona recorded that the lovers died in the year 1303, and the tourist in Verona will still be shown the alleged tomb of Giulietta.

Shakespeare may or may not have read da Porto's novella, but in any case it initiated a tradition which culminates in Shakespeare's direct source. In addition to naming the lovers Romeo and Giulietta and setting them against a background of civil strife, da Porto names the Friar Lorenzo; invents the characters of Marcuccio, Tebaldo, and the Conte di Lodrone (Shakespeare's Mercutio, Tybalt, and Paris); develops the characters of Giulietta's mother and father; introduces the meeting of the lovers at a Cappelletti ball which Romeo attends in disguise; considerably develops the psychology, dialogue, and actions of the lovers beyond Masuccio; and, possibly under the influence of Ovid's story of Pyramus and Thisbe (Metamorphoses, IV. 55-166), substitutes for Masuccio's ending substantially Shakespeare's, except that Giulietta's suitor does not appear at the tomb and that Giulietta awakens before Romeo dies of poison and herself commits suicide by holding her breath.

Da Porto's novella is in turn the source of one of Matteo Bandello's Novelle (1554), 'La Sfortunata Morte di due infelicissimi amanti, che l'uno di veleno e l'altro di dolore morirono.'[26] Bandello's story is essentially da Porto's, but he adds to the tradition many details which occur in Shakespeare: the name Paris di Lodrone; an unnamed character corresponding to Benvolio; the character of the Nurse, who takes over the plot functions of Giulietta's maid and her servant Pietro in da Porto; the window scene and the rope ladder; and the character of Fra Anselmo (Shakespeare's Friar John) who, being quarantined for plague, fails to inform Romeo of the potion plot. Bandello also makes the Cappelletti the aggressors in the fight in which Romeo kills Tebaldo, and he amplifies the love scenes, probably under the influence of an earlier Italian version by Gerardo Boldieri (1553).

In 1559 Bandello's novella was translated into French with a few significant variations by Pierre Boisteau as the third of his Histoires Tragiques, 'L'Histoire de deux amants, dont l'un mourut de venin, l'autre de tristesse.' Boisteau derives the character of the apothecary from an earlier French version by Adrien Sevin (1542), and he changes Bandello's ending by causing Rhomeo to die before Juliette awakens and Juliette to kill herself with Rhomeo's knife. In 1562 Boisteau's histoire was adapted into English by Arthur Brooke as a long poem in poulter's measure entitled The Tragical History of Romeus and Juliet, written first in Italian by Bandell, and now in English by Ar. Br.[27] This appears to be Shakespeare's immediate and only source. Brooke invents the name of Friar John, adds much description and dialogue, develops the idea of Fortune as arbitress of the lovers' destiny, and introduces the conception of the Nurse as a garrulous old woman. Brooke was probably influenced by a lost play on Romeo and Juliet, for, in his rabidly Protestant preface (where he interprets his theme as filial disobedience), he says that he recently saw 'the same argument' as that of his poem 'set forth on stage' with more commendation than he can look for. This tantalizing reference may be to a French Roméo et Juliette which was apparently in existence around 1560. Such a play would probably not, however, have come to Shakespeare's attention; and even if the piece to which Brooke alludes was English, its early date and the 22 James G. McManaway, 'Recent Studies in Shakespeare's Chronology,' Shakespeare Survey, 3 (1950), 25-6.

23 The Novellino of Masuccio, tr, W. G. Waters, 2 vols., London, 1895, 2, 155-65.

24 Olin H. Moore, The Legend of Romeo and Juliet, The Ohio State University Press, 1950.

25 'The recently discovered story of two noble lovers, with their pitiable death,' The Original Story of Romeo and Juliet by Luigi da Porto, tr. G. Pace-Sanfelice, Cambridge, 1868.

26 'The unfortunate death of two most unhappy lovers, one of whom died of poison and the other of grief,' Novellieri Italiani: Matteo Bandello, Twelve Stories, tr. Percy Pinkerton, London, 1895, pp. 169-233.

27 Romeus and Juliet, ed. P. A. Daniel, London, 1875, or Brooke's Romeus and Juliet, ed. J. J. Munro, London, 1908.

absence of evidence that it was ever printed suggest that it probably did not influence Shakespeare, except perhaps indirectly through Brooke's poem. In 1567 Boisteau's version of Bandello was literally translated into English prose by William Painter as the twenty-fifth novel in the second volume of his Palace of Pleasure, 'The Goodly History of the True and Constant Love between Rhomeo and Julietta.'[28] Shakespeare had probably read Painter's novella, but he appears not to have made direct use of it. Other versions of the legend, such as a tragi-comedy by Lope de Vega entitled Los Castelvines y Monteses, have no bearing on Shakespeare's play.

Shakespeare follows Brooke closely in the details of his plot, but the stage required him to make several shifts of emphasis in structure and character delineation.[29] He unifies the action and gives it a sense of urgency by compressing its duration from months to less than four days, and unlike Brooke and earlier writers he introduces most of his minor characters immediately. Thus the audience is prepared first for Tybalt's death (the cause of the lovers' separation) by his ominous appearances in the opening scene and again at the Capulets' feast, and secondly for the projected marriage with Paris (the cause of Juliet's drinking the potion) by his appearance in the second scene as Juliet's suitor. The death of Paris at Juliet's tomb is also Shakespeare's innovation. Shakespeare keeps his political theme in the audience's mind from beginning to end by thrice staging the crescendo of a fight followed by entrances of the higher ranks of both houses, a mob of outraged Citizens, and the Prince, symbol of civil authority and order. He gives the Friar a sympathetic character and a homiletic fondness for analogies between the soul of man and the external world of nature. He develops Brooke's portrait of the Nurse by heightening her vulgarity, and he creates the comic character of the pompous but tetchy old Capulet. He invents the name of Benvolio the well-wisher, and from a hint in Brooke he creates the character of Mercutio the realist, forever running atilt at such worshipers of convention as Tybalt the honor-mongering duelist and Rosaline's posturing lover Romeo. In Brooke's poem Mercutio is only briefly characterized (after da Porto's original conception) as

> A courtier that each where was highly had in price,
> For he was courteous of his speech, and pleasant of device.
> Even as a lion would among the lambs be bold,
> Such was among the bashful maids Mercutio to behold.
> With friendly gripe he seized fair Juliet's snowish hand:
> A gift he had that Nature gave him in his swathing band,
> That frozen mountain ice was never half so cold,
> As were his hands, though ne'er so near the fire he did them hold.
>
> (Romeus and Juliet, ll. 255-262)

After this single incident at the Capulets' feast Brooke's Mercutio does not reappear. Shakespeare's Mercutio, however, is almost as central a character as Juliet or Romeo, for his death is the keystone of the plot's structure and his satirical thrusts at Romeo's Petrarchan love and Tybalt's meticulous fencing help to define Shakespeare's chief contributions to the legend, the full-bodied and closely related themes of love and civil disorder. Certainly Shakespeare's play is the tragedy of 'star-cross'd lovers,' but certainly also the members of Shakespeare's audience, endowed with a Tudor abhorrence of civil war, were aware of the Prince's errors of policy in permitting rival factions to exist within the state; and the Prince himself, echoing Machiavelli's condemnation of misguided clemency, belatedly recognizes that 'Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill' (III.1.198). Thus Shakespeare leavens his love story with a commonplace theme of Renaissance political theory.

28 Rhomeo and Julietta, ed. P. A. Daniel, London, 1875.

29 R. A. Law, 'On Shakespeare's Changes of his Source Material in Romeo and Juliet,' University of Texas Studies in English, 9 (1929), 86-102.

The Prologue

[Enter Chorus.]

CHORUS. Two households both alike in dignity
(In fair Verona where we lay our scene)
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life,
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Doth with their death bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love
And the continuance of their parents' rage
(Which but their children's end nought could remove)
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage,
The which if you with patient ears attend
What here shall miss our toil shall strive to mend. [Exit.]

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter Sampson and Gregory with swords and bucklers, of the House of Capulet.

Sampson. Gregory, on my word we 'll not carry coals.
Gregory. No, for then we should be colliers.
Sampson. I mean, and we be in choler we 'll draw.
Gregory. Ay, while you live draw your neck out of collar.
Sampson. I strike quickly, being moved.
Gregory. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.
Sampson. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.
Gregory. To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand. Therefore if thou art moved thou run'st away.
Sampson. A dog of that house shall move me to stand. I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.
Gregory. That shows thee a weak slave, for the weakest goes to the wall.
Sampson. 'Tis true, and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall. Therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall and thrust his maids to the wall.
Gregory. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men.
Sampson. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant. When I have fought with the men I will be civil with the maids—I will cut off their heads.
Gregory. The heads of the maids?
Sampson. Ay, the heads of the maids or their maidenheads. Take it in what sense thou wilt.
Gregory. They must take it in sense that feel it.
Sampson. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand, and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.
Gregory. 'Tis well thou art not fish—if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor-john. Draw thy tool! Here comes two of the house of Montagues.

Enter two Servingmen ⟨of the Montagues⟩.

Sampson. My naked weapon is out. Quarrel, I will back thee.
Gregory. How? turn thy back and run?
Sampson. Fear me not.
Gregory. No marry, I fear thee!
Sampson. Let us take the law of our sides—let them begin.
Gregory. I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list.
Sampson. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them, which is disgrace to them if they bear it.
Abram. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sampson. I do bite my thumb, sir.
Abram. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sampson. Is the law of our side if I say 'ay'?
Gregory. No.
Sampson. No sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir. But I bite my thumb, sir.
Gregory. Do you quarrel, sir?
Abram. Quarrel, sir? No sir.
Sampson. But if you do, sir, I am for you. I serve as good a man as you.
Abram. No better.
Sampson. Well, sir.

Enter Benvolio.

Gregory. Say 'better,' here comes one of my master's kinsmen.
Sampson. Yes, better, sir.
Abram. You lie.
Sampson. Draw, if you be men. Gregory, remember thy washing blow. They fight.
Benvolio. Part, fools! Put up your swords, you know not what you do.

Enter Tybalt.

Tybalt. What! art thou drawn among these heartless hinds? Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.
Benvolio. I do but keep the peace—put up thy sword Or manage it to part these men with me.
Tybalt. What! drawn and talk of peace? I hate the word, As I hate hell, all Montagues and thee. Have at thee, coward. [They fight.]

Enter three or four Citizens with clubs or partisans.

Citizens. Clubs, bills and partisans! Strike! Beat them down! Down with the Capulets! Down with the Montagues!

Enter old Capulet in his gown, and his Wife.

The Prologue; cf. n. 1 dignity: rank 3 mutiny: strife 4 civil: of citizens 6 star-cross'd: predestined to be thwarted 9 passage: course. 12 two hours; cf. n. 14 miss: be lacking Act I, Scene I; cf. n. 1 carry coals: do dirty work, be imposed upon 1–8 coals . . . move; cf. n. 2 colliers: coal-dealers 3 and if choler: that one of the four humors which produces anger 11 take the wall; cf. n. 12, 13 goes to the wall: is thrust out of the way (proverbial) 14, 15 weaker vessels: see 1 Peter 3:7 18 men: servants 20 civil: orderly, well-governed (quibble on 'polite') 25 in: Q1, Q2 omits sense: physical sensation

29 poor-john: dried salt cod two: Q1, Q2 omits SD two So Q1; Q2 two other ⟨of the Montagues⟩ 31 back: support (but Gregory quibbles) 34 Fear me not: don't worry about me (Gregory quibbles) 35 marry: indeed (by the Virgin Mary) 38 list: please 39 bite my thumb: an insult; cf. n. 41 Abram: one of the Montague Servingmen Sd Benvolio; cf. n. 54 one: Tybalt, whom Gregory sees approaching 56–76 Yes, better, sir . . . seek a foe; cf. n. 59 washing: swashing, swashbuckling washing blow: of sword against buckler (see II.3.24; cf. n.) 62 heartless: cowardly (pun on 'hart,' stag) hinds: menials (quibble on 'female deer') 64 put up: sheathe SD partisans: broad-bladed pikes 69 Citizens: Q2 Offi. cf. n. Clubs . . . partisans: a rallying cry of London apprentices, bills: ax-headed spears SD gown: dressing gown

Capulet. What noise is this? give me my long sword, ho!
Wife. A crutch, a crutch! why call you for a sword?

Enter old Montague and his Wife

Capulet. My sword, I say, old Montague is come
And flourishes his blade in spite of me.
Montague. Thou villain Capulet! Hold me not, let me go.
Montague's Wife. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter Prince Escalus with his Train.

Prince. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
Profaners of this neighbor-stained steel—
Will they not hear? What ho! you men, you beasts,
That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
With purple fountains issuing from your veins—
On pain of torture, from those bloody hands
Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground
And hear the sentence of your moved Prince.
Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,
By thee, old Capulet and Montague,
Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets
And made Verona's ancient citizens
Cast by their grave beseeming ornaments
To wield old partisans, in hands as old,
Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate.
If ever you disturb our streets again
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time all the rest depart away.
You Capulet, shall go along with me.
And Montague, come you this afternoon
To know our farther pleasure in this case
To old Freetown, our common judgment place.
Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

Exeunt [all but Montague, his Wife and Benvolio].

Montague. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach?
Speak nephew, were you by when it began?
Benvolio. Here were the servants of your adversary
And yours, close fighting ere I did approach.
I drew to part them. In the instant came
The fiery Tybalt with his sword prepar'd,
Which as he breath'd defiance to my ears
He swung about his head and cut the winds,
Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn.
While we were interchanging thrusts and blows,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part
Till the Prince came, who parted either part.
Montague's Wife. O where is Romeo? saw you him today?
Right glad I am he was not at this fray.
Benvolio. Madam, an hour before the worship'd Sun
Peer'd forth the golden window of the East.
A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad,
Where underneath the grove of sycamore
That westward rooteth from this city side,
So early walking did I see your son.
Towards him I made, but he was ware of me.
And stole into the covert of the wood.
I, measuring his affections by my own,
(Which then most sought where most might not be found,
Being one too many by my weary self)
Pursu'd my humor, not pursuing his,
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.
Montague. Many a morning hath he there been seen,
With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs;
But all so soon as the all-cheering Sun
Should in the farthest East begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son
And private in his chamber pens himself,
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out
And makes himself an artificial night.
Black and portentous must this humor prove
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.
Benvolio. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?
Montague. I neither know it nor can learn of him.
Benvolio. Have you importun'd him by any means?
Montague. Both by myself and many other friends.
But he, his own affections' counselor,
Is to himself—I will not say how true—
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure as know.

Enter Romeo.

Benvolio. See where he comes. So please you, step aside,
I'll know his grievance or be much denied.
Montague. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay
To hear true shrift. Come madam, let's away.
Exeunt [Montague and his Wife].
Benvolio. Good morrow, cousin.
Romeo. Is the day so young?
Benvolio. But new struck nine.
Romeo. Ay me, sad hours seem long.
Was that my father that went hence so fast?
Benvolio. It was. What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?
Romeo. Not having that which, having, makes them short.
Benvolio. In love!
Romeo. Out—
Benvolio. Of love?
Romeo. Out of her favor where I am in love.
Benvolio. Alas that Love, so gentle in his view,

71 long sword; cf. n. SD Enter old Montague ... Wife; cf. n. 74 spite: defiance 78 neighbor-stained: stained with neighbors' blood 83 mistemper'd: tempered for evil (quibble on 'ill-tempered') 84 sentence: decree moved: angered 85 airy: light, trifling 91 Canker'd ... canker'd: corroded ... malignant 92, 93 If ever you disturb ... the peace; cf. n. 93 forfeit: penalty for the breach 98 Freetown: Brooke's translation of the Italian Villa Franca 100 new: again abroach: broached and left running (like beer from a cask); compare I.4.203; cf. n. 108 withal: thereby 110 part and part: either side 111 either part: both parties 116 drove: Q2 drive abroad: away from home

122 affections: feelings 123 where: a place where most: most people 125 humor: inclination (for solitude) 126 who: him who 127–138 Many a morning ... remove; cf. n. 132 Aurora: goddess of the dawn 133 heavy: melancholy 141 importun'd: questioned insistently (stressed — ⏑ —) 143 his ... counselor: who keeps his own feelings secret 145 so secret and so close; cf. n. close: reticent 146 sounding: fathoming 147 envious: malicious 149 sun: Q2 same 154 happy: fortunate 155 shrift: confession 156 Good morrow: good morning 158 new: recently 162 having, makes: if I had it would: make 167 Love: Cupid, view appearance

Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof.
Romeo. Alas that Love, whose view is muffled still,
Should without eyes see pathways to his will.
Where shall we dine?—O me! what fray was here?
Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all,
Here's much to do with hate but more with love.
Why then, O brawling love, O loving hate,
O anything of nothing first created,
O heavy lightness, serious vanity,
Misshapen Chaos of well-seeming forms,
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health,
Still-waking sleep that is not what it is—
This love feel I that feel no love in this.
Dost thou not laugh?
Benvolio. No coz, I rather weep.
Romeo. Good heart, at what?
Benvolio. At thy good heart's oppression.
Romeo. Why, such is love's transgression.
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast,
Which thou wilt propagate to have it press'd
With more of thine. This love that thou hast shown
Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.
Love is a smoke made with the fume of sighs,
Being purg'd a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes,
Being vex'd a sea nourish'd with loving tears.
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall and a preserving sweet.
Farewell, my coz.
Benvolio. Soft, I will go along,
And if you leave me so you do me wrong.
Romeo. Tut, I have left myself, I am not here,
This is not Romeo, he's some other where.
Benvolio. Tell me in sadness, who is that you love?
Romeo. What! shall I groan and tell thee?
Benvolio. Groan? why no, but sadly tell me who.
Romeo. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will—
Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill.
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.
Benvolio. I aim'd so near when I suppos'd you lov'd.
Romeo. A right good markman! and she's fair I love.
Benvolio. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.
Romeo. Well, in that hit you miss. She'll not be hit
With Cupid's arrow. She hath Dian's wit,
And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd
From Love's weak childish bow she lives uncharm'd.
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bid th' encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold.
O she is rich in beauty, only poor
That when she dies, with beauty dies her store.
Benvolio. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste?
Romeo. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste,
For Beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair.
She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead that live to tell it now.
Benvolio. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.
Romeo. O teach me how I should forget to think.
Benvolio. By giving liberty unto thine eyes,
Examine other beauties.
Romeo. 'Tis the way
To call hers, exquisite, in question more.
These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black, puts us in mind they hide the fair.
He that is strucken blind cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost.
Show me a mistress that is passing fair—
What doth her beauty serve but as a note
Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair?
Farewell, thou canst not teach me to forget.
Benvolio. I'll pay that doctrine or else die in debt.
Exeunt.

Scene Second

Enter Capulet, County Paris and the Clown.

Capulet. But Montague is bound as well as I
In penalty alike, and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.
Paris. Of honorable reck'ning are you both,
And pity 'tis you liv'd at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?
Capulet. But saying o'er what I have said before—
My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years.
Let two more summers wither in their pride
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.
Paris. Younger than she are happy mothers made.
Capulet. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.
Earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she—
She's the hopeful lady of my earth.
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part.
And she agreed, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.
This night I hold an old accustom'd feast,
Whereto I have invited many a guest
Such as I love, and you among the store
One more, most welcome, makes my number more.
At my poor house look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven light.
Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparel'd April on the heel

168 proof: experience 169 view: sight muffled: blindfolded still: always 170 his will: to make us fall in love 174–179 brawling love . . . sleep; cf. n. 177 seeming: Q1; Q2 seeing 179 Still-waking: ever-wakeful 182 coz: cousin 187 propagate: multiply 191 Being purg'd: when the smoke has cleared away 196 Soft: wait a moment 197 And if: if 198 left: Q2 lost; cf. n. 200 sadness: seriousness (Romeo quibbles on 'sorrow') that: she whom 202 sadly: seriously 203 Bid a . . . make: Q1; Q2 A . . . makes 204 ill urg'd: inopportunely mentioned 209 in . . . you miss: right in general but not in this case 210 Dian's wit: The goddess Diana's wisdom to remain a virgin 211 proof: armor 212 From: by 213 stay: endure 216–217 rich . . . store; cf. n. 220 starv'd with: killed by

223 merit . . . despair: i.e. earn salvation through chastity 224 forsworn: sworn not 231 call . . . in question: contemplate 236 passing: surpassingly 237, 238 note . . . fair: reminder of a fairer mistress 240 pay . . . debt: give that instruction despite the cost SD County: count Clown: countryman, peasant (Capulet's servant) 1 bound: bonded (to keep the peace) 4 reck'ning: reputation 9 fourteen years: see 1.3.11; cf. n. 13 marr'd . . . made; cf. n. 14 Earth . . . she: i.e. my other children are buried 15 earth: body (since she will perpetuate his line) 19 according: consenting 20 feast: the rhyme indicates the common Elizabethan pronunciation 'fest' 22 store: gathering 26 lusty: vigorous

Of limping Winter treads, e'en such delight
Among fresh fennel buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house—hear all, all see,
And like her most whose merit most shall be;
Which, on more view of many, mine (being one)
May stand in number though in reck'ning none.
Come, go with me. Go sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona. Find those persons out
Whose names are written there, and to them say
My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.
Exeunt [Capulet and Paris].

Servant. Find them out whose names are written? Here it is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil and the painter with his nets. But I am sent to find those persons whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned. In good time!

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Benvolio. Tut man, one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;
Turn giddy and be holp by backward turning,
One desp'rate grief cures with another's languish.
Take thou some new infection to thy eye
And the rank poison of the old will die.
Romeo. Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.
Benvolio. For what, I pray thee?
Romeo. For your broken shin.
Benvolio. Why Romeo, art thou mad?
Romeo. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is,
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipp'd and tormented, and—Godden, good fellow.
Servant. Godgigoden. I pray sir, can you read?
Romeo. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.
Servant. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book.
But I pray, can you read anything you see?
Romeo. Ay, if I know the letters and the language.
Servant. Ye say honestly, rest you merry!
Romeo. Stay fellow, I can read.

He reads the letter.

Signior Martino and his wife and daughters,
County Anselm and his beauteous sisters,
The lady widow of Vitruvio,
Signior Placentio and his lovely nieces,
Mercutio and his brother Valentine,
Mine uncle Capulet, his wife and daughters,
My fair niece Rosaline and Livia,
Signior Valentio and his cousin Tybalt,
Lucio and the lively Helena.

28 e'en: Q2 euen (silently emended throughout) 29 fennel: a bridal flower (supposedly an aphrodisiac) 30 Inherit: possess 32 Which: with whom (referring to 'her') on: Q2 one mine: my daughter 33 none: quibble on 'One is no number' (proverbial; compare Sonnet 136) 34 sirrah: term of address to an inferior (the servant) 40–42 shoemaker . . . nets; cf. n. 40 meddle: busy himself 41 yard: measuring rod pencil: brush 45 In good time: in the nick of time 48 holp: helped 49 languish: suffering 52 plantain leaf: medication; cf. n. 54 broken: with the skin broken 56–58 bound . . . tormented; cf. n. 58 Godden: good e'en (good evening, used after noon) 59 Godgigoden: God give ye good e'en 61 without book: by heart 64 rest you merry: God keep you merry SD letter: document 66–74 Signior Martino . . . Helena: prose in Q1-2 68 Vitruvio: Q1-2 Vtruuio 72 and: Q1; Q2 omits; cf. n.

A fair assembly, whither should they come?
Servant. Up—
Romeo. Whither? to supper?
Servant. To our house.
Romeo. Whose house?
Servant. My master's.
Romeo. Indeed I should have ask'd thee that before.
Servant. Now I'll tell you without asking. My master is the great rich Capulet, and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry!
[Exit.]

Benvolio. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's
Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so loves,
With all th' admired beauties of Verona.
Go thither and with unattainted eye
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.
Romeo. When the devout religion of mine eye
Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires,
And these who, often drown'd, could never die,
Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars.
One fairer than my love? th' all-seeing Sun
Ne'er saw her match since first the world begun.
Benvolio. Tut, you saw her fair none else being by,
Herself pois'd with herself in either eye.
But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid
That I will show you shining at this feast,
And she shall scant show well that now seems best.
Romeo. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,
But to rejoice in splendor of mine own.
[Exeunt.]

Scene Third

Enter Capulet's Wife and Nurse.

Wife. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me.
Nurse. Now by my maidenhead at twelve year old, I bade her come. What! lamb, what! ladybird. God forbid, where's this girl? What! Juliet.

Enter Juliet.

Juliet. How now, who calls?
Nurse. Your mother.
Juliet. Madam, I am here, what is your will?
Wife. This is the matter. Nurse, give leave awhile, we must talk in secret. Nurse, come back again, I have remember'd me, thou's hear our counsel. Thou knowest my daughter's of a pretty age?
Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.
Wife. She's not fourteen.
Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth (and yet to my teen be it spoken, I have but four) she's not fourteen. How long is it now to Lammas-tide?

77 to supper; cf. n. 81 thee: Q1; Q2 you; see I.2.72; cf. n. 84 crush finish off, drink down; cf. n. 85 ancient: i.e. 'old accustom'd' (I.2.20) 88 unattainted: uninfected, unprejudiced 91-4 devout religion . . . heretics; cf. n. 93 these: i.e. my eyes 94 Transparent: bright (quibble on 'easily detected') 98 pois'd: weighted 100 lady's love: i.e. ladylove 102 scant: scarcely 2–4 Now . . . Juliet; cf. n. 3 ladybird: sweetheart (literally, a small beetle) SD Juliet; cf. n. 8 matter: business give leave: leave us 10 thou's: thou shalt counsel: secret consultation 11 a pretty age; cf. n. 12 an: so Q2; Q1 a 14 lay: wager teen: sorrow 16 Lammas-tide: Lammas-time (August 1); cf. n.

Wife. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year, come Lammas Eve at night shall she be fourteen. Susan and she (God rest all Christian souls) were of an age. Well, Susan is with God, she was too good for me. But as I said, on Lammas Eve at night shall she be fourteen, that shall she, marry, I remember it well. 'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years, and she was wean'd (I never shall forget it) of all the days of the year upon that day, for I had then laid wormwood to my dug, sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall. My lord and you were then at Mantua—nay, I do bear a brain. But as I said, when it did taste the wormwood on the nipple of my dug and felt it bitter (pretty fool! to see it tetchy and fall out with the dug), 'Shake!' quoth the dovehouse; 'twas no need, I trow, to bid me trudge. And since that time it is eleven years, for then she could stand high-lone. Nay, by th' rood, she could have run and waddled all about, for even the day before she broke her brow, and then my husband (God be with his soul, 'a was a merry man) took up the child. 'Yea,' quoth he, 'dost thou fall upon thy face? Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit, wilt thou not, Jule?' And by my holidam, the pretty wretch left crying and said 'Ay.' To see now how a jest shall come about! I warrant and I should lie a thousand years I never should forget it. 'Wilt thou not, Jule?' quoth he, and pretty fool, it stinted and said 'Ay.'

Wife. Enough of this, I pray thee hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh—to think it should leave crying and say 'Ay.' And yet I warrant it had upon it brow a bump as big as a young cock'rel's stone (a perilous knock) and it cried bitterly. 'Yea,' quoth my husband, 'fall'st upon thy face? Thou wilt fall backward when thou comest to age, wilt thou not, Jule?' It stinted and said 'Ay.'

Juliet. And stint thou too, I pray thee, Nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace, thou was the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd. And I might live to see thee married once, I have my wish.

Wife. Marry, that 'marry' is the very theme
I came to talk of. Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your dispositions to be marry'd?

Juliet. It is an honor that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honor! were not I thine only nurse I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

Wife. Well, think of marriage now. Younger than you
Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers. By my count,
I was your mother much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus then in brief,
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady, lady, such a man as all the world. Why, he's a man of wax.

Wife. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay he 's a flower, in faith a very flower.

Wife. What say you, can you love the gentleman?
This night you shall behold him at our feast,
Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face
And find delight writ there with Beauty's pen,
Examine every married lineament
And see how one another lends content,
And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies
Find written in the margent of his eyes.
This precious book of love, this unbound lover,
To beautify him only lacks a cover.
The fish lives in the sea, and 'tis much pride
For fair-without the fair-within to hide.
That book in many's eyes doth share the glory
That in gold clasps locks in the golden story.
So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less! nay, bigger! women grow by men.

Wife. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love?

Juliet. I'll look to like, if looking liking move,
But no more deep will I endart mine eye
Then your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter Servingman.

Servingman. Madam, the guests are come, supper serv'd up, you call'd, my young lady ask'd for, the Nurse curs'd in the pantry, and everything in extremity. I must hence to wait, I beseech you follow straight. [Exit.]

Wife. We follow thee. Juliet, the County stays.

Nurse. Go girl, seek happy nights to happy days. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six other Maskers, Torchbearers.

Romeo. What! shall this speech be spoke for our excuse,
Or shall we on without apology?

Benvolio. The date is out of such prolixity.
We'll have no Cupid hoodwink'd with a scarf,
Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
Scaring the ladies like a crowkeeper,
(Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
After the prompter, for our entrance).
But let them measure us by what they will,
We'll measure them a measure and be gone.

Romeo. Give me a torch! I am not for this ambling.
Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mercutio. Nay gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Romeo. Not I, believe me. You have dancing shoes
With nimble soles, I have a soul of lead

23 since . . . eleven years; cf. n. 27 bear a brain: keep my memory 29 tetchy: fretful fall out: quarrel the dug: so Q2; Q1 Dugge 'Shake!'; cf. n. 30 I trow: I assure you 32 high-lone: quite alone rood: cross 33 broke: broke the skin of 34 'a: he 36 wit: sense 37 by my holidam: a mild oath; cf. n. 38 come about: come true 40 stinted: stopped 45 it brow: its brow stone: testicle 50 mark: elect 52 once: some day 55 How . . . to be: how are you disposed toward being 56, 57 honor: Q1; Q2 houre 58 thy: i.e. the Nurse's 62–63 I was your mother . . . maid; cf. n. 66 of wax: perfectly beautiful (like a wax figure)

70 This night . . . feast; cf. n. 73 married: harmonious 74 content: a pleasing impression 76 margent: margin (where explanatory notes were written) 77 unbound: without binding (quibble on 'unattached') 78 cover: binding (quibble on 'wife') 79 lives in the sea: i.e. is not yet hooked 82 clasps: fastenings on the binding (quibble on 'embraces') 86 like of: be pleased with 87 look: be prepared 89 it: Q1; Q2 omits 90 the guests are come; cf. n. 92 in extremity: at the breaking point 93 straight: immediately 94 stays: waits SD Mercutio; cf. n. Torchbearers; cf. n. 1 this speech; cf. n. 4 hoodwink'd: blindfolded 5 Tartar's painted bow; cf. n. of lath: i.e. imitation 6 crowkeeper: boy archer employed as scarecrow 7, 8 ⟨Nor . . . entrance⟩; cf. n. 7 without-book: memorized prologue: see The Prologue; cf. n. 8 After: with assistance from entrance: here trisyllabic 9 measure us: find out about us 10 measure them a measure: dance with them a stately dance 11 ambling: dancing (compared to a horse's gait) 12-21 heavy . . . bound; cf. n.

So stakes me to the ground I cannot move.
Mercutio. You are a lover, borrow Cupid's wings
And soar with them above a common bound.
Romeo. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft
To soar with his light feathers, and so bound
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe.
Under love's heavy burthen do I sink.
Mercutio. And to sink in it should you burthen love—
Too great oppression for a tender thing.
Romeo. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,
Too rude, too boist'rous, and it pricks like thorn.
Mercutio. If love be rough with you, be rough with love:
Prick love for pricking and you beat love down.
Give me a case to put my visage in.
A visor for a visor! what care I
What curious eye doth cote deformities?
Here are the beetle brows shall blush for me.
Benvolio. Come, knock and enter, and no sooner in
But every man betake him to his legs.
Romeo. A torch for me! let wantons light of heart
Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels,
For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase—
I'll be a candle-holder and look on.
The game was ne'er so fair, and I am dun.
Mercutio. Tut, dun 's the mouse, the constable's own word.
If thou are Dun we 'll draw thee from the mire
Of (save your reverence) love, wherein thou stick'st
Up to the ears. Come, we burn daylight, ho!
Romeo. Nay that 's not so.
Mercutio. I mean, sir, in delay
We waste our lights in vain. Lights, lights by day!
Take our good meaning, for our judgment sits
Five times in that ere once in our five wits.
Romeo. And we mean well in going to this mask,
But 'tis no wit to go.
Mercutio. Why? may one ask.
Romeo. I dreamt a dream tonight.
Mercutio. And so did I.
Romeo. Well, what was yours?
Mercutio. That dreamers often lie.
Romeo. In bed asleep while they do dream things true.
Mercutio. O, then I see Queen Mab hath been with you.
She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate stone
On the forefinger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomi
Over men's noses as they lie asleep;
Her wagon spokes made of long spinners' legs,
The cover of the wings of grasshoppers,
Her traces of the smallest spider web,
Her collars of the moonshine's wat'ry beans,
Her whip of cricket's bone, the lash of philome,
Her wagoner a small grey-coated gnat
Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid;
Her chariot is an empty hazel nut,
Made by the joiner squirrel or old grub,
Time out a mind the fairies' coachmakers.
And in this state she gallops night by night
Through lovers' brains and then they dream of love,
On courtiers' knees that dream on cursies straight,
O'er lawyers' fingers who straight dream on fees,
O'er ladies' lips who straight on kisses dream,
Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues
Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted are.
Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit,
And sometime comes she with a tithe-pig's tail
Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep—
Then he dreams of another benefice.
Sometimes she driveth o'er a soldier's neck
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fadom deep; and then anon
Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes,
And being thus frighted swears a prayer or two
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab
That plats the manes of horses in the night
And bakes the elflocks in foul sluttish hairs
Which once entangled much misfortune bodes.
This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage.
This is she—
Romeo. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace!
Thou talk'st of nothing.
Mercutio. True, I talk of dreams.
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain phantasy,
Which is as thin of substance as the air
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos
E'en now the frozen bosom of the North,
And being anger'd puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping South.
Benvolio. This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves.
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.
Romeo. I fear too early, for my mind misgives
Some consequence yet hanging in the stars
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels, and expire the term
Of a despised life clos'd in my breast
By some vile forfeit of untimely death.

21 pitch: height reached by a falcon before swooping on its prey 29 case: mask 30 A ... visor: a mask for a masklike face 31 cote: quote, observe 32 shall: that shall 35 wantons: triflers 36 rushes: the usual floor-covering before carpets 37 proverb'd ... phrase: supplied with an old man's proverb; cf. n. 38 candle-holder: onlooker 39 game: quarry (quibble on 'gambling') dun: Q2 dum; Q1 done; dark, ugly (pun on 'done,' finished); cf. n. 40 dun 's the mouse: keep quiet, lie low (proverbial) constable's own word: i.e. when lying in wait for an arrest 41 Dun: proverbial name for a horse; cf. n. 42 Of: Q1; Q2 Or save your reverence: begging your pardon 43 burn daylight: waste time 44 Nay: Romeo quibbles on 'waste torchlight by day' not so: since it is now after dark 47 good: correct 47, 48 judgment ... wits; cf. n. 48 five wits: Q2 fine wits 49 mask: masking party 50 no wit: unwise 52 tonight: last night 57 Queen Mab, midwife; cf. n. 58–95 She is ... bodes: prose in Q2; verse in Q1 59 agate stone; cf. n. 61 atomi: Q1; Q2 ottamie; atoms, tiny creatures; cf. n. 63 spinners: spiders

66 wat'ry: since the moon was thought to cause dew 67 philome: film, gossamer 69 worm: idleness was suppose to breed maggots in the fingers 70 maid: Q1; Q2 man; cf. n. 72 joiner: cabinetmaker 73 a: of 74 state: pomp 76 cursies: curtsies 80 sweetmeats: kissing-comfits (for perfuming the breath) 82 suit; cf. n. 83 tithe-pig: every tenth pig born (due the parson as church tax) 84 'a: he 88 ambuscadoes: ambushes 89 fadom: fathoms (old plural) anon: presently 94 elflocks: cakes of tangled hair (supposedly the work of elves) 95 entangled: Q2 untangled 96 hag: incubus 97 bear: bear children (quibble on 'support a man') 98 carriage: here pronounced 'carri-age'; cf. n. 103 idle: empty 104 phantasy: imagination 109 face: Q1; Q2 side 110 ourselves: i.e. our present intentions 113 consequence: future event 114 his: its date period, duration 115–117 expire ... death; cf. n.

But He that hath the stirrage of my course
Direct my sail. On, lusty gentlemen.
Benvolio. Strike drum.

They march about the stage, and Servingmen come forth with napkins.

1. Servingman. Where's Potpan that he helps not to take away? He shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!
2. Servingman. When good manners shall lie in one or two men's hands, and they unwash'd too, 'tis a foul thing.
1. Servingman. Away with the join-stools, remove the court-cubbert, look to the plate. Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane, and as thou loves me let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell. Anthony and Potpan!
3. Servingman. Ay boy, ready.
1. Servingman. You are look'd for and call'd for, ask'd for and sought for in the great chamber.
4. Servingman. We cannot be here and there too. Cheerly, boys, be brisk awhile and the longer liver take all.

Exeunt [Servingmen].

Enter ⟨old Capulet with⟩ all the Guests and Gentlewomen to the Maskers.

Capulet. Welcome gentlemen, ladies that have their toes
Unplagu'd with corns will walk a bout with you.
Ah my mistresses, which of you all
Will now deny to dance? She that makes dainty,
She I'll swear hath corns. Am I come near ye now?
Welcome gentlemen, I have seen the day
That I have worn a visor and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear
Such as would please. 'Tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone.
You are welcome, gentlemen. Come musicians, play.

Music plays and they dance.

A hall, a hall! give room! And foot it, girls.
More light! you knaves, and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.
Ah sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
Nay sit, nay sit, good cousin Capulet,
For you and I are past our dancing days.
How long is 't now since last yourself and I
Were in a mask?
2. Capulet. Berlady, thirty years.
Capulet. What! man, 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much,
'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio
(Come Pentecost as quickly as it will)
Some five and twenty years, and then we mask'd.
2. Capulet. 'Tis more, 'tis more, his son is elder, sir,
His son is thirty.
Capulet. Will you tell me that?
His son was but a ward two years ago.
Romeo. What lady 's that which doth enrich the hand
Of yonder knight?
Servant. I know not, sir.
Romeo. O she doth teach the torches to burn bright.
It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night
As a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear—
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear.
So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.
The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand,
And touching hers make blessed my rude hand.
Did my heart love till now? forswear it, Sight!
For I ne'er saw true beauty till his night.
Tybalt. This by his voice should be a Montague.
Fetch me my rapier, boy. What! dares the slave
Come hither cover'd with an antic face
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?
Now by the stock and honor of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.
Capulet. Why, how now! kinsman, wherefore storm you so?
Tybalt. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe,
A villain that is hither come in spite
To scorn at our solemnity this night.
Capulet. Young Romeo is it?
Tybalt. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.
Capulet. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone.
'A bears him like a portly gentleman,
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth.
I would not for the wealth of all this town
Here in my house do him disparagement.
Therefore be patient, take no note of him.
It is my will, the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence and put off these frowns,
An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.
Tybalt. It fits when such a villain is a guest,
I'll not endure him.
Capulet. He shall be endur'd.
What! goodman boy, I say he shall. Go to!
Am I the master here or you? Go to!
You 'll not endure him! God shall mend my soul,
You 'll make a mutiny among my guests!
You will set cock-a-hoop! You 'll be the man!
Tybalt. Why Uncle, 'tis a shame.
Capulet. Go to, go to!
You are a saucy boy. [Aside.] Is 't so indeed?
This trick may chance to scathe you. I know what,
You must contrary me! Marry, 'tis time—
Well said, my hearts. You are a princox, go!
Be quiet or— More light, more light! For shame!
I'll make you quiet— What! cheerly, my hearts.
Tybalt. Patience perforce with willful choler meeting

118 stirrage: steerage 119 sail: Q1; Q2 sute, SD They march . . . napkins: for staging see notes 121–133 Where's Potpan . . . take all; cf. n. 122 trencher: wooden platter 125 join: fabricated by a joiner 126 court-cubbert: court-cupboard, sideboard plate tableware 127 marchpane: marzipan (an almond candy) 131 great chamber: hall used for social occasions 133 the longer . . . all: i.e. lets be cheerfully resigned (proverbial) SD Enter . . . to the Maskers; cf. n. 135 walk a bout: tread a measure a bout: Q2 about 137 makes dainty: affects fastidiousness 138 Am I . . . Now?: Have I hit the truth? 144 A hall: clear the floor 145 knaves: fellows tables: hinged leaves on trestles 147 sirrah: here used familiarly 148 cousin: used of any but nearest relatives cousin Capulet: probably Capulet's uncle (see I.2.71) 151 Were in: i.e. wore 152 Berlady: By our Lady (the Virgin Mary) 154 nuptial: wedding 155 Pentecost: Whitsunday (seventh Sunday after Easter)

160 ward: minor in charge of a guardian 169 shows: appears 175 slave: base fellow 176 antic face: grotesque mask 177 fleer: sneer solemnity: festivity 186 Content thee: calm thyself 187 portly: of good deportment, well mannered 191 disparagement: indignity 192 patient: calm, forbearing 194 presence: demeanor 199 goodman boy: a contemptuous phrase; cf. n. Go to: get out 201 mend: amend, purge, save 202 mutiny: disturbance 203 set cock-a-hoop: be utterly reckless; cf. n. SD Aside; cf. n. 207 trick: i.e. of brawling scathe: harm 208 contrary: stressed — ⏑ — — 209 princox: coxcomb, conceited youth 212 Patience perforce: enforced self-control (proverbial)

Makes my flesh tremble in their diff'rent greeting.
I will withdraw, but this intrusion shall,
Now seeming sweet, convert to bitt'rest gall. Exit.
Romeo. If I profane with my unworthiest hand
This holy shrine, the gentle sin is this,
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.
Juliet. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion shows in this,
For saints have hands that pilgrims hands do touch,
And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.
Romeo. Have not saints lips and holy palmers too?
Juliet. Ay pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.
Romeo. O then dear saint, let lips do what hands do—
They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.
Juliet. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.
Romeo. Then move not while my prayer's effect I take.
Thus from my lips, by thine, my sin is purg'd.
Juliet. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.
Romeo. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!
Give me my sin again.
Juliet. You kiss by th' book.
Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.
Romeo. What is her mother?
Nurse. Marry bachelor,
Her mother is the lady of the house,
And a good lady, and a wise and virtuous.
I nurs'd her daughter that you talk'd withal.
I tell you, he that can lay hold of her
Shall have the chinks.
Romeo. Is she a Capulet?
O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.
Benvolio. Away, be gone, the sport is at the best.
Romeo. Ay, so I fear, the more is my unrest.
Capulet. Nay gentlemen, prepare not to be gone,
We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.
(They whisper in his ear.)
Is it e'en so? why then I thank you all.
I thank you, honest gentlemen. Good night.
More torches here! Come on then, let's to bed.
Ah, sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late,
I'll to my rest.

⟨Exeunt [Capulet and most of the others.]⟩

Juliet. Come hither, Nurse. What is yond gentleman?
Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.
Juliet. What 's he that now is going out of door?
Nurse. Marry, that I think be young Petruchio.
Juliet. What 's he that follows here that would not dance?
Nurse. I know not.
Juliet. Go ask his name. If he be married
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague,
The only son of your great enemy.
Juliet. My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late!
Prodigious birth of love it is to me
That I must love a loathed enemy.
Nurse. What 's this? what's this?
Juliet. A rhyme I learn'd e'en now
Of one I danc'd withal.
One calls within, 'Juliet!'
Nurse. Anon, anon!
Come, let's away, the strangers all are gone. Exeunt.

[Enter Chorus.]

CHORUS. Now old Desire doth in his deathbed lie,
And young Affection gapes to be his heir.
That fair for which Love groan'd for and would die,
With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.
Now Romeo is belov'd and loves again,
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;
But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks.
Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;
And she, as much in love, her means much less
To meet her new beloved anywhere.
But passion lends them pow'r, time means, to meet,
Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet. [Exit.]

Act Second ❧ Scene First

Enter Romeo alone.

Romeo. Can I go forward when my heart is here?
Turn back, dull earth, and find thy center out. [Retires.]

Enter Benvolio with Mercutio.

Benvolio. Romeo, my cousin Romeo! Romeo!
Mercutio. He 's wise and on my life hath stol'n him home to bed.
Benvolio. He ran this way and leapt this orchard wall.
Call, good Mercutio.
Mercutio. Nay I 'll conjure too.
Romeo! humors! madman! passion! lover!
Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh.
Speak but one rhyme and I am satisfy'd,
Cry but 'Ay me!' pronounce but 'love' and 'dove,'
Speak to my goship Venus one fair word,
One nickname for her purblind son and heir,
Young Abram Cupid, he that shot so true

213 diff'rent: hostile greeting: encounter 216–229 If I profane . . . I take: the lovers' first dialogue forms a sonnet 217 shrine: i.e. Juliet's hand 217–219 the gentle sin . . . kiss cf. n. 218–224 pilgrims . . . palmers cf. n. 218 ready: Q1; Q2 did readie; for text see V.3.102; cf. n. 221 mannerly: well mannered, polite 222 saints: images of saints 228 move . . . sake: initiate action, though they do answer prayers 229 effect: fulfillment 230 Thus . . . purg'd; cf. n. 232 urg'd: mentioned 234 by th' book: authoritatively 236 What: who 240 withal: with 242 the chinks: plenty of coin 244 dear: grievous (quibble on 'costly') is my foe's debt: is owed to my foe (i.e. is in Juliet's power) 248 foolish: humble banquet: refreshments, supper towards: in preparation 250 honest: honorable 252 fay: faith 257 be: may be (subjunctive) Petruchio; cf. n.

264 sprung: descended 266 Prodigious: monstrous, ill-omened 271 Anon: right away 273–286 Now old Desire . . . sweet; cf. n. 273 old Desire: i.e. for Rosaline 274 gapes: is eager 275 Love: i.e. the lover 278 Alike: i.e. both he and she 286 extremities: hardships extreme: stressed ⏑ — 1 forward: i.e. away from Juliet 2 earth . . . center: body . . . heart; cf. n. SD Retires: i.e. hides behind a pillar or stage property 4 He's; cf. n. 8 conjure: call up a spirit by incantation 9 Romeo . . . lover; cf. n. humors: moods, whims 10 in . . . sigh: in form of mist 12 pronounce: Q1; Q2 prouaunt dove: Q1; Q1 day 13 goship: gossip, friend, confidant 14 purblind: totally blind heir: Q1; Q2 her 15 Abram: beggarly, hypocritical (like an Abraham Man); cf. n.

When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar maid.
He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not:
The ape is dead and I must conjure him.
I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
By her high forehead and her scarlet lip,
By her fine foot, straight leg and quiv'ring thigh,
And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,
That in thy likeness thou appear to us.
Benvolio. And if he hear thee thou wilt anger him.
Mercutio. This cannot anger him. 'Twould anger him
To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand
Till she had laid it and conjur'd it down—
That were some spite. My invocation
Is fair and honest, in his mistress' name
I conjure only but to raise up him.
Benvolio. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees
To be consorted with the hum'rous night.
Blind is his love and best befits the dark.
Mercutio. If love be blind love cannot hit the mark.
Now will he sit under a medlar tree
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit
As maids call medlars when they laugh alone.
O Romeo, that she were— O that she were
An open-arse or thou a pop'rin pear.
Romeo, good night. I 'll to my truckle-bed,
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep.
Come, shall we go?
Benvolio. Go then, for 'tis in vain
To seek him here that means not to be found.
Exeunt [Benvolio and Mercutio].
Romeo. He jests at scars that never felt a wound.
But soft, what light through yonder window breaks?
It is the East and Juliet is the sun.
Arise fair Sun and kill the envious Moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief
That thou her maid art far more fair than she.
Be not her maid, since she is envious,
Her vestal liv'ry is but sick and green,
And none but fools do wear it, cast it off.

[Enter Juliet at the window.]

It is my lady! O it is my love!
O that she knew she were!
She speaks yet she says nothing, what of that?
Her eye discourses, I will answer it.
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks.
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars
As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright
That birds would sing and think it were not night.
See how she leans her cheek upon her hand!
O that I were a glove upon that hand
That I might touch that cheek.
Juliet. Ay me!
Romeo. She speaks.
O speak again, bright angel, for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of Heaven
Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him
When he bestrides the lazy puffing clouds
And sails upon the bosom of the air.
Juliet. O Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy father and refuse thy name;
Or if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.
Romeo. Shall I hear more or shall I speak at this?
Juliet. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy,
Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.
What's Montague? it is nor hand nor foot
Nor arm nor face, O be some other name
Belonging to a man.
What 's in a name? that which we call a rose
By any other word would smell as sweet.
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes
Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name,
And for thy name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself.
Romeo. I take thee at thy word.
Call me but Love and I 'll be new baptiz'd,
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.
Juliet. What man art thou that thus bescreen'd in night
So stumblest on my counsel?
Romeo. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am.
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself
Because it is an enemy to thee.
Had I it written, I would tear the word.
Juliet. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of thy tongue's utt'ring, yet I know the sound.
Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?
Romeo. Neither, fair maid, if either thee dislike.
Juliet. How cam'st thou hither, tell me, and wherefore?
The orchard walls are high and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.
Romeo. With Love's light wings did I o'erperch these walls.
For stony limits cannot hold Love out,
And what Love can do, that dares Love attempt.
Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.
Juliet. If they do see thee they will murther thee.
Romeo. Alack, there lies more peril in thine eye
Than twenty of their swords, look thou but sweet

16 King Cophetua: a ballad character; cf. n. 18 dead: playing dead (like a performing ape) conjure him: i.e. to raise his ghost 26 circle: magic ring (quibble on 'pudendum') 27 strange: belonging to another person 28 conjur'd: stressed — — 29 spite: injury invocation: here five syllables; see I.4.98; cf. n. 33 consorted: associated hum'rous: moist (quibble on 'moody') 36 medlar: a fruit resembling a small brown apple (symbol of pudendum) 40 open-arse: Q2 open; Q1 open Et cætera; medlar; cf. n. pop'rin pear: cf. n. 41 truckle-bed: a low bed trundled by day under a standing bed 42 field-bed: bed on the bare ground 46 Romeo: for staging see notes 47 soft: hush 49 Moon: Diana (goddess of chastity) 53 vestal: virgin green: pale, sickly (as from green-sickness; compare III.5.156) SD Enter ... window: cf. n. window: cf. n. 60 stars: planets 61 do: Q1; Q2 to 62 spheres: orbits; cf. n.

66 stream: shine 78 puffing: up-swelling, inflating; cf. n. 80 wherefore: why 86 though not: even if thou wert not 87–89 What's Montague ... a man; cf. n. 93 owes: owns 101 counsel: secret thought 106 written: in writing 110 dislike: displease 115 o'erperch: fly over 118 stop: obstacle

And I am proof against their enmity.
Juliet. I would not for the world they saw thee here.
Romeo. I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes,
And but thou love me, let them find me here.
My life were better ended by their hate
Than death prorogued, wanting of they love.
Juliet. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?
Romeo. By Love, that first did prompt me to inquire.
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot, yet wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash'd with the farthest sea,
I should adventure for such marchandise.
Juliet. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face,
Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek
For that which thou hast heard me speak tonight.
Fain would I dwell on form—fain, fain deny
What I have spoke. But farewell compliment.
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say 'Ay,'
And I will take thy word. Yet if thou swear'st
Thou mayst prove false—at lovers' perjuries
They say Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love pronounce it faithfully—
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I 'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
And therefore thou mayst think my havior light,
But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning to be strange.
I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou overheard'st, ere I was ware,
My true-love passion. Therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.
Romeo. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I vow,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops—
Juliet. O swear not by the moon, th' inconstant moon.
That monthly changes in her circl'd orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.
Romeo. What shall I swear by?
Juliet. Do not swear at all,
Or if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.
Romeo. If my heart's dear love—
Juliet. Well, do not swear. Although I joy in thee
I have no joy of this contract tonight.
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden,
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be
Ere one can say 'It lightens.' Sweet, good night.
This bud of love by Summer's rip'ning breath
May prove a beauteous flow'r when next we meet.
Good night, good night! As sweet repose and rest
Come to they heart as that within my breast.
Romeo. O wilt thou leave me so unsatisfy'd?
Juliet. What satisfaction canst thou have tonight?
Romeo. Th' exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.
Juliet. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it,
And yet I would it were to give again.
Romeo. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?
Juliet. But to be frank and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have,
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep—the more I give to thee
The more I have, for both are infinite.
I hear some noise within. Dear love, adieu—
[Nurse calls within.]
Anon, good Nurse! Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit.]
Romeo. O blessed blessed night! I am afear'd,
Being in night, all this is but a dream
Too flatt'ring sweet to be substantial.

[Enter Juliet again.]

Juliet. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night indeed.
If that thy bent of love be hon'rable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word tomorrow
By one that I 'll procure to come to thee
Where and what time thou wilt perform the rite,
And all my fortunes at thy foot I 'll lay
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.
Nurse. [Within.] Madam!
Juliet. I come, anon. But if thou mean'st not well,
I do beseech thee—
Nurse. [Within.] Madam!
Juliet. By and by I come.
—To cease thy strife and leave me to my grief.
Tomorrow will I send.
Romeo. So thrive my soul.
Juliet. A thousand times good night.
[Exit.]
Romeo. A thousand times the worse to want thy light!
Love goes toward love as schoolboys from their books,
But love from love toward school with heavy looks.

Enter Juliet again.

Juliet. Hist Romeo, hist! O for a falkner's voice
To lure this tassel-gentle back again.
Bondage is hoarse and may not speak aloud,
Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine
With repetition of my Romeo.
Romeo. It is my soul that calls upon my name.
How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears.
Juliet. Romeo—
Romeo. My dear?
Juliet. What a clock tomorrow
Shall I sent to thee?
Romeo. By the hour of nine.

122 proof: armored 125 but: unless 127 prorogued: postponed 133 adventure: take the risk (of searching) 137 Fain: gladly 138 compliment convention 146 So: provided that 147 fond: foolishly affectionate 148 havior: Q1; Q2 behauior light: immodest 150 more cunning: Q1; Q2 coying strange: distant, reserved 155 Which: relates to 'yielding' discovered: revealed 159 circl'd: Q2 circle; Q1 circled circl'd orb: the sphere of the moon (see II.1.62; cf. n.) 168 contract: exchange of vows (stressed — –); cf. n. 169 unadvis'd: unconsidered

182 frank: free-handed, generous SD within: off stage 192 substantial: real; here pronounced 'substanti-al'; see I.4.98; cf. n. 194 thy bent of love: the object of thy love 196 procure: arrange 200, 203 Nurse: Q2 omits By and by: immediately 205 strife: striving (to woo) 207 So thrive my soul: as I hope to be saved 212 falkner: falconer 213 tassel-gentle: tercel-gentle (male peregrine falcon) 214 Bondage is hoarse: i.e. being under my parents' control I must whisper 216 mine: Q2 omits 220 attending: listening 222 dear: Q2 Neece; cf. n.

Juliet. I will not fail, 'tis twenty year till then.
I have forgot why I did call thee back.
Romeo. Let me stand here till thou remember it.
Juliet. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Rememb'ring how I love thy company.
Romeo. And I 'll still stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other home but this.
Juliet. 'Tis almost morning. I would have thee gone,
And yet no farther than a wanton's bird
That lets it hop a little from his hand,
Like a poor pris'ner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silken threed plucks 't back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.
Romeo. I would I were thy bird.
Juliet. Sweet, so would I,
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
Good night, good night!
Romeo. Parting is such sweet sorrow
That I shall say good night till it be morrow.
Juliet. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast—
Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest! [Exit.]
Romeo. The grey-ey'd Morn smiles on the frowning Night,
Check'ring the eastern clouds with streaks of light,
And fleckled Darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth Day's path and Titan's burning wheels.
Hence will I to my ghostly Friar's close cell,
His help to crave and my dear hap to tell. Exit.

Scene Second

Enter Friar alone with a basket.

Friar. Now ere the sun advance his burning eye
The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,
I must upfill this osier cage of ours
With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers.
The Earth that 's Nature's mother is her tomb,
What is her burying grave, that is her womb,
And from her womb children of divers kind
We sucking on her natural bosom find,
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some and yet all different.
O mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In plants, herbs, stones and their true qualities,
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live
But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor ought so good but, strain'd from that fair use,
Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.
Virtue itself turns vice being misapplied,
And vice sometime by action dignified.

Enter Romeo.

Within the infant rind of this weak flower
Poison hath residence and med'cine power,
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part,
Being tasted, stays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed kings encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, Grace and rude Will,
And where the worser is predominant
Full soon the canker Death eats up that plant.
Romeo. Good morrow, Father.
Friar. Benedicite!
What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed.
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where Care lodges Sleep will never lie.
But where unbruised Youth with unstuff'd brain
Doth couch his limbs, there golden Sleep doth reign.
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure
Thou art uprous'd with some distemp'rature.
Or if not so (then here I hit it right)
Our Romeo hath not been in bed tonight.
Romeo. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.
Friar. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline?
Romeo. With Rosaline, my ghostly Father? No.
I have forgot that name and that name's woe.
Friar. That 's my good son. But where hast thou been then?
Romeo. I'll tell thee ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy,
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me
That 's by me wounded. Both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies.
I bear no hatred, blessed man, for lo
My intercession likewise steads my foe.
Friar. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift,
Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.
Romeo. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet;
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combin'd, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage. When and where and how
We met, we woo'd and made exchange of vow
I 'll tell thee as we pass. But this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us today.
Friar. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here!
Is Rosaline, that thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? Young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline,
How much salt water thrown away in waste
To season love, that of it doth not taste.
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans yet ring in mine ancient ears.
Lo! here upon they cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet.

234 wanton: capricious child 237 silken threed: silken thread; cf. n. 243 Romeo: Q2 omits 242–246 Good night ... rest; cf. n. 247 Romeo: in Q2 before 1.246 247–250 The grey-ey'd Morn ... wheels; cf. n. 248 Check'ring: Q1; Q2 Checking; cf. n; variegating 249 fleckled: dappled 250 Titan: i.e. the sun, offspring of the Titan Hyperion wheels: i.e. of the sun's chariot (compare III.2.1-4) 251 Hence: from here ghostly: spiritual, holy close: narrow 252 dear hap: good fortune 1 advance: raise 3 osier cage: willow basket 11 mickle: great grace: divine power 15 strain'd: constrained, perverted SD Enter Romeo; cf. n.

21 that part: its odor cheers: revives each part: of the body 22 stays: suspends 24 Grace: virtue Will: desire, lust 26 canker: cankerworm 28 Benedicite: God bless you (the final e rhymes with me) 30, 37 distemper'd, distemp'rature; cf. n. 34 unstuff'd: empty (of care) 42 ghostly: spiritual 49 physic: healing power (through the sacrament of marriage) 51 intercession: petition steads: benefits 52 homely: simple drift: narrative 53 shrift: absolution 57 combin'd: united 69 season: preserve as by salting (quibble on 'flavor') 71 ring: Q2 ringing 73 yet: the rhyme indicates the common Elizabethan pronunciation 'yit'

If e'er thou wast thyself and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline.
And art thou chang'd? Pronounce this sentence then:
Women may fall when there 's no strength in men.
Romeo. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline—
Friar. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.
Romeo. And bad'st me bury love—
Friar. Not in a grave,
To lay one in another out to have.
Romeo. I pray thee chide me not. Her I love now
Doth grace for grace and love for love allow.
The other did not so.
Friar. O she knew well
Thy love did read by rote that could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come go with me,
In one respect I 'll thy assistant be,
For this alliance may so happy prove
To turn your households' rancor to pure love.
Romeo. O let us hence! I stand on sudden haste.
Friar. Wisely and slow, they stumble that run fast. Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mercutio. Where the devil should this Romeo be? came he not home tonight?
Benvolio. Not to his father's, I spoke with his man.
Mercutio. Why that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline, torments him so that he will sure run mad.
Benvolio. Tybalt, the kinsman to old capulet, hath sent a letter to his father's house.
Mercutio. A challenge, on my life.
Benvolio. Romeo will answer it.
Mercutio. Any man that can write may answer a letter.
Benvolio. Nay, he will answer the letter's master how he dares, being dared.
Mercutio. Alas poor Romeo, he is already dead—stabb'd with a white wench's black eye, run though the ear with a love song, the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft. And is he a man to encounter Tybalt?
Benvolio. Why what is Tybalt?
Mercutio. More than Prince of Cats. O he 's the courageous Captain of Compliments. He fights as you sing prick-song—keeps time, distance and proportion. He rests his minim rests—one, two and the third in your bosom. The very butcher of a silk button, a duelist, a duelist! a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause. Ah the immortal passado! The punto reverso! the hai!
Benvolio. The what?
Mercutio. The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting fantasticoes. These new tuners of accent! 'By Jesu, a very good blade! a very tall man! a very good whore!' Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardon-me's, who stand so much on the new form that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O their bones, their bones!

Enter Romeo.

Benvolio. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.
Mercutio. Without his roe, like a dried herring. O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in. Laura to his lady was a kitchen wench (marry, she had a better love to berhyme her!), Dido a dowdy, Cleopatra a gypsy, Helen and Hero hildings and harlots, Thisbe a grey eye or so but not to the purpose. Signior Romeo, bon jour. There 's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.
Romeo. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?
Mercutio. The slip, sir, the slip, can you not conceive?
Romeo. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great, and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy.
Mercutio. That 's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.
Romeo. Meaning, to cursy?
Mercutio. Thou hast most kindly hit it.
Romeo. A most courteous exposition.
Mercutio. Nay I am the very pink of courtesy.
Romeo. Pink for flower?
Mercutio. Right.
Romeo. Why then is my pump well flower'd.
Mercutio. Sure wit! Follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out thy pump, that when the single sole of it is worn the jest may remain after the wearing solely singular.
Romeo. O single-sol'd jest, solely singular for the singleness!
Mercutio. Come between us, good Benvolio, my wits faint.
Romeo. Swits and spurs! swits and spurs! or I'll cry a match.
Mercutio. Nay, if our wits run the wild goose chase, I am done. For thou hast more of the wild goose in one of thy wits than (I am sure) I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the goose?
Romeo. Thou wast never with me for anything when thou wast not there for the goose.
Mercutio. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.
Romeo. Nay good goose, bite not.
Mercutio. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting, it is a most sharp sauce.
Romeo. And is it not, then, well serv'd in to a sweet goose?
Mercutio. O here 's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad.

76 sentence: proverb 83 Her: she whom 84 grace: favor 87 read: recite 89 In one respect: for one reason 92 stand on: insist upon 1 should: might 2 tonight: last night 4, 5 Why . . . run mad; cf. n. 9 answer: accept 12 dared: challenged 15 pin: peg holding the mark in the target's center 16 bow-boy: Cupid butt-shaft: unbarbed arrow for practice at the butts 18 Prince of Cats; cf. n. 19 Compliments polite formalities as you sing prick-song: i.e. precisely (as from written music) 20 distance: interval proportion: rhythm minim: rests short pauses (a minim being the shortest note) 21, 22 butcher . . . button; cf. n. 23 house: school of fencing first and second cause; cf. n. 24 passado . . . hai: fencing terms; cf. n. 26 antic: absurd 26, 27 fantasticoes: Q1; Q2 phantacies accent: language

28 tall: brave 29 grandsire: old man (who would disapprove of affectation) 30 flies: parasites pardon: Q1; Q2 pardons 31 form: fashion (quibble on 'bench') 32 bones; cf. n. 34 roe: spawn (quibble on 'sperm') like a dried herring: i.e. good-for-nothing 36 Laura: Petrarch's beloved, to whom he addressed his sonnets 37 dowdy: slut 38 gypsy: Egyptian (thus of dark complexion) hildings: good-for-nothings, baggages 41 slop: baggy breeches 44 slip: slang for counterfeit coin conceive: understand 46 case: quibble on 'pudendum' 49 cursy: curtsy 50 kindly: naturally, aptly 55 flower'd: pinked, perforated (pun on 'floored') 58 solely singular: all alone 59 single-sol'd: thin, contemptible (quibble on 'souled') solely singular: only unique singleness: feebleness 60 faint: Q2 faints; Q1 faile 61 Swits: switch Swits and spurs: i.e. urge your horse faster cry a match: claim to have won the contest 62 wild goose chase; cf. n. 64 with you: even with you 67 goose: quibble on 'prostitute' 68 bite . . . ear: as a sign of affection 70 sweeting: sweet-flavored apple 72 well serv'd in: sour sauce with sweet meat being proverbial 73 cheveril: an elastic leather made from kidskin 74 ell: 45 inches

Romeo. I stretch it out for that word 'broad,' which added to the goose proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mercutio. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? Now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo, now art thou what thou art by Art as well as by Nature, for this driveling love is like a great natural that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Benvolio. Stop there, stop there!

Mercutio. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Benvolio. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mercutio. O thou art deceived! I would have made it short, for I was come to the whole depth of my tale and meant indeed to occupy the argument no longer.

Enter Nurse and her Man.

Romeo. Here 's goodly gear—a sail, a sail!

Mercutio. Two, two—a shirt and a smock.

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon.

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mercutio. Good Peter, to hide her face, for her fan 's the fairer face.

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mercutio. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mercutio. 'Tis no less, I tell ye, for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you?

Romeo. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made, himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said, 'For himself to mar,' quoth 'a? Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Romeo. I can tell you, but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him. I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mercutio. Yea, is the worst well? Very well took, i' faith, wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Benvolio. She will endite him to some supper!

Mercutio. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Romeo. What hast thou found?

Mercutio. No hare, sir, unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

⟨He walks by them and sings.⟩

An old hare hoar, and an old hare hoar, is very good meat in Lent,
But a hare that is hoar is too much for a score when it hoars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? We 'll to dinner thither.

Romeo. I will follow you.

Mercutio. Farewell, ancient lady. Farewell, lady. 'Lady, lady—' Exeunt ⟨Benvolio [and] Mercutio⟩.

Nurse. I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this that was so full of his ropery?

Romeo. A gentleman, Nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. And 'a speak anything against me, I 'll take him down, and 'a were lustier than her is, and twenty such Jacks. And if I cannot I 'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-jills, I am none of his skains-mates.

⟨She turns to Peter her Man.⟩

And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure!

Peter. I saw no man use you at his pleasure. If I had, my weapon should quickly have been out. I warrant you, I dare draw as soon as another man—if I see occasion in a good quarrel and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now afore God, I am so vex'd that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave! Pray you sir, a word. And as I told you, my young lady bid me inquire you out. What she bid me say, I will keep to myself—but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her in a fool's paradise (as they say) it were a very gross kind of behavior (as they say), for the gentlewoman is young, and therefore if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offer'd to any gentlewoman and very weak dealing.

Romeo. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee—

Nurse. Good heart! and i' faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, Lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Romeo. What wilt thou tell her, Nurse? Thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest, which as I take it is a gentleman-like offer.

Romeo. Bid her devise some means to come to shrift this afternoon,
And there she shall at Friar Lawrence' cell
Be shriv'd and marry'd. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No truly, sir, not a penny.

Romeo. Go to! I say you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? Well, she shall be there.

Romeo. And stay good Nurse, behind the abbey wall
Within this hour my man shall be with thee
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair,
Which to the high topgallant of my joy
Must be my convoy in the secret night.
Farewell, be trusty and I'll quit thy pains.

75 broad: obvious 79 Art: acquired polish Nature: inborn ability 80 natural: born fool, idiot 81 bauble: a court fool's baton or scepter (quibble on 'phallus') 83 tale: pun on 'tail' 83, 84 against the hair: against the grain (quibble on 'pubic hair') 85 large: indecent 87 whole: pun on 'hole' 88 occupy: quibble on 'copulate'; cf. n. SD Enter ... Man: cf. n. 89 goodly gear: i.e. matter for jest (the Nurse) 90 shirt: i.e. a man smock: chemise (i.e. a woman) 91 Peter: the Nurse's servant 93 fan: cf. n. 97 God ye good den: God give ye good e'en 100 prick: point (quibble on 'phallus') 101 Out upon you: an expression of indignation 102 made: created (quibble on 'caused'; play on 'make' and 'mar'; see 1.2.13; cf. n.) 104 By my troth: upon my word 109 fault: default, lack 113 confidence: malapropism for 'conference' 115 endite: intentional malapropism for 'invite' 116 bawd: go-between So ho: the hunter's cry on rousing a hare 118 lenten: i.e. without meat 119 stale: quibble on 'prostitute' hoar: mouldy (pun on 'whore') spent: consumed

127, 128 'Lady, lady': from the ballad of 'Chaste Susanna'; cf. n. 129 merchant: chap, fellow 130 ropery: rascally talk (worthy of the hangman's rope) 132 stand to: live up to 135 Jacks: knaves 137 flirt-jills: flirty wenches skains-mates: 'knives'-mates, cutthroats 151 double: deceitfully 152 weak: contemptible 153 commend me: convey my respects 154 protest: declare 157 mark: heed 161, 162 Bid ... afternoon; cf. n. 164 shriv'd: absolved 170 tackled stair: rope ladder 171 topgallant: the uppermost of three sections of a mast 172 convey: conveyance 173 quit: requite

Farewell, commend me to thy mistress.
Nurse. Now God in Heaven bless thee! Hark you, sir.
Romeo. What say'st thou, my dear Nurse?
Nurse. Is your man secret? did you ne'er hear say,
'Two may keep counsel, putting one away'?
Romeo. I warrant thee, my man 's as true as steel.
Nurse. Well sir, my mistress is the sweetest lady. Lord, Lord! when 'twas a little prating thing—O, there is a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard, but she, good soul, had as lieve see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes and tell her that Paris is the properer man, but I 'll warrant you, when I say so she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?
Romeo. Ay Nurse, what of that? Both with an R.
Nurse. Ah, mocker, that's the dog-name. R is for the—No, I know it begins with some other letter—and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.
Romeo. Commend me to thy lady. ⟨Exit.⟩
Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. Peter!
Peter. Anon.
Nurse. Before and apace. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Enter Juliet.

Juliet. The clock struck nine when I did send the Nurse.
In half an hour she promis'd to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him—that 's not so.
O she is lame! Love's heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten items faster glides than the sun's beams
Driving back shadows over low'ring hills.
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw Love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey, and from nine till twelve
Is three long hours, yet she is not come.
Had she affections and warm youthful blood
She 'ld be as swift in motion as a ball:
My words would bandy her to my sweet love,
And his to me—but old folks, many feign as they were dead:
Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse [and Peter].

O God, she comes! O honey Nurse, what news?
Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.
Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit Peter.]
Juliet. Now good sweet Nurse—O Lord, why look'st thou sad?
Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou sham'st the music of sweet news
By playing it to me with so sour a face.
Nurse. I am aweary, give me leave awhile.
Fie, how my bones ache! what a jaunce have I!
Juliet. I would thou hadst my bones and I thy news.
Nay come, I pray thee, speak! Good, good Nurse, speak!
Nurse. Jesu, what haste! can you not stay awhile?
Do you not see that I am out of breath?
Juliet. How art thou out of breath when thou hast breath
To say to me that thou art out of breath?
Th' excuse that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good or bad? Answer to that.
Say either, and I 'll stay the circumstance.
Let me be satisfy'd, is 't good or bad?
Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice, you know not how to choose a man. Romeo? No, not he. Though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's—and for a hand and a foot and a body, though they be not to be talk'd on, yet they are past compare. He is not the flower of courtesy, but I 'll warrant him as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench, serve God. What! have you din'd at home?
Juliet. No, no. But all this did I know before.
What says he of our marriage, what of that?
Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head have I!
It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My back a t'other side—ah, my back, my back!
Beshrew your heart for sending me about
To catch my death with jauncing up and down.
Juliet. I' faith, I 'm sorry that thou art not well.
Sweet, sweet, sweet Nurse, tell me, what says my love?
Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,
And I warrant a virtuous—Where is your mother?
Juliet. Where is my mother? why, she is within.
Where should she be? How oddly thou repliest:
'Your love says like an honest gentleman,
"Where is your mother?" '
Nurse. O God's Lady dear!
Are you so hot? Marry come up, I trow.
Is this the poultice for my aching bones?
Henceforward do your messages yourself.
Juliet. Here 's such a coil! Come, what says Romeo?
Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift today?
Juliet. I have.
Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Lawrence' cell,
There stays a husband to make you a wife.
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,
They 'll be in scarlet straight at any news.
Hie you to church. I must another way,
To fetch a ladder by the which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark.
I am the drudge and toil in your delight,
But you shall bear the burthen soon at night.
Go, I'll to dinner. Hie you to the cell.
Juliet. Hie to high fortune! Honest Nurse, farewell. Exeunt.

173 mistress: here trisyllabic 176 secret: trustworthy 178 I: Q2 omits 181 fain: gladly lay knife aboard: i.e. as in boarding a vessel 182 lieve: lief, gladly 183 properer: handsomer 185 clout: piece of cloth versal universal rosemary: see IV.4.114; cf. n. 186 a letter: the same letter 188 dog-name: because the R sound suggest a dog's growling 190 sententious: malapropism for 'sentences' (sayings) 195 apace: quickly 7 nimble-pinion'd: swift-winged Love: Venus 12 affections: natural emotions 14 bandy: bat, toss 15 And his . . . dead: this line is apparently a fourteener; see II.3.161, 162; cf. n.

25 leave: permission (to rest) 26 jaunce: jaunt; cf. n. 36 circumstance: details 38 simple: foolish 49 a: on 50 Beshrew: confound 54 honest: honorable 61 God's Lady dear: the Virgin Mary 62 Marry come up: an expression of angry impatience 65 coil: fuss 68 hie: hasten 70 wanton: uncontrolled 71 straight: immediately 74 soon: at once 76 soon at night: this very night

Scene Fifth

Enter Friar and Romeo.

Friar. So smile the Heav'ns upon this holy act
That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!
Romeo. Amen, amen. But come what sorrow can,
It cannot countervail th' exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight.
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring Death do what he dare—
It is enough I may but call her mine.
Friar. These violent delights have violent ends,
And in their triumph die like fire and powder,
Which as they kiss consume. The sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his own deliciousness
And in the taste confounds the appetite.
Therefore love moderately, long love doth so,
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter Juliet ⟨somewhat fast and embraceth Romeo⟩.

Here comes the lady. O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint.
A lover may bestride the gossamers
That idles in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall, so light is Vanity.
Juliet. Good even to my ghostly confessor.
Friar. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.
Juliet. As much to him, else is his thanks too much.
Romeo. Ah Juliet, if the measure of thy joy?
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbor air and let rich music's tongue
Unfold th' imagin'd happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.
Juliet. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,
Brags of his substance, not of ornament.
They are but beggars that can count their worth,
But my true love is grown to such excess
I cannot sum up sum of half my wealth.
Friar. Come, come with me, and we will make short work,
For by your leaves you shall not stay alone
Till Holy Church incorporate two in one. ⟨Exeunt.⟩

Act Third

Scene First

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio and Men.

Benvolio. I pray thee good Mercutio, let 's retire. The day is hot, the Capels are abroad, and if we meet we shall not scape a brawl, for now these hot days in the mad blood stirring.
Mercutio. Thou art like one of these fellows that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table and says, 'God send me no need of thee'—and by the operation of the second cup draws him on the drawer, when indeed there is no need.
Benvolio. Am I like such a fellow?
Mercutio. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy, and as soon moved to be moody and as soon moody to be moved.
Benvolio. And what to?
Mercutio. Nay, and there were two such we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou?—why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more or a hair less in his beard than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye but such an eye would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat, and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarreling. Thou hast quarrel'd with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath waken'd thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another for tying his new shoes with old riband? And yet thou wilt tutor me from quarreling!
Benvolio. And I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.
Mercutio. The fee-simple? O simple!

Enter Tybalt, Petruchio and others.

Benvolio. By my head, here comes the Capulets.
Mercutio. By my heel, I care not.
Tybalt. Follow me close, for I will speak to them. Gentlemen, good den, a word with one of you.
Mercutio. And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something. Make it a word and a blow.
Tybalt. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, and you will give me occasion.
Mercutio. Could you not take some occasion without giving?
Tybalt. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo.
Mercutio. Consort? What! dost thou make us minstrels? And thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords. Here 's my fiddlestick, here 's that shall make you dance. Zounds, consort!
Benvolio. We talk here in the public haunt of men.
Either withdraw unto some private place
Or reason coldly of your grievances
Or else depart. Here all eyes gaze on us.
Mercutio. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze. I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter Romeo.

Tybalt. Well, peace be with you, sir, here comes my man.
Mercutio. But I 'll be hang'd sir, if he wear your livery.
Marry, go before to field, he 'll be your follower,
Your worship in that sense may call him 'man.'

3 what: whatever 4 countervail: counterbalance 13 confounds: destroys 18 gossamers: spiders' threads floating on the wind 19 wanton: sportive 20 Vanity: earthly joy 21 confessor: stressed ⏑ — — 23 As much: the same (i.e. 'Good even') 24 measure: measuring pot or basket 25 that: if 26 blazon: describe (as a coat of arms in heraldic terms) 27 music's: Q2 musicke 30 Conceit: understanding 34 sum up sum: add up the total 37 Holy Church: see II.1.168; cf. n. SD Men: servants 1, 2 I pray . . . abroad: for text see II.3.4-6; cf. n. 2 Capels: stressed ⏑ — (see V.1.18) are: Q1; Q2 omits 5 me: ethical dative 6, 7 by . . . cup: when he feels the effect of his second drink

7 draws him: draws his sword drawer: tapster, waiter 10 Jack: fellow 11 mood: temper moved . . . moody: inclined to be angry 12 moody . . . moved: angry at being provoked 14 and: if 18 reason: pun on 'raisin' 21 addle: muddled, confused (quibble on 'rotten') 25 doublet: jacket 26 riband: ribbon 29 fee-simple: possession in perpetuity of land or real property for . . . quarter: i.e. for very little SD Petruchio: one of Capulet's guests (see I.4.257) 32 heel: pun on 'heal' (health, salvation) 40 consort'st: dost associate (Mercutio quibbles on 'play music together') 41 Consort: company of musicians 43 fiddlestick: i.e. his sword 44 Zounds: by God's (i.e. Christ's) wounds 47 coldly: coolly, dispassionately 52 livery: Mercutio quibbles on man in the sense of 'servant' 53 field: i.e. for dueling follower: quibble on 'servant'

Tybalt. Romeo, the love I bear thee can afford
No better term than this, thou art a villain.
Romeo. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee
Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting. Villain am I none,
Therefore farewell, I see thou know'st me not.
Tybalt. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me, therefore turn and draw.
Romeo. I do protest I never injur'd thee,
But love thee better than thou canst devise
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love.
And so, good Capulet (which name I tender
As dearly as mine own) be satisfy'd.
Mercutio. O calm, dishon'rable, vile submission!
Alla stoccatho carries it away!
Tybalt, you ratcatcher, will you walk?
Tybalt. What wouldst thou have with me?
Mercutio. Good King of Cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I mean to make bold withal and (as you shall use me hereafter) dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher by the ears? Make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.
Tybalt. I am for you.
Romeo. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.
Mercutio. Come sir, your passado! [They fight.]
Romeo. Draw, Benvolio, beat down their weapons.
Gentlemen, for shame forbear this outrage.
Tybalt, Mercutio! the Prince expressly hath
Forbid this bandying in Verona streets.
Hold, Tybalt! Good Mercutio!
⟨Tybalt under Romeo's arm thrusts Mercutio in, and flies.⟩
Mercutio. I am hurt.
A plague a both houses, I am sped.
Is he gone and hath nothing?
Benvolio. What! art thou hurt?
Mercutio. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch, marry, 'tis enough.
Where is my page? Go villain, fetch a surgeon. [Exit Page.]
Romeo. Courage man, the hurt cannot be much.
Mercutio. No, 'tis not so deep as a well nor so wide as a church door, but 'tis enough, 'twill serve—ask for me tomorrow and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world. A plague a both your houses! Zounds! A dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! A braggart, a rogue, a villain that fights by the book of arithmetic! Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.
Romeo. I thought all for the best.
Mercutio. Help me into some house, Benvolio,
Or I shall faint. A plague a both your houses.
They have made worms' meat of me.
I have it, and soundly too. Your houses!
Exeunt [Mercutio and Benvolio].
Romeo. This gentleman, the Prince's near ally,
My very friend, hath got this mortal hurt
In my behalf, my reputation stain'd
With Tybalt's slander—Tybalt, that an hour
Hath been my cousin. O sweet Juliet,
Thy beauty hath made me effeminate,
And in my temper soften'd valor's steel.

Enter Benvolio.

Benvolio. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead.
That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds,
Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.
Romeo. This day's black fate on moe days doth depend,
This but begins the woe others must end.

⟨Enter Tybalt.⟩

Benvolio. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.
Romeo. He gay in triumph, and Mercutio slain!
Away to Heav'n, respective lenity,
And fire-ey'd Fury be my conduct now!
Now Tybalt, take the 'villain' back again
That late thou gav'st me, for Mercutio's soul
Is but a little way above our heads,
Staying for thine to keep him company.
Either thou or I or both must go with him.
Tybalt. Thou wretched boy that didst consort him here
Shalt with him hence.
Romeo. This shall determine that.
They fight. Tybalt falls.
Benvolio. Romeo, away, be gone!
The Citizens are up and Tybalt slain.
Stand not amaz'd, the Prince will doom thee death
If thou art taken. Hence, be gone, away!
Romeo. O I am Fortune's fool!
Benvolio. Why dost thou stay?
Exit Romeo.

Enter Citizens.

Citizens. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio?
Tybalt, that murtherer, which way ran he?
Benvolio. There lies that Tybalt.
Citizen. Up sir, go with me.
I charge thee in the Prince's name obey.

Enter Prince, old Montague, Capulet, their Wives and all.

Prince. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?
Benvolio. O noble Prince, I can discover all
Th' unlucky manage of this fatal brawl.
There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.
Capulet's Wife. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's child!
O Prince! O husband! O the blood is spill'd
Of my dear kinsman! Prince, as thou art true,
For blood of ours shed blood of Montague.

56 villain: base person 58 appertaining . . . To: appropriate . . . to rage: i.e. my lack of rage 61 Boy: see I.4.199; cf. n. 64 devise: imagine 66 tender: cherish 69 Alla stoccatho: Q2 Alla stucatho; cf. n. carries it away: winds the day 70, 72 ratcatcher, King of Cats: see II.3.21; cf. n. 74 dry-beat: thrash (without drawing blood) 75 pilcher: scabbard (metaphor from 'pilch,' a leather garment) ears: i.e. hilt 79 passado: see II.3.24; cf. n. 83 bandying: exchanging blows, brawling SD ⟨Tybalt . . . flies⟩: Q2 Away Tybalt thrusts . . . in: stabs 87 sped: dispatched 95 peppered: i.e. finished 98, 99 book of arithmetic: rules of fencing theory 106 ally: kinsman

107 very: true 112 temper: state of mind (quibble on 'temper' of steel) soften'd: rather than hardened (in the tempering process) 113 brave: noble, excellent 114 aspir'd: mounted to 116 moe: more (in number) depend: impend, hang over 119 He gay: Q2 He gan; Q1 A liue; cf. n. 120 respective: considerate (of Tybalt's blood-tie with Juliet) 121 ey'd: Q1; Q2 end conduct: conductor, guide 129 This: i.e. his sword 131 up: up in arms 132 amaz'd: confounded doom: condemn to 134 fool: dupe, plaything 136 Citizens: Q2 Citti; cf. n. 139 Citizen: Q2 Citi SD all: including the Prince's Train 142 discover: uncover, reveal 143 manage: conduct, proceeding 147 O husband: Q2 O Cozen, husband

O cousin, cousin!
Prince. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?
Benvolio. Tybalt here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay.
Romeo that spoke him fair bid him bethink
How nice the quarrel was and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure. All this uttered
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt, deaf to peace, but that he tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast,
Who all as hot turns deadly point to point
And with a martial scorn with one hand beats
Cold death aside and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it. Romeo he cries aloud,
'Hold, friends! Friends, part!' and swifter than his tongue
His agile arm beats down their fatal points
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio; and then Tybalt fled,
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to 't they go like lightning; for ere I
Could draw to part them was stout Tybalt slain,
And as he fell did Romeo turn and fly.
This is the truth or let Benvolio die.
Capulet's Wife. He is a kinsman to the Montague,
Affection makes him false, he speaks not true.
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for justice, which thou, Prince, must give—
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.
Prince. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio.
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?
Montague. Not Romeo, Prince, he was Mercutio's friend.
His fault concludes but what the law should end—
The life of Tybalt.
Prince. And for that offence
Immediately we do exile him hence.
I have an int'rest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a-bleeding.
But I 'll amerce you with so strong a fine
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses,
Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses.
Therefore use none. Let Romeo hence in haste,
Else when he 's found that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body and attend our will.
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill. Exeunt.

153 fair: civilly bethink: consider 154 nice: trivial withal: at the same time 157 take truce with: come to terms with spleen: quarrelsomeness 158 tilts: thrusts 161, 162 one hand . . . the other: cf. n. 164 Retorts: throws back Romeo he: duplicated subject 166 agile: Q1; Q2 aged 169 stout: brave 170 by and by: immediately 171 entertain'd: considered 183 Who . . . owe: i.e. who now must pay for Tybalt's death 184 Montague: Q2 Capu.; cf. n. 188 exile: here and elsewhere accented 'exile' 189 hate's: Q1; Q2 hearts 190 My blood: since Mercutio was the Prince's kinsman 191 amerce: punish by fine 192 mine: i.e. my blood 193 I: Q1; Q2 It 194 purchase out: buy pardon for 198 Mercy . . . kill; cf. n.

Scene Second

Enter Juliet alone.

Juliet. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phoebus' lodging. Such a wagoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the West
And bring in cloudy Night immediately.
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing Night,
That runaway's eyes may wink and Romeo
Leap to these arms untalk'd of and unseen.
Lovers can see to do their am'rous rites
By their own beauties, or if Love be blind
It best agrees with night. Come, civil Night,
Thou sober-suited matron all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match
Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods.
Hood my unmann'd blood bating in my cheeks
With thy black mantle till strange love grow bold,
Think true love acted simple modesty.
Come Night, come Romeo, come thou day in night,
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of Night
Whiter than new snow upon a raven's back.
Come gentle Night, come loving black-brow'd Night,
Give me my Romeo. And when I shall die
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heav'n so fine
That all the world will be in love with Night
And pay no worship to the garish Sun.
O I have bought the mansion of a love
But not possess'd it, and though I am sold
Not yet enjoy'd. So tedious is this day
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child that hath new robes
And may not wear them. O here comes my Nurse—

Enter Nurse with cords.

And she brings news, and every tongue that speaks
But Romeo's name speaks heav'nly eloquence.
Now Nurse, what news? What hast thou there,
The cords that Romeo bid thee fetch?
Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords.
Juliet. Ay me, what news? why dost thou wring thy hands?
Nurse. Ah weraday, he 's dead, he 's dead, he 's dead!
We are undone, lady, we are undone.
Alack the day! he 's gone, he 's kill'd, he 's dead.
Juliet. Can Heaven be so envious?
Nurse. Romeo can,
Though Heav'n cannot. O Romeo, Romeo!
Who ever would have thought it? Romeo!
Juliet. What divel art thou that dost torment me thus?
This torture should be roar'd in dismal Hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? Say thou but 'Ay.'
And that bare vowel 'I' shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice.

1–31 Gallop apace . . . wear them: cf. n. 1 steeds: the horses of the sun god Phoebus Apollo 3 Phaeton: son of Phoebus; cf. n. 6 runaway: i.e. the sun; cf. n. wink: shut (i.e. cause darkness). 9 By: Q2 And by; for text see V.3.103; cf. n. Love: Cupid 10 civil: sober, decorous 14 Hood: cover, blindfold (term from falconry) unmann'd: untrained (of a falcon; quibble on 'without a man') bating: fluttering the wins 17 Night: pun on 'knight' 25 garish: glaring SD Enter Nurse with cords; cf. n. cords: a rope ladder 38 weraday: weladay, alas 41 envious: malicious 48 bare vowel 'I': the Elizabethan spelling of 'ay' 49, 50 eye, I: puns on 'ay' 49 cockatrice: basilisk; cf. n.

I am not I if there be such an 'Ay,'
Or those eyes shut that makes thee answer 'Ay.'
If he be slain say 'Ay' or if not 'No,'
Brief sounds determine my weal or woe.
Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes
(God save the mark!) here on his manly breast.
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse,
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,
All in gore blood, I sounded at the sight.
Juliet. O break, my heart! poor bankrout, break at once!
To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty.
Vile earth to earth resign, end motion here,
And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier.
Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!
O courteous Tybalt, honest gentleman,
That ever I should live to see thee dead!
Juliet. What storm is this that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd and is Tybalt dead?
My dearest cousin and my dearer lord?
Then dreadful trumpet sound the general doom,
For who is living if those two are gone?
Nurse. Tybalt is gone and Romeo banished.
Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished.
Juliet. O God! did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's blood?
Nurse. It did, it did! alas the day, it did!
Juliet. O serpent heart, hid with a flow'ring face!
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
Beautiful tyrant, fiend angelical!
Dove-feather'd raven, wolvish-rav'ning lamb!
Despised substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honorable villain!
O Nature, what hadst thou to do in Hell
When thou didst bow'r the spirit of a fiend
In mortal Paradise of such sweet flesh?
Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound? O that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace!
Nurse. There 's no trust, no faith, no honesty in men,
All perjur'd, all forsworn, all dissemblers.
Ah, where 's my man? Give me some aqua vitae,
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.
Shame come to Romeo.
Juliet. Blister'd be thy tongue
For such a wish! He was not born to shame,
Upon his brow Shame is asham'd to sit,
For 'tis a throne where Honor may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth.
O what a beast was I to chide at him!
Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?
Juliet. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name
When I thy three-hours wife have mangled it?

51 those: Romeo's shut: Q2 shot 53 determine: decide 55 God save the mark: God forbid 56 corse: corpse 58 gore: a clot of sounded: swounded, swooned 59 bankrout: bankrupt break: quibble on 'declare insolvent' 61 Vile earth wretched body resign: yield thyself up to 69 general doom: Day of Judgment 75–81 O serpent heart . . . villain: see I.1.174-179; cf. n. 76 keep: guard cave: i.e. containing treasure 77 tyrant: desperado, villain 78 Dove-feather'd: Q2 Rauenous doue-feathered; for text see V.3.103; cf. n. 79 substance: reality show: appearance 80 justly: truly 81 damned: Q2 dimme 83 bow'r: lodge 89 forsworn, all: Q2 forsworn, all naught, all; cf. n. 90 aqua vitae: spirits 101 smooth: speak well of (antithetic to mangled)

But wherefore villain, didst thou kill my cousin?
That villain-cousin would have kill'd my husband.
Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring,
Your tributary drops belong to Woe,
Which you mistaking offer up to Joy.
My husband lives that Tybalt would have slain,
And Tybalt 's dead that would have slain my husband.
All this is comfort, wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's death,
That murder'd me. I would forget it fain,
But I it presses to my memory
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
'Tybalt is dead and Romeo banished.'
That 'banished,' that one word 'banished,'
Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's death
Was woe enough if it had ended there,
Or if sour Woe delights in fellowship
And needly will be rank'd with other Griefs,
Why follow'd not (when she said 'Tybalt 's dead')
'Thy father' or 'Thy mother,' nay, or both,
Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?
But with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,
'Romeo is banished'—to speak that word
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead. 'Romeo is banished!'
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death, no words can that woe sound.
Where is my father and my mother, Nurse?
Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse.
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.
Juliet. Wash they his wounds with tears? Mine shall be spent,
When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguil'd
(Both you and I) for Romeo is exil'd.
He made you for a highway to my bed,
But I a maid die maiden-widowed.
Come cords, come Nurse. I 'll to my wedding bed,
And Death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!
Nurse. Hie to your chamber, I 'll find Romeo
To comfort you, I wot well where he is.
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night.
I 'll to him, he is hid at Lawrence' cell.
Juliet. O find him! Give this ring to my true knight
And bid him come to take his last farewell. Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Friar.

Friar. Romeo, come forth! come forth, thou fearful man.
Affliction is enamor'd of thy parts
And thou art wedded to Calamity.

⟨Enter Romeo.⟩

Romeo. Father, what news? what is the Prince's doom?

120 needly: of necessity 123 modern: ordinary 124 rear-ward: rear guard 129 sound: utter, express (quibble on 'fathom') 134 spent: shed 143 wot: know SD Enter Friar: So Q1; Q2 Enter Frier and Romeo; cf. n. 2 parts: qualities, endowments 4 doom: judgment

What Sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand
That I yet know not?
Friar. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company.
I bring thee tidings of the Prince's doom.
Romeo. What less than doomsday is the Prince's doom?
Friar. A gentler judgement vanish'd from his lips,
Not body's death but body's banishment.
Romeo. Ha! banishment! Be merciful, say 'death,'
For exile hath more terror in his look
Much more, than death. Do not say 'banishment.'
Friar. Here from Verona art thou banished.
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.
Romeo. There is no world without Verona walls,
But Purgatory, torture, Hell itself.
Hence banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death. Then 'banished'
Is death misterm'd. Calling death 'banished'
Thou cut'st my head off with a golden ax
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.
Friar. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death, but the kind Prince,
Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law
And turn'd that black word 'death' to 'banishment.'
This is dear mercy and thou see'st it not.
Romeo. 'Tis torture and not mercy. Heav'n is here
Where Juliet lives, and every cat and dog
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in Heaven and may look on her,
But Romeo may not. More validity,
More honorable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies than Romeo—they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand
And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who e'en in pure and vestal modesty
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin,
But Romeo may not, he is banished.
Flies may do this but I from this must fly,
They are free men but I am banished.
And say'st thou yet that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
But 'banished' to kill me? 'Banished!'
O Friar, the damned use that word in Hell,
Howling attends it. How hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word 'banished'?
Friar. Thou fond mad man, hear me a little speak.
Romeo. O thou wilt speak again of banishment.
Friar. I 'll give thee armor to keep off that word,
Adversity's sweet milk, Philosophy,
To comfort thee though thou art banished.
Romeo. Yet 'banished'? Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevails not. Talk no more.
Friar. O then I see that mad men have no ears.
Romeo. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?
Friar. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.
Romeo. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel.
Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but marry'd, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me and like me banished,
Then mightst thou speak—then mightst thou tear thy hair.
And fall upon the ground as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.
⟨Nurse knocks [within.]⟩
Friar. Arise, one knocks! good Romeo, hide thyself.
Romeo. Not I, unless the breath of heartsick groans
Mistlike infold me from the search of eyes.
⟨She knocks again.⟩
Friar. Hark! how they knock. Who 's there? Romeo, arise,
Thou wilt be taken. Stay a while! Stand up. Loud knock.
Run to my study— By and by! God's will,
What simpleness is this? I come, I come! Knock.
Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what 's your will?

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Let me come in and you shall know my errand.
I come from Lady Juliet.
Friar. Welcome then.
Nurse. O holy Friar, O tell me, holy Friar,
Where is my lady's lord, where 's Romeo?
Friar. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.
Nurse. O he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case! O woeful sympathy,
Piteous predicament—e'en so lies she
Blubb'ring and weeping, weeping and blubb'ring.
Stand up, stand up! stand and you be a man,
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand.
Why should you fall into so deep an O? ⟨He rises.⟩
Romeo. Nurse—
Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir! death 's the end of all.
Romeo. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?
Doth not she think me an old murtherer
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says
My conceal'd lady to our cancel'd love?
Nurse. O she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps,
And now falls on her bed and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls and then on Romeo cries
And then down falls again.
Romeo. As if that name
Shot from the deadly level of a gun
Did murther her, as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman. O tell me, Friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy

7 familiar: here pronounced 'famili-ar'; see I.4.98; cf. n. 11 vanish'd: was breathed, issued 18 without: outside 21 world's: from this world 27 rush'd: thrust 29 dear: rare, unusual 34 validity: value 35 courtship: courtliness (quibble on 'wooing') 41–44 But Romeo . . . death: for text see II.1.247-250; cf. n. 46 mean: means 50 mean: so base 50 confessor: stressed ˊ— — — 53 Thou: Q1; Q1 Then fond: foolish 58 Yet: still

60 Displant: uproot 61 prevails: avails 64 dispute: discuss estate: situation 65 that: that which SD ⟨Nurse knocks⟩ Q2 Enter Nurse, and knocke SD ⟨She knocks again⟩ Q2 They knock SD Loud knock: Q2 Slud knock 77 By and by: immediately 78 simpleness: folly 86 case: quibble on 'pudendum' 87 woeful sympathy: agreement in woe 89 Blubb'ring: weeping hard 90 and: if 92 O: moan, lament (quibble on 'pudendum'; compare II.1.24) 96 old: experienced, hardened 100 conceal'd: secret (since the marriage is not known; stressed ˊ— — to jingle with cancel'd) 106 level: line of aim 109 anatomy: body

Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion.

⟨He offers to stab himself, and Nurse snatches the dagger away.⟩

Friar. Hold thy desp'rate hand!
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art—
Thy tears are wom'nish, thy wild acts denote
Th' unreasonable fury of a beast.
Unseemly woman in a seeming man,
And ill-beseeming beast in seeming both,
Thou hast amaz'd me. By my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady that in thy life lives
By doing damned hate upon thyself?
Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the Heav'n and earth?
Since birth and Heav'n and earth all three do meet
In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst lose.
Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit,
Which like a usurer abound'st in all
And usest none in that true use indeed
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit.
Thy noble shape is but a form of wax
Digressing from the valor of a man;
Thy dear love sworn, but hollow perjury,
Killing that love which thou has vow'd to cherish;
Thy wit (that ornament to shape and love,
Misshapen in the conduct of them both)
Like powder in a skill-less soldier's flask
Is set afire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.
What! rouse thee, man, thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead—
There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt—there art thou happy.
The law that threaten'd death becomes thy friend
And turns it to exile—there art thou happy.
A pack of blessings light upon thy back,
Happiness courts thee in her best array,
But like a misbehav'd and sullen wench
Thou pouts upon thy fortune and they love.
Take heed, take heed, for such die mis'rable.
Go get thee to thy love as was decree'd,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her.
But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua,
Where thou shalt live till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the Prince and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.
Go before, Nurse, commend me to thy lady,
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto.
Romeo is coming.

SD Nurse: in the modern theater usually the Friar 119 temper'd: mixed, balanced 121 lives: Q1; Q2 lies 122 damned: since suicide is an unforgivable sin 126 wit: judgment, reason 127 Which: who 128 usest: quibble on 'lend at interest' 131 Digressing: deviating 141 There: in that respect 148 pouts upon: Q2 puts up; Q1 frownst upon 150 decree'd: arranged 152 watch: guard set: posted (at the city gates) 155 blaze: proclaim friends: relatives, families 161 apt: inclined

Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here all the night
To hear good counsel, O what learning is!
My lord, I 'll tell my lady you will come.
Romeo. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.
⟨Nurse offers to go in and turns again.⟩
Nurse. Here sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir.
Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.
Romeo. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!
Friar. Go hence, good night. ⟨Exit Nurse.⟩
And here stands all your state:
Either be gone before the watch be set
Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence.
Sojourn in Mantua. I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you that chances here.
Give me thy hand, 'tis late. Farewell, good night.
Romeo. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief so brief to part with thee.
Farewell. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Enter old Capulet, his Wife and Paris.

Capulet. Things have fall'n out, sir, so unluckily
That we have had no time to move our daughter.
Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I. Well, we were born to die.
'Tis very late, she 'll not come down tonight.
I promise you, but for your company
I would have been abed an hour ago.
Paris. These times of woe afford no times to woo.
Madam, good night, commend me to your daughter.
Wife. I will, and know her mind early tomorrow.
Tonight she 's mew'd up to her heaviness.
⟨Paris offers to go in, and Capulet calls him again.⟩
Capulet. Sir Paris, I will make a desp'rate tender
Of my child's love. I think she will be rul'd
In all respects by me; nay more, I doubt it not.
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed,
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love
And bid her (mark you me?) on Wednesday next—
But soft, what day is this?
Paris. Monday, my lord.
Capulet. Monday. Ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon.
A Thursday let it be—a Thursday, tell her,
She shall be marry'd to this noble earl.
Will you be ready? do you like this haste?
We 'll keep no great ado—a friend or two—
For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
I may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much.
Therefore we 'll have some half a dozen friends
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?
Paris. My lord, I would that Thursday were tomorrow.
Capulet. Well, get you gone, a Thursday be it then.

SD again: back 171 here . . . state: here is the situation 172, 173 Either be gone . . . hence; cf. n. 178 But that: were it not that 179 were: would be brief: hastily 2 move: urge, persuade 6 promise: assure 11 mew'd up to: shut up with (a 'mew' being a falcon's cage) heaviness: sorrow SD again: back 12 desp'rate tender: reckless offer; cf. n. 16 son: intended son-in-law 21 A: on 22 earl: nobleman, count

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, Wife, against this wedding day.
Farewell, my lord. Light to my chamber, ho!
Afore me, it is so very late
That we may call it early by and by.
Good night. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

Enter Romeo and Juliet ⟨at the window⟩.

Juliet. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day,
It was the nightingale and not the lark
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear,
Nightly she sings on yond pomegranate tree.
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.
Romeo. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale. Look love, what envious streaks
Do lace the sev'ring clouds in yonder East—
Night's candles are burnt out and jocund Day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops.
I must be gone and live or stay and die.
Juliet. Yond light is not daylight, I know it, I.
It is some meteor that the sun exhal'd
To be to thee this night a torchbearer
And light thee on thy way to Mantua.
Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.
Romeo. Let me be tane, let me be put to death,
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I'll say yon grey is not the Morning's eye—
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow;
Nor that is not the lark whose notes do beat
The vaulty heav'n so high above our heads.
I have more care to stay than will to go.
Come death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.
How is 't, my soul? let 's talk, it is not day.
Juliet. It is, it is! hie hence, be gone away.
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.
Some say the lark makes sweet division,
This doth not so for she divideth us.
Some say the lark and loathed toad chang'd eyes,
O now I would they had chang'd voices too,
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunt's-up to the day.
O now be gone, more light and light it grows.
Romeo. More light and light—more dark and dark our woes.

Enter Nurse ⟨hastily⟩.

Nurse. Madam!
Juliet. Nurse?
Nurse. Your lady mother's coming to your chamber.
The day is broke, be wary, look about. [Exit.]
Juliet. Then window, let day in and let life out.
Romeo. Farwell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend.
⟨He goeth down.⟩
Juliet. Art thou gone so, love? Lord, my husband, friend,
I must hear from thee every day i' th' hour,
For in a minute there are many days—
O by this count I shall be much in years
Ere I again behold my Romeo.
Romeo. Farewell.
I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.
Juliet. O think'st thou we shall ever meet again?
Romeo. Ay, doubt it not, and all these woes shall serve
For sweet discourses in our times to come.
Juliet. O God! I have an ill-divining soul,
Methinks I see thee, now thou art so low,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb.
Either my eyesight fails or thou look'st pale.
Romeo. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you—
Dry Sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu, adieu! Exit.
Juliet. O Fortune, Fortune! all men call thee fickle.
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renowm'd for faith? Be fickle, Fortune,
For then I hope thou wilt not keep him long
But send him back—

Enter Capulet's Wife.

Wife. Ho daughter! are you up?
Juliet. Who is 't that calls? it is my lady mother,
Is she not down so late or up so early?
What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?
⟨She goeth down from the window.⟩
Wife. Why how now, Juliet?
Juliet. Madam I am not well.
Wife. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?
What! wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?
And if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live,
Therefore have done. Some grief shows much of love,
But much of grief shows still some want of wit.
Juliet. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.
Wife. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend
Which you weep for.
Juliet. Feeling so the loss,
I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.
Wife. Well girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death
As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.
Juliet. What villain, madam?
Wife. That same villain Romeo.
Juliet. [Aside.] 'Villain' and he be many miles asunder.
God pardon him, I do with all my heart,
And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart.
Wife. That is because the traitor murd'rer lives.
Juliet. Ay madam, from the reach of these my hands,
Would none but I might venge my cousin's death!

33 against: in readiness for 35 Afore me: on my word (a mild oath) SD (at the window): Q2 aloft 1-36 Wilt thou be gone . . . dark: our woes; cf. n. 3 fearful: apprehensive 7 envious: malicious 8 lace: streak 13 meteor: supposedly the ignition of vapors exhaled from the earth exhal'd: Q2 exhale; Q1 exhales; drew up; cf. n. 17 tane: taken 18 so: if 20 reflex: reflected light Cynthia: the moon 23 care: concern, desire 28 sharps: shrill high notes 29 division: modulation, melody 31 Some say . . . eyes: cf. n. chang'd: Q2 change; exchanged 33 arm from arm: from one another's arms affray: startle 34 hunt's-up: morning song (to waken hunters or a new-married wife) SD Nurse: so Q1; Q2 Madame and Nurse; cf. n. 37-40 Madam . . . look about: for staging see; cf. n.

41 life: i.e. Romeo 43 my: Q1; Q2 ay friend: lover 46 count: method of reckoning time 52 Ay: Q2 I (usually here interpreted as the pronoun) 54 ill-divining: prophesying mischance 59 Dry . . . blood: since grief was thought to exhaust the blood 62 renowm'd: cf. n. 67 down: lying down, abed 68 procures: brings SD (She . . . window): for staging see; cf. n. 76 feeling: heartfelt 78 Which: whom 86 him: Q2 omits 87 like: so much as

Wife. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not.
Then weep no more, I'll send to one in Mantua,
Where that same banish'd runagate doth live.
Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company,
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfy'd.
Juliet. Indeed I never shall be satisfy'd
With Romeo till I behold him—dead—
Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd.
Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it
That Romeo should upon receipt thereof
Soon sleep in quiet. O how my heart abhors
To hear him nam'd and cannot come to him
To wreak the love I bore my cousin
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him.
Wife. Find thou the means and I'll find such a man.
But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.
Juliet. And joy comes well in such a needy time.
What are they, I beseech your ladyship?
Wife. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child,
One who to put thee from thy heaviness
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy
That thou expects not nor I look'd not for.
Juliet. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?
Wife. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn
The gallant, young and noble gentleman,
The County Paris, at Saint Peter's Church
Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride.
Juliet. Now by Saint Peter's Church and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a joyful bride.
I wonder at this haste, that I must wed
Ere he that should be husband comes to woo.
I pray you tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet, and when I do, I swear
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris. These are news indeed!
Wife. Here comes your father, tell him so yourself,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Capulet. When the sun sets the earth doth drizzle dew,
But for the sunset of my brother's son
It rains downright.
How now, a conduit, girl? what! still in tears?
Evermore showering? In one little body
Thou counterfeits a bark, a sea, a wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,
Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs,
Who, raging with thy tears and they with them.
Without a sudden calm will overset
Thy tempest-tossed body. How now, Wife,
Have you deliver'd to her our decree?
Wife. Ay sir, but she will none, she gives you thanks,
I would the fool were marry'd to her grave.
Capulet. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, Wife.
How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks?
Is she not proud? doth she not count her blest,
Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a gentleman to be her bride?
Juliet. Not proud you have, but thankful that you have.
Proud can I never be of what I hate,
But thankful e'en for hate that is meant love.
Capulet. How, how, how, how, chopt-logic? What is this?
'Proud' and 'I thank you' and 'I thank you not'
And yet 'not proud'? Mistress minion you,
Thank me no thankings nor proud me no prouds,
But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next
To go with Paris to Saint Peter's Church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither.
Out! you green-sickness carrion, out! you baggage,
You tallow-face!
Wife. Fie, fie—what! are you mad?
Juliet. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
⟨She kneels down.⟩
Hear me with patience but to speak a word.
Capulet. Hang thee! young baggage, disobedient wretch!
I tell thee what, get thee to church a Thursday
Or never after look me in the face.
Speak not, reply not, do not answer me!
My fingers itch. Wife, we scarce thought us blest
That God had lent us but this only child,
But now I see this one is one too much
And that we have a curse in having her.
Out on her, hilding!
Nurse. God in Heaven bless her!
You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.
Capulet. And why, my Lady Wisdom? Hold your tongue,
Good Prudence; smatter with your gossips, go!
Nurse. I speak no treason.
Capulet. O—Godigoden!
Nurse. May not one speak?
Capulet. Peace! you mumbling fool.
Utter your gravity o'er a goship's bowl,
For here we need it not.
Wife. You are too hot.
Capulet. God's bread! it makes me mad.
Day, night—work, play—
Alone, in company—still my care hath been
To have her match'd; and having now provided
A gentleman of noble parentage,
Or fair demesnes, youthful and nobly limb'd,
Stuff'd, as they say, with honorable parts,
Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a man—
And then to have a wretched puling fool,

93 runagate: renegade, fugitive 94 Shall: who shall 98 dead: to be construed with both him and heart 101 temper: mix (quibble on 'mitigate') 102 That: so that 105 wreak: avenge (quibble on 'express') 110 I: Q2 omits 111 careful: provident 113 sorted out: arranged for 114 nor I look'd not for: intensifying double negative 115 in happy time: bow opportune 131 brother: brother-in-law 133 conduit: fountain (sometimes made in the shape of a human figure) 139 Who: which 143 will none: will have none of it

145 take me with you: let me understand you 148 wrought: arranged for 149 bride: bridegroom 153 chopt-logic: sophistical argument 155 minion: hussy 157 fettle: make ready 'gainst: in preparation for 159 hurdle: a sledge for dragging traitors to execution 160 green-sickness: anemia affecting adolescent girls carrion: lump of flesh 161 tallow: i.e. yellowish-white 173 hilding: baggage 175 rate: berate; see III.4.12; cf. n. 177 smatter: prate 179, 180 Capulet, Nurse: cf. n. 179 Godigoden: God give ye good e'en 182 goship: gossip (originally a godparent or sponsor at a baptism) bowl: christening cup 185 God's bread: the Host (the consecrated bread of the Eucharist) Day, night—work, play: cf. n. 190 demesnes: domains, landed property limb'd: Q2 liand; Q1 trainde; cf. n. 191 parts: qualities 193 puling: whimpering

A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender
To answer 'I'll not wed, I cannot love,
I am too young, I pray you pardon me!'
But and you will not wed I'll pardon you—
Graze where you will, you shall not house with me.
Look to 't, think on 't, I do not use to jest.
Thursday is near, lay hand on heart, advise.
And you be mine, I'll give you to my friend,
And you be not, hang, beg, starve, die in the streets,
For by my soul I'll ne'er acknowledge thee
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good.
Trust to 't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn. Exit.

Juliet. Is there no Pity sitting in the clouds
That sees into the bottom of my grief?
O sweet my mother, cast me not away,
Delay this marriage for a month, a week,
Or if you do not, make the bridal bed
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

Wife. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word,
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. Exit.

Juliet. O God! O Nurse, how shall this be prevented?
My husband is on earth, my faith in Heaven.
How shall that faith return again to earth
Unless that husband send it me from Heaven
By leaving earth? Comfort me, counsel me!
Alack, alack, that Heav'n should practice stratagems
Upon so soft a subject as myself!
What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort, Nurse.

Nurse. Faith, here it is:
Romeo is banish'd, and all the world to nothing
That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you,
Or if he do it needs must be by stealth.
Then since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you marry'd with the County.
O he 's a lovely gentleman!
Romeo 's a dishclout to him. An eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
I think you 're happy in this second match,
For it excels your first, or if 't did not
Your first is dead—or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.

Juliet. Speak'st thou from thy heart?

Nurse. And from my soul too, else beshrew them both.

Juliet. Amen.

Nurse. What?

Juliet. Well, thou hast comforted me marvelous much.
Go in and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my father, to Lawrence' cell
To make confession and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry I will, and this is wisely done. [Exit.]

⟨Juliet looks after Nurse.⟩

Juliet. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!
Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath prais'd him with above compare
So many thousand times? Go counselor,
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.
I'll to the Friar to know his remedy,
If all else fail, myself have power to die. Exit.

194 mammet: doll, puppet (from 'Mahomet,' thought of as an idol) in her fortune's tender: on the offer of good fortune 196 pardon you: quibble on 'give leave to depart' 199 do not use: am not accustomed 200 advise: be advised, consider 205 be forsworn: break my oath 211 monument: burial vault 215 faith: marriage vow 219 stratagems: dreadful deeds 224 all the world to nothing: i.e. the odds are very great 225 challenge: claim 230 dishclout: dishcloth to: in comparison to 231 green: a color much admired in eyes quick: lively 232 Beshrew: curse 236 here: i.e. in this world SD (Juliet): Q1 She 246 Ancient damnation: damned old woman

Act Fourth ❧ Scene First

Enter Friar and County Paris.

Friar. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.

Paris. My father Capulet will have it so,
And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

Friar. You say you do not know the lady's mind?
Uneven is the course, I like it not.

Paris. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death,
And therefore have I little talk'd of love,
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
Now sir, her father counts it dangerous
That she do give her sorrow so much sway,
And in his wisdom hastes our marriage
To stop the inundation of her tears,
Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society.
Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Friar. [Aside.] I would I knew not why it should be slow'd!
Look sir, here comes the lady toward my cell.

Enter Juliet.

Paris. Happily met, my lady and my wife.

Juliet. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.

Paris. That 'may be' must be, love, on Thursday next.

Juliet. What must be shall be.

Friar. That's a certain text.

Paris. Come you to make confession to this Father?

Juliet. To answer that, I should confess to you.

Paris. Do not deny to him that you love me.

Juliet. I will confess to you that I love him.

Paris. So will ye, I am sure, that you love me.

Juliet. If I do so, it will be of more price
Being spoke behind your back than to your face.

Paris. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.

Juliet. The tears have got small victory by that,
For it was bad enough before their spite.

Paris. Thou wrong'st it more than tears with that report.

Juliet. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth,
And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Paris. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Juliet. It may be so, for it is not mine own.
Are you at leisure, holy Father, now,
Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Friar. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.

247 forsworn: i.e. by breaking the marriage vow 2 father: intended father-in-law 3 nothing slow: extremely reluctant (intensifying double negative) 5 Uneven: irregular 7 talk'd: Q2 talke 29 price: value 31 abus'd: disfigured 33 spite: injury 36 to my face: frankly (quibble on 'about my face') 40 evening mass: cf. n. 41 pensive: sorrowful

My lord, we must entreat the time alone.
Paris. God shield I should disturb devotion.
Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse ye.
Till then, adieu, and keep this holy kiss. Exit.
Juliet. O shut the door! and when thou hast done so,
Come weep with me—past hope, past cure, past help.
Friar. O Juliet, I already know thy grief,
It strains me past the compass of my wits.
I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it,
On Thursday next be marry'd to this County.
Juliet. Tell me not, Friar, that thou hear'st of this,
Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it.
If in thy wisdom thou canst give no help,
Do thou but call my resolution wise
And with this knife I'll help it presently.
God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands,
And ere this hand by thee to Romeo's seal'd
Shall be the label to another deed,
Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both.
Therefore out of thy long-experienc'd time
Give me some present counsel, or behold
'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpeer, arbitrating that
Which the commission of thy years and art
Could to no issue of true honor bring.
Be not so long to speak, I long to die
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.
Friar. Hold daughter, I do spy a kind of hope
Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desp'rate which we would prevent.
If rather than to marry County Paris
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself,
Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That cop'st with Death himself to scape from it,
And if thou dar'st I'll give thee remedy.
Juliet. O bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
From off the battlements of any tower
Or walk in thievish ways, or bid me lurk
Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears,
Or hide me nightly in a charnel house,
O'ercover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,
With reeky shanks and yellow chapless skulls;
Or bid me go into a new-made grave
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud—
Things that to hear them told have made me tremble—
And I will do it without fear or doubt
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.
Friar. Hold, then. Go home, be merry, give consent
To marry Paris. Wednesday is tomorrow.
Tomorrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not the Nurse lie with thee in thy chamber.
Take thou this vial, being then in bed,
And this distilling liquor drink thou off,
When presently through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humor—for no pulse
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease;
No warmth, no breath shall testify thou livest;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To wanny ashes, thy eyes' windows fall
Like Death when he shuts up the day of life.
Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
Shall stiff and stark and cold appear like death,
And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
Thou shalt continue two and forty hours
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now when the bridegroom in the morning comes
To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead.
Then as the manner of our country is.
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier
Thou shall be borne to that same ancient vault
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
In the meantime, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come; and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present shame
If no inconstant toy nor wom'nish fear
Abate thy valor in the acting it.
Juliet. Give me, give me! O tell not me of fear!
Friar. Hold, get you gone. Be strong and prosperous
In this resolve. I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua with my letters to thy lord.
Juliet. Love give me strength! and strength shall help afford.
Farewell, dear Father. Exeunt.

42 entreat: ask to have 43 shield: prevent, forbid 47 cure: Q1; Q2 care prorogue: postpone 59 label: i.e. a wax seal; cf. n. deed: quibble on 'act' present: immediate 65 umpeer: umpire; cf. n. 66 commission: authority slay: Q1; Q2 stay 76 chide: drive 77 cop'st: wouldst negotiate 81 thievish: full of thieves 83 charnel house: bone vault; cf. n. 85 reeky: rankly moist chapless: Q1; Q2 chapels; jawless 87 shroud: Q2 omits 90 unstain'd: stressed ⏑ — distilling: distilled

98 drowsy: sleep inducing humor: fluid 99 native progress: natural motion surcease: shall cease 100 breath: Q2 breast 102 wanny: Q2 many; cf. n. 104 supple government: the faculty of supple movement 107 two and forty hours; cf. n. 112 uncover'd: with face uncovered 113, 114 Thou shall ... lie: for text see II.1.247-250; cf. n. 116 letters: letter drift: plot 121 toy: crotchet (i.e. unreasoning aversion) SD Servingmen: see I.4.1 SD; cf. n. 2 cunning: skillful 10 unfurnish'd: unprovisioned 14 peevish: silly harlotry: wench it: she (used affectionately)

Scene Second

Enter Capulet, his Wife, Nurse and Servingmen, two or three.

Capulet. So many guests invite as here are writ.
[Exit a Servingman.]
Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.
Servingman. You shall have none ill, sir, for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.
Capulet. How canst thou try them so?
Servingman. Marry sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers; therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.
Capulet. Go, be gone. ⟨Exit Servingman.⟩
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.
What, is my daughter gone to Friar Lawrence?
Nurse. Ay forsooth.
Capulet. Well, he may chance to do some good on her,
A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter Juliet.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look.
Capulet. How now my headstrong, where have you been gadding?
Juliet. Where I have learnt me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition
To you and your behests, and am enjoin'd
By holy Lawrence to fall prostrate here ⟨She kneels down.⟩
To beg your pardon. Pardon, I beseech you,
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.
Capulet. Send for the County, go, tell him of this.
I'll have this knot knit up tomorrow morning.
Juliet. I met the youthful lord at Lawrence' cell
And gave him what becomed love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.
Capulet. Why, I am glad on 't, this is well. Stand up.
This is as 't should be. Let me see the County.
Ay marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.
Now afore God, this reverend holy Friar,
All our whole city is much bound to him.
Juliet. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet
To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me tomorrow?
Wife. No, not till Thursday, there is time enough.
Capulet. Go Nurse, go with her, we'll to church tomorrow.
Exeunt ⟨Nurse and Juliet⟩
Wife. We shall be short in our provision,
'Tis now near night.
Capulet. Tush, I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, Wife.
Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her.
I'll not to bed tonight, let me alone,
I'll play the huswife for this once. What ho!
They are all forth. Well, I will walk myself
To County Paris, to prepare up him
Against tomorrow. My heart is wondrous light
Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

Juliet. Ay those attires are best. But gentle Nurse,
I pray thee leave me to myself tonight,
For I have need of many orisons
To move the Heav'ns to smile upon my state,
Which well thou know'st is cross and full of sin.

Enter Capulet's Wife.

Wife. What, are you busy, ho? need you my help?
Juliet. No madam, we have cull'd such necessaries
As are behoofeful for our state tomorrow.
So please you, let me now be left alone,
And let the Nurse this night sit up with you,
For I am sure you have your hands full all
In this so sudden business.
Wife. Good night,
Get thee to bed and rest, for thou hast need.
Exeunt [Wife and Nurse].
Juliet. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.
I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins
That almost freezes up the heat of life.
I'll call them back again to comfort me.
Nurse!—What should she do here?
My dismal scene I needs must act alone.
Come, vial.
What if this mixture do not work at all?
Shall I be marry'd then tomorrow morning?
No, no! this shall forbid it, lie thou there.
What if it be a poison which the Friar
Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead,
Lest in this marriage he should be dishonor'd
Because he marry'd me before to Romeo?
I fear it is, and yet methinks it should not,
For he hath still been tried a holy man.
How if, when I am laid into the tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? There 's a fearful point!
Shall I not then be stiffled in the vault,
To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,
And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?
Or if I live, is it not very like
The horrible conceit of death and night
Together with the terror of the place—
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where for this many hundred years the bones
Of all my bury'd ancestors are pack'd,
Where bloody Tybalt yet but green in earth
Lies fest'ring in his shroud, where as they say
At some hours in the night spirits resort—
Alack, alack, is it not like that I
So early waking—what with loathsome smells
And shrieks like mandrakes torn out of the earth,
That living mortals hearing them run mad—
O if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears,
And madly play with my forefathers' joints
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud
And in this rage with some great kinsman's bone
As with a club dash out my desp'rate brains?
O look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point. Stay Tybalt, stay!
Romeo, Romeo, Romeo! Here's drink—I drink to thee.
⟨She falls upon her bed within the curtains.⟩

Scene Fourth

Enter Capulet's Wife and Nurse ⟨with herbs⟩.

Wife. Hold, take these keys and fetch more spices, Nurse.
Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

25 knot: bond of wedlock 27 becomed: befitting 33 bound: indebted 34 closet: private room 35 sort: select SD Exeunt (Nurse and Juliet): for staging see; cf. n. 44 up: completely 46 huswife: housewife, hussy (pronounced 'huzzif') 3 orisons: prayers 4 state: condition 5 cross: contrary 8 behoofeful: useful state: ceremony, pomp

16 faint: causing faintness 20 dismal: unlucky 24 this, thou: i.e. her dagger 26 minister'd: provided 30 still: always tried: proved 34 stiffled: stifled (pronounced with a short i) 38 conceit: idea 40 As: namely receptacle: stressed –́ – – –́ – – 41 this: these (old plural) 43 green: freshly, recently 48 mandrakes: cf. n. 50 distraught: distracted, driven mad 54 rage: madness SD curtains: i.e. of the rear stage 2 pastry: pastry room, pantry

Enter old Capulet.

Capulet. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,
The curfew bell hath run, 'tis three a clock.
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica,
Spare not for cost.
Nurse. Go you cot-quean, go,
Get you to bed. Faith, you'll be sick tomorrow
For this night's watching.
Capulet. No, not a whit. What! I have watch'd ere now
All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.
Wife. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time,
But I will watch you from such watching now.
Exeunt Wife and Nurse.
Capulet. A jealous hood, a jealous hood!

Enter three or four ⟨Servingmen⟩ with spits and logs and baskets.

Now fellow, what is there?
1. Servingman. Things for the cook, sir, but I know not what.
Capulet. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1. Servingman.]
Sirrah, fetch drier logs.
Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.
2. Servingman. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs
And never trouble Peter for the matter. ⟨Exit.⟩
Capulet. Mass! and well said, a merry whoreson, ha!
Thou shalt be loggerhead. Good faith, 'tis day, Play music.
The County will be here with music straight,
For so he said he would. I her him near.
Nurse! Wife! What ho! What! Nurse, I say.

Enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up,
I'll go and chat with Paris. Hie, make haste,
Make haste, the bridegroom he is come already.
Make haste, I say. [Exit.]
Nurse. Mistress! what! mistress. Juliet! Fast, I warrant her, she.
Why! lamb, why! lady. Fie, you slugabed.
Why! love. I say! madam. Sweetheart! Why! bride.
What, not a word? You take your pennyworths now.
Sleep for a week, for the next night I warrant
The County Paris hath set up his rest
That you shall rest but little. God forgive me!
Marry and amen! How sound is she asleep.
I needs must wake her. Madam, madam, madam!
Ay, let the County take you in your bed,
He'll fright you up, i' faith. Will it not be?
What! dressed and in your clothes and down again?
I must needs wake you. lady! lady! lady!
Alas, alas! Help, help! my lady 's dead.
O weraday that ever I was born!
Some aqua vitae, ho! My lord, my lady!

⟨Enter Capulet's Wife.⟩

Wife. What noise is here?
Nurse. O lamentable day!
Wife. What is the matter?
Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!
Wife. O me, O me! my child, my only life!
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee.
Help, help! Call help!

Enter Capulet.

Capulet. For shame, bring Juliet forth, her lord is come.
Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead, alack the day!
Wife. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead!
Capulet. Ha! let me see her. Out alas! she's cold.
Her blood is settled and her joints are stiff,
Life and these lips have long been separated.
Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flow'r of all the field.
Nurse. O lamentable day!
Wife. O woeful time!
Capulet. Death, that hath tane her hence to make me wail,
Ties up my tongue and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar and the County.

Friar. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?
Capulet. Ready to go but never to return.
O son, the night before thy wedding day
Hath Death lain with thy wife. There she lies,
Flow'r as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir:
My daughter he hath wedded. I will die
And leave him all: life, living—all is Death's.
Paris. Have I thought long to see this morning's face,
And doth it give me such a sight as this?
⟨All at once cry out and wring their hands.⟩
Wife. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!
Most miserable hour that e'er Time saw
In lasting labor of his pilgrimage!
But one—poor one, one poor and loving child—
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel Death hath catch'd it from my sight!
Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful day!
Most lamentable day, most woeful day
That ever ever I did yet behold.
O day, O day, O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this.
O woeful day! O woeful day!
Paris. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain!
Most detestable Death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!
O love! O life! not life, but love in death!
Capulet. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!
Uncomfortable Time, why cam'st thou now
To murther, murther our solemnity?
O child, O child! my soul and not my child!
Dead art thou. Alack! my child is dead,
And with my child my joys are buried.
Friar. Peace, ho! for shame! confusion's cure lives not
In these confusions. Heaven and yourself

5 bak'd meats: meat pies Angelica: the Nurse 7 cot-quean: man meddling with woman's work (literally 'cottage-wife') 9 watching: staying awake 12 mouse-hunt: woman-chaser 13 watch: prevent 14 hood: hud, ninny; cf. n. SD (Servingmen) Q1 Servingman; see I.4.1 SD; cf. n 20 Peter: cf. n. 23 Mass: by the mass whoreson: rascal. 24 loggerhead: blockhead faith Q2 father 32 Nurse: for staging see; cf. n. Fast: fast asleep 36 pennyworths: i.e. of sleep (pronounced 'penn'orths') 38 set up his rest: firmly resolved; cf. n. 47 weraday: weladay, alas

60 settled: congealed 75 living: property 76 thought long: expected, hoped long: Q2 loue 83 catch'd: snatched 91 detestable: stressed ⏑ — ⏑ — 95 Uncomfortable: discomforting 100 confusion: disaster cure: Q2 care

Had part in this fair maid; now Heav'n hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid.
Your part in her you could not keep from death,
But Heav'n keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was her promotion,
For 'twas your Heaven she should be advanc'd.
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd
Above the clouds as high as Heav'n itself?
O in this love you love your child so ill
That you run mad, seeing that she is well.
She's not well marry'd that lives marry'd long,
But she's best marry'd that dies marry'd young.
Dry up your tears and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse, and as the custom is,
And in her best array, bear her to church;
For though fond Nature bids us all lament,
Yet Nature's tears are Reason's merriment.

Capulet. All things that we ordained festival
Turn from their office to black funeral—
Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast,
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change,
Our bridal flow'rs serve for a bury'd corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Friar. Sir go you in, and madam go with him,
And go, Sir Paris. Everyone prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave.
The Heav'ns do low'r upon you for some ill,
Move them no more by crossing their high will.

⟨They all but the Nurse go forth, casting rosemary on her and shutting the curtains.

Enter Musicians.⟩

1. Musician. Faith, we may put up our pipes and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah put up, put up!
For well you know this is a pitiful case.

1. Musician. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Exit Nurse.

Enter Peter.

Peter. Musicians, O Musicians—'Heart's Ease,' 'Heart's Ease.' O and you will have me live, play 'Heart's Ease.'

1. Musician. Why 'Heart's Ease'?

Peter. O Musicians, because my heart itself plays 'My Heart is Full'—O play me some merry dump to comfort me.

Musicians. Not a dump, we, 'tis no time to play now.

Peter. You will not then?

1. Musician. No.

Peter. I will then give it you soundly.

1. Musician. What will you give us?

Peter. No money, on my faith, but the gleek. I will give you the 'Minstrel.'

1. Musician. Then will I give you the 'Serving Creature.'

Peter. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets. I'll re you, I'll fa you, do you note me?

1. Musician. And you re us and fa us you note us.

2. Musician. Pray you put up your dagger and put out your wit. Then have at you with my wit.

Peter. I will dry-beat you with an iron wit and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men:

When griping griefs the heart doth wound,
(And doleful dumps the mind oppress,)
Then music with her silver sound—

Why 'silver sound'? Why 'music with her silver sound'? What say you, Simon Catling?

1. Musician. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Peter. Prates. What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

2. Musician. I say 'silver sound' because musicians sound for silver.

Peter. Prates too. What say you, James Sound-post?

3. Musician. Faith, I know not what to say.

Peter. O I cry you mercy, you are the singer. I will 'say' for you. It is 'music with her silver sound' because musicians have no gold for sounding.

—Then music with her silver sound
With speedy help doth lend redress.

Exit.

1. Musician. What a pestilent knave is the same!

2. Musician. Hang him, Jack. Come, we'll in here, tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner.

Exeunt.

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

Enter Romeo.

Romeo. If I may trust the flatt'ring truth of sleep
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand.
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne,
And all this day an unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.
I dreamt my lady came and found me dead
(Strange dream that gives a dead man leave to think!)
And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips
That I reviv'd and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy.

Enter Romeo's Man ⟨Balthasar, booted⟩.

News from Verona! How now, Balthasar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the Friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again,

107 advance'd: i.e. in rank by marriage 108 advanc'd: raised 111 well: i.e. in Heaven 114 rosemary: cf. n. 117 fond: Q2 some Nature: natural feeling 120 office: function 122 cheer: food SD (They all ... Musicians): Q2 Exeunt manet cf. n. 131 put up our pipes: put away our instruments (proverbial for 'cease') 133 case: event 134 case: quibble on 'instrument case' amended: bettered SD Nurse: Q2 omnes SD Peter: Q2 Will Kemp cf. n. 135 'Heart's Ease': a popular tune called for in the old play Misogonus 139–140 'My Heart is Full': cf. n. dump: mournful tune 144 give it you: let you have it soundly: forcefully (quibble on 'with sounds') 146 gleek: jeer 146, 147 give you: call you (as in a formal insult; compare II.3.29; cf. n.)

150 carry: endure crotchets: whims (quibble on 'quarter notes') re ... fa you: cf. n. 151 note: pay attention to 152 note us: set us to music 153 put out: display 157–159 When ... sound; cf. n. 158 dumps: sorrows 161 Catling: lute string of catgut 163 Prates: the subject 'he' is understood Rebeck: three-stringed fiddle 166 Sound-post: peg supporting the body of a stringed instrument 168 cry you mercy: beg your pardon 170 sounding: playing 175 stay: wait for 1 flatt'ring: illusive 3 bosom's lord: i.e. heart 11 shadows: images SD booted: i.e. for riding 15 fares my Juliet: Q1; Q2 doth my Lady Juliet; cf. n.

For nothing can be ill if she be well.
Balthasar. Then she is well and nothing can be ill.
Her body sleeps in Capels' monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault
And presently took post to tell it you.
O pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.
Romeo. Is it in so? Then I defy you, stars!
Thou know'st my lodging. Get me ink and paper
And hire post horses. I will hence tonight.
Balthasar. I do beseech you, sir, have patience,
Your looks are pale and wild and do import
Some misadventure.
Romeo. Tush, thou art deceiv'd.
Leave me and do the thing I bid thee do.
Hast thou no letters to me from the Friar?
Balthasar. No my good lord.
Romeo. No matter, get thee gone
And hire those horses. I'll be with thee straight.
Exit ⟨Balthasar⟩.
Well Juliet, I will lie with thee tonight.
Let's see for means. O mischief, thou art swift
To enter in the thoughts of desp'rate men.
I do remember an apothecary,
And hereabouts 'a dwells (which late I noted)
In tatter'd weeds with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples. Meager were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones.
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung.
An alligator stuff'd and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread and old cakes of roses
Were thinly scatter'd to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said,
'And if a man did need a poison now
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.'
O this same thought did but forerun my need,
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house,
Being holy day, the beggar's shop is shut.
What ho! apothecary!

⟨Enter apothecary.⟩

Apothecary. Who calls so loud?
Romeo. Come hither man, I see that thou art poor.
Hold, there is forty ducats. Let me have
A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear
As will disperse itself through all the veins
That the life-weary taker may fall dead,
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As violently as hasty powder fired
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

18 monument: burial vault 21 took post: traveled by post horse 24 in: e'en cf. n. defy: Q1; Q2 denie 27 patience: here pronounced 'pati-ence'; see 1.4.98; cf. n. 41 weeds: clothes overwhelming: beetling 42 simples: medicinal herbs. 47 account: reckoning, number 49 cakes of roses: caked rose petals (for use as perfume) 54 caitiff: miserable 62 ducats: gold coins 63 gear: stuff 66 trunk: body

Apothecary. Such mortal drugs I have, but Mantua's law
Is death to any he that utters them.
Romeo. Art thou so bare and full of wretchedness,
And fear'st to die? Famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes,
Contempt and begg'ry hangs upon thy back.
The world is not thy friend nor the world's law,
The world affords no law to make thee rich—
Then be not poor, but break it and take this.
Apothecary. My poverty but not my will consents.
Romeo. I pay thy poverty and not thy will.
Apothecary. Put this in any liquid thing you will
And drink it off, and if you had the strength
Of twenty men it would dispatch you straight.
Romeo. There is thy gold—worse poison to men's souls,
Doing more murther in this loathsome world
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell.
I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell, buy food and get thyself in flesh.
Come cordial, and not poison, go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee. Exeunt.

Scene Second

Enter Friar John.

John. Holy Franciscan Friar! brother, ho!

Enter Lawrence.

Lawrence. This same should be the voice of Friar John.
Welcome from Mantua, what says Romeo?
Or if his mind be writ give me his letter.
John. Going to find a barefoot brother out,
One of our order to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doors and would not let us forth,
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.
Lawrence. Who bare my letter then to Romeo?
John. I could not sent it (here it is again)
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.
Lawrence. Unhappy fortune! By my brotherhood,
The letter was not nice but full of charge,
Of dear import, and the neglecting it
May do much danger. Friar John, go hence,
Get me an iron crow and bring it straight
Unto my cell.
John. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee. Exit.
Lawrence. Now must I to the monument alone,
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake.
She will beshrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents—
But I will write again to Mantua

70 utters: gives out 73 starveth in: look out hungrily from 79 pay: Q1; Q2 pray 88 cordial: restorative SD Enter Friar John: so Q1; Q2 Enter Frier John to Frier Lawrence; cf. n. 6 associate: accompany; cf. n. 8 searchers: health officers 11 Seal'd up the doors; cf. n. 12 stay'd: stopped 18 nice: trivial charge: weight, importance 21 crow: crowbar 26 beshrew: censure

And keep her at my cell till Romeo come.
Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb. Exit.

Scene Third

Enter Paris and his Page ⟨with flowers and sweet water⟩.

Paris. Give me thy torch, boy, hence and stand aloof.
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yond yew trees lay thee all along,
Holding thy ear close to the hollow ground,
So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread
(Being loose, unfirm with digging up of graves)
But thou shalt hear it. Whistle then to me
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers, do as I bid thee, go.
Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the churchyard, yet I will adventure. [Retires.]
⟨Paris strews the tomb with flowers.⟩
Paris. Sweet flow'r, with flow'rs thy bridal bed I strew.
O woe, thy canopy is dust and stones
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,
Or wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans.
The obsequies that I for thee will keep
Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep. Whistle Page.
The boy gives warning something doth approach.
What cursed foot wanders this way tonight
To cross my obsequies and true love's rite?
What! with a torch? Muffle me, night, awhile. [Retires.]

Enter Romeo and Balthasar ⟨with a torch, a mattock and a crow of iron⟩.

Romeo. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron.
Hold, take this letter, early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light. Upon thy life I charge thee,
Whate'er thou hear'st or see'st, stand all aloof
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of Death
Is partly to behold my lady's face,
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger
A precious ring—a ring that I must use
In dear employment. Therefore hence, be gone.
But if thou jealous dost return to pry
In what I farther shall intend to do,
By Heaven I will tear thee joint by joint
And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs.
The time and my intents are savage-wild,
More fierce and more inexorable far.
Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.
Balthasar. I will be gone sir, and not trouble ye.
Romeo. So shalt thou show me friendship. Take thou that,
Live and be prosperous. And farewell, good fellow.
Balthasar. For all this same I'll hid me hereabout,
His looks I fear and his intents I doubt. [Retires.]

Romeo. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,
And in despite I'll cram thee with more food.
⟨Romeo opens the tomb.⟩
Paris. This is that banish'd haughty Montague
That murder'd my love's cousin (with which grief
It is supposed the fair creature died)
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies. I will apprehend him.
Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague!
Can vengeance be pursu'd further than death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee.
Obey and go with me, for thou must die.
Romeo. I must indeed and therefore came I hither.
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desp'rate man,
Fly hence and leave me. Think upon these gone,
Let them affright thee. I beseech thee, youth,
Put not another sin upon my head
By urging me to fury. O be gone!
By Heav'n, I love thee better than myself,
For I come hither arm'd against myself.
Stay not, be gone! live, and hereafter say
A mad man's mercy bid thee run away.
Paris. I do defy thy conjuration
And apprehend thee for a felon here.
Romeo. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy!
⟨They fight.⟩
Page. O Lord, they fight! I will go call the watch. [Exit.]
Paris. O I am slain! I thou be merciful
Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet.
Romeo. In faith, I will. Let me peruse this face.
Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris!
What said my man when my betossed soul
Did not attend him as we rode? I think
He told me Paris should have marry'd Juliet.
Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
To think it was so? O give me thy hand,
One writ with me in sour Misfortune's book.
I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave.
A grave? O no, a lanthorn, slaughter'd youth,
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This vault a feasting presence full of light.
Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.
How oft when men are at the point of death
Have they been merry—which their keepers call
A lightning before death. O how may I
Call this a lightning? O my love, my wife!
Death that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty.
Thou art not conquer'd—Beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks,
And Death's pale flag is not advanced there.

3 yew: Q1; Q2 young yew trees: symbolic of mourning all along: at full length 11 adventure: take the risk 13 canopy: covering 14 sweet: perfumed 20 cross: thwart 21 Muffle: hide SD Balthasar: Q1; Q2 Peter; cf. n. 33 dear: important 34 jealous: suspicious 45 doubt: suspect

46 detestable: stressed ˊ– – ˊ – maw: stomach womb: belly 49 despite: defiance SD tomb: represented by the rear stage 69 conjuration: Q2 commiration; Q1 coniurations; entreaty 72 Page: Q2 omits; Q1 Boy 84 triumphant: magnificent 85 lanthorn: lantern (windowed dome) 87 feasting: festive presence: presence chamber 88 Death: i.e. Paris' body 90 keepers: nurses 92 lightning: lightening of spirits (quibble on 'shedding of light')

Tybalt, ly'st thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O what more favor can I do to thee
Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain
To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin. Ah dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? shall I believe
That unsubstantial Death is amorous
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
For fear of that I still will stay with thee
And never from this pallet of dim Night
Depart again, here, here will I remain
With worms that are thy chambermaids, O here
Will I set up my everlasting rest
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this world-weary'd flesh. Eyes look your last,
Arms take your last embrace, and lips (O you
The doors of breath) seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing Death!
Come bitter conduct, come unsav'ry guide,
Thou desp'rate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy seasick weary bark.
Here's to my love! O true apothecary,
Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die. ⟨Falls.⟩

Enter Friar with lanthorn, crow and spade.

Friar. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft tonight
Have my old feet stumbled at graves. Who 's there?
Balthasar. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.
Friar. Bliss be upon you. Tell me, good my friend,
What torch is yond that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capels' monument.
Balthasar. It doth so, holy sir, and there 's my master.
One that you love.
Friar. Who is it?
Balthasar. Romeo.
Friar. How long hath he been there?
Balthasar. Full half an hour.
Friar. Go with me to the vault.
Balthasar. I dare not, sir,
My master knows not but I am gone hence,
And fearfully did menace me with death
If I did stay to look on his intents.
Friar. Stay then, I'll go alone. Fear comes upon me,
O much I fear some ill unthrifty thing.
Balthasar. As I did sleep under this yew tree here
I dreamt my master and another fought
And that my master slew him. [Exit].
Friar. Romeo!
⟨Friar stoops and looks on the blood and weapons.⟩
Alack alack, what blood is this which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulcher?
What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discolor'd by this place of peace?
Romeo, O pale! Who else? what! Paris too?
And steep'd in blood? Ah what an unkind hour
Is guilty of this lamentable chance.
The lady stirs. ⟨Juliet rises.⟩
Juliet. O comfortable Friar, where is my lord?
I do remember well where I should be
And there I am, where is my Romeo?
Friar. I hear some noise, lady, come from that nest
Of death, contagion and unnatural sleep.
A greater power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents, come, come away.
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead,
And Paris too. Come, I'll dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns.
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming.
Come go, good Juliet, I dare no longer stay. Exit.
Juliet. Go get thee hence, for I will not away.
What 's here? a cup clos'd in my true love's hand!
Poison I see hath been his timeless end.
O churl, drunk all and left no friendly drop
To help me after? I will kiss thy lips,
Haply some poison yet doth hang on them
To make me die with a restorative.
Thy lips are warm.

Enter Page and Watch.

Chief Watchman. Lead boy, which way?
Juliet. Yea noise? then I 'll be brief. O happy dagger.
This is thy sheath—there rust and let me die.
⟨She stabs herself and falls.⟩
Page. This is the place, there where the torch doth burn.
Chief Watchman. The ground is bloody, search about the churchyard.
Go, some of you, whoe'er you find attach.
[Exeunt some of the Watch.]
Pitiful sight! here lies the County slain,
And Juliet bleeding, warm and newly dead,
Who here hath lain this two days buried.
Go tell the Prince, run to the Capulets,
Raise up the Montagues, some others search.
[Exeunt others of the Watch.]
We see the ground whereon these woes do lie,
But the true ground of all these piteous woes
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter Romeo's Man [and a Watchman].

2. Watchman. Here's Romeo's man, we found him in the churchyard.
Chief Watchman. Hold him in safety till the Prince come hither.

Enter Friar and another Watchman.

3. Watchman. Here is a friar that trembles, sighs and weeps,
We took this mattock and this spade from him
As he was coming from this churchyard's side.
Chief Watchman. A great suspicion, stay the friar too.

103 shall I believe: Q2 I will beleeue, Shall I beleeue; cf. n. 108 pallet: cf. n. 109–121 Depart again . . . I die: for text see II.1.247-250; cf. n. 111 rest: repose (for quibble see IV.4.34; cf.n) 116 dateless: endless engrossing: buying up in gross, monopolizing 117 conduct: guide 122 speed: aid, protector 123 stumbled: an ill omen 127 vainly: uselessly 142 unthrifty: unlucky 143 yew: Q2 yong

153 unkind: unnatural, degenerate (stressed — — —) 156 comfortable: comforting 170 timeless: untimely 171 churl: miser 179 Page: Q2 Watch boy 182 attach: arrest 185 this: these 188 woes: i.e. piteous bodies ground: basis, cause 190 circumstance: details 198 stay: detain

Enter the Prince ⟨with [Citizens and] others⟩.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up
That calls our person from our morning rest?

Enter Capels.

Capulet. What should it be that is so shriek'd abroad?
Wife. The people in the street cry 'Romeo,'
Some 'Juliet' and some 'Paris,' and all run
With open outcry toward our monument.
Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears?
Chief Watchman. Sovereign, here lies the County Paris slain,
And Romeo dead, and Juliet, dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.
Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.
Chief Watchman. Here is a friar and slaughter'd Romeo's man.
With instruments upon them fit to open
These dead men's tombs.
Capulet. O Heav'ns! O Wife, look how our daughter bleeds!
This dagger hath mistane, for lo his house
Is empty on the back of Montague,
And it mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.
Wife. O me! this sight of death is as a bell
That warns my old age to a sepulcher.

Enter Montague.

Prince. Come Montague, for thou art early up
To see thy son and heir now early down.
Montague. Alas my liege, my wife is dead tonight,
Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath.
What futher woe conspires against mine age?
Prince. Look and thou shalt see.
Montague. O thou untaught! what manners is in this,
To press before thy father to a grave?
Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while
Till we can clear these ambiguities
And know their spring, their head, their true descent,
And then will I be gen'ral of your woes
And lead you e'en to death. Meantime forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience.
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.
Friar. I am, the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murther;
And here I stand both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excus'd.
Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.
Friar. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo there dead was husband to that Juliet,
And she there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife,
I marry'd them; and their stol'n marriage day
Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely death
Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city,
For whom and not for Tybalt Juliet pin'd.
You to remove that siege of grief from her
Betroth'd and would have marry'd her perforce
To County Paris. Then comes she to me
And with wild looks bid me devise some mean
To rid her from this second marriage,
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
A sleeping potion which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death. Meantime I writ to Romeo
That he should hither come as this dire night
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,
Being the time the potion's force should cease.
But he which bore my letter, Friar John,
Was stay'd by accident and yesternight
Return'd my letter back. Then all alone
At the prefixed hour of her waking
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault,
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo.
But when I came some minute ere the time
Of her awak'ning, here untimely lay
The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
She wakes, and I entreated her come forth
And bear this work of Heav'n with patience,
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb
And she too desp'rate would not go with me,
But as it seems did violence on herself.
All this I know, and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy; and if aught in this
Miscarry'd by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrific'd some hour before his time
Unto the rigor of severest law.
Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.
Where 's Romeo's man? what can he say to this?
Balthasar. I brought my master news of Juliet's death,
And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father
And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,
If I departed not and left him there.
Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.
Where is the County's page that rais'd the watch?
Sirrah, what made your master in this place?
Page. He came with flow'rs to strew his lady's grave
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did.
Anon comes one with light to ope the tomb,
And by and by my master drew on him,
And then I ran away to call the watch.
Prince. This letter doth make good the Friar's words—
Their course of love, the tidings of her death;
And here he writes that he did buy a poison
Of a poor pothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die and lie with Juliet.
Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!
See what a scourge is laid upon your hate
That Heav'n finds means to kill your joys with love.
And I for winking at your discords too

SD Citizens: cf. n. SD Enter Capels; cf. n. 201 shriek'd: Q2 shrike 202 The people: Q2 O the people; for text see V.3.103; cf. n. 205 our: Q2 your; i.e. the Prince's (royal plural) 210 slaughter'd: Q2 Slaughter 215 mistane: mistaken, gone astray 219 warns: summons 228 Seal up: for staging see; cf. n. mouth of outrage: immoderate clamoring 234 of: under 236 as: considering how 237 make against: implicate 238 purge: exonerate 241 date of breath: time of life 244 that: Q1; Q2 thats

259 as this: this 267 closely: secretly 278 privy: secretly accessory 285 in post: posthaste 292 made: was doing 301 therewithal: therewith, along with that 306, 307 And I for winking . . . punish'd: see I.1.92, 93; cf. n.

Have lost a brace of kinsmen. All are punish'd.
Capulet. O brother Montague, give me thy hand.
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.
Montague. But I can give thee more,
For I will ray her statue in pure gold
That whiles Verona by that name is known
There shall no figure at such rate be set
As that of true and faithful Juliet.
Capulet. As rich shall Romeo's by his lady's lie,
Poor sacrifices of our enmity.

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings,
The Sun for sorrow will not show his head.
Go hence to have more talk of these sad things:
Some shall be pardon'd and some punished.
For never was a story of more woe
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.]

FINIS

307 a brace of kinsmen: i.e. Mercutio and Paris 309 jointure: marriage settlement; cf. n. 312 ray: array, bedeck (i.e. gild); cf. n. 314 rate: value

Notes

The Prologue. Here and in several other plays Shakespeare employs the classical device of commenting on his theme through a Prologue spoken by an actor called the Chorus. He satirizes the convention at I.4.7–8.

12. two hours. It was possible to perform an Elizabethan play in approximately such a short space of time chiefly because of the absence, in an Elizabethan public playhouse, of pauses for dropping a curtain or shifting scenery. Shakespeare mentions the same length of time in the Prologue to Henry VIII, where the Chorus advises certain members of the audience that they 'may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours.' (Shakespeare quotations are from G. L. Kittredge's edition of 1936.)

I.i. In Elizabethan editions of Romeo and Juliet there are no act and scene divisions, which originate with Shakespeare's 18th-century editors. The present edition retains the traditional divisions, except at three points where the action is continuous. See notes at II.1.46, and IV.4.32.

I.i.1-11. coals . . . move. Sampson's and Gregory's quibbles and puns on coals, colliers, choler, draw ('draw swords,' 'pull,' and 'extract'), collar ('harness' and 'hangman's noose'), and moved ('angered,' 'impelled,' and 'removed') represent a kind of wit popular in the 1590s. Compare I.4.12-21.

I.i.16. take the wall. Since there were no sidewalks and Renaissance street were usually narrow and littered with filth, in passing someone it was courteous to 'give the wall' to him but insulting to 'take the wall' of him, thus causing him to step into the gutter in the middle of the street.

I.i.39. bite my thumb. A defiantly insulting gesture made by snicking the thumbnail from under the upper teeth.

I.i. SD. Benvolio . . . This name, meaning literally in Italian 'I wish well,' is one of Shakespeare's additions to his source material.

I.i.56–76. Yes, better, sir . . . seek a foe. The action of these lines, omitted from Q1, is represented in that edition by the following stage direction: 'They draw. To them enters Tybalt. They fight. To them the Prince, old Montague and his Wife, old Capulet and his Wife, and other Citizens, and part them.'

I.i.69. Citizens. Editors usually include an Officer with the Citizens entering after l. 68, on the evidence of Q2's speech heading Offi. However, this would appear to be the Q2 compositor's misreading of Citti., the parts of ll. 69, 70 being 'confused cries' to be assigned to various supernumeraries in the crowd of Citizens. Compare the Q2 speech heading Citti. at III.1.136.

I.i.71. long sword. Capulet calls for the old fashioned medieval weapon rather than the newfangled rapier introduced from the continent to England in Elizabethan times. See II.3.24 Cf. n.

I.i.SD. Enter old Montague . . . Wife. Editors usually follow Q2 in locating this direction after l. 81, but the dialogue indicates that Montague is already on stage by l. 80.

I.i.92, 93. If ever you disturb . . . the peace. According to Renaissance political theory, the Prince's clemency at this point is an error of civil policy, as he himself later recognizes. (Compare III.1.198 cf. n. and V.3.306-307.) Machiavelli, for example, in discussing the problem of restoring unity to a divided city, lists three courses of action open to the civil governor: 'the one is to put the leaders [of the opposing factions] to death . . . or to banish them from the city, or to reconcile them to each other under a pledge not to offend again. Of these three ways, the last is the worst, being the least certain and effective; for it is impossible that, after dissensions that have caused so much bloodshed and other outrages, a forced peace should be enduring. The parties meeting each other daily face to face will with difficulty abstain from mutual insults, and in their daily intercourse fresh causes for quarrel will constantly occur.' (Discourses on the First Ten Books of Titus Livius,' 3, 27, in The Prince and the Discourses, Modern Library ed., New York, 1940, p. 490.)

I.i.127–138. Many a morning . . . remove. Montague's description of his son's romantic melancholy parodies the posturing required of the courtly lover. Compare Rosalind's description of 'a man in love' (As You Like it, III.2.367–379) and Ophelia's account of Hamlet's 'madness,' which Polonius pronounces to be 'the very ecstasy of love' (Hamlet, II.1.86–111).

I.i.145. so secret and so close. Like a true courtly lover, Romeo cherishes the precept laid down by Andreas Capellanus in The Art of Courtly Love (c. 1184), 'Qui non celat, amare non potest' (He who does not conceal his love cannot love). See E. C. Pettet, Shakespeare and the Romance Tradition, London, 1949, p. 114.

I.i.174–179. brawling love . . . sleep. The oxymorons and balanced antitheses of these lines are characteristic of Elizabethan sonnets written in the tradition of Petrarchan love poetry. Juliet employs similar conceits at III.2.75-81.

I.i.198. left. Editors usually follow Q2 in here reading lost, but in his edition of 1875 P. A. Daniel emends the Q2 reading to left, citing two other instances in Shakespeare of a compositor's confusing left and lost through the similarity in Elizabethan script of e to o and of f to long s. The emendation to left reveals Romeo's play on Benvolio's leave in l. 197, and emphasizes the neo-Platonic idea that Romeo's soul has left his body.

I.i.216–217. rich . . . store. That is, rich as she is in beauty, she is poor in that (being chaste) she will leave no children after death to inherit and perpetuate her wealth of beauty. Compare Sonnets 1-14.

I.ii.13. marr'd . . . made. Capulet uses the common Elizabethan antithesis of 'make' and 'mar' (compare II.3.102), and through a pun on 'married' plays on the proverbial expression, 'Soon married, soon marred.' Compare Parolles: 'A young man married is a man that's marr'd' (All's Well That Ends Well, II.3.298).

I.ii.40–42. shoemaker . . . nets. The Servant's confusion in the matter of tools and his bawdy quibble on meddle are the stock in trade of Elizabethan clowns.

I.ii.52. plaintain leaf. This was popularly believed to cure poisonous infections but was also applied to cuts and bruises. Romeo implies that Benvolio's proposed cure of love by counterinfection will be no more efficacious than a barked shin, since the same medication cures both ailments.

I.ii.56–58. bound . . . tormented. Romeo describes the customary Elizabethan treatment of lunatics. Compare Malvolio's treatment in Twelfth Night (III.4 and IV.2).

I.ii.72. and. Since the Q2 text from about I.2.55 to I.3.32 was printed from an uncorrected exemplar of Q1, Q2's omission of and at I.2.72 and the Q2 reading you at l. 81 would appear to be the compositor's errors of transmission. Accordingly, at I.2.72 and 81 the present editor prints the Q1 variants and and thee, the only substantive readings. Two other Q2 variants within this passage (an at I.3.12—Q1 a—and the at l. 29—omitted from Q1) are accepted as necessary corrections of the substantive Q1 text. See G. I. Duthie, 'The Text of Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet,' Studies in Bibliography, 4 (1952), pp. 22-3.

I.ii.77. to supper. Editors usually shift this phrase to the Servant's speech immediately following. However, the present editor follows Edward Dowden, who retains the Q2 arrangement in his edition of 1900, interpreting Romeo's 'Whither? to supper?' as an interruption of the Servant's 'Up—to our house.' Since Q1 is the only substantive source of this section of the text, the passage may well be corrupt beyond editorial redemption.

I.i.84. crush. The expression 'to crush' a cup of wine or a pot of ale was proverbial. Compare Shallow: 'By the mass, you'll crack a quart together' (2 Henry IV, V.3.57).

I.i.91–4. devout religion . . . heretics. Conceits based on the idea of love as religion are typical of Petrarchan love poetry. Romeo uses the same convention when he first meets Juliet (see I.4.218–224 cf. n.).

I.iii.2–4. Now . . . Juliet. Since the 18th century, editors have generally printed this and the Nurse's other speeches in I.3 as verse. However, both aesthetic considerations and bibliographical evidence suggest that their prose arrangement in Q2 and Q1 is more probably correct than incorrect. See Richard Hosley, 'The Corrupting Influence of the Bad Quarto on the Received Text of Romeo and Juliet,' Shakespeare Quarterly, 4 (1953), 24-5. This article will be hereafter referred to as 'The Received Text.'

I.iii.SD. Juliet. Since Juliet was born on Lammas Eve or July 31 (see l. 20), her name is appropriate to her birth month.

I.iii.11. a pretty age. To Elizabethans a girl's fourteenth birthday made her ripe for marriage. See T. W. Baldwin, Shakespeare's Five-Act Structure, The University of Illinois Press, 1947, pp. 773–5.

I.iii.16. Lammas-tide. The Lammas (literally 'loaf-mass') was an old English harvest festival at which loaves of bread made from the new wheat were consecrated.

I.iii.23. since . . . eleven years. If this is a topical allusion to the earthquake felt in London on April 6, 1580, it may date Romeo and Juliet as early as 1591.

I.iii.29. 'Shake!'. The action of the dovehouse at the moment of the earthquake, as though spoken by the personified dovehouse.

I.iii.37. by my holidam. This expression was originally an oath by a sacred relic, holidam being a form of halidom, 'sanctity, holy relic.' The form holidam was often misunderstood as 'Holy Dame,' the Virgin Mary.

I.iii.62, 63. I was your mother . . . maid. Since the sight of her daughter's bleeding body will be as a bell that warns her old age to a sepulcher (V.3.218, 219), this remark by Capulet's Wife that she is around twenty-eight years old is evidently a falsehood.

I.iii.70. This night . . . feast. Editors usually stop this line with a period, but in Q2 it is lightly connected by a comma with the following six lines, the verbs of which are apparently futures prophesying how Juliet will fall in love rather than imperatives commanding her to fall in love.

I.iii.90. the guests are come. On the domestic arrangements of the Capulet household see Tucker Brooke, 'Shakespeare Remembers his Youth in Stratford,' in Essays on Shakespeare and Other Elizabethans, Yale University Press, 1948, pp. 32–4.

I.iv.SD. Mercutio. This name (from Brooke's Romeus and Juliet) suggests the mercurial qualities of Shakespeare's character, although it is etymologically unrelated to the Italian Mercurio. The original form in da Porto and Bandello is Marcuccio, and affectionate diminutive having approximately the value of 'cunning little Marco.'

I.iv.SD. Torchbearers. In the Elizabethan production from which the text of Q1 derives, these supernumeraries were apparently cut to a single Page. Similarly, the 'two or three' Servingmen of IV.2.SD and the 'three of four' of IV.4.14 SD are in each case cut to a single Servingman in Q1.

I.iv.1. this speech. It was the Elizabethan custom for a costumed messenger to deliver a speech introducing Maskers and apologizing for their joining a festivity without invitation. The Maskers have been discussing such a speech, which Benvolio rejects as prolix and out of date.

I.iv.5. Tartar's painted bow. This is the Roman or Cupid's bow, shaped like the line of the upper lip, as distinguished from the English bow, shaped like the segment of a circle.

I.iv.7, 8. ⟨Nor . . . entrance⟩. These two lines from Q1 are incorporated in the text of the present edition on the assumption that they stood in Shakespeare's foul papers but were overlooked by the Q2 compositor. Another theory is that Shakespeare added them to the promptbook version (represented by Q1) of his original text (represented by Q2). See H. R. Hoppe's edition of 1947, p. vi. The references to prologue and prompter harmonize with Shakespeare's habit of alluding to practices of the stage, and the trisyllabic entrance accords with similar pronunciations of mistress at II.3.173 and III.5.155.

I.iv.12–21. heavy . . . bound. Like the word-play of Sampson and Gregory (see notes on I.1.1.–11), Romeo's and Mercutio's puns and quibbles on heavy ('melancholy' and 'ponderous'), light (opposed to 'dark' and 'heavy'), sole and soul, soar and sore, and bound. ('tied,' 'limit'; and 'leap') were considered witty in the 1590s. They are followed by bawdy quibbles on burthen, thing, prick, and case (ll. 23–9). There is a good deal more of the same in II.3.

I.iv.37. proverb'd . . . phrase. Romeo is thinking of some such proverb as 'A good candle-holder proves a good gamester,' since by looking on and not gambling he can lose nothing.

I.iv.39. dun. Editors usually emend Q2's dum to Q1's done, but since the variant spelling dun for 'done' does not appear in Q2, dum would appear to be the compositor's error for dun, 'dark.' Romeo, of course, is playing on fair and punning on 'done.'

I.iv.41. Dun. This was a quasi-proper name for any horse, whether or not actually a dun. The phrase 'Dun's in the mire,' meaning 'Things are at a standstill,' was the name of an indoor winter game in which a heavy log representing a horse stuck in the mud was hauled out by the players.

I.iv.47, 48. judgment . . . wits. Judgment was one of the five inner or spiritual senses, as distinguished from the five outer or physical senses (here 'our five wits'). Mercutio means that the single mental faculty of judgment (which in quibbling about daylight Romeo neglects to use) can apprehend his intended meaning five times as well as can all five of the physical senses.

I.iv.57. Queen Mab, midwife. The name Mab (which Ben Jonson uses for the Fairy Queen in his Althorp Entertainment) is probably a variant of Maeve, the heroic queen of Celtic legend. Mercutio calls her midwife (here pronounced 'middif') because she is that fairy who assists at the birth of men's dreams, 'the children of an idle brain, Begot of nothing but vain phantasy' (ll.103, 104).

I.iv.59. agate stone. That is, the tiny figure often carved in the agate set in a seal ring. Compare Falstaff on the diminutive size of his Page: 'I was never manned with an agate till now' (2 Henry IV, I.2.14).

I.iv.61. atomi. Editors usually follow the Q3 editor in emending Q2's ottamie to atomies, but Hoppe restores Q1's atomi, plural of Latin atomus, atom. (In Shakespeare's time the Latin plural atomi developed into the English singular atomy, atom, mote.) Q2's ottamie is evidently the compositor's misreading of attomie in Shakespeare's foul papers. Moreover, the variant forms in the two editions prove that the Q2 reading was not contaminated by Q1.

I.iv.70. maid. This Q1 reading would appear to be supported by Q2's man. Since the Q2 compositor occasionally misread ie as n and final d as e, man is apparently his misreading of maid. (Compare the compositor's misreading of gaie as gan at III.1.119, and of exhald as exhale at III.5.13) It is possible, however, that man is a misreading of maie, 'may, maiden,' corrupted in Q1 to maid. For the latter suggestion the present editor is indebted to Mr. H. R. Hoppe.

I.iv.82. suit. That is, a petition to the monarch which will enable the courtier to extort a fee from the petitioner in return for interceding, or pretending to intercede, in his behalf.

I.iv.98. carriage. In Shakespeare's time pronunciation of the suffixes -iage, -ion, -ial, -iar, and -ience could be monosyllabic or disyllabic, depending on the metrical context. Disyllabic pronunciations of these suffixes (especially -ion) occur throughout Romeo and Juliet, but only one example of each is glossed. carri-age (I.4.98), invocati-on (II.1.29), substanti-al (II.1.192), famili-ar (III.3.7), and pati-ence (V.1.27). See Helge Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, Yale University Press, 1953, pp. 256, 293–4.

I.iv.115, 117. expire . . . death. Romeo compares the length of his life to the term of a bond or mortgage for which his life itself is security. If the consequence of which he has a premonition brings the bond's term to a close, in default of payment he will have to forfeit his life.

I.iv.SD. They march . . . napkins. The traditional scene division at this point accords with the modern custom of a curtain drop but obscures the continuity of action and fluidity of scene in an Elizabethan public playhouse, where the marching of the Maskers symbolizes a change of scene from the street outside Capulet's house to a hall within it. The Maskers retire to the back or sides of the forestage during the Servingmen's short scene (I.4.121–133), stepping forward at l. 133 when the dance party enters 'to' them.

I.iv.121–133. Where's Potpan? . . . take all. Editors usually assign these six speeches to three Servingmen, but there are actually four, in Q2 unconventionally numbered Ser., 1., 2., and 3., rather than 1. Ser., 2., 3., and 4. The present editor follows the numbering in Dowden's edition.

I.iv.SD. Enter . . . to the Maskers. Since Capulet's feast is not a masquerade, masks are worn only by Romeo and his friends, the uninvited guests. See I.4.1. cf. n. and I.4.218–224 cf. n.

I.iv.199. goodman boy. This is a double insult, since goodman was the title of a farmer or other person beneath the rank of gentleman but above that of laborer, and boy was used contemptuously of a green youngster, or one treated as such.

I.iv.203. set cock-a-hoop. This means literally, set the cock (spigot) on the hoop (of the barrel), thus letting the liquor flow freely. The same image for disorder appears at I.1.100 in the expression 'set abroach.'

I.iv.SD. Aside. Capulet successively interrupts his quarrel with Tybalt in order to reply to a guest (l. 206), to compliment other guests (l. 209), to order his servants (l. 210), and to encourage the dancing (l. 211).

I.iv.217–219. the gentle sin . . . kiss. In atonement for the rough sin of profaning Juliet's hand by touching it with his own, Romeo proposes the gentle sin of kissing her hand.

I.iv.218–224. pilgrims . . . palmers. Although in da Porto's novella Romeo attends a Capelletti masquerade costumed as a nymph, in Shakespeare's play Capulet's feast is not a masquerade and Romeo is not costumed, as a pilgrim or otherwise. Shakespeare's conceit of Romeo as a pilgrim visiting the shrine of his love is suggested by the name Romeo itself, for in Italian it means literally 'Romer' or 'Rome-bound pilgrim.' In the Middle Ages the word was originally used in Palestine and elsewhere to designate pilgrims from Italy, but it ultimately grew to refer to a pilgrim's destination rather than his place of origin. In the Vita Nuova Dante distinguishes among the 'three separate denominations proper unto those who undertake journeys to the glory of God. They are called Palmers who go beyond the seas eastward [to Jerusalem], whence often they bring palm-branches. And Pilgrims [in addition to the general sense of "religious travelers"] . . . are they who journey unto the holy House of Gallicia; seeing that no other apostle was buried so far from his birth-place as was the blessed Saint James [Santiago de Compostela]. And there is a third sort who are called Romers [romei, plural of romeo]; in that they go . . . unto Rome.' (La Vita Nuova, XL, tr. D. G. Rossetti.)

I.iv.230. Thus . . . purg'd. It was not unusual for partners in an Elizabethan dance to kiss. Compare Ariel's song: 'Come unto these yellow sands, And then take hands. Curtsied when you have and kiss'd, The wild waves whist, Foot it featly here and there . . .' (The Tempest, I.2.442–446).

I.iv.257. Petruchio. Here and in The Taming of the Shrew Shakespeare spells the name Petruccio with a ch in order to retain the soft Italian c in English. However, since the i in Petruccio is not vocalic, this English phonetic spelling results in the traditional mispronunciation 'Petruchi-o.'

I.iv.273–286. Now old Desire . . . sweet. According to Senecan tradition, this 'chorus' should precede rather than follow the act division. See Baldwin, Shakespeare's Five-Act Structure, p. 744.

II.i.2. earth . . . center. As everything on earth tends toward its center, so Romeo's body gravitates toward his heart, which has remained with Juliet.

II.i.4. He's. Here and at III.1.112, III.1.196, and III.5.39, the present editor prints the contracted form of Q2's is; and elsewhere the contracted forms of am (II.4.53), are (III.5.222), would (II.4.13), and it (II.1.222 and III.5.223).

II.i.9. Romeo . . . lover. Since it was believed that a spirit could not speak until properly addressed, Mercutio in his parody of invocation follows the custom of reciting various names in the hope that the right one will cause the spirit to appear and speak. Hamlet does the same in addressing his father's ghost (Hamlet, I.4.47, 48).

II.i.15. Abram. An Abram or Abraham Man was 'one of a class of pretended lunatics who wandered over England seeking alms, after the dissolution of the religious houses' (OED); and thus the term became slang for a cheat or hypocrite. Since Cupid's blindness is misleading (considering his accuracy as an archer) and since he caused King Cophetua to fall in love with a beggar maid, Mercutio describes the god of love by reference to the typical Elizabethan hypocritical beggar. Editors have also explained Abraham (the reading of both Q2 and Q1) as alluding to the Old Testament Patriarch (Abraham in Hebrew meaning 'Father of Multitudes'), as a variant of auburn (i.e. 'auburn-haired'; see Coriolanus, II.3.17), and as an error for Adam, in allusion to the proverbial archer Adam Bell (see Much Ado About Nothing, I.1.216–218). For the editorial principle involved in the retention of this Q2 reading, see 'The Received Text,' pp.18–19.

II.i.16. King Cophetua. This hero of a popular Elizabethan ballad fell in love with and married a wandering beggar girl named Penelophon—or Zenelophon, as the name appears in Love's Labour's Lost (IV.1.69). On Cophetua's first sight of Penelophon, Cupid, 'The blinded boy, that shoots so trim, From heaven down did hie; He drew a dart and shot at him, In place where he did lie.' (Thomas Percy, Reliques of Ancient English Poetry, ed. 1839, vol. 1, bk. II, no. 6)

II.i.40. open-arse. Q1's Et cætera (euphemistic for 'pudendum') is the traditional reading here, but in adopting it editors usually suppress Q2's or and fail to recognize that if l. 40 is to scan properly the word omitted after Q2's open must be a monosyllable. Thus the metrical as well as the semantic context requires the reading open-arse, an old name for the medlar tree or 'that kind of fruit As maids call medlars when they laugh alone' (ll. 37, 38). Chaucer's Reeve uses it in referring to the fact that the medlar is not worth eating until overripe and slightly decayed: 'This white top writeth myne olde yeris; Myn herte is also mowled [mouldy] as myne heris, But if [unless] I fare as dooth an open-ers.' ('The Reeve's Prologue,' in The Poetical Works of Chaucer, ed. F. N. Robinson, Boston, 1933, p. 66.) For the editorial principle involved in this emendation, see 'The Received Text,' pp. 20–1.

II.i.38. pop'rin pear. The poppering pear was so called after its place of origin, the town of Poperinghe in Flanders. Mercutio here couples it with open-arse to indicate two different varieties of the same essential kind, Romeo and Rosaline. There may also be quibble on 'phallus'; see Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, pp.136–8.

II.i.46. Romeo. Here the traditional scene division again obscures the Elizabethan fluidity of scene and continuity of action, emphasized by the rhyme of wound with found. Romeo, who is usually visible to the audience during Mercutio's raillery (ll. 9–41), now comes forward from his hiding place, and the scene of the forestage changes from a street outside the wall to the orchard within it.

II.i.SD. Enter . . . window. Editors usually follow Capell (1768) in locating this entrance (omitted from Q2 and Q1) after II.1.46. However, since the light at the window is the twilight glow of dawn (the East) and since Juliet herself is the sun, its imminent rising designates in metaphor her anticipated appearance at the window. Only after Romeo has invoked the sun to rise (l. 49) and to cast off Diana's livery (l. 54) does the 'sun' actually 'rise': Juliet enters at the window, causing Romeo's triple exclamation of delight at first catching sight of his beloved (ll. 55, 56). Thus Romeo's 'invocation' is Shakespeare's preparation for an effective entrance by Juliet, an ironic echo of Mercutio's parody of invocation in the immediately preceding lines, and a transitional device functioning as a buffer between Mercutio's ribaldry in the first part of II.1 and Juliet's 'true-love passion' (l. 146) in the latter part of that scene. See Richard Hosley, 'Juliet's Entrance,' The Times Literary Supplement, May 22, 1953, p. 333.

II.i.SD. window. Although in a proscenium-arch theater Juliet usually here enters on a 'balcony,' in an Elizabethan public playhouse she enters on the upper stage, representing her window. Compare the Q1 and Q2 directions at III.5.1. For structural details of the upper stage, rear stage, and forestage in various Elizabethan public theaters, see C. Walter Hodges, The Globe Restored, London, 1953.

II.i.62. spheres. In medieval and Renaissance astronomy the erratic motions of the planets (and of the moon) were explained according to the Ptolemaic system, in which each planet is carried about the earth by a hollow crystalline sphere concentric with the earth. The general notion persisted a century or more after publication of the Copernican hypothesis (1543).

II.i.78. puffing. Editors usually emend Q2's puffing to Q1's pacing, but the Q2 reading apparently alludes to the personification of winds in old maps as cloud-shaped heads puffing air from distended cheeks. It is possible, however, that puffing is the Q2 compositor's misreading of passing, Hoppe's emendation. For discussion of the three readings see Duthie, 'The Text of Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet,' pp. 24–6, and Hosley, 'The Received Text,' p. 19 and n. 23.

II.i.87–89. What's Montague . . . a man. Editors usually correct these lines by conflating them with the variant Q1 text, but since it is not entirely clear that Q2 is corrupt, the present editor follows Hoppe in reprinting the text as it stands in Q2.

II.i.168. contract. Juliet uses this legal term because according to Elizabethan law the lovers have entered into a formal betrothal contract. Such a betrothal was often legally binding as a marriage, although it did not morally license consummation of the marriage until a member of the clergy had performed the nuptial ceremony (compare II.5.36–7). See David P. Harding, 'Elizabethan Betrothals and Measure for Measure,' The Journal of English and Germanic Philology, 49 (1950), 149–50.

II.i.222. dear. Hoppe here restores Q2's Neece. However, except for the OED's one doubtful example from around 1470, there is no record of the word 'niece' used as a form of address to an unrelated woman; and the independent emendations of both the F2 editor (to sweete) and the Q4 editor (to Deere) show that the Q2 reading was considered corrupt in the early 17th century. Since c was a common compositor's error for r, it seems likely that the Q2 compositor misread deere as Neece. For Q2's My Neece Q1 has Madame.

II.i.237. silken threed. The Q2 spelling threed indicates a common Elizabethan pronunciation of 'thread.' This pronunciation in turn suggests that threed is stressed, that plucks it is monosyllabic, and that Q1's monosyllabic variant silke (the traditional reading) is an error for silken.

II.i.242–246. Good night . . . rest. Editors here follow the Q4 editor and Pope (1723) in printing the Q1 assignment of ll. 242, 243 to Juliet and of ll. 245, 246 to Romeo. However, in view of the Q1 reporter's recurrent errors of speech assignment (see H. R. Hoppe, The Bad Quarto of Romeo and Juliet, Cornell University Press, 1948, pp. 125–6), the present editor reprints the text as it stands in Q2, with the addition from Q3 of Romeo's omitted speech heading to the second half of l. 242 and the shift of his heading at l. 246 to l. 247. For a detailed account of the Q1 and Q2 errors here involved, see 'The Received Text,' pp. 26–8; Clifford Leech, 'Notes on . . . the Received Text of Romeo and Juliet,' Shakespeare Quarterly, 5 (1954), 94–5; and Richard Hosley, 'The "Good Night, Good Night" Sequence in Romeo and Juliet,' ibid., pp. 96–98.

II.i.247–250. The grey-ey'd Morn . . . wheels. These four lines constitute Shakespeare's revision of an original version, which he failed to delete from his manuscript and which was therefore set up by the Q2 compositor as a duplication of the revision (see Text and Date). Since 1723 editors have followed Pope and the Q4 editor in deleting the original version from Romeo's speech in II.1 and in assigning the revised version to the Friar at the beginning of II.2. However, since the original version stands in Romeo's speech two lines before the end of II.1, the passage would appear to belong to him; and the present editor follows the F2 editor and Rowe (1709) in assigning it to Romeo. The image of the 'grey-ey'd Morn' is echoed by Romeo at III.5.19 ('I'll say yon grey is not the Morning's eye'); and the imagery of the passage is generally akin both to that used by Romeo at II.1.48, 49 and III.5.7–10 and by other characters apropos of Romeo at I.1.112, 113, I.1.130–132, and III.2.1–25; whereas the Friar never elsewhere alludes to classical mythology or personifies Day or Night or their aspects in the Homeric manner. The Q1 assignment of the passage to the Friar is apparently the reporter's memorial error. For detailed discussion of this 'revisional duplication' and of others at III.3.41–44, IV.1.113, 114, and V.3.109–121. Duplications of a single word or phrase are listed in the note to V.3.103.

II.i.248. Check'ring. This Q1 reading suggests that Q2's Checking in the revised Q2 version of the grey-ey'd Morn' passage is a misprint for Checkring, the reading of the original Q2 version.

II.ii.SD. Enter Romeo. Editors occasionally follow Pope in locating this entrance after l. 26, but the location of the entrance in Q2 is a calculated irony: Romeo, who is to be the victim of Poison, enters just before the word is mentioned (l. 20) and overhears the Friar's homily on Grace and rude Will.

II.ii.30, 37. distemper'd, distemp'rature. Both words suggest the idea of mental disturbance as a result of the four bodily humors being disproportionately mixed or tempered.

II.iii.4, 5. Why . . . run mad. Editors usually follow Q2 in arranging this prose passage and that at III.1.1–2 as verse, but in each use Q2 appears to have been contaminated by the erroneous arrangement in Q1. See 'The Received Text,' pp.23–4.

II.iii.18. Prince of Cats. Tybalt or Tibert (Tebaldo in da Porto and Bandello) is the name of the cat in the medieval French cycle of animal satires concerning Reynard the Fox. In III.1 Mercutio repeats his joke by calling Tybalt 'ratcatcher' (l. 70) and 'King of Cats' (l. 72).

II.iii.21, 22. butcher . . . button. Tybalt is such an accurate fencer that he can pink any button he chooses on his opponent's jacket.

II.iii.23. first and second cause. These were, according to the code of the duello, two of the various grounds for a gentleman's recognizing an affront to his honor and therefore challenging the offender to a duel. (Compare Mercutio's use of the phrase in the Q1 version of his death-speech, p. 160.) See Touchstone's satire on such quarreling in As You Like It (V.4.48–98), and compare Armado's complaints against Cupid: 'The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not. His disgrace is to be called boy, but his glory is to subdue men' (Loves Labour's Lost, I.2.157–160). Compare also Peter's quarreling with the Musicians (IV.4.144–156).

II.iii.24. passado . . . hai. The passado (Italian passata, 'pass,' 'thrust') is a lunging thrust involving the passing of one foot before the other while delivering the attack. The punto reverso (Italian punta reversa, 'point reversed') is a back-handed thrust delivered from the left side of the attacker's body. The word has (Italian, 'thou hast [it]') means a home thrust or death blow. See Horace S. Craig, 'Dueling Scenes and Terms in Shakespeare's Plays,' University of California Publications in English, 9 (1940), 1–28. Craig also discusses the medieval long sword, and distinguishes between the rapier-and-dagger swordplay of the young gallants and the sword-and-buckler swashbuckling of the servants.

II.iii.32. bones. Mercutio derides the fashion-mongers because the old seats are too hard for their bones, which are presumably afflicted with syphilis—'The Neapolitan bone-ache . . . the curse dependent on those that war for a placket' (Troilus and Cressida, II.3.15–17). There may also be a pun on French 'bons,' since the pardon-me's affectedly interlard their speech with foreign expressions.

II.iii.62. wild goose chase. This is a horse race in which the rider who can seize the lead must be followed cross-country wherever he goes.

II.iii.88. occupy. This word's sense of 'copulate' is alluded to by Doll Tearsheet: 'God's light! these villains will make the word [captain] as odious as the word "occupy," which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted' (2 Henry IV, II.4.122–125).

II.iii.SD. Enter . . . Man. Editors usually follow Q2 in locating this direction after 'Here's goodly gear' (l. 89), but the Q2 location would appear to be due to the compositor's having reproduced the erroneous location in Q1. The present editor follows the location in F1. See 'The Received Text,' pp. 21–2.

II.iii.93. fan. It was the extreme of fashion for a lady to use a fan so large that a servant was required to carry it.

II.iii.127, 128. 'Lady, lady'. Mercutio quotes from the refrain of a popular ballad on Susanna and the Elders: 'A woman fair and virtuous: Lady, lady, Why should we not of her learn thus To live godly?' Compare Sir Toby Belch: 'Tilly-vally, lady! "There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady!" ' (Twelfth Night, II.3.70, 71).

II.iii.161, 162. Bid . . . afternoon. Editors usually print 'Bid her devise' as a separate dimeter line, but the line as it stands in Q2 appears to be a fourteener. There is another fourteener at II.4.15.

II.iv.26. jaunce. This may be the Q2 compositor's misreading of 'jaunte' or a colloquial development form the plural form 'jaunts.'

III.i.69. Alla stoccatho. Editors usually emend Q2's Alla stucatho to Alla stoccata, an Italian fencing term meaning 'at the thrust,' the stoccata (from 'stocco,' rapier) being a thrust delivered with the fingernails up. However, since stoccado was a common Elizabethan variant of stoccata, Q1's Allastockado preserves essentially the correct reading, for Q2's stucatho (or stocatho, misread by the compositor) would appear to reproduce Shakespeare's phonetic spelling of stoccado, the th being an attempt to render the Spanish fricative d, as in renegatho (Twelfth Night, III.2.61). Compare Shallow's stoccadoes in The Merry Wives of Windsor (II.1.193). Mercutio uses the expression figuratively for Tybalt's blustering.

III.i.119. He gay. Editors usually emend Q2's He gan to Q1's 'A liue' (i.e. alive), but the present editor follows Hoppe in interpreting gan as the Q2 compositor's misreading of gaie, a variant spelling of gay. Compare the compositor's error two lines later of end for eied (III.1.121).

III.i.136. Citizens. Editors usually interpret Q2's Citti, as designating a single Citizen (as at l. 139), but ll. 136, 137 would appear to be spoken by two different Citizens. Compare I.1.69 cf. n.

III.i.161, 162. one hand . . . the other. The swordplay here described is of the sword-and-dagger variety, in which the left hand, holding a dagger or wearing a mailed gauntlet, parries the attack and the right hand thrusts with the rapier. See note on II.3.27.

III.i.184. Montague. This traditional emendation of the Q2 speech heading Capulet was first made by the Q4 editor. Hoppe restores the Q2 reading, but the passage in question (ll. 184-186) seems dramatically more appropriate to Montague and its assignment to him has the theatrical advantage of giving one of Romeo's parents something to say in a scene where they would otherwise remain mute.

III.i.198. Mercy . . . kill. The unwiseness of a clement civil policy is discussed by Machiavelli, who writes that a prince 'must not mind incurring the charge of cruelty for the purpose of keeping his subjects united and faithful; for, with a very few examples, he will be more merciful than those who, from excess of tenderness, allow disorders to arise, from whence spring bloodshed and rapine; for these as a rule injure the whole community, while the executions carried out by the prince injure only individuals.' (The Prince, ch. 17, Modern Library ed., p. 60.) Compare notes on I.1.92, 93.

III.ii.1–31. Gallop apace . . . wear them. This passage is occasionally called Juliet's serenade or evening song.

III.ii.3. Phaeton. The son of Phoebus Apollo, Phaeton was permitted by his father to drive the chariot of the sun. However, he was unable to control the horses, which ran away with him, drawing the sun so close to the earth as to dry up large areas which are now the great deserts. To prevent the universe from being destroyed, Jupiter was forced to kill Phaeton with a thunderbolt. See Ovid, Metamorphoses, II.1–328 (Loeb ed.)

III.ii.6. runaway. The meaning is not clear. If runaway alludes to the Phaeton myth, it probably designates the sun, which Juliet wishes would move faster (as when it ran away with Phaeton) so as to bring in night earlier than usual. This interpretation is supported by Lorenzo's use of the word: 'But come at once; For the close night doth play the runaway, And we are stay'd for at Bassanio's feast' (The Merchant of Venice, II.6.48–50).

III.ii.SD. Enter Nurse with cords. In place of this direction Q1 has 'Enter Nurse wringing her hands, with the ladder of cords in her lap.' Presumably in the production on which the Q1 text is based the Nurse was here 'discovered' seated in the rear stage. In Q1 Juliet's serenade is cut to four lines, and the Q2 phrase 'O here comes my Nurse' is omitted.

III.ii.49. cockatrice. The cockatrice or basilisk was a fabulous serpent whose glance was supposed to be fatal. Compare Sir Toby Belch: 'This will so fright them both [Cesario and Sir Andrew Aguecheek] that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices' (Twelfth Night, III.4.178, 179).

III.ii.89. forsworn all. Editors usually correct Q2's long and awkward line 'All perjur'd, all forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers' by rearranging the lineation of ll. 88, 89. However, the present editor retains the Q2 lineation and omits the phrase 'all naught' as a first thought which Shakespeare had neglected to delete from his foul papers. See V.3.103 cf. n.

III.iii.SD. Enter Friar. Q1's separate entrances for the Friar and Romeo accord with the Q2 text and apparently reflect the bookkeeper's correction (in the promptbook) of the original direction in Shakespeare's foul papers, 'Enter Friar and Romeo.' In an Elizabethan public theater the Friar and Romeo enter 'at several doors' on the forestage, representing the Friar's cell. Compare note on V.2.SD.

III.iii.172, 171. Either be gone . . . hence. That is, be gone from hence, disguised, either before the watch be set or (at the latest) by the break of day.

III.iv.12. desp'rate tender. Capulet's negotiation for a marriage de convenance without his daughter's consent reflects the strict parental authority exercised by Elizabethans in arranging marriages for their children. (See Charles T. Prouty, The Sources of Much Ado About Nothing, Yale University Press, 1950, pp. 44–5). Such authority helps to explain Capulet's anger in III.5, where Juliet, who of course cannot marry Paris because she is already married to Romeo, seems to Capulet to be rejecting a 'good' match out of sheer wilfulness. On the concern of fathers for their daughters' marriages, compare Leonato in Much Ado About Nothing, Polonius in Hamlet, Brabantio in Othello, and Prospero in The Tempest.

III.v.1–36. Wilt thou be gone . . . dark our woes. These lines compose an aubade or dawn song, a traditional verse form of the troubadours celebrating the hour of parting between two lovers at dawn. As here, the aubade is often a duet in which the lovers debate whether dawn is actually at hand. As an example of Shakespeare's functional use of a conventional verse form, Romeo and Juliet's aubade may be compared with their sonnet at I.4.216–229.

III.v.13. exhal'd. Editors usually emend Q2's exhale to Q1's exhales, but the Q2 reading would appear to be the compositor's error for exhald. For a list of the Q2 compositor's recurrent misreadings of final d as e, see 'The Received Text," p. 20, n. 27.

III.v.31. Some say . . . eyes. Because the beautiful-voiced lark has ugly eyes, whereas the croaking toad has beautiful ones.

III.v.SD. Nurse. The Q2 direction 'Enter Madam and Nurse' probably stood in Shakespeare's foul papers as a marginal direction, 'Enter Nurse. Madam'—that is, Enter the Nurse, calling 'Madam'; and accordingly the direction was amplified to 'Enter Madam and Nurse' and duplicated in the text as 'Nur. Madam.' See Sir Walter Greg, The Editorial Problem in Shakespeare, Oxford, 1942, p. 61, n. 2.

III.v.37–40. Madam . . . look about. In a proscenium-arch theater the Nurse usually delivers the warning from offstage. But in the Elizabethan production represented by Q1, it was apparently shifted to l. 59 in order to 'cover' Juliet's descent from the upper stage. In such a method of staging the Nurse enters on the forestage. See III.5.SD cf. n.

III.v.62. renown'd. This Q2 spelling indicates an Elizabethan pronunciation emphasizing the etymology of 'renown,' from Old French renomer.

III.v.SD. ⟨She goeth down from the window⟩. This Q1 stage direction indicates that in an Elizabethan public playhouse Juliet here descends from the upper to the lower stage by means of the tiring-house stairs, and thus that the balance of III.5 is played on the lower rather than the upper level. The text in Q2 and the present edition reproduces the original version of Shakespeare's foul papers. After the Wife's entrance and speech at l. 64, Juliet expresses her surprise in soliloquy (ll. 65–7), exits from the upper stage after l. 67, descends to the lower level, and re-enters 'to' the Wife on the rear stage or the forestage; at which point the scene of the lower stage (having changed on the Wife's entrance from orchard to house) changes from a location outside Juliet's bedroom to one inside it. However, Shakespeare's original version is unstageworthy in that it involves a pause in the action of eight or ten seconds during Juliet's descent. The text in Q1, on the other hand, in part reflects the promptbook version of the staging. In that edition the Nurse's warning is shifted from its Q2 position at III.5.37–40 to l. 59, and Juliet's soliloquies at ll. 60–4 and 65–7 are eliminated. Thus Juliet begins her descent simultaneously with Romeo's exit at l. 59, the descent being 'covered' by the dialogue and stage business of the Nurse's and the Wife's calling Juliet and knocking at her door. At l. 67 Juliet re-enters to the Wife and Nurse on the rear stage or the forestage, where the action proceeds. (If she enters on the rear stage, the players must subsequently 'flow out' to the forestage in order to play the 'upbraiding' scene with Capulet.) In Otway's restoration version entitled The History and Fall of Caius Marius, this staging problem was solved by representing a garden scene (see Hazelton Spencer, Shakespeare Improved, Harvard University Press, 1927, p. 295); and in the 18th century Romeo and Juliet were 'brought in tête à tête [sic] on the platform of the stage' (from a contemporary account cited by A. C. Sprague, Shakespeare and the Actors, Harvard University Press, 1944, p. 308). In a modern proscenium-arch theater, the problem posed by this transition of scene is usually solved by representing the interior rather than the exterior of Juliet's bedroom, which the Wife enters by a door at l. 67 after Romeo has left by the window at l. 42. In this method of staging, the Q2 text requires no alteration. For a more detailed account, see Richard Hosley, 'The Use of the Upper Stage in Romeo and Juliet,' Shakespeare Quarterly, 5 (1954).

III.v.179, 180. Capulet, Nurse. The present editor here follows the traditional assignment of speeches, based on the corrections of the Q4 editor and Capell (1768). In Q2 Capulet's 'O—Godigoden!' (l. 179) and the Nurse's 'May not one speak?' (l. 180) are printed on separate lines without speech headings, and the reading Father stands as part of the 'text proper' immediately before 'O—Godigoden!' That Father is an error for the speech heading Fa. (used regularly for Capulet from l. 161 to his exit) is corroborated by the Q1 assignment of 'O—Godigoden!' to Capulet, it being clear from variations in text and spelling that Q2 was not here contaminated by Q1. If the Nurse's heading was missing from Shakespeare's foul papers, the Q2 compositor may have misinterpreted Capulet's heading as text in order to set right the sequence of speech headings.

III.v.185. Day, night—work, play. For this reading Q2 has 'Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play.' Some editors reprint the Q2 text verbatim and others conflate it with the variant text of Q1, but Hoppe's deletion of 'hour, tide, time' provides a good reading with a minimum of alteration and accords with the metrical pattern. Since Shakespeare's foul papers had probably been messily rewritten at this point, the text may well be corrupt beyond editorial redemption.

III.v.190. lim'd. Editors usually emend Q2's laind to Q1's trainde, but the Q2 reading would appear to be the compositor's misreading of limd. Compare the Q2 spelling lims for 'limbs' at II.2.35 and V.3.37. For some of the Q2 compositor's recurrent misreadings of words with minim letters, see 'The Received Text,' p. 20, n. 28.

IV.i.40. evening mass. During the Middle Ages the mass was occasionally performed in the afternoon or evening, and the custom, although prohibited in the 16th century, lingered on in some localities long after the Renaissance.

IV.i.59. label. This was a strip of ribbon or parchment attached to the bottom of a deed or other legal document. There was a separate label for each party to the agreement, who impressed his seal in a ball of soft wax enclosing the lower end of the label.

IV.i.65. umpeer. This Q2 spelling indicates an Elizabethan pronunciation emphasizing the etymology of 'umpire,' from Middle English noumpere and Old French nompere (modern non-pair, 'peerless, nonpareil'). (The n of noumpere was transferred to the indefinite article by the same process of 'separation' whereby a naddre became an addre, 'an adder.')

IV.i.83. charnel house. This was a vault or shed attached to the church in which were deposited the bones tossed up in the common practice of digging new graves on the site of old. Compare Hamlet, V.1.

IV.i.102. wanny. Editors usually emend Q2's many to F2's mealy or Q4's paly, but the present editor follows Hoppe in interpreting many as the Q2 compositor's misreading of wany. an Elizabethan spelling variant of wanny.

IV.i.107. two and forty hours. Shakespeare may have derived this figure for the duration of Juliet's sleep from Painter's novella, where it is described as 'forty hours at the least.' However, forty-two hours cannot be interpreted literally, being too long a period to allow Juliet to awaken early Thursday morning and too short for Friday. The most satisfactory time scheme of the play dates the beginning of the action Sunday morning. Capulet's feast is held Sunday night (I.4), and Romeo and Juliet part at dawn on Monday (II.1). During Monday the lovers are married (II.5) and Mercutio and Tybalt are killed (III.1). The lovers spend Monday night together, and on Tuesday at dawn Romeo departs for Mantua (III.5). During Tuesday Juliet obtains the potion from the Friar (IV.1) and Capulet enthusiastically advances the marriage from Thursday to Wednesday (IV.2). Tuesday night (a day ahead of the Friar's plan) Juliet drinks the potion (IV.3) and Wednesday morning is discovered apparently dead (IV.4). Late Wednesday afternoon Balthasar notifies Romeo of Juliet's death (V.1), and Romeo returns to Verona that same evening, arriving at the tomb after midnight Wednesday (V.3). Thus the action ends early Thursday morning, Juliet apparently having slept somewhat over twenty-four hours.

IV.ii.SD. Exeunt ⟨Nurse and Juliet⟩. Act IV illustrates the possibilities in an Elizabethan public playhouse of rapidly alternating the action between forestage and rear stage. At IV.2.38 Juliet and the Nurse exit from the forestage, to be discovered a moment later on the rear stage at the beginning of IV.3. During the potion scene (IV.3) Juliet comes out on the forestage to talk with the Wife and to deliver the potion speech, but at the end of the scene she retires to the rear stage and 'falls upon her bed within the curtains,' which are then closed so that the scene of domestic preparation may be played on the forestage (IV.4.1–31). At IV.4.32 the Nurse opens the curtains of the rear stage, where Juliet is discovered apparently dead (see IV.4.32 cf. n.). The lamentation scene (IV.4.32–175) is then played on the forestage. For an argument that the potion scene and the lamentation scene cannot be played upon the upper stage, see 'The Use of the Upper Stage in Romeo and Juliet.'

IV.iii.48. mandrakes. The mandrake or mandragora is a plant with opiate properties (see Othello, III.3.373), the root of which is often forked so as to resemble the legs of a human being. It had fabulous virtues in magic and medicine, and when pulled from the earth was supposed to shriek and cause hearers to go mad or die. For this reason dogs were supposedly harnessed to draw it from the ground.

IV.iv.14. hood. This would appear to be a variant spelling of 'hud' (cover, shell, husk), used metaphorically in the sense of 'an empty person.' Compare the Q2 spelling hudwincki for 'hoodwink'd' at I.4.4. Some editors, interpreting hood as the suffix indicating generality as in 'womanhood,' hyphenate jealous hood and gloss it as 'jealousy,' the abstract for the concrete.

IV.iv.20. Peter. In Q1 this name appears as Will, presumably because Will Kemp had played the part of Peter (see note on IV.4.134). The present editor is indebted to Mr. Cyrus Hoy for calling his attention to this variant.

IV.iv.32. Nurse. At this point the traditional scene division again obscures the continuity of action and fluidity of scene in an Elizabethan public theater, and has induced editors to direct the Nurse offstage at IV.4.31, only to re-enter immediately at l. 32. The Nurse, however, remains on the forestage and after Capulet's exit at l. 31 opens the curtains of the rear stage, where Juliet is discovered lying on her bed; and thus the scene of the forestage changes from a location outside Juliet's bedroom to one (in conjunction with the rear stage) inside it. For a more detailed account, see 'The Use of the Upper Stage in Romeo and Juliet.'

IV.iv.38. set up his rest. This expression, from the card game of primero, means literally 'staked his reserve.' There is probably also a pun on 'wrest,' wresting instrument, tuning key. See Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, p. 140.

IV.iv.114. rosemary. Being an evergreen, rosemary symbolizes remembrance and was accordingly used at both weddings and funerals. See Philip Williams, 'The Rosemary Theme in Romeo and Juliet,' Modern Language Notes, 68 (1953), 400–3. Compare II.3.185 and IV.4.SD.

IV.iv.SD. They all . . . Musicians. Editors usually follow the Q4 editor in directing the Musicians to enter with Paris and the Friar at IV.4.67. However, the Q1 directions at l. 130 support the evidence of Q2, where Exeunt is apparently designed for Capulet, the Wife, Paris, and the Friar, but the singular manet for the Nurse, indicating that she is the only actor to remain on stage at IV.4.130 and thus that the Musicians do not enter until this point. See Richard Hosley, 'A Stage Direction in Romeo and Juliet,' The Times Literary Supplement, June 13, 1952, p. 391.

IV.iv.SD. Peter. The reading of Q2 indicates that the role of Peter was probably played by Will Kemp, the famous comic actor of Shakespeare's company. The name 'Will' is also used for Peter in Q1 (see note on IV.4.17). From speech headings in Much Ado About Nothing it appears that Kemp also played the part of Dogberry.

IV.iv.139, 140. 'My Heart is Full'. Editors usually follow the Q4 editor in emending this Q2 reading to 'My heart is full of woe,' which has been identified as a line from the anonymous song 'A Pleasant New Ballad of Two Lovers.' This emendation may be correct, but it has the appearance of a sophistication by the Q4 editor. The present editor reprints the substance of the Q2 text and punctuation, interpreting 'My heart is Full' as the name of the tune (real or imaginary) which Peter's 'heart itself' is playing. This is, to 'comfort' him, Peter wishes the Musicians to play 'Heart's Ease,' a 'merry dump' which will counteract his heart's sorrowful tune. Peter's use of the term 'dump' is of course a malapropism.

IV.iv.150. re . . . fa . . . you. With re Peter quibbles on 'ray' (beray, befoul and with fa on 'fay' (cleanse, polish). In this context 'ray' and 'fay' probably also mean 'to beat.' See Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, pp. 105–6.

IV.iv.157-159. When . . . sound. These lines are from 'In Commendation of Music,' a song by Richard Edwards printed in a popular Elizabethan miscellany, The Paradise of Dainty Devices (1576).

V.i.15. fares my Juliet. The Q2 reading 'How doth my Lady Juliet' would appear to involve the compositor's duplication of part of the immediately preceding line, 'How doth my Lady'; and if so, Q1, in here reading 'How fares my Juliet,' probably preserves the text of Shakespeare's foul papers. See Sir Walter Greg, Principles of Emendation in Shakespeare, British Academy Shakespeare Lecture, London, 1928, p. 52, n. 28.

V.i.24. in. This Q2 spelling indicates an unstressed Elizabethan pronunciation of 'e'en.'

V.ii.SD. Enter Friar John. This Q1 direction and the Q2 dialogue of ll. 1–3 suggest that Q2's 'Enter Lawrence' after l. 1 is the book-keeper's correction in Shakespeare's foul papers of the original direction before l. 1, 'Enter Friar John to Friar Lawrence.' The book-keeper, however, apparently did not delete the last three words of the original direction. In an Elizabethan public playhouse John and Lawrence enter 'severally' on the forestage, representing the Friar's cell. Compare with note on III.3.1 SD.

V.ii.6. associate. It was generally required that a friar should not travel unless accompanied by a fellow-member of his order.

V.ii.11. Seal'd up the doors. This was a frequent occurrence during the London plagues of Shakespeare's time.

V.iii.SD. Balthasar. The erroneous Q2 designation of Romeo's servant as Peter may be due to the servant's being so named in Romeus and Juliet (ultimately after the Italian Pietro, Juliet's servant in da Porto but Romeo's in Bandello), or to Will Kemp's doubling in the parts of Balthasar and the Nurse's servant Peter, whose character is Shakespeare's invention. See note on IV.4.129 SD.

V.iii.103. shall I believe. The Q2 phrase 'I will believe' is omitted from the present edition as a first thought which had not been deleted from Shakespeare's foul papers and which was therefore printed in Q2 immediately before its revision, 'Shall I believe.' Other short undeleted first thoughts omitted from the present edition are Cozen (III.1.147), And (III.2.9), Rauenous (III.2.78), all naught (III.2.89), and O (V.3.202). See 'The Received Text,' p. 28 and n. 43.

V.iii.108. pallet. Editors usually follow the Q3 editor in emending Q2's pallat to pallace. However, the Q2 reading is a common Elizabethan spelling variant of pallet, an image which supports the theme that Juliet's wedding bed is indeed her grave. Compare 1.4.261, III.5.144, IV.4.71 and V.3.28.

V.iii.SD. Citizens. This addition to Q2's direction 'Enter Prince' is suggested both by Q1's 'with others' and by the Wife's reference in Q2 to people running toward the monument (ll. 201–203) Moreover, the appearance of the Citizens at this point has a symbolic value which rounds out the theme of civil disorder. Here and at III.1.144 the Prince is presumably attended by the Train mentioned at I.1.SD.

V.iii.SD. Enter Capels. In Q2 this stage direction is duplicated after l. 201 as 'Enter Capulet and his Wife.' The first direction is presumably the book-keeper's correction of the second, Shakespeare's erroneously located original direction.

V.iii.228. Seal up. G. B. Harrison suggests that at this point the curtains of the rear stage are closed to conceal the three bodies (Shakespeare: Major Plays and the Sonnets, New York, 1948). In the modern theater such concealment is unnecessary, since at this point the play is usually cut to its closing speeches, around V.3.303.

V.iii.309. jointure. This is the marriage portion or dowry settled on a bride by the bridegroom's family against the event of her husband's prior decease.

V.iii.312. ray. Editors usually emend Q2's raie to raise, the reading of Brooke's Romeus and Juliet, which in turn would seem to be supported by Q1's erect. However, since Romeo's statue is to 'lie' by the side of Juliet's (l. 316), it is clear that in Shakespeare's play the proposed 'statues' are high relief figures on sarcophagi.

The Tragedy of Julius Caesar

Edited by
LAWRENCE MASON

Dramatis Personae

JULIUS CAESAR
OCTAVIUS CAESAR, MARCUS ANTONIUS, M. AEMILIUS LEPIDUS — Triumvirs after the Death of Julius Caesar
CICERO, PUBLIUS, POPILUS LENA — Senators
MARCUS BRUTUS, CAIUS CASSIUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, LIGARIUS, DECIUS BRUTUS, METELLUS CIMBER, CINNA — Conspirators against Julius Caesar
FLAVIUS AND MARULLUS, Tribunes
ARTEMIDORUS, a Sophist of Cnidos
A SOOTHSAYER
CINNA, a Poet
ANOTHER POET

LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, YOUNG CATO, VOLUMNIUS — Friends to Brutus and Cassius
VARRO, CLITUS, CLAUDIUS, STRATO, LUCIUS, DARDANIUS — Servants to Brutus
PINDARUS, Servant to Cassius

CALPURNIA, Wife to Caesar
PORTIA, Wife to Brutus

COMMONERS, OR PLEBEIANS, OF ROME; SENATORS, GUARDS, ATTENDANTS, ETC.

SCENE—Act I-IV, Scene i, at Rome; Act IV, Scenes ii and iii, near Sardis, in Asia Minor; Act V, the plains near Philippi, in Macedonia.

The Tragedy of Julius Caesar

Introduction

Sources of the Play

There were, of course, earlier plays in Elizabethan England on the subject of Cæsar's career (Henslowe's Diary attests their popularity in the 1590s) and they may well have influenced Shakespeare's work. For a careful study of these possibilities, see H. M. Ayres' 'Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar in the Light of Some Other Versions' (Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc. of America, 1910). Dr. A. Boecker also has put forward an elaborate effort to establish Shakespeare's indebtedness to Orlando Pescetti's 'Il Cesare,' a tragedy running to nearly four thousand lines of verse and published in Verona in 1594, 2d ed. 1604 ('A Probable Italian Source of Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar,' N. Y. Univ. Dissertation, 1913). But after all due allowances have been made for this sort of influence, and for the less important possibility of indebtedness to classic authors such as Appian, it still remains true that the great source of the play is 'The Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romanes, Compared together by that grave learned Philosopher and Historiographer, Plutarke of Chæronea: Translated out of Greeke into French by Iames Amyot ... and out of French into Englishe, by Thomas North. Imprinted at London ... 1579,' 2d ed. 1595, 3d ed. 1603. To this famous and splendid monument of Elizabethan prose Shakespeare owes the whole action or plot of the play, the separate incidents, many personal details of characterization, some few errors in fact, and occasional verbal suggestions: but his supreme skill in selecting, rejecting, combining, and arranging historical material has rarely been shown to better advantage than in his handling of the three 'Lives' on which he drew,—those, namely, of Cæsar, Brutus, and Antony; while his power of poetic and dramatic transformation will appear upon comparing Act III, Scene i with the following typical passage from North:

'For these things, they may seem to come by chance: but the place where the murther was prepared, and where the Senate were assembled, and where also there stood up an image of Pompey dedicated by him selfe amongest other ornaments which he gave unto the Theater: all these were manifest proofes, that it was the ordinaunce of some god that made this treason to be executed, specially in that very place. It is also reported that Cassius (though otherwise hee did favour the doctrine of Epicurus) beholding the image of Pompey, before they entred into the action of their traiterous enterprise; hee did softly call uppon it to aide him. But the instant danger of the present time, taking away his former reason, did sodainly put him into a furious passion, and made him like a man halfe besides him selfe. Now Antonius, that was a faithfull friend to Cæsar, and a valiant man besides of his handes, him Decius Brutus Albinus entertained out of the Senate house, having begunne a long tale of set purpose. So Cæsar comming into the house, all the Senate stood up on their feete to doe him honor. The part of Brutus company and confederates stoode round about Cæsars chayre, and part of them also came towardes him, as though they made sute with Metellus Cimber, to call home his brother againe from banishment: and thus prosecuting still their sute, they followed Cæsar, till hee was set in his chaire. Who, denying their petitions, and being offended with them one after an other, because the more they were denied the more they pressed uppon him, and were the earnester with him: Metellus at length, taking his gowne with both his hands, pulled it over his necke, which was the signe given the confederats to set uppon him. Then Casca, behinde him, strake him in the necke with his sword, howbeit the wound was not great nor mortall, because it seemed the feare of such a devilish attempt did amaze him and take his strength from him, that he killed him not at the first blow. But Cæsar turning straight unto him, caught hold of his sword, and held it hard: & they both cried out, Cæsar in Latin: O vile traitor Casca, what doest thou? And Casca in Greeke to his brother, brother, helpe mee. At the beginning of this stur, they that were present, not knowing of the conspiracy, were so amazed with the horrible sight they saw: they had no power to flie, neither to helpe him, not so much, as once to make an outcry. They on the other side that had conspired his death compassed him in on everie side with their swords drawen in their hands, that Cæsar turned him no where but hee was stricken at by some, and still had naked swords in his face, and was hacked and mangled among them, as a wilde beast taken of hunters. For it was agreede among them, that every man should give him a wound, because all their parts should be in this murther: and then Brutus gave him one.... Men report also, that Cæsar did still defende him selfe against the rest, running every way with his body: but when he saw Brutus with his sword drawen in his hand, then he pulled his gowne over his head, and made no more resistaunce, and was driven either casually, or purposedly, by the counsell of the conspirators, against the base whereupon Pompeys image stoode, which ran all of a goare bloud till he was slain. Thus it seemed that the image tooke just revenge of Pompeys enemy, being throwen downe on the ground at his feete, and yeelding up his ghost there, for the number of wounds he had upon him. For it is reported, that he had three and twenty wounds upon his body: and divers of the conspirators did hurt themselves, striking one body with so many blowes. When Cæsar was slaine, the Senate (though Brutus stood in the middest amongst them, as though he would have saied somewhat touching this fact) presently ran out of the house, and flying, filled all the city with marvellous feare and tumult.' (From 'The Life of Julius Cæsar,' North's 2d ed., 1595, as quoted by Furness, pp. 300, 301.)

The History of the Play

The earliest extant version of Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar is that found in the famous First Folio collected edition of his plays, published in 1623, which therefore necessarily forms the basis of all modern texts; for the only known Quarto editions belong to the late Restoration period and so, unfortunately, have little critical value for the solution of the problems presented by the original text. It seems fairly certain now that Julius Cæsar was written and first produced in 1599, for on the twenty-first of September in that year a German traveller witnessed a performance of what was presumably Shakespeare's play at the Globe Theatre (cf. 'Londoner Theater und Schauspiele im Jahre 1599,' G. Binz, Anglia, xxii, 456, 1899). The next performance that we can date seems to have taken place at court early in 1613, the next at St. James', January 31, 1636-7, and the next at the Cockpit, November 13, 1638; but that the popularity of the play was far greater than these meagre records suggest is attested by various kinds of evidence, from Henslowe's effort to capitalize its success by producing a rival Cæsar play, in 1602, to Digges' striking tribute prefixed to the First Folio.[1]

After the Restoration, Julius Cæsar is one of the three Shakespearean dramas listed by Downes ('Roscius Anglicanus,' 1708) among the 'Principal Old Stock Plays' given by Killigrew's company in the 1660s. Charles Hart (d. 1683), grandson of Shakespeare's sister Joan, was the great Brutus of this period, and was succeeded by the famous Thomas Betterton (1635?-1710); it is Betterton's cast that is given in the six Quarto editions published between 1684 and 1691, evidently printed as playgoers' guides (cf. 'Quarto Editions of Julius Cæsar,' by Miss H. C. Bartlett, The Library, 1913).

It is worthy of note that Julius Cæsar is one of the few Shakespearean plays that escaped mutilation at the hands of so-called adapters or revisers, during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, for the abortive efforts in 1719 and 1722 had no success or significance (cf. F. W. Kilbourne's 'Alterations and Adaptations of Shakespeare,' Boston, 1906). A plausible sketch by Miss C. Porter ('How Shakespeare Set and Struck the Scene for Julius Cæsar in 1599,' Mod. Lang. Notes, 1916) gives a pleasant glimpse into Elizabethan stage procedure, and William Winter's 'Shakespeare on the Stage' (Second Series, 1915) supplies many illuminating hints about the stage 'business' in succeeding and modern productions; while Brander Matthews ('Shaksperian Stage Traditions' in 'Shaksperian Studies,' Columbia Univ. Press, 1916) gives a spirited picture of the Meiningen company's remarkable presentation of the Forum scene and Antony's oration.

In the early eighteenth century Robert Wilks (1665?-1732), the friend of Farquhar, was a brilliant Antony, while Barton Booth (1681-1733) and James Quin (1693-1766) excelled as Brutus. Garrick never acted in Julius Cæsar, but his rival, Spranger Barry (1719-1777), was a most moving Antony. The famous Peg Woffington (1714?-1760) appeared as Portia in several performances about 1750, but because the part is such a minor one it has not been taken by many great actresses since then. Coming down to the nineteenth century, we find all the greatest actors appearing in the play. The Kembles and Young, Macready and Davenport, Wallack, Charles Kean, J. B. Booth, Samuel Phelps, and Beerbohm Tree have all presented one or more of the four leading rôles. The first American performance was given at Charleston, S. C., April 20, 1774. Edwin Forrest and John Edward McCullough are also associated with the play, as are Tyrone Power, William Faversham, and Robert Bruce Mantell in our own time; but the crowning achievement in America's production of Julius Cæsar will always be the magnificent double triumph of Edwin Booth and Lawrence Barrett, in the '60s, '70s, and '80s, with honorable mention, perhaps, of Richard Mansfield's sombre portrayal of Brutus' tragic loneliness, beginning October 14, 1902. It is not easy nowadays to realize the power and effectiveness attributed by tradition to these great players of the past, but fortunately it is still possible to gain some impression of Edwin Booth's thrilling personal magnetism and manifest genius from the inspired portrait by John S. Sargent in the Players' Club, New York City.

1 'The Shakespeare Allusion-Book' lists ten (should be eleven? Digges, p. 318, is not indexed) references to Julius Cæsar down to 1649, and twenty-five more between 1650 and 1700.

Act First ❧ Scene First

[Rome. A Street]

Enter Flavius, Marullus, and certain Commoners over the Stage.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home:
Is this a holiday? What! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day without the sign
Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?
Car. Why, sir, a carpenter.
Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?
What dost thou with thy best apparel on?
You, sir, what trade are you?
Cob. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman,
I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.
Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.
Cob. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.
Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?
Cob. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.
Mar. What mean'st thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow?
Cob. Why, sir, cobble you.
Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?
Cob. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork.
Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day?
Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?
Cob. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday to see Cæsar and to rejoice in his triumph.
Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?
What tributaries follow him to Rome
To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!
O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft
Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,
Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The livelong day, with patient expectation,
To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his chariot but appear,
Have you not made a universal shout,
That Tiber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds.
Made in her concave shores?
And do you now put on your best attire?
And do you now cull out a holiday?
And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?
Be gone!
Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.
Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and for this fault
Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

Exeunt all the Commoners.

See whether their basest metal be not mov'd;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;
This way will I. Disrobe the images
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.
Mar. May we do so?
You know it is the feast of Lupercal.
Flav. It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of men
And keep us all in servile fearfulness. Exeunt.

Scene One S. d. Marullus; cf. n. 3 mechanical: of the laboring class walk: go about the streets 4, 5 sign . . . profession: artisan's garb and implements 10 in respect of: in comparison with 11 cobbler: bungler 12 directly: plainly, without evasion 15 naughty: wicked, worthless 17 out: out of temper 18 be out: have hole in shoe 23 with awl; cf. n. 26 proper: goodly, worthy 27 neat's leather: cowhide 32 triumph; cf. n. 45 her; cf. n. 46 replication: echo 50 cull out: choose this as

❧ Scene Second ❧

[A Public Place]

Enter [in solemn procession, with music] Cæsar, Antony for the course, Calpurnia, Portia, Decius, Cicero, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, [a great crowd following, among them] a Soothsayer: after them Marullus and Flavius.

Cæs. Calpurnia!
Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks. [Music ceases.]
Cæs. Calpurnia!
Cal. Here, my lord.
Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius' way
When he doth run his course. Antonius!
Ant. Cæsar, my lord.
Cæs. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calpurnia; for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterile curse.
Ant. I shall remember:
When Cæsar says 'Do this,' it is perform'd.
Cæs. Set on; and leave no ceremony out. [Music.]
Sooth. Cæsar!
Cæs. Ha! Who calls?
Casca. Bid every noise be still: peace yet again!

[Music ceases.]

Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on me?
I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry 'Cæsar.' Speak; Cæsar is turn'd to hear.

52 Pompey's blood; cf. n. on line 32 66 ceremonies: ceremonial trappings 68 Lupercal; cf. n. 74 pitch: height, as of a hawk's flight 8 in . . . speed: as you run 11 sterile curse: affliction of barrenness 14 Set on: proceed, advance

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.
Cæs. What man is that?
Bru. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.
Cæs. Set him before me; let me see his face.
Cas. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Cæsar.
Cæs. What sayst thou to me now? Speak once again.
Sooth. Beware the ides of March.
Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him: pass.
Sennet. Exeunt all but Brutus and Cassius.
Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?
Bru. Not I.
Cas. I pray you, do.
Bru. I am not gamesome: I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
I'll leave you.
Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have:
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.
Bru. Cassius,
Be not deceiv'd: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviours;
But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd,—
Among which number, Cassius, be you one,—
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.
Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?
Bru. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.
Cas. 'Tis just:
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard
Where many of the best respect in Rome,—
Except immortal Cæsar,—speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.
Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?
Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear;
And, since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laugher, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester; if you know
That I do fawn on men and hug them hard,
And after scandal them; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.
Flourish, and shout.
Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear the people
Choose Cæsar for their king.
Cas. Ay, do you fear it?
Then must I think you would not have it so.
Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well.
But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.
Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.
I was born free as Cæsar; so were you:
We both have fed as well, and we can both
Endure the winter's cold as well as he:
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores,
Cæsar said to me, 'Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?' Upon the word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in
And bade him follow; so, indeed he did.
The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside
And stemming it with hearts of controversy;
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,
Cæsar cried, 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink!'
I, as Æneas, our great ancestor,
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber
Did I the tired Cæsar. And this man
Is now become a god, and Cassius is
A wretched creature and must bend his body
If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And when the fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake; 'tis true, this god did shake;
His coward lips did from their colour fly,

21 ides of March: March fifteenth S. d. Sennet: trumpet signal for procession to move 29 order of the course: progress of the running 32 gamesome: fond of sport 33 quick: lively 36 do observe: have had occasion to notice 37 that: the same 39, 40 handle your friend too stiffly and distantly 42 Be not deceiv'd: do not misjudge me 44 Merely: altogether 45 of . . . difference: conflicting 46 proper: belonging, relating 47 soil: blemish 50 construe: read meaning into 54 By . . . whereof: because of which mistake 59 just: true, right 64 respect: standing 67 had . . . eyes: had his eyes about him

76 jealous on: suspicious of 78 stale: make cheap ordinary: customary 79 protester: loud-mouthed pretender 81 scandal: defame 82 profess myself: make protestations S. d. Flourish: trumpet call 93 indifferently: impartially 94 speed: favor, prosper 97 favour: appearance 107 with: against 111 Accountred: clad 115 hearts of controversy: contesting courage 128 his lips forsook their normal redness as cowardly soldiers forsake their flag

And that same eye whose bend doth awe the world
Did lose his lustre; I did hear him groan;
Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the Romans
Mark him and write his speeches in their books,
Alas! it cried, 'Give me some drink, Titinius',
As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone. Shout. Flourish.
Bru. Another general shout!
I do believe that these applauses are
For some new honours that are heap'd on Cæsar.
Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
Brutus and Cæsar: what should be in that 'Cæsar'?
Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well;
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em,
'Brutus' will start a spirit as soon as 'Cæsar'.
Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd!
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
When went there by an age, since the great flood,
But it was fam'd with more than with one man?
When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,
That her wide walks encompass'd but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man.
O, you and I have heard our fathers say,
There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd
Th' eternal devil to keep his state in Rome
As easily as a king.
Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;
What you would work me to, I have some aim:
How I have thought of this and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter; for this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any further mov'd. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say
I will with patience hear, and find a time
Both meet to hear and answer such high things.
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a villager
Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.
Cas. I am glad
That my weak words have struck but thus much show
Of fire from Brutus.
Bru. The games are done and Cæsar is returning.
Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve,
And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Enter Cæsar and his Train.

Bru. I will do so. But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train:
Calpurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.
Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.
Cæs. Antonius!
Ant. Cæsar.
Cæs. Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights.
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.
Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not dangerous;
He is a noble Roman, and well given.
Cæs. Would he were fatter! but I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much;
He is a great observer, and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men; he loves no plays,
As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music;
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mov'd to smile at anything.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease
Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd
Than what I fear, for always I am Cæsar.
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.
Sennet. Exeunt Cæsar and his Train [except Casca].
Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me?
Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd to-day,
That Cæsar looks so sad.
Casca. Why, you were with him, were you not?
Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd.
Casca. Why, there was a crown offered him; and, being offered him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a-shouting.
Bru. What was the second noise for?
Casca. Why, for that too.
Cas. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?
Casca. Why, for that too.
Bru. Was the crown offered him thrice?
Casca. Ay, marry, was 't, and he put it by thrice, every

129 bend: glance 130 his: its 135 temper: constitution 136 get the start of: outstrip (in the race of life) 142 Colossus: gigantic statue astride the mouth of the harbor of Rhodes 157 lost . . . bloods: lost the art of breeding noble persons 158 the great flood: Deucalion's, not Noah's 159 fam'd with: famous for 161 walks; cf. n. 162 Rome: then often pronounced 'Room' 165 Brutus: Lucius Junius, who expelled the Tarquins, ca. 510 B. C. brook'd: tolerated 166 state: throne, rulership 168 nothing: not at all jealous: doubtful 169 work: induce aim: inkling 172 so: if; cf. n. 173 mov'd: persuaded, urged 176 meet: fit 177 chew: ponder 180 as: such as

193 ferret: ferret-like, i.e., small and red 195 conference: debate 200 Sleek-headed: unruffled by deep plotting 204 well given: well disposed 206 my name; cf. n. 211 he . . . music; cf. n. 216 Whiles: whilst, while 225 sad: grave, serious 236 marry: properly an invocation of the Virgin

time gentler than other; and at every putting-by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offered him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown; yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets; and, as I told you, he put it by once; but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again; then he put it by again; but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; he put it the third time by; and still as he refused it the rabblement shouted and clapped their chopped hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swounded and fell down at it: and for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But soft, I pray you: what! did Cæsar swound?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like: he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I, And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet and offered them his throat to cut. An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said anything amiss, he desired their worships to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, 'Alas, good soul!' and forgave him with all their hearts: but there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say anything?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again; but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too; Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so. Farewell, both. Exit.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!
He was quick mettle when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now in execution
Of any bold or noble enterprise,
However he puts on this tardy form.
This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you:
To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,
I will come home to you; or, if you will,
Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so: till then, think of the world.

Exit Brutus.

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,
Thy honourable metal may be wrought
From that it is dispos'd: therefore 'tis meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes;
For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd?
Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus:
If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius,
He should not humour me. I will this night,
In several hands, in at his windows throw,
As if they came from several citizens,
Writings all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely
Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at:
And after this let Cæsar seat him sure;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure. Exit.

Scene Third

[A Street]

Thunder and lightning. Enter [from opposite sides] Casca [with his sword drawn] and Cicero.

Cic. Good even, Casca: brought you Cæsar home?
Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth
Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero!
I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds
Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen
The ambitious ocean swell and rage and foam,
To be exalted with the threat'ning clouds:
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.
Either there is a civil strife in heaven,
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you anything more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave—you know him well by sight—
Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn

245 coronets: laurel garland of a Lupercal runner 250 still: always ever 251 chopped: chopped, callous 253 swounded: fainted 256 soft: stop, wait 259 like: likely falling-sickness: epilepsy 263 tag-rag: beggarly, common 265 true: honest 268 me: expletive 'dative of interest' 269 ope: open doublet: Elizabethan jacket An: if 270 occupation: artisan's calling 287, 288 put to silence: dismissed, not killed 291 I have a previous engagement (to dine out)

298 quick mettle: high-spirited 301 However: notwithstanding that tardy form: sluggish manner 309 the world: public affairs 312 that: that to which 315 bear me hard: dislike me 317 He . . . me: cf. n. 318 several hands: different handwritings 324 or . . . endure: or suffer disastrous consequences of our attempt 1 brought: escorted 3 sway: settled order 14 more: else (or, extraordinarily)

Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.
Besides,—I have not since put up my sword,—
Against the Capitol I met a lion,
Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me; and there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women,
Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw
Men all in fire walk up and down the streets.
And yesterday the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say,
'These are their reasons, they are natural';
For, I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.
Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.
Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow?
Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius
Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.
Cic. Good-night then, Casca: this disturbed sky
Is not to walk in.
Casca. Farewell, Cicero. Exit Cicero.

Enter Cassius.

Cas. Who's there?
Casca. A Roman.
Cas. Casca, by your voice.
Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this!
Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.
Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so?
Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.
For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night,
And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone;
And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open
The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.
Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?
It is the part of men to fear and tremble
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.
Cas. You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life
That should be in a Roman you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the heavens;
But if you would consider the true cause
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind,
Why old men, fools, and children calculate,
Why all these things change from their ordinance,
Their natures, and pre-formed faculties,
To monstrous quality,—why, you shall find
That heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits
To make them instruments of fear and warning
Unto some monstrous state.
Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man
Most like this dreadful night,
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars
As doth the lion in the Capitol,
A man no mightier than thyself or me
In personal action, yet prodigious grown
And fearful as these strange eruptions are.
Casca. 'Tis Cæsar that you mean; is it not, Cassius?
Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors;
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;
Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.
Casca. Indeed, they say the senators to-morrow
Mean to establish Cæsar as a king;
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.
Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger then;
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit:
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear
I can shake off at pleasure. Thunder still.
Casca. So can I:
So every bondman is his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.
Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant then?
Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire
Begin it with weak straws; what trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief,
Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak this
Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made: but I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.
Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such a man
That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, my hand:
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far

18 sensible of: vulnerable by, sensitive to 22, 23 drawn . . . heap: crowded together in a body 26 bird of night: owl 32 climate: clime, region point upon: apply to 33 strange-disposed: of strange character 34 after . . . fashion: according to men's own human predilection 35 Clean . . . purpose: quite apart from the true meaning 39 sky: air, state of weather 45 what night: what a night 51 unbraced: with doublet open 52 thunder-stone: supposedly cast from the sky by thunder 63 put on: exhibit the signs of cast . . . in: give way to; cf. n. 66 Why: i.e., why we have (or, . . . are acting so) 67 from . . . kind: far from their proper character and nature

68 calculate: prophesy; cf. n. 69 ordinance: ordinary conduct 74 monstrous state: unnatural state of affairs 81 fearful: inspiring fear eruptions: freaks of nature 85 woe the while: alas for the times 87 yoke and sufferance: patience under the yoke 110 hinds: female of red deer; also, servants, rustics 111–115 Cf. n. 118 My . . . made: I shall have to answer for my words 121 That: as fleering: mocking Hold, my hand: here, take this handclasp as pledge 122 factious: active griefs: grievances

As who goes furthest.
Cas. There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know by this they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night,
There is no stir, or walking in the streets;
And the complexion of the element
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.
Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.
Cas. 'Tis Cinna; I do know him by his gait:
He is a friend.

Enter Cinna.

Cinna, where haste you so?
Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?
Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?
Cin. I am glad on 't. What a fearful night is this!
There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.
Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me.
Cin. Yes, you are.
O Cassius, if you could
But win the noble Brutus to our party—
Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper,
And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this
In at his window; set this up with wax
Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done,
Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.
Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?
Cin. All but Metellus Cimber; and he's gone
To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.
Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.
Exit Cinna.
Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire
Upon the next encounter yields him ours.
Casca. O, he sits high in all the people's hearts:
And that which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue and to worthiness.
Cas. Him and his worth and our great need of him
You have right well conceited. Let us go,
For it is after midnight; and ere day
We will awake him and be sure of him.
Exeunt.

128 undergo: undertake 130 by this: by this time 131 Pompey's porch; cf. n. 133 complexion . . . element: visible condition of the sky 136 Stand close: avoid notice 141 incorporate: joined, affiliated 150 prætor's chair: official seat of judge in Roman tribunal 157 hie: hasten away 165 countenance: patronage, support alchemy: pseudo-science of transmuting metals 169 conceited: expressed figuratively

Act Second ❧ Scene First

Enter Brutus in his Orchard.

Bru. What, Lucius! ho!
I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say!
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.
When, Lucius, when? Awake, I say! what, Lucius!

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?
Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here.
Luc. I will, my lord.
Exit.
Bru. It must be by his death: and, for my part,
I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crown'd:
How that might change his nature, there's the question:
It is the bright day that brings forth the adder;
And that craves wary walking. Crown him that,
And then, I grant, we put a sting in him
That at his will he may do danger with.
The abuse of greatness is when it disjoins
Remorse from power; and, to speak truth of Cæsar,
I have not known when his affections sway'd
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may:
Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel
Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities;
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg
Which hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous,
And kill him in the shell.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found
This paper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure
It did not lie there when I went to bed.
Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?
Luc. I know not, sir.
Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.
Luc. I will, sir.
Bru. The exhalations whizzing in the air
Give so much light that I may read by them.
Opens the letter, and reads.
'Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake, and see thyself.

Scene First S. d. Orchard: garden 5 When: exclamation of impatience 11 spurn at: oppose vindictively 12 general: people's sake, public welfare 15 Crown him that; cf. n. 19 Remorse: mercy, conscience 20 affections: passions 21 proof: proved experience 26 degrees: steps, rungs 28 prevent: be beforehand quarrel: attack on him, accusation 29 colour: justification 30 Fashion: put, formulate 31 these and these: such and such 33 as his kind: as is the nature of his species 35 closet: study 44 exhalations: meteors

Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!
Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake!'
Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up.
'Shall Rome, &c.' Thus must I piece it out:
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What, Rome?
My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.
'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated
To speak, and strike? O Rome, I make thee promise:
If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days. Knocking within.
Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate: somebody knocks. [Exit Lucius.]
Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept.
Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is
Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
The genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.
Bru. Is he alone?
Luc. No, sir, there are moe with him.
Bru. Do you know them?
Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,
And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them.
By any mark of favour.
Bru. Let 'em enter. [Exit Lucius.]
They are the faction. O conspiracy,
Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by night,
When evils are most free? O then by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy;
Hide it in smiles and affability:
For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the Conspirators, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Cinna, Metellus, and Trebonius.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest:
Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?
Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all night.
Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here
But honours you; and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.
Bru. He is welcome hither.
Cas. This, Decius Brutus.
Bru. He is welcome too.
Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna;
And this, Metellus Cimber.
Bru. They are all welcome.
What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?
Cas. Shall I entreat a word?
[Brutus and Cassius] whisper.
Dec. Here lies the east: doth not the day break here?
Casca. No.
Cin. O pardon, sir, it doth; and yon grey lines
That fret the clouds are messengers of day.
Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd.
Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence up higher toward the north
He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.
Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.
Cas. And let us swear our resolution.
Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of men,
The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,—
If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough
To kindle cowards and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women, then, countrymen,
What need we any spur but our own cause
To prick us to redress? what other bond
Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word
And will not palter? and what other oath
Than honesty to honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?
Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous,
Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs: unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt; but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor th' insuppressive mettle of our spirits,
To think that or our cause or our performance
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,

58 Thy full petition: full measure of what thou askest 59 fourteen; cf. n. 61, 62 Cf. n. 64 motion: instigation, inception 65 phantasma: vision, phantasmagoria 66 genius: the guardian spirit, within man mortal instruments: human faculties 70 brother: he had married Brutus' sister, Junia 73 moe: more, others 79 mark of favour: trait of countenance 80 faction: band of conspirators 86 path: walk, proceed native: natural on: being on 87 Erebus: gloomy region leading to Hades (the name signifies 'darkness') 88 prevention: being forestalled 89 bold: i.e., in intruding 93 and no: and there is no 110 fret: chequer 112 as: where 113 growing on: tending toward 114 Weighing: on account of 118 all over: successively 120 face of men: mute appeal in the people's looks 121 sufferance: suffering, distress the . . . abuse: abuses of the time 122 betimes: before it's too late 124 high-sighted: haughty 125 lottery: arbitrary decree 129 What: why 131 Than secret: than that of resolute 132 palter: play fast and loose 135 cautelous: crafty, deceitful 136 carrions: wretches no better than soulless carcasses suffering: long-suffering 139 even: just 140 insuppressive: irrepressible 141 or . . . or: either . . . or 144 Is individually condemned as illegitimate

If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.
Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?
I think he will stand very strong with us.
Casca. Let us not leave him out.
Cin. No, by no means.
Met. O let us have him; for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:
It shall be said his judgment rul'd our hands;
Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.
Bru. O name him not: let us not break with him;
For he will never follow anything
That other men begin.
Cas. Then leave him out.
Casca. Indeed he is not fit.
Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar?
Cas. Decius, well urg'd. I think it is not meet,
Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar,
Should outlive Cæsar: we shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and you know, his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all; which to prevent,
Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.
Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,
To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,
Like wrath in death and envy afterwards;
For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar.
Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar;
And in the spirit of men there is no blood:
O then that we could come by Cæsar's spirit,
And not dismember Cæsar! But, alas,
Cæsar must bleed for it. And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds:
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make
Our purpose necessary and not envious;
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
And, for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm
When Cæsar's head is off.
Cas. Yet I fear him;
For in the ingrafted love he bears to Cæsar—
Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him.
If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himself: take thought, and die for Cæsar.
And that were much he should, for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.
Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not die:
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter. Clock strikes.
Bru. Peace! count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three.
Treb. 'Tis time to part.
Cas. But it is doubtful yet
Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day or no;
For he is superstitious grown of late,
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies.
It may be, these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.
Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolv'd,
I can o'ersway him; for he loves to hear
That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
Lions with toils, and men with flatterers;
But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does, being then most flattered.
Let me work;
For I can give his humour the true bent,
And I will bring him to the Capitol.
Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.
Bru. By the eighth hour: is that the uttermost.
Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.
Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey:
I wonder none of you have thought of him.
Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him:
He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.
Cas. The morning comes upon 's: we'll leave you, Brutus.
And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember
What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.
Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
Let not our looks put on our purposes,
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untir'd spirits and formal constancy:
And so good morrow to you every one.

Exeunt. Manet Brutus.

Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter;
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber:
Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus, my lord!
Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?
It is not for your health thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.
Por. Nor for yours neither. You've ungently, Brutus,
Stole from my bed; and yesternight at supper
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing and sighing, with your arms across,
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,

157 break with: broach our plan to 165 of: in 166 shrewd contriver: malevolent plotter 167 improve: make the most of 168 annoy: seriously injure 172 envy: vindictiveness 193 ingrafted: deeply rooted 196 Is to: concerns, affects, only take thought: despond 197 that . . . should: even that would be more than might be expected 199 fear: cause for fear

207 from . . . main: changed from the general 209 apparent: manifest 215 trees: by luring them to drive their horns too firmly into trees 216 glasses: mirrors, to distract their attention holes: pitfalls 217 toils: nets, snares 221 humour: disposition; cf. n. on line 250 224 uttermost: latest 227 rated: berated, reprimanded 229 by him: by his house 231 fashion: like modern 'whip into shape' 238 formal constancy: dignified self-possession 242 figures: pictures created by imagination

You star'd upon me with ungentle looks.
I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot;
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not,
But with an angry wafture of your hand
Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatience
Which seem'd too much enkindled, and withal
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep,
And could it work so much upon your shape
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.
Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.
Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,
He would embrace the means to come by it.
Bru. Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed.
Por. Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
To walk unbraced and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What! is Brutus sick,
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed
To dare the vile contagion of the night,
And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of; and, upon my knees,
I charm you, by my once-commended beauty,
By all your vows of love, and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, your self, your half,
Why you are heavy, and what men to-night
Have had resort to you; for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.
Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.
Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted I should know no secrets
That appertain to you? Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort or limitation,
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs
Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.
Bru. You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.
Por. If this were true then should I know this secret.
I grant I am a woman, but, withal,
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife;
I grant I am a woman, but, withal,
A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter.
Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em.
I have made a strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound,
Here, in the thigh: can I bear that with patience
And not my husband's secrets?
Bru. O ye gods,
Render me worthy of this noble wife! Knock [within].
Hark, hark! one knocks. Portia, go in awhile;
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.
All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows.
Leave me with haste. Exit Portia.
Lucius, who's that knocks?

Enter Lucius and Ligarius.

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you.
Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spoke of.
Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius! how?
Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.
Bru. O what a time have you chose out, brave Caius,
To wear a kerchief! Would you were not sick!
Lig. I am not sick if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour.
Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.
Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before,
I here discard my sickness! Soul of Rome,
Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins,
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible;
Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?
Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.
Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick?
Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee as we are going
To whom it must be done.
Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fir'd I follow you,
To do I know not what; but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on. Thunder.
Bru. Follow me then. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Cæsar's House]
Thunder and lightning. Enter Julius Cæsar in his night-gown.

Cas. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace tonight:
Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out,
'Help, ho! They murder Cæsar!' Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord!

262 humour; cf. n. 265, 266 (outward) shape, (inward) condition 273 physical: healthful 278 rheumy: causing rheumatic diseases unpurged: unpurified by the sun 280 sick offence: unhealthy trouble 283 charm: conjure, entreat 296 in . . . limitation: only after a fashion or with restrictions 305 withal: with this saving reservation 308 Cato: Marcus Porcius Cato, 'of Utica'

321 engagements: undertakings that I stand committed to construe: explain 322 charactery: writing, message 324 who's: who is it 328 Vouchsafe: vouchsafe to receive 330 kerchief: swathing for the head of the sick 338 exorcist: magician 339 mortified: deadened 346 To whom: to him to whom SCENE TWO S. d. night-gown: dressing-gown

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.
Serv. I will, my lord. Exit.

Enter Calpurnia.

Cal. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?
You shall not stir out of your house to-day.
Cæs. Cæsar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me
Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see
The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.
Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies,
Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelped in the streets;
And graves have yawn'd and yielded up their dead;
Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol;
The noise of battle hurtled in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.
O Cæsar, these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.
Cæs. What can be avoided
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions
Are to the world in general as to Cæsar.
Cal. When beggars die there are no comets seen;
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.
Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear;
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Enter a Servant.

What say the augurers?
Serv. They would not have you to stir forth to-day.
Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.
Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:
Cæsar should be a beast without a heart
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
No, Cæsar shall not; danger knows full well
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he:
We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible:
And Cæsar shall go forth.
Cal. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: call it my fear
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house,
And he shall say you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.
Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not well;
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.
Dec. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar:
I come to fetch you to the senate-house.
Cæs. And you are come in very happy time
To bear my greeting to the senators,
And tell them that I will not come to-day:
Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, falser;
I will not come to-day: tell them so, Decius.
Cal. Say he is sick.
Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far
To be afeard to tell greybeards the truth?
Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come.
Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some cause,
Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.
Cæs. The cause is in my will: I will not come;
That is enough to satisfy the senate:
But for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know:
Calpurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:
She dreamt to-night she saw my statue,
Which, like a fountain with a hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it:
And these does she apply for warnings and portents,
And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day.
Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision fair and fortunate:
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood, and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This by Calpurnia's dream is signified.
Cæs. And this way have you well expounded it.
Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say;
And know it now: the senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock
Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
'Break up the senate till another time,
When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams.'
If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper,
'Lo, Cæsar is afraid'?
Pardon me, Cæsar; for my dear dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this,
And reason to my love is liable.
Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calpurnia!
I am ashamed I did yield to them.
Give me my robe, for I will go.

5 present: immediate 6 success: the future 13 stood on ceremonies: laid stress on omens 20 right form: regular formations 22 hurtled: emitted sounds of conflict, clashed 25 use: previous experience 28 end: accomplishment 30 Are to: are as applicable to 52 confidence: over-confidence

59 humour: whim, caprice 79 stays: keeps 92 press: crowd about 93 tinctures: healing medicines; cf. n. stains: assimilable traces (tinges) of Cæsar's qualities relics: i.e., religious benefits cognizance: heraldic emblems, i.e. social benefits 100 mock: gibe 107 proceeding: career 108 liable: subservient

Enter Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Casca, Trebonius, Cinna, and Publius.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.
Pub. Good morrow, Cæsar.
Cæs. Welcome, Publius.
What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?
Good morrow, Casca. Caius Ligarius,
Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy
As that same ague which hath made you lean.
What is 't o'clock?
Bru. Cæsar, 'tis strucken eight.
Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter Antony.

See, Antony, that revels long o' nights,
Is notwithstanding up. Good morrow, Antony.
Ant. So to most noble Cæsar.
Cæs. Bid them prepare within:
I am to blame to be thus waited for.
Now, Cinna; now, Metellus; what, Trebonius,
I have an hour's talk in store for you;
Remember that you call on me to-day:
Be near me, that I may remember you.
Treb. Cæsar, I will:—[Aside.] and so near will I be,
That your best friends shall wish I had been further.
Cæs. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me;
And we, like friends, will straightway go together.
Bru. [Aside.] That every 'like' is not 'the same,' O Cæsar,
The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A Street near the Capitol]
Enter Artemidorus [reading a paper].

Art. 'Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar. If thou beest not immortal, look about you: security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover,

ARTEMIDORUS.'

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this.
My heart laments that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.
If thou read this, O Cæsar, thou mayest live;
If not, the Fates with traitors do contrive. Exit.

Scene Fourth

[Another part of the same Street, before the house of Brutus]
Enter Portia and Lucius.

Por. I prithee, boy, run to the senate-house;
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.
Why dost thou stay?
Luc. To know my errand, madam.
Por. I would have had thee there, and here again,
Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there.
O constancy, be strong upon my side;
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue;
I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.
How hard it is for women to keep counsel!
Art thou here yet?
Luc. Madam, what shall I do?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?
And so return to you, and nothing else?
Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,
For he went sickly forth; and take good note
What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to him.
Hark, boy! what noise is that?
Luc. I hear none, madam.
Por. Prithee, listen well:
I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.
Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow: which way hast thou been?
Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.
Por. What is 't o'clock?
Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.
Por. Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitol?
Sooth. Madam, not yet: I go to take my stand,
To see him pass on to the Capitol.
Por. Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thou not?
Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please Cæsar
To be so good to Cæsar as to hear me,
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.
Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?
Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.
Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:
The throng that follows Cæsar at the heels,
Of senators, of prætors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death:
I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Cæsar as he comes along. Exit.
Por. I must go in. Ay me! how weak a thing
The heart of woman is. O Brutus,
The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise!
Sure, the boy heard me.—Brutus hath a suit
That Cæsar will not grant.—O, I grow faint.—
Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord;
Say I am merry: come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee. Exeunt.

136 Cf. n. 137 yearns: grieves 6 security gives way: unguardedness yields opportunity 7 lover: friend 12 Out . . . teeth: free from the bite emulation: grudging jealousy

23 Sooth: in truth 42 void: open

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Before the Capitol]

Flourish. Enter Cæsar, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Metellus, Trebonius, Cinna, Antony, Lepidus, Artemidorus, [Popilius,] Publius, the Soothsayer [and Others].

Cæs. [To the Soothsayer.] The ides of March are come.
Sooth. Ay, Cæsar; but not gone.
Art. Hail, Cæsar! Read this schedule.
Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read,
At your best leisure, this his humble suit.
Art. O Cæsar, read mine first; for mine's a suit
That touches Cæsar nearer. Read it, great Cæsar.
Cæs. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd.
Art. Delay not, Cæsar; read it instantly.
Cæs. What, is the fellow mad?
Pub. Sirrah, give place.
Cæs. What, urge you your petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol.

[Cæsar goes up to the Senate-House, the rest following.]

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.
Cas. What enterprise, Popilius?
Pop. Fare you well.
[Advances to Cæsar.]
Bru. What said Popilius Lena?
Cas. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive.
I fear our purpose is discovered.
Bru. Look, how he makes to Cæsar: mark him.
Cas. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.
Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known,
Cassius or Cæsar never shall turn back,
For I will slay myself.
Bru. Cassius, be constant:
Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;
For, look, he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change.
Cas. Trebonius knows his time; for, look you, Brutus,
He draws Mark Antony out of the way.
[Exeunt Antony and Trebonius.]
Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go,
And presently prefer his suit to Cæsar.
Bru. He is address'd; press near and second him.
Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.
Cæs. Are we all ready? What is now amiss,
That Cæsar and his senate must redress?
Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cæsar,
Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
A humble heart,— [Kneeling.]
Cæs. I must prevent thee, Cimber.
These couchings and these lowly courtesies,
Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
And turn pre-ordinance and first decree
Into the law of children. Be not fond,
To think that Cæsar bears such rebel blood
That will be thaw'd from the true quality
With that which melteth fools; I mean sweet words,
Low-crooked curtsies, and base spaniel fawning.
Thy brother by decree is banished:
If thou dost bend and pray and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.
Know, Cæsar doth not wrong, nor without cause
Will he be satisfied.
Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own,
To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear
For the repealing of my banish'd brother?
Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Cæsar;
Desiring thee, that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.
Cæs. What, Brutus!
Cas. Pardon, Cæsar; Cæsar, pardon:
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.
Cæs. I could be well mov'd if I were as you;
If I could pray to move, prayers would move me:
But I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.
The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,
They are all fire and every one doth shine,
But there's but one in all doth hold his place:
So, in the world; 'tis furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
Yet in the number I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshak'd of motion: and that I am he
Let me a little show it, even in this,
That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
And constant do remain to keep him so.
Cin. O Cæsar,—
Cæs. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?
Dec. Great Cæsar,—
Cæs. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?
Casca. Speak, hands, for me! They stab Cæsar.
Cæs. Et tu, Brute? Then fall, Cæsar! Dies.
Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!
Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.
Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out,
'Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!'
Bru. People and senators, be not affrighted;
Fly not; stand still; ambition's debt is paid.
[Exeunt all but the Conspirators and Publius.]
Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.
Dec. And Cassius too.
Bru. Where's Publius?
Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.
Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's
Should chance—
Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius, good cheer;
There is no harm intended to your person,
Nor to no Roman else; so tell them, Publius.
Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people,
Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

SCENE FIRST S. d. Before . . . Capitol; cf. n. 3 schedule: written scroll 8 serv'd: attended to 25 constant: unmoved 31 prefer: present, offer 32 address'd: ready 40 couchings: prostrations courtesies: bowings 42 pre-ordinance: what is already ordained 43 law of children: arbitrary uncertainty fond: foolish 44 rebel: ungovernable 46 With: by

47 Low-crooked: low-bending curtsies: same as 'courtesies,' line 40 spaniel: servile, obsequious 51, 52 Cf. n. 55 repealing: free, unconditional recall 58 freedom of repeal: free, unconditional recall 64 Cf. n. 66 resting: stationary 68 painted: decorated 72 apprehensive: intelligent 74 holds on: maintains rank: position 82 bootless: unavailingly 87 common pulpits: public rostra 97 good cheer: be of good cheer, undismayed

Bru. Do so; and let no man abide this deed
But we the doers. [Exit Publius.]

Enter Trebonius.

Cas. Where is Antony?
Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd.
Men, wives, and children stare, cry out, and run,
As it were doomsday.
Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures.
That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time
And drawing days out, that men stand upon.
Casca. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.
Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:
So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop,
And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords:
Then walk we forth, even to the market-place;
And waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
Let's all cry, 'Peace, freedom, and liberty!'
Cas. Stoop, then, and wash. How many ages hence
Shall this our lofty scene be acted over,
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!
Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport,
That now on Pompey's basis lies along,
No worthier than the dust!
Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave their country liberty.
Dec. What, shall we forth?
Cas. Ay, every man away:
Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels
With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft, who comes here? A friend of Antony's.
Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving:
Say I love Brutus, and I honour him;
Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd him.
If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus
Thorough the hazards of this untrod state
With all true faith. So says my master Antony.
Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman;
I never thought him worse.
Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,
Depart untouch'd.
Serv. I'll fetch him presently. Exit Servant.
Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.
Cas. I wish we may: but yet have I a mind
That fears him much; and my misgiving still
Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Enter Antony.

Bru. But here comes Antony. Welcome, Mark Antony.
Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death's hour, nor no instrument
Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich
With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if ye bear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die:
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.
Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
As, by our hands and this our present act,
You see we do, yet see you but our hands
And this the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome—
As fire drives out fire, so pity pity—
Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony:
Our arms in strength of malice, and our hearts
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.
Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's
In the disposing of new dignities.
Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.
Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand:
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours, Metellus;
Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca, yours;
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.
Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward or a flatterer.
That I did love thee, Cæsar, O 'tis true:

103 abide: pay the penalty for 106 wives: women 110 drawing ... out: prolonging their life stand upon: lay stress on, worry about 125 Pompey's basis: pedestal of Pompey's statue along: outstretched 128 knot: group 143 resolv'd: convinced, satisfied 148 Thorough: throughout untrod: novel, precarious 152 so please him: if he is willing to

156 well to friend: as a good friend 158, 159 still ... purpose: always proves only too well grounded 165 let blood: bled, for medical purposes rank: diseased from superfeiting 172 Live: if I live 173 apt: ready, fit 174 mean: means 175 by Cæsar: beside Cæsar 187 malice: power (but not wish) to harm; cf. n. 191 disposing ... dignities: distributing ... offices

If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble, in the presence of thy corse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius. Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart;
Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.
O world, thou wast the forest to this hart,
And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie!
Cas. Mark Antony,—
Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Cæsar shall say this;
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.
Cas. I blame you not for praising Cæsar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends,
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?
Ant. Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point by looking down on Cæsar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons
Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous.
Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard
That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
You should be satisfied.
Ant. That's all I seek:
And am moreover suitor that I may
Produce his body to the market-place,
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.
Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.
Cas. Brutus, a word with you.
[Aside to Brutus.] You know not what you do; do not consent
That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter?
Bru. By your pardon;
I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Cæsar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission,
And that we are contented Cæsar shall
Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more than do us wrong.
Cas. I know not what may fall; I like it not.
Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's body.
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar,
And say you do 't by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral; and you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.
Ant. Be it is;
I do desire no more.
Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us.
Exeunt all but Antony.
Ant. O pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers;
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,—
Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips,
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue,—
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy:
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war,—
All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds;
And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Ate by his side come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice
Cry 'Havoc! and let slip the dogs of war;
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter Octavius' Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not?
Serv. I do, Mark Antony.
Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome.
Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming;
And bid me say to you by word of mouth— [Seeing the body.]
O Cæsar!—
Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.
Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?
Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.
Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd:
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet;
Hie hence and tell him so. Yet, stay awhile;
Thou shalt not back till I have borne this corpse
Into the market-place; there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand. Exeunt [with Cæsar's body].

213 corse: corpse 216 close: unite 218 bay'd: brought to bay hart: stag (on obvious play on words) 220 Sign'd . . . spoil: bearing the bloody mark of thy slaughter lethe: death (?) 222 this: all that he has just been saying 228 modesty: moderation 231 prick'd in number: marked in the list 239 good regard: what deserves approbation 244 Produce: carry forth 246 order: course 253 By . . . pardon: pardon me a moment, and I'll explain 256 protest: announce

276 tide of times: ebb and flow of human existence 287 quarter'd: hewn into pieces 288 custom . . . deeds: the mere frequency of cruel actions 290 Ate: goddess of discord 291 confines: regions 292 Havoc: the signal for killing without sparing let slip: unleash dogs of war: cf. n. 293 That: so that 294 With rotting corpses, too numerous for the burial that they grievously demand 302 Passion: emotion 313 issue: deed 314 the which: the way in which people act

Scene Second

[The Forum]

Enter Brutus and [presently] goes into the Pulpit, and Cassius, with the Plebeians.

Plebeians. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience friends.
Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers.
Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Cæsar's death.

First Ple. I will hear Brutus speak.

Sec. Ple. I will hear Cassius, and compare their reasons,
When severally we hear them rendered.

[Exit Cassius, with some of the Plebeians.]

Third Ple. The noble Brutus is ascended: silence!

Bru. Be patient till the last.
Romans, countrymen, and lovers, hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer: Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears, for his love; joy, for his fortune; honour, for his valour; and death, for his ambition. Who is here so base that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar, than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter Mark Antony, with Cæsar's body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart: that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

All. Live, Brutus! live! live!

First Ple. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

Sec. Ple. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

Third Ple. Let him be Cæsar.

Fourth Ple. Cæsar's better parts
Shall be crown'd in Brutus.

First Ple. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—

Sec. Ple. Peace! silence! Brutus speaks.

First Ple. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone,
And, for my sake, stay here with Antony.
Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech
Tending to Cæsar's glories, which Mark Antony,
By our permission, is allow'd to make.
I do entreat you, not a man depart,
Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. Exit.

First Ple. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

Third Ple. Let him go up into the public chair;
We'll hear him. Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholding to you. [Goes up.]

Fourth Ple. What does he say of Brutus?

Third Ple. He says, for Brutus' sake,
He finds himself beholding to us all.

Fourth Ple. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

First Ple. This Cæsar was a tyrant.

Third Ple. Nay, that's certain:
We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him.

Sec. Ple. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans,—

All. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;
I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him.
The evil that men do lives after them,
The good is oft interred with their bones;
So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus
Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious;
If it were so, it was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it.
Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,—
For Brutus is an honourable man;
So are they all, all honourable men,—
Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me:
But Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:
Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious?
When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept;
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
You all did see that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition?
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And, sure, he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did love him once, not without cause:
What cause withholds you then to mourn for him?
O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason. Bear with me;

4 And divide the throng 13 Give me a patient hearing, till I finish 29 rude: uncivilized 35 question of: official inquest into enrolled: recorded 36 extenuated: belittled 37 enforced: unduly stressed, strained

69 beholding: indebted 84 answer'd: atoned for 93 general coffers: public treasury 99 on the Lupercal: on the day of the Lupercalia

My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar,
And I must pause till it come back to me.
First Ple. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.
Sec. Ple. If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Cæsar has had great wrong.
Third Ple. Has he, masters?
I fear there will a worse come in his place.
Fourth Ple. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;
Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.
First Ple. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.
Sec. Ple. Poor soul, his eyes are red as fire with weeping.
Third Ple. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.
Fourth Ple. Now mark him; he begins again to speak.
Ant. But yesterday the word of Cæsar might
Have stood against the world; now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.
O masters, if I were dispos'd to stir
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,
Who, you all know, are honourable men.
I will not do them wrong; I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,
Than I will wrong such honourable men.
But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar;
I found it in his closet; 'tis his will.
Let but the commons hear this testament—
Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read—
And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds,
And dip their napkins in his sacred blood,
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich legacy
Unto their issue.
Fourth Ple. We'll hear the will: read it, Mark Antony.
All. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will!
Ant. Have patience, gentle friends; I must not read it:
It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd you.
You are not wood, you are not stones, but men:
And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad.
'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;
For if you should, O what would come of it?
Fourth Ple. Read the will! we'll hear it, Antony;
You shall read us the will, Cæsar's will.
Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay awhile?
I have o'ershot myself to tell you of it.
I fear I wrong the honourable men
Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar; I do fear it.
Fourth Ple. They were traitors: honourable men!
All. The will! the testament!
Sec. Ple. They were villains, murderers. The will! read the will.
Ant. You will compel me then to read the will?
Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar,
And let me show you him that made the will.
Shall I descend? And will you give me leave?
All. Come down.
Sec. Ple. Descend.
Third Ple. You shall have leave.
Fourth Ple. A ring; stand round.
First Ple. Stand from the hearse; stand from the body.
[Antony comes down.]
Sec. Ple. Room for Antony, most noble Antony.
Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.
All. Stand back! room! bear back!
Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this mantle: I remember
The first time ever Cæsar put it on;
'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii.
Look, in this place ran Cassius' dagger through:
See what a rent the envious Casca made:
Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd;
And, as he pluck'd his cursèd steel away,
Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,
As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd
If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no;
For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel:
Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cæsar lov'd him.
This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingraditude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his mighty heart;
And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey's statue,
Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.
O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.
O now you weep, and I perceive you feel
The dint of pity; these are gracious drops.
Kind souls, what, weep you when you but behold
Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you here,
Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.
First Ple. O piteous spectacle!
Sec. Ple. O noble Cæsar!
Third Ple. O woeful day!
Fourth Ple. O traitors! villains!
First Ple. O most bloody sight!
Sec. Ple. We will be revenged.
[All.] Revenge!—About!—Seek!—Burn!
Fire!—Kill!—Slay! Let not a traitor live!
Ant. Stay, countrymen,—
First Ple. Peace there! Hear the noble Antony.
Sec. Ple. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him!
Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up
To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
They that have done this deed are honourable:
What private griefs they have, alas, I know not,
That made them do it; they are wise and honourable,
And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:
I am no orator, as Brutus is;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That love my friend; and that they know full well

124, 125 word ... world: his bare assertion would have carried his point against the world 126 And there are none so humble as to show him any respect 136 commons: common people 139 napkins: handkerchiefs

179 That day: on the day on which; cf. n. 187 angel: dear as his guardian spirit 200 dint: impression

That gave me public leave to speak of him.
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stir men's blood: I only speak right on;
I tell you that which you yourselves do know,
Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor poor dumb mouths,
And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Cæsar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.
All. We'll mutiny.
First Ple. We'll burn the house of Brutus.
Third Ple. Away, then! Come, seek the conspirators.
Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak.
All. Peace, ho!—Hear Antony, most noble Antony!
Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what.
Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserv'd your loves?
Alas, you know not: I must tell you then.
You have forgot the will I told you of.
All. Most true. The will! Let's stay and hear the will.
Ant. Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal.
To every Roman citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.
Sec. Ple. Most noble Cæsar! We'll revenge his death.
Third Ple. O royal Cæsar!
Ant. Hear me with patience.
All. Peace, ho!
Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,
His private arbours, and new-planted orchards,
On this side Tiber; he hath left them you,
And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,
To walk abroad and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Cæsar! When comes such another?
First Ple. Never, never! Come, away, away!
We'll burn his body in the holy place,
And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
Take up the body.
Sec. Ple. Go fetch fire.
Third Ple. Pluck down benches.
Fourth Ple. Pluck down forms, windows, anything.
Exeunt Plebeians [with the body].
Ant. Now let it work: mischief, thou art afoot;
Take thou what course thou wilt!

Enter Servant.

How now, fellow!
Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.
Ant. Where is he?
Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house.
Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him.
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will give us anything.
Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.
Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people,
How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. Exeunt.

228 Action, nor utterance: orator's powers of gesticulation and elocution 229 right on: with simple straightforwardness 234 ruffle: stir 249 drachmas: Greek coins: cf. n. 256 this: cf. n. 257 pleasures: pleasure-grounds (in which) 266 forms: long seats 274 upon a wish: as if at my wish

Scene Third

[A Street]
Enter Cinna, the Poet, and after him the Plebeians.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar,
And things unluckily charge my fantasy:
I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.
First Ple. What is your name?
Sec. Ple. Whither are you going?
Third Ple. Where do you dwell?
Fourth Ple. Are you a married man, or a bachelor?
Sec. Ple. Answer every man directly.
First Ple. Ay, and briefly.
Fourth Ple. Ay, and wisely.
Third Ple. Ay, and truly, you were best.
Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly: wisely I say, I am a bachelor.
Sec. Ple. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry; you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed; directly.
Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral.
First Ple. As a friend or an enemy?
Cin. As a friend.
Sec. Ple. That matter is answered directly.
Fourth Ple. For your dwelling, briefly?
Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.
Third Ple. Your name, sir, truly?
Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.
Sec. Ple. Tear him to pieces; he's a conspirator!
Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet!
Fourth Ple. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses!
Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator!
Sec. Ple. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.
Third Ple. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! Firebrands! To Brutus', to Cassius'; burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius'. Away! Go!
Exeunt all the Plebeians.

Act Fourth

Scene First

[A Room in Antony's House]
Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus [seated at a table].

Ant. These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.
Oct. Your brother too must die; consent you, Lepidus?
Lep. I do consent.
Oct. Prick him down, Antony.
Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live,
Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.
Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.
But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house;
Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine

2 unluckily . . . fantasy: weigh upon my fancy ominously 12 you were best: it would be best for you 18 bear me a bang: get a blow from me 23 For: now for 7 with . . . him: by a mark 'pricked' opposite his name, I condemn him

How to cut off some charge in legacies.
Lep. What, shall I find you here?
Oct. Or here or at the Capitol. Exit Lepidus.
Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit,
The three-fold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?
Oct. So you thought him;
And took his voice who should be prick'd to die,
In our black sentence and proscription.
Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you:
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads,
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven, as we point the way;
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons.
Oct. You may do your will;
But he's a tried and valiant soldier.
Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that
I do appoint him store of provender.
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on,
His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth;
A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On objects, arts and imitations
Which, out of use and stal'd by other men,
Begin his fashion: do not talk of him
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things: Brutus and Cassius
Are levying powers; we must straight make head;
Therefore let our alliance be combin'd,
Our best friends made, and our best means stretch'd out;
And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclos'd,
And open perils surest answered.
Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake,
And bay'd about with many enemies;
And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear,
Millions of mischiefs. Exeunt.

10 cut ... charge: reduce some expenditures (by killing the legatees) 13 unmeritable: without merit 15 The ... divided: if the world is to be divided into three parts 19 In the black sentence of our proscription 28 empty: unladen, worthless 29 commons: public pasture 33 appoint: assign 35 wind: turn 37 taste: measure, degree 39 barren-spirited: lacking initiative 40 objects: objects of interest, in general; cf. n. arts: works of art; cf. n. imitations: conventional forms, empty counterfeits 41 stal'd: outworn, made stale 42 Begin his fashion: rare to him the height of fashion 43 property: instrument, tool 44 Listen: hear 45 powers: armed forces make head: raise an army 46 combin'd: confirmed 47 made: made sure stretch'd out: strained to the utmost 49 covert: hidden disclos'd: discovered 50 answered: faced, met 51, 52 Cf. n.

Scene Second

[Camp near Sardis. Before Brutus' Tent]
Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, [Lucius,] and the Army. Titinius and Pindarus meet them.

Bru. Stand, ho!
Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand!
Bru. What now, Lucilius! is Cassius near?
Lucil. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his master.
Bru. He greets me well. Your master, Pindarus,
In his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, undone; but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.
Pin. I do not doubt
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.
Bru. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius;
How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd.
Lucil. With courtesy and with respect enough;
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath us'd of old.
Bru. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle;
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?
Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd;
The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius.
Bru. Hark! he is arriv'd.
Low march within.
March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and his Powers.

Cas. Stand, ho!
Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.
[First Officer.] Stand!
[Sec. Officer.] Stand!
[Third Officer.] Stand!
Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.
Bru. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?
Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;
And when you do them—
Bru. Cassius, be content;
Speak your griefs softly: I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our armies here,

1 Stand: halt 2 Give the word: pass along the command 7 Owing to a change in himself, or through misconduct of subordinates 13 full ... honour: worthy of honorable regard 17 familiar instances: marks of familiarity 25 hollow: insincere hot at hand: fiery at the start, only 28 fall: let fall, lower jades: worthless nags 29 Sink ... trial: fail in the pinch 31 the horse in general: all the cavalry 34 gently: slowly 43 sober form: calm behavior 46 softly: gently

Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.
Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.
Bru. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no man
Come to our tent till we have done our conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Within the Tent of Brutus]
[Enter] Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.
Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.
Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment.
Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold
To underservers.
Cas. I an itching palm!
You know that you are Brutus that speaks this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.
Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.
Cas. Chastisement!
Bru. Remember March, the ides of March remember:
Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice? What! shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world
But for supporting robbers, shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
And sell the mighty space of our large honours
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.
Cas. Brutus, bay not me;
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in. I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.
Bru. Go to; you are not, Cassius.
Cas. I am.
Bru. I say you are not.
Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;
Have mind upon your health; tempt me no further.
Bru. Away, slight man!
Cas. Is 't possible?
Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler?
Shall I be frighted when a madman stares?
Cas. O ye gods, ye gods! Must I endure all this?
Bru. All this! ay, more: fret till your proud heart break;
Go show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you; for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.
Cas. Is it come to this?
Bru. You say you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well. For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.
Cas. You wrong me every way; you wrong me, Brutus;
I said an elder soldier, not a better:
Did I say, 'better'?
Bru. If you did, I care not.
Cas. When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.
Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him.
Cas. I durst not?
Bru. No.
Cas. What, durst not tempt him?
Bru. For your life you durst not.
Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love;
I may do that I shall be sorry for.
Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.
There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me;
For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash
By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: was that done like Cassius?
Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts;
Dash him to pieces!
Cas. I denied you not.
Bru. You did.
Cas. I did not: he was but a fool
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath riv'd my heart.
A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

50 enlarge: set forth fully Scene Three S. d.: cf. n. 2 noted: stigmatized 4 praying . . . side: interceding for him 5 slighted off: tossed slightingly aside 8 nice: trivial bear . . . comment: be censured 10 condemn'd to have: blamed for having 11 mart: market 16 honours . . . corruption: sanctions this corrupt practice 21, 22 What . . . justice: cf. n. 24 robbers: his dishonest favorites 26, 27 Cf. n. 28 bay: bark at 30 Cf. n. 33 practice: experience 34 make conditions: determine the proper treatment of subordinates (referring to lines 1–5) 35 Go to: Nonsense!

39 Have . . . health: have regard for your safety 48 budge: flinch 49 observe: pay humble reverence to 76 respect: heed 82 indirection: dishonesty, crooked dealing 87 rascal counters: worthless pelf 93 riv'd: cleft

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.
Cas. You love me not.
Bru. I do not like your faults.
Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.
Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear
As huge as high Olympus.
Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aweary of the world;
Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother;
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observ'd,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes. There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within, a heart
Dearer than Pluto's mine, richer than gold:
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:
Strike, as thou didst at Cæsar; for, I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better
Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.
Bru. Sheathe your dagger:
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb
That carries anger as the flint bears fire,
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.
Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him?
Bru. When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd too.
Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your hand.
Bru. And my heart too.
Cas. O Brutus!
Bru. What's the matter?
Cas. Have not you love enough to bear with me,
When that rash humour which my mother gave me
Makes me forgetful?
Bru. Yes, Cassius; and from henceforth
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,
He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so.
Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals;
There is some grudge between 'em, 'tis not meet
They be alone.
Lucil. [Within.] You shall not come to them.
Poet. [Within.] Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter a Poet [followed by Lucilius, Titinius, and Lucius].

Cas. How now! What's the matter?
Poet. For shame, you generals! What do you mean?
Love, and be friends, as two such men should be;
For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye.
Cas. Ha, ha! how vilely doth this cynic rime!
Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow, hence!
Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.
Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time:
What should the wars do with these jigging fools?
Companion, hence!
Cas. Away, away: be gone! Exit Poet.
Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders
Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.
Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala with you,
Immediately to us. [Exeunt Lucilius and Titinius.]
Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine! [Exit Lucius.]
Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.
Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.
Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.
Bru. No man bears sorrow better: Portia is dead.
Cas. Ha? Portia?
Bru. She is dead.
Cas. How 'scap'd I killing when I cross'd you so?
O insupportable and touching loss!
Upon what sickness?
Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And grief that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong;—for with her death
That tidings came:—with this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.
Cas. And died so?
Bru. Even so.
Cas. O ye immortal gods!

Enter Boy [Lucius], with wine and tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl of wine.
In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. Drinks.
Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.
Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.]
Bru. Come in, Titinius. [Exit Lucius.]

Enter Titinius and Messala.

Welcome, good Messala.
Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.
Cas. Portia, art thou gone?
Bru. No more, I pray you.
Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition towards Philippi.
Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.
Bru. With what addition?
Mes. That by proscription and bills of out-lawry,
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred senators.
Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;
Mine speak of seventy senators that died
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.
Cas. Cicero one?
Mes. Cicero is dead,

105 brav'd: blusteringly taunted 106 Check'd: scolded 107 learn'd . . . rote: studied, and learned by heart 111 Dearer: worth more Pluto's; cf. n. 118 it . . . scope: your anger shall not be opposed 119 dishonour . . . humour: your dishonorable deeds shall be ignored as caprices 120-123 Cf. n. 126 blood ill-temper'd: disordered condition 147 cynic: so called because Diogenes affected rudeness

150 I'll listen to his folly when he learns the proper time for it 151 jigging: doggerel rhyming 152 Companion: base fellow 155 lodge . . . to-night: encamp for the night 162 give . . . accidental: admit the power of casual 168 upon: of 169 Impatient of: unable to endure 170 grief; cf. n. 172 fell distract: became distracted 185 call in question: bring up for discussion 191 Bending . . . expedition: directing their march

And by that order of proscription.
Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?
Bru. No, Messala.
Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?
Bru. Nothing, Messala.
Mes. That, methinks, is strange.
Bru. Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours?
Mes. No, my lord.
Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.
Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:
For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.
Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. We must die, Messala:
With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.
Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure.
Cas. I have as much of this in art as you,
But yet my nature could not bear it so.
Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think
Of marching to Philippi presently?
Cas. I do not think it good.
Bru. Your reason?
Cas. This is it:
'Tis better that the enemy seek us:
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.
Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.
The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground
Do stand but in a forc'd affection;
For they have grudg'd us contribution:
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encourag'd;
From which advantage shall we cut him off,
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.
Cas. Hear me, good brother.
Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside,
That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day;
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat;
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.
Cas. Then, with your will, go on;
We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.
Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,
And nature must obey necessity,
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?
Cas. No more. Good-night:

206 Nothing, Messala; cf. n. 214 once: some day 217 art: theory 219 alive: which concerns the living 228 force: necessity 230 Are friendly to us only under compulsion 234 new-added: newly augmented 240 That we have drawn on our friends to the utmost 246 Omitted: if it is neglected 247 bound in: confined to 250 ventures: investments 251 with your will: according to your preference 255 So to nature's need we will dole out a little rest

Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.
Bru. Lucius!

Enter Lucius.

My gown. [Exit Lucius.]
Farewell, good Messala:
Good-night, Titinius. Noble, noble Cassius,
Good-night, and good repose.
Cas. O my dear brother!
This was an ill beginning of the night:
Never come such division 'tween our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.
Bru. Everything is well.
Cas. Good-night, my lord.
Bru. Good-night, good brother.
Tit. / Mes. Good-night, Lord Brutus.
Bru. Farewell, every one.
Exeunt [all but Brutus].

Enter Lucius, with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?
Luc. Here in the tent.
Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily?
Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'er-watch'd.
Call Claudius and some other of my men;
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.
Luc. Varro! and Claudius!

Enter Varro and Claudius.

Var. Calls my lord?
Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and sleep:
It may be I shall raise you by and by
On business to my brother Cassius.
Var. So please you, we will stand and watch your pleasure.
Bru. I will not have it so; lie down, good sirs;
It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.
[Varro and Claudius lie down.]
Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so;
I put it in the pocket of my gown.
Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.
Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful
Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
And touch thy instrument a strain or two?
Luc. Ay, my lord, an 't please you.
Bru. It does, my boy:
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.
Luc. It is my duty, sir.
Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might;
I know young bloods look for a time of rest.
Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.
Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep again;
I will not hold thee long: if I do live,
I will be good to thee. Music, and a Song.
This is a sleepy tune: O murderous slumber,
Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,
That plays thee music? Gentle knave, good-night;

277 knave: boy o'er-watch'd: worn out by lack of sleep 283 raise: rouse 285 watch: wakefully await 291 much: very 293 Play a tune or two on thy lute 304 murderous: because rendering apparently lifeless 305 leaden: dull and heavy mace: bailiff's staff for arresting people

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;
I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good-night.
Let me see, let me see; is not the leaf turn'd down
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

Enter the Ghost of Cæsar.

How ill this taper burns. Ha! Who comes here?
I think it is the weakness of mine eyes
That shapes this monstrous apparition.
It comes upon me. Art thou anything?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold and my hair to stare?
Speak to me what thou art.
Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.
Bru. Why com'st thou?
Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.
Bru. Well; then I shall see thee again?
Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.
Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then. [Exit Ghost.]
Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest:
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.
Boy, Lucius! Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!
Claudius!
Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.
Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument.
Lucius, awake!
Luc. My lord!
Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?
Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.
Bru. Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see anything?
Luc. Nothing, my lord.
Bru. Sleep again, Lucius. Sirrah, Claudius! Fellow thou, awake!
Var. My lord!
Clau. My lord!
Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?
Both. Did we, my lord?
Bru. Ay: saw you anything?
Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.
Clau. Nor I, my lord.
Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother Cassius:
Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.
Both. It shall be done, my lord. Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The Plains of Philippi]
Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:
You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so; their battles are at hand;
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.
Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.
Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.
Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left.
Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?
Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. March.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.
Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.
Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?
Ant. No, Cæsar, we will answer on their charge.
Make forth; the generals would have some words.
Oct. [To his troops.] Stir not until the signal.
Bru. Words before blows: is it so, countrymen?
Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.
Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.
Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:
Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,
Crying, 'Long live! Hail, Cæsar!'
Cas. Antony,
The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.
Ant. Not stingless too!
Bru. O yes, and soundless too;
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.
Ant. Villains! you did not so when your vile daggers
Hack'd one another in the sides of Cæsar:
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,
And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feet;
Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind
Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers!
Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank yourself:
This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.
Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat,
The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
Look:
I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?

312 How . . . burns: accepted sign of an apparition's presence 315 upon: towards 317 stare: stand on end 1 answered: fulfilled 4 battles: battalions 5 warn: summon, challenge

7 bosoms: secrets 10 fearful bravery: cowardly bravado face: pretense 15 bloody . . . battle: signal for immediate combat 18 even: equally divided 20 exigent: emergency 21 but . . . so: but I shall do as I said 22 parley: conference 25 answer . . . charge: fight when they attack 26 Make forth: step forward 31 In . . . strokes: while delivering foul blows 35 posture: nature (?) are: a plural by attraction 36 Hybla: town in Sicily, famous for its honey 44 show'd . . . apes: simulated smiles of affection, like favorite pets 47 flatterers: treacherous hypocrites 51 the cause: let's get down to business

Never, till Cæsar's three-and-thirty wounds
Be well aveng'd; or till another Cæsar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.
Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands,
Unless thou bring'st them with thee.
Oct. So I hope;
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.
Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable.
Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour,
Join'd with a masquer and a reveller.
Ant. Old Cassius still!
Oct. Come, Antony; away!
Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth.
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs.
Exeunt Octavius, Antony, and Army.
Cas. Why now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
Bru. Ho, Lucilius: hark, a word with you.
Lucil. [Standing forth.] My lord?
[Brutus and Lucilius talk apart.]
Cas. Messala.
Mes. [Standing forth.] What says my general?
Cas. Messala,
This is my birth-day; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:
Be thou my witness that against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set
Upon one battle all our liberties.
You know that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion; now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign
Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
Who to Philippi here consorted us:
This morning are they fled away and gone,
And in their stead do ravens, crows, and kites
Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.
Mes. Believe not so.
Cas. I but believe it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit and resolv'd
To meet all perils very constantly.
Bru. Even so, Lucilius.
Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But since the affairs of men rest still incertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:

56 three-and-thirty: cf. n. 63 strain: race 65 peevish: silly such honour: i.e., that of dying on Brutus' sword 67 Old . . . still: you are still the same old Cassius 71 stomachs: courage 79 as: a colloquial expletive 82 As Pompey: at the battle of Pharsalia, 48 B. C. 84 held . . . strong: believed Epicurus right in disregarding omens 87 former ensign: banner at the front of our column 90 consorted: accompanied 94 As: as if sickly prey: so sick as soon to be their prey 95 fatal: fateful, doom-foreboding 103 The gods: may the gods 106 reason with: consider

What are you, then, determined to do?
Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself—(I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life)—arming myself with patience,
To stay the providence of some high powers
That govern us below.
Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?
Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind: but this same day
Must end that work the ides of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take:
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius.
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.
Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus.
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true this parting was well made.
Bru. Why, then, lead on. O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come!
But it sufficeth that the day will end,
And then the end is known. Come, ho! away!
Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same. The Field of Battle]
Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills
Unto the legions on the other side.
Loud alarum.
Let them set on at once, for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down.
Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Another part of the Field]
Alarums. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cas. O look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy:
This ensign here of mine was turning back;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.
Tit. O Cassius! Brutus gave the word too early;
Who, having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd.

Enter Pindarus.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;

111 Cato: of Utica; committed suicide, 46 B. C. 116 stay: await, submit to 121-125 Cf. n. 1 bills: written orders 2 side: wing, commanded by Cassius 4 cold demeanour: faint-heartedness 2 mine own: my own troops 4 coward: i.e., the standard-bearer

Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord:
Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.
Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius;
Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?
Tit. They are, my lord.
Cas. Titinius, if thou lovest me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops
And here again; that I may rest assur'd
Whether yond troops are friend or enemy.
Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought. Exit.
Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.
[Pindarus ascends the hill.]
This day I breathed first; time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end;
My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?
Pin. [Above.] O my lord!
Cas. What news?
Pin. [Above.] Titinius is enclosed round about
With horsemen, that make to him on the spur;
Yet he spurs on. Now they are almost on him:
Now, Titinius! Now some light; O, he lights too:
He's ta'en. Shout.
And hark, they shout for joy.
Cas. Come down; behold no more.
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

Enter Pindarus [below].

Come hither, sirrah:
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath;
Now be a freeman; and with this good sword,
That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this bosom.
Stand not to answer; here, take thou the hilts;
And, when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword.—Cæsar, thou art reveng'd,
Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]
Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been,
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius,
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him. Exit.

Enter Titinius and Messala.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.
Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.
Mes. Where did you leave him?
Tit. All disconsolate.
With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.
Mes. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?
Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!
Mes. Is not that he?
Tit. No, this was he, Messala.
But Cassius is no more. O setting sun,
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set.
The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done.
Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.
Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.
O hateful error, melancholy's child,
Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O error, soon conceiv'd,
Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.
Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus?
Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears; I may say, thrusting it:
For piercing steel and darts envenomed
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
As tidings of this sight.
Tit. Hie you, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while. [Exit Messala.]
Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends, and did not they
Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?
Alas, thou hast misconstru'd everything.
But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.
By your leave, gods: this is a Roman's part:
Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. Dies.

Alarum. Enter Brutus, Messala, Young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?
Mes. Lo, yonder: and Titinius mourning it.
Bru. Titinius' face is upward.
Cato. He is slain.
Bru. O Julius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet!
Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper entrails. Low alarums.
Cato. Brave Titinius!
Look whether he have not crown'd dead Cassius!
Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?
The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
It is impossible that ever Rome
Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe more tears
To this dead man than you shall see me pay.—
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.—
Come therefore, and to Thasos send his body:
His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come;

20 even with: quick as 22 thick: dull, imperfect 26 is . . . compass: has completed its cycle 32 lights: alight, dismount 39 Parthia: in Crassus' disastrous campaign, in 53 B. C. 40 swore thee: made thee swear saving of: in return for my sparing 43 freeman: Cassius' death will free him from slavery 44 search: probe 52 take note of: see 53 change: exchange

68 our . . . done: all is over 70 Mistrust . . . success: misgivings about the outcome of my errand 71 melancholy's child: result of despondency 72 apt: impressionable 90 hold thee: wait a moment 92 apace: quickly 94 By . . . gods: a proud apology for taking his fate into his own hands 102 proper: individual 108 fellow: equal 111 Thasos: isle near Thrace 113 discomfort: dishearten

And come, young Cato;—let us to the field.
Labeo and Flavius, set our battles on:
'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night
We shall try fortune in a second fight. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Another part of the Field]
Alarum. Enter Brutus, Messala, Cato, Lucilius, and Flavius.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O yet hold up your heads!
Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?
I will proclaim my name about the field:
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
[Bru.] And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I;
Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus!
[Exit Brutus, fighting. Cato is slain.]
Lucil. O young and noble Cato, art thou down?
Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius,
And may'st be honour'd being Cato's son.
First Sold. Yield, or thou diest.
Lucil. Only I yield to die:
There is so much, that thou wilt kill me straight:
Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.
First Sold. We must not. A noble prisoner!
Sec. Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.
First Sold. I'll tell the news: here comes the general.

Enter Antony.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.
Ant. Where is he?
Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough:
I dare assure thee that no enemy
Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:
The gods defend him from so great a shame!
When you do find him, or alive or dead,
He will be found like Brutus, like himself.
Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,
A prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe,
Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,
And see whether Brutus be alive or dead;
And bring us word, unto Octavius' tent,
How everything is chanc'd. Exeunt.

116, 117 three o'clock . . . second fight; cf. n. 2 What . . . not: Who is so base-born as not to do so? 7 [Bru.]; cf. n. 13 Only . . . die: I yield only in order that I may die 14, 15 Cf. n.

Scene Fifth

[Another part of the Field]
Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.
Cli. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but, my lord,
He came not back: he is or ta'en or slain.
Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word;
It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus. [Whispers.]
Cli. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.
Bru. Peace, then: no words.
Cli. I'll rather kill myself.
Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius. [Whispers.]
Dar. Shall I do such a deed?
Cli. O, Dardanius!
Dar. O, Clitus!
Cli. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?
Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.
Cli. Now is that noble vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eyes.
Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius: list a word.
Vol. What says my lord?
Bru. Why this, Volumnius:
The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me
Two several times by night; at Sardis once,
And this last night here in Philippi fields.
I know my hour is come.
Vol. Not, so, my lord.
Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.
Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes;
Our enemies have beat us to the pit: Low alarums.
It is more worthy to leap in ourselves,
Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius,
Thou know'st that we two went to school together:
Even for that our love of old, I prithee,
Hold thou my sword-hilts whilst I run on it.
Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.
Alarum still.
Cli. Fly, fly, my lord: there is no tarrying here!
Bru. Farewell to you; and you; and you, Volumnius.
Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;
Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen,
My heart doth joy that yet, in all my life,
I found no man but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this losing day
More than Octavius and Mark Antony
By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue
Hath almost ended his life's history;
Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest,
That have but labour'd to attain this hour.
Alarum. Cry within, 'Fly, fly, fly!'
Cli. Fly, my lord, fly!
Bru. Hence: I will follow.
[Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.]
I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord:
Thou art a fellow of a good respect;

1 poor remains of: few surviving 2, 3 Cf. n. 15 noble vessel; cf. n. Tim. 2.21 27 pit: brink of destruction 43 at once: once for all; or, all of you 43, 44 Brutus' . . . history: Brutus' life will end with this very speech, almost 46 Cf. Psalm 90.10

Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it:
Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?
Stra. Give me your hand first: fare you well, my lord.
Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—Cæsar, now be still;
I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. Dies.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Antony, Octavius, Messala, Lucilius, and the Army.

Oct. What man is that?
Mes. My master's man. Strato, where is thy master?
Stra. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala;
The conquerors can but make a fire of him;
For Brutus only overcame himself,
And no man else hath honour by his death.
Lucil. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee, Brutus,
That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.
Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain them.
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?
Stra. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.
Oct. Do so, good Messala.
Mes. How died my master, Strato?
Stra. I held the sword, and he did run on it.
Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee
That did the latest service to my master.
Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all;
All the conspirators save only he
Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;
He only, in a general honest thought
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all world, 'This was a man!'
Oct. According to his virtue let us use him,
With all respect and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.
So, call the field to rest; and let's away
To part the glories of this happy day. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS

51 smatch: smack, flavor 61 only: alone 65 entertain: employ 66 bestow ... with: devote thy time to 67 prefer: recommend, transfer

76, 77 Cf. n. 78 gentle: that of a true gentleman elements: as microcosm, man was believed to be composed of earth, air, fire, and water, mingled in due proportions 81 use: treat 84 Most like: as best befits order'd: arrayed 85 field: troops in the field 86 part: share

Notes

I.i.S.d. Marullus. The Folios spell this name incorrectly, 'Murellus.' The emendation, based on Plutarch and other conclusive ancient anthorities, is Theobald's. On similar grounds, certain other orthographical vagaries have been corrected in most of the modern editions: e.g., the Folios print 'Calphurnia,' 'Antonio,' 'Claudio,' 'Varrus,' etc. On the other hand, 'Decius Brutus' for 'Decimus' is a genuine confusion of identity which Shakespeare took over from North's Plutarch (see Sources of the Play).

I.i.23. with awl. The original Folio pointing and spelling of the text will serve to suggest a further pun not obvious in the modern texts: 'I meddle with no Tradesmans matters, nor womens matters; but withal I am indeed Sir, a Surgeon to old shoes.'

I.i.32. triumph. This triumph celebrated Cæsar's defeat of the sons of Pompey at the battle of Munda, in Spain, March 17, B. C. 45, and was the first such recognition of a Roman's victory over any but a foreign foe.—Shakespeare throughout has compressed the historical duration of the play's action considerably, in the interests of dramatic effectiveness: so here he has this triumph coincide with the festival of the Lupercalia, February 15, B. C. 44; in Act III he places the murder, the funeral orations, and the arrival of Octavius all on the same day, whereas in reality some two months elapsed between the earliest and the latest of these events; and in Act V he combines in a single action the two battles of Philippi, which really were separated by a thee-week interval. See further, for the use of 'Double Time' in this play, the note on II.i.61, 62.

I.i.45. her. 'Father Tiber' would seem to demand a masculine pronoun, and Rowe accordingly, followed by several other editors, changed 'her' to 'his' in this line and line 48; but Elizabethan usage was less strict than classical, and Shakespeare's laxity was not a special peculiarity of his own.

I.i.68. Lupercal. Ancient Roman festival of purification and expiation, celebrated February 15, and believed to give new life and fruitfulness to fields, flocks, and human beings. After due sacrifices had been offered, the chosen young men, called 'Luperci,' ran around the Palatine hill and struck with their thongs of goatskin those who stood in their way, thus warding off barrenness. These thongs were called 'februa,' from 'februare, to purify'; the day, 'dies februatus'; and the whole month, 'februarius.'

I.ii.161. walks. The famous and spacious paved Roman Ways, such as the 'Via Appia,' 'Via Sacra,' 'Via Flaminia,' etc., are here put for the city itself, by synecdoche. Or, another sound explanation is based on III.ii.254; 'walks' thus would signify the parks and promenades forming the outlying suburbs of the city. Rowe's emendation, 'walls,' though widely accepted, is unnecessary and prosaic.

I.ii.172. The punctuation in this line is that of Pope's second edition, and has been generally adopted; but the Folio gives a perfectly plausible reading without emendation: 'I would not so (with love I might entreat you) Be any further moved.'

I.ii.206. my name. A Latin idiom, meaning 'I myself, Cæsar.' For parallels from Virgil, Milton, and the Bible, cf. R. C. Browne's note on Paradise Lost, II, 964, in the Clarendon Press edition of English Poems by John Milton, 1906.

I.ii.211. he hears no music. Cf. Merchant of Venice, V.I.91-93.

I.ii.317. He should not humour me. 'He,' as is shown by the 'he' in the preceding line and the 'his' in the following, refers to Brutus, not to Cæsar. Cassius then says: 'If I had Brutus' standing with Cæsar and Brutus only mine, Brutus should not (as easily as I mean to beguile him into doing so) talk me into forgoing the advantages afforded by Cæsar's favor.'

I.iii.63. cast yourself in wonder. 'Plunge head-long into, abjectly abandon yourself to, unreasoning wonder.' Cf. 'cast down,' and the etymology of 'abject.' There is no need for emendation, though 'case' has been widely accepted.

I.iii.68. Why old men, fools, and children calculate. This line has occasioned much discussion. Many editors emend it thus: 'Why old men fool, and children calculate,' i.e., 'Why the wise are foolish and the foolish wise.' But against this emendation may be urged the facts that 'old men' are not always 'wise,' in Shakespeare or elsewhere, and that the unaltered text affords an acceptable meaning: 'Why dotards, idiots, and infants so far depart from their ordinary characteristics as to utter the profound truths of divination.'

I.iii.111, 115. 'The idea seems to be that, as men start a huge fire with worthless straws or shavings, so Cæsar is using the degenerate Romans of the time, to set the whole world ablaze with his own glory.' (Hudson.)

I.iii.131. Pompey's porch. A magnificent colonnade or portico surrounding an open area which contained avenues of sycamore trees, fountains, and statues; it was attached to Pompey's theatre (line 159), in the Campus Martius, the first stone theatre to be erected in Rome.

II.i.15. Crown him that. 'Once make him that—i.e., once let him become the full-grown adder—by crowning him, and then I realize that we shall be rendering actual a peril (sting) which now is only potential and latent.' Emendations seem unnecessary, though many have been proposed and few editors retain the Folio and Quarto punctuation given in the present text.

II.i.59. fourteen. This is Theobald's generally accepted emendation of the Folio and Quarto reading, 'fifteen.' To Brutus (line 40) it is still the night of the fourteenth. If 'fifteen' days were indeed 'wasted,' i.e., gone, then the ides too would be gone,—which is just what the Soothsayer points out that they are not (III.i.2).

II.i.61, 62. Literally interpreted, this statement is incredible, if we stop to reflect that a month has passed since I. ii; Brutus then can mean merely 'I have not slept well.' But as a rule we do not stop to reflect thus mathematically, and so we have the impression that 'Cassius first did whet' Brutus 'against Cæsar' only a night or two before and that Brutus' sleeplessness has not been superhumanly protracted; for seemingly 'Brought you Cæsar home?' (I.iii.1) means home from the Lupercal (I.ii), and Casca himself in I. iii is returning from his dinner engagement on the night of the Lupercal (I.ii.291), so that I. iii apparently follows I. ii without any interval; while II. i apparently follows I. iii with almost equal immediacy, for in their last conversation (on stage: I.ii.305-309) Brutus and Cassius arranged to meet again at Brutus' home 'to-morrow,' and hence (II.i.70 ff.) we have their first meeting (on stage) since that time. This device, whereby Shakespeare secures an impression of rapid, uninterruptedly continuous action while unobtrusively supplying to reflection all needed data for the determination of the actual historical intervals involved, is known as the phenomenon of 'Double Time,' and is well shown further in Acts IV and V of this play. The Short or Dramatic Time-scheme maintains the tension of the passion, while the Long or Historic Time-scheme satisfies the requirements of the analytical reason; but, needless to say, this curious phenomenon is noticeable only in the study, never in the theatre. (Cf. 'Shakespeare's Legerdemain with Time in Julius Cæsar,' Poet Lore, XI, 1899.)

II.i.262. humour. There were supposed to be four fundamental 'humours' or fluids (from the Latin humor,' liquid) in the human body, viz., blood, phlegm, yellow bile, and black bile; and an over-proportion of one of these elements in the system made the disposition predominantly sanguine, phlegmatic, choleric, or melancholy, respectively. So, to the mediæval and renaissance mind, 'humour' might mean literally 'moisture,' as in line 278; or it might account for mental or physical disorder, as in the present line; or it might refer to the more trivial temperamental eccentricity resulting from the fundamental derangement, as in II. ii. 59.

II.ii.93. For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance. The generally accepted interpretation explains these terms in the very spirit of Calpurnia's dream, i.e., as the appropriate concomitants of martyrdom; but surely nothing could be further from Cæsar's desire or Decius' intention. Consequently, the gloss attempts to give meanings more in keeping with the manifest purpose of Decius as shown in the rest of his speech, and with the obvious requirements of the situation: i.e., Cæsar's blood is to provide metaphorical living blessings, rather than literal physical souvenirs of death.

II.ii.136. That every 'like' is not 'the same.' The heart of Brutus grieves to realize that specious resemblance is not genuine identity; that appearances (of friendship, as in the amicable ceremony of taking wine together) are deceptive; that the conspirators, who seem 'like friends' (line 135), are so far from being truly Cæsar's friends that they are on the very point of putting him to death.

III.i.S.d. Before the Capitol. In the original texts there is no stage direction in this scene before 'They stab Cæsar,' at line 83, other than the opening direction: 'Flourish. Enter Cæsar, Brutus,' and the rest. Yet lines 11, 12 show that the action takes place outdoors; while lines 35, 90, 125, 130, etc., as well as the familiar tradition and all pictorial representations, show that the murder takes place indoors. Of course, there was no difficulty here on the Elizabethan stage: the action of the first 12 lines would take place on the fore-stage, and then Cæsar would withdraw and seat himself on the dais or inner stage at the rear, with the Senators grouped about him and the approaching conspirators between him and the audience. Except for the standardization of the text established by the almost unbroken succession of editors who have left this dilemma unamended, there would seem to be no reason why the procedure followed in the precisely similar dilemma in IV.ii and iii should not be adopted here: there the action outside Brutus' tent is assigned to a brief Scene Two, while the action inside the tent is very properly assigned to a long separate scene, Scene Three. It must be remembered that all the Scene-divisions in this play have had to be determined by modern editors, there being nothing but Act-divisions in the Folios after the initial 'Scæna Prima.'

Capitol. Shakespeare placed the killing of Cæsar in the Capitol on account of the established popular and literary tradition to that effect; cf., e.g., Chaucer, The Monkes Tale, 713-718, and Hamlet, III. ii. 100-103. In reality Cæsar was assassinated in the Curia Pompeiana, a great hall adjoining the portico of Pompey's theatre (cf. note on I.III.126). This Curia was used for meetings of the Senate and was destroyed in the grief and rage over Cæsar's death, but the colossal statue of Pompey which it had contained (cf. line 125) was saved.

III.i.47, 48. Know, Cæsar doth not wrong. Ben Jonson quoted in his Discoveries, first printed in 1641, an alternative version of this line: 'Cæsar did never wrong but with just cause.' Jonson ridiculed this sentence as an 'Irish bull'—unjustly: for 'wrong' means not only 'error, mistake,' but also 'harm, injury' (as in line 260 in this very scene). Some few editors have incorporated Jonson's version of this line in the text, following it up with 'Nor without cause will he be satisfied,' on the hypothesis that Jonson was quoting either an early Quarto version which has since disappeared, or at least the acting version current in Shakespeare's lifetime which was unwarrantably changed by the editors of the First Folio.

III.i.59. If I could pray to move, prayers would move me. 'If I were as weak as you are, and in the position of looking up to someone more powerful than myself and entreating him to change his mind, why then I should perhaps be weak enough likewise to change my own mind on account of mere empty entreaties; but happily I am as far above one alternative as the other, for,' etc.

III.i.174. This line has given the commentators much trouble, and many emendations have been proposed for the puzzling phrase 'in strength of malice'—such as 'exempt from malice,' 'in strength of amity,' etc. If the Folio reading is to be preserved unchanged, the word 'malice' must clearly be emptied of all its usual meaning, for Brutus could never have applied such a term to any action by the conspirators after his overwhelming repudiation of 'envy' and similar emotions in II. i. 170-191; and the word 'malice,' free from its usual sinister implications, apparently does occur elsewhere in Shakespeare (e.g., Macbeth, III.ii.16, 28, and perhaps John, II.i.259), and is recognized by the Oxford Dictionary, in the sense of 'power, capacity." But even so, that interpretation gives a very inferior meaning to the phrase now under discussion, little better than tautology and not very appropriate to the spirit of the context. The present editor therefore ventures to suggest as an emendation here 'instranged' (of the use of which N. E. D. gives an example dated 1586), a variant of 'enstranged' (N. E. D.: Caxton, 1483), meaning 'estranged, far removed, deprived,' etc. This rare word, 'instranged,' unfamiliar to the compositor's eye or ear, would be very naturally sophisticated into 'in strength,' while it supplies exactly the sense needed in the passage; viz., 'Our arms free from malice, and our hearts of brothers' temper, do receive you in,' etc.

III.i.273. dogs of war. Most editors explain the 'dogs' literally and specifically as 'fire, sword, and famine,' on the strength of Henry V, I. Prologue 8. But why should not the phrase be merely a general poetic metaphor—on the analogy of 'dove of peace'—designed to suggest all the nameless horrors that result when the destructive energies of ruthless warfare are unpent?

III.ii.178. That day he overcame the Nervii. It was in the summer of 57 B.C. that this most warlike of Belgic tribes was defeated, in the battle of the Sambre. The Nervii made a successful surprise attack, and only Cæsar's personal bravery saved the day. Cf. De Bello Gallico, II.15-28. This victory is prominently featured in North's Plutarch (see Sources of the Play), and was celebrated at Rome with unprecedented thanksgivings and rejoicings.

III.ii.247. drachmas. These were Greek silver coins, of a value impossible to compute accurately in terms of modern currency. In purchasing power the bequest would perhaps be equivalent to-day to something over $100 per citizen.

III.ii.254. On this side Tiber. The gardens lay across the Tiber from the Forum in which Antony was speaking, but 'on this side' from the French and English standpoint of Amyot and North—whom Shakespeare too literally follows.

IV.i. 37. one that feeds On objects, arts, and imitations Which, out of use and stal'd by other men, Begin his fashion. The Folio text here is at least as satisfactory as any emendation, if the punctuation makes it evident that the disputed 'objects, arts, and imitations' are immediately defined by the restrictive relative clause that follows. Despite his unbridled passions, Antony is eminently a practical politician—as witness the form of Cassius' bribe offered to him after Brutus' futile expression of idealism (III.i.192, 193); and witness also his masterly manipulation of the conspirators and the mob, in III. i and III. ii. He scorns Lepidus then for so lacking personality, initiative, shrewdness, and judgment that he takes even the superficial embellishments of life at second hand, unable to distinguish between the true values and the sham. (Staunton's emendation would substitute 'abjects,' meaning 'discarded scraps,' and 'orts,' meaning 'leavings.')

IV.i.48, 49. we are at the stake, And bay'd about with many enemies. This refers to the very popular but very brutal Elizabethan amusement of bear-baiting, wherein the bear was chained to a stake in the center of the 'bear-garden' or arena (the best-known one was situated close by the Globe Theatre) and attacked by a number of dogs.

IV.iii.S.d. For the 'Enter' of modern editions the Folios and Quartos have 'Manet' or 'Manent.' I.e., as explained in the note on III. i.S.d., no new scene was necessary here on the Elizabethan stage: the armies marched off and Brutus and Cassius simply 'remained' in conference, but the locality none the less was supposed to shift to the inside of Brutus' tent.

IV.iii.20, 21. What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, And not for justice? 'What one of the conspirators was such a villain that he stabbed Cæsar from any other motive than for justice's sake?' Brutus means, of course, to imply that there was none such then, and they must be doubly careful to avoid giving ground for any such imputation now.

IV.iii.25, 26. The infinite spiritual extent of true honor is contrasted with the petty material extent of a handful of money.

IV.iii.28. Brutus, bay not me. 'Bay' (Theobald's widely accepted emendation of the Folio reading 'bait') is a savage and threatening quibble on Cassius' part: 'Don't bark at me, Brutus, and don't bring me to bay either (cf. note on IV.i.51, 52), hedging me in with snarling accusations and goading me on with taunts, or I'll turn on you and then it will be the worse for you.' 'Bait' can be given almost the same interpretation, with refetence to bear-baiting, but misses the neat repartee in the repeated 'bay.'

IV.iii.101. Pluto's. As god of the infernal regions, Pluto might well be supposed to command great wealth. As Milton says, 'Let none admire That riches grow in Hell; that soil may best Deserve the precious bane.' Many editors, however, prefer to follow Pope in reading 'Plutus',' the god of riches. Confusion between the two occurred in classical times as well as in Elizabethan.

IV.iii.109-112. This badly mixed metaphor can be straightened out if we punctuate 'lamb,—' and interpret 'That' as 'With one that, with a man who,' thus: 'O Cassius, you are associated with a mere lamb,—with a man whose anger is as negative and latent as the fire in a flint, which needs a hard blow before showing any flame at all and even then yields only a momentary spark.'

IV.iii.152. grief. The grammatical construction breaks down here (though the sense is clear enough), unless we (1) construe 'grief' with 'impatient of' in the preceding line, thus: 'Unable to endure my absence and her own sorrow over Antony's success'; or (2) read 'grieved' for 'grief,' thus: 'Impatient and grieved, in this situation she fell distract,' etc.

IV.iii.183. Nothing, Messala. Various more or less plausible attempts have been made to defend Brutus from this most unpleasant appearance of deceiving Messala in order to win applause for his fortitude under affliction, but the best way out of the difficulty lies in accepting the suggestion of J. Resch that two alternative versions of Brutus' stoical conduct have been accidentally taken over into the Folio text from the MS. or prompt-book copy.

V.i. 53. three-and-thirty. According to North's Plutarch the number of Cæsar's wounds was three-and-twenty, and several editors have followed Theobald in making the somewhat meticulous correction.

V.i.111-115. In these lines Brutus has been charged by many critics with flatly contradicting his declaration against suicide in lines 111, 112; but the inconsistency disappears if the significance of lines 122, 123 be grasped (by a proper interpretation of 'Must') as merely restating the stoical fatalism of lines 116, 117, for Brutus really says simply this: 'No, Cassius, you are an Epicurean and do not understand, and I cannot take the time now to explain things to you. No, I bear too great a mind ever to go bound to Rome: but (my mere human mind does not have to settle this point, for) this same day Must (i.e., will certainly) end that work the ides of March begun.' I.e., 'I do not have to alter my resolution against suicide for Fate will decide, and to-day either we shall kill Cæsar's usurping successors as we killed Cæsar himself, or we shall ourselves die fighting and thus even the score, pay the reckoning, for Cæsar's death.' This, as Hunter points out, is Brutus' expression of mere speculative theory; if, like Hamlet, he does not live up to his professed principles and abstract resolution when the actual test comes, that is but part of his tragic failure.

V. iii.109,110. The 'second fight' really took place twenty days later. Cf. note on I.i.32.

V.iv.7. No speaker's name precedes this speech in the Folios, and it is accordingly assigned to Brutus on the strength of modern editorial authority only. Some editors, however, would assign it to Lucilius, in order to prepare the audience for his assumption of the rôle of Brutus in lines 7, 8 below.

V.iv.13,14. Many editors supply a stage direction [Offering money] to explain 'There is so much'; but surely there would be little sense in offering to give part, where all would naturally fall to his slayer. So Lucilius presumably meant simply this: 'I yield only to ensure dying at once: and there is so much reason for my death and so much advantage in it for you that you will doubtless kill me immediately; for you have only to kill me, i.e., Brutus, in order to win great honor and rewards.'

V.v.2, 3. This passage is somewhat obscure without its original context in North's Plutarch: 'Brutus thought that there was no great number of men slain in battle: and to know the truth of it, there was one called Statilius, that promised to go through his enemies, for otherwise it was impossible to go see their camp: and from thence, if all were well, that he would lift up a torch-light in the air, and then return again with speed to him.'—Life of Brutus.

V.v.71, 72. 'He consented to join them only on impersonal principles of honor and in the hope of promoting the welfare of all.'

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, except for the following deviations:

1. The stage directions of the Folio have been restored as far as possible, with necessary modern additions in square brackets.

2. The punctuation, especially in the use of exclamation points, has been modernized, and the spelling of Calpurnia brought into conformity with current usage.

3. The only significant verbal departures—usually in the direction of a return to the Folio—are listed below, the readings adopted in the present text being placed before the colon while Craig's readings follow it; and Folio authority is given wherever involved:

I.i. 62 whether: whe'r (F where)
ii.161 walks F: walls
iii.111 these F: those
II.i.73 moe F: more
287 you are F: are you
296 or F: of
ii. 80 statue F: statua
III.i.34 Cæs. F: Casca
220 lethe (F1 Lethee F4 Lethe): leth
223 stricken F2, 3, 4: strucken (F1 stroken)
ii.S.d.et pas. Plebeians F: Citizens
194 statue F: statua
IV.i.40 objects, arts F: abject orts
iii.14 speaks (speakes F): speak
111 Pluto's F: Plutus'
V.iii.65 to night F: to-night
104 whether: whe'r (F where)
111 Thasos: Thassos (F Tharsus)
iv.19 Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my Lord F: Brutus is ta'en, my lord
31 whether: whe'r (F where)

The Tragedy of Hamlet

Prince of Denmark

Edited by Tucker Brooke
and
Jack Randall Crawford

Dramatis Personae

Claudius, the new King of Denmark
Hamlet, Son to the late, and Nephew to the present King
Fortinbras, Prince of Norway
Polonius, a Lord and High Official (probably Lord Chamberlain)
Laertes, his Son
Horatio, the Friend of Hamlet
Voltimand, Cornelius, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, Osric } Courtiers
Marcellus, a Danish Officer
Francisco, Bernardo } Soldiers on sentry duty
Reynaldo, Servant to Polonius
A Norwegian Captain
Players on tour
Two clowns, gravediggers
English Ambassadors, a Priest, a Gentleman, Soldiers, Sailor, Messenger, and various Attendants
Gertrude, Queen of Denmark and Mother of Hamlet
Ophelia, Daughter of Polonius
Ghost of Hamlet's father

Scene—The royal castle of Elsinore (Helsingør), Denmark, and its environs.

The Tragedy of Hamlet

Introduction

Sources of the Play

There are two early references to the name 'Hamlet,' or 'Amleth,' one (spelled in Irish fashion 'Amhlaide') in The Annals of Ireland by the Four Masters,[1] under the year 917, and the other (spelled 'Amlothi') in Snorri's Prose Edda, about three centuries later.[2] The outline of the story of Hamlet, as we are familiar with it, is first found in the Historia Danica of Saxo Grammaticus, a Danish chronicler who lived at the end of the twelfth century.[3]

Saxo's version contains the following elements in common with Shakespeare's: the murder of Hamlet's father by the latter's ambitious brother; the mother's incestuous marriage with the murderer; the son's feigned madness, or "folly," for the purpose of carrying out his revenge; a foreshadowing of the character of Ophelia by the girl thrown in Hamlet's way that the true state of his mind may be discovered; a foreshadowing of the character of Polonius; the scene between mother and son,[4] the voyage to England with two companions, during which Hamlet alters the letter, and the companions are put to death in his stead; Hamlet's return to kill his uncle, a deed which he accomplishes. The ending differs.

François de Belleforest published about 1570 a free translation of Saxo's Hamlet story in French prose in the fifth book of his Histoires Tragiques. Although many editions of this appeared in France before 1600, there is no evidence of an English version before the publication by Thomas Pavier of the Hystorie of Hamblet in 1608. This English translation differs in a few particulars from Belleforest, and these differences seem to be due to the influence of Shakespeare's play. Thus, in Belleforest the counsellor who acts the spy during Amleth's (Hamlet's) interview with his mother, conceals himself under a bed-quilt, upon which Amleth leaps when entering the room and so discovers the eavesdropper. In the Hystorie, the counsellor hides behind the arras, as in the play. Again, Hamblet, at the moment of this discovery, calls out "A rat! A rat!," of which there is no trace in Belleforest.

There is another, and more direct, source for Shakespeare's play, viz., an earlier play by another author on the same subject. The evidence for the existence of such a work is as follows: In 1589 was published Greene's Menaphon with a prefatory epistle by Thomas Nashe "to the Gentlemen Students of both Vniuersities." In this epistle, Nashe briefly reviews contemporary literature and refers to "whole Hamlets, I should say Handfuls, of tragical speeches," linking this remark with a reference to Seneca.

The next reference to an early play of Hamlet is from the Diary of Philip Henslowe,[5] the theatrical manager, for the year 1594.

"Ye 9 of June 1594. R[eceive]d. at hamlet, viijs". At this time the Lord Chamberlain's and the Lord Admiral's men were playing for Henslowe at the theatre at Newington Butts. The former company was the one to which Shakespeare belonged.

Lodge's Wit's Misery, and the World's Madness, published in 1596, contains this passage: The devil, Hate-Virtue, is 'a foul lubber, . . . and looks pale as the visard of the ghost, which cried so miserably at the Theator, like an oyster-wife, Hamlet reuenge.'

The cumulative evidence is conclusive for the existence of a play on the subject of Hamlet at an earlier date than any at which Shakespeare can have been concerned with it. The general consensus of opinion is that this earlier play was by Thomas Kyd, the author of the Spanish Tragedie. Nashe's preface to Greene's Menaphon, already alluded to, contains a punning reference to "the Kid in Aesop." Kyd's known plays show marked Senecan influence.[6] The probability that Kyd was the author of the earlier Hamlet is further substantiated by resemblances between the Spanish Tragedie and Shakespeare's Hamlet. In both the motive is revenge; the ghost of the victim relates his story; the hero feigns madness; in each play there is a faithful friend named Horatio; each contains a play within a play; the innocent and guilty alike are involved in the catastrophes.

Although no actual trace of this earlier play has been found, most scholars believe that a German manuscript, dated October 27, 1710, and published in 1781, preserves some material from the original version. This manuscript is possibly a modernized copy of an older one which was first translated when a troupe of English actors visited Germany at the end of the sixteenth century.[7] The German play is entitled, Der Bestrafte Brudermord oder: Prinz Hamlet aus Dänemark. (Fratricide Punished, or Prince Hamlet of Denmark.) It opens with an allegorical prologue which shows unmistakable Senecan influence. Likewise Polonius is here called Corambus, which corresponds with his name 'Corambis' in the First Quarto. For the most part, this German play is exceedingly crude and coarse, although the outline of the plot action follows Shakespeare's closely. It is, however, devoid of literary merit.

To sum up: the story of Hamlet was taken by Belleforest from Saxo's chronicle. Shakespeare received it either from Belleforest, direct, or from an earlier unknown publication of the translation of Belleforest of which the Hystorie of Hamblet is a later version, or (as is most likely) he founded his play on an earlier tragedy which was probably by Thomas Kyd. The traces of Senecan influence in Shakespeare's Hamlet are due either to this earlier play or to the general and common influence of Seneca upon Elizabethan tragic playwrights.

1 Cf. the Introduction to Gollancz's Hamlet in Iceland, p. li.

2 For an attempt to reconstruct the primitive plot see the last chapter in The Literary History of Hamlet. I, The Early Tradition, by Kemp Malone (1923).

3 For most of the materials here referred to see Sir Israel Gollancz, The Sources of Hamlet, 1926.

4 Cf. Hamlet, III. iv.

5 The entry differs from those Henslowe made when the play mentioned was a new one.

6 He was also the translator of a Seneca-like tragedy entitled Cornelia, by the French tragic writer Garnier.

7 The earliest reference known to a performance of Hamlet by English actors in Germany is in the year 1626.

History of the Play

The stage history of Hamlet is practically that of the English-speaking stage itself. Almost all the great actors of England and America, from Shakespeare's day to this, have appeared as the Prince. In addition, for the past one hundred years, it has been frequently played in the principal European countries. It is safe to say that no other play of Shakespeare's has been more often performed.

Richard Burbage, the leading actor of Shakespeare's company, was undoubtedly the first Hamlet. From the meagre accounts of his style of acting which have survived, we may infer that, like subsequent great interpreters of the part, he was distinguished for the ease and naturalness of his art. The famous lines at the opening of III.ii., 'Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue,' etc. may indeed be a defense of Burbage's style against the more flamboyant method of his great rival, Edward Alleyn.[8] Burbage died three years after Shakespeare and left the rôle of Hamlet for Joseph Taylor, who performed it with applause at the Globe and Blackfriars playhouses until the closing of the theatres in 1642.

After the Restoration, Thomas Betterton achieved great fame in this rôle. He was instructed in his interpretation by Sir William Davenant, who had seen the Blackfriars' company act the play. Betterton for the first time introduced scenery into Hamlet, and, if we are to trust the Quarto of 1676, established many of the traditions subsequently followed in acting versions.

David Garrick was the leading interpreter of Hamlet during the middle portion of the eighteenth century. He first appeared in the part on November 16, 1734, and continued to play it many times until he left the stage in 1776. Garrick introduced alterations of his own into the text, one of which was the omission of the churchyard scene (V.i.), but he was not followed by others in this.[9] The latter years of the eighteenth century saw what many to this day consider must have been the greatest Hamlet of them all, John Philip Kemble, with his sister, Mrs. Siddons, as Ophelia. Kemble restored the text as written by Shakespeare and abolished the Garrick innovations.

The nineteenth century witnessed, in England and America, a number of excellent Hamlets, of whom the best remembered are Edmund Kean, Macready, Samuel Phelps, Fletcher, Edwin Booth, Sir Henry Irving, Wilson Barrett, Sir Herbert Tree, Martin Harvey, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, and E. H. Sothern. Later interpretations by John Barrymore, John Gielgud, and Maurice Evans have made theatrical history. The supposed innovation of 'Hamlet in modern dress' in the late 1920's aroused much controversy till it was recalled that the play was so acted in Shakespeare's time, and even in Garrick's.[10] Ten years later the admirable full-length Hamlet of Margaret Webster and Maurice Evans freshened appreciation and vindicated the staying powers both of the play and the audiences.

Many of the most artistic and remarkable of the modern productions of Hamlet have been produced in Russia, where it has had a special vogue, beginning with the novel and historic presentation designed by Gordon Craig for the Art Theatre in Moscow. Nor is there any indication that the popularity of this play upon the stage has dimmed. It still remains the test of the summit of achievement for the art of a tragic actor.

8 Because of the different stage conditions and different conception of oratory, all Elizabethan acting would have seemed formalized to us rather than naturalistic. See Alfred Harbage, 'Elizabethan Acting,' PMLA, Sept., 1939.

9 See G. W. Stone, 'Garrick's Long Lost Alteration of Hamlet,' PMLA, Sept., 1934.

10 See Max Huhner, 'Hamlet in Modern Dress,' Poet Lore, 1926.

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Elsinore. Platform of the Castle]
Enter Bernardo and Francisco, two Sentinels.

Ber. Who's there?
Fran. Nay, answer me; stand, and unfold yourself.
Ber. Long live the king!
Fran. Bernardo?
Ber. He.
Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.
Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.
Fran. For this relief much thanks; 'tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.
Ber. Have you had quiet guard?
Fran. Not a mouse stirring.
Ber. Well, good night.
If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho! Who is there?
Hor. Friends to this ground.
Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.
Fran. Give you good night.
Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier.
Who hath reliev'd you?
Fran. Bernardo hath my place.
Give you good night Exit Francisco.
Mar. Holla! Bernardo!
Ber. Say,—
What, is Horatio there?
Hor. A piece of him.
Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus.
Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again to-night?
Ber. I have seen nothing.
Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy,
And will not let belief take hold of him
Touching this dreaded sight twice seen of us.
Therefore I have entreated him along
With us to watch the minutes of this night,
That if again this apparition come,
He may approve our eyes and speak to it.
Hor. Tush, tush! 'twill not appear.
Ber. Sit down awhile,
And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we have two nights seen.
Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.
Ber. Last night of all,
When yond same star that's westward from the pole
Had made his course t' illume that part of heaven
Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself,
The bell then beating one,—

Enter Ghost.

Mar. Peace! break thee off; look, where it comes again!
Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.
Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio.
Ber. Looks 'a not like the king? mark it, Horatio.
Hor. Most like: it harrows me with fear and wonder.
Ber. It would be spoke to.
Mar. Question it, Horatio.
Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night,
Together with that fair and warlike form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!
Mar. It is offended.
Ber. See! it stalks away.
Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak! Exit Ghost.
Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.
Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble and look pale.
Is not this something more than fantasy?
What think you on 't?
Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.
Mar. Is it not like the king?
Hor. As thou art to thyself:
Such was the very armor he had on
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
He smote the sleaded pole-axe on the ice.
'Tis strange.
Mar. Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.
Hor. In what particular thought to work I know not;
But in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.
Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,
Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land;
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week;
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-laborer with the day:
Who is 't that can inform me?
Hor. That can I;
At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,
Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet
(For so this side of our known world esteem'd him,)
Did slay this Fortinbras; who by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit with his life all those his lands

S.d. Platform: level space on castle ramparts 3 Long . . . king!; cf. n. 14 rivals: partners 16 Friends . . . Dane; cf. n. 18 Give you: God give you 26 piece; cf. n. 30 fantasy: imagination 36 approve: confirm 39 assail your ears; i.e., try to tell you 46 his; cf. n.

51 scholar; cf. n. 52 'a: dialect form of 'he' (sometimes 'it') mark: observe closely 54 It . . . to; cf. n 59 sometimes: formerly 68 sensible: involving the use of one of the senses avouch: assurance 74 parle: verbal encounter 75 sleaded: weighted (as a sledge-hammer) pole-axe: battle-ax; cf. n. 77 jump: just 79 thought: train of thinking 80 gross and scope: general drift 82 Good now; cf. n. 84 toils: causes to toil subject: people, subjects 85 cast: founding 86 mart: traffic 87 impress: enforced service 89 toward: in preparation 96 prick'd on: incited emulate: ambitious 98 this side . . . world; i.e., all Europe 100 law and heraldry; cf. n.

Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror;
Against the which a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king, which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same cov'nant,
And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway here and there
Shark'd up a list of lawless resolutes,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in 't; which is no other,
As it doth well appear unto our state,
But to recover of us by strong hand
And terms compulsatory, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost. And this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations,
The source of this our watch and the chief head
Of this post-haste and romage in the land.
«Ber. I think it be no other but e'en so;
Well may it sort that this portentous figure
Comes armed through our watch, so like the king
That was and is the question of these wars.
Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye.
In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets.
[Astounding portents fill'd the element,]
As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands
Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse;
And even the like precurse of fear'd events,
As harbingers preceding still the fates
And prologue to the omen coming on,
Have heaven and earth together demonstrated
Unto our climatures and countrymen.»

Enter Ghost again.

But, soft, behold! lo, where it comes again!
I'll cross it, though it blast me. Stay, illusion!
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me! It spreads his arms.
If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease and grace to me,
Speak to me!
If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which happily foreknowing may avoid,
O speak!
Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death,
The cock crows.
Speak of it: stay, and speak! Stop it, Marcellus.
Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan?
Hor. Do, if it will not stand.
Ber. 'Tis here!
Hor. 'Tis here!
Exit Ghost.
Mar. 'Tis gone!
We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.
Ber. It was about to speak when the cock crew.
Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
Th' extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine; and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.
Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long
And then, they say, no spirit dare stir abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is that time.
Hor. So have I heard and do in part believe it.
But, look, the morn in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastward hill.
Break we our watch up; and by my advice
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet, for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?
Mar. Let's do 't, I pray; and I this morning know
Where we shall find him most conveniently. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The King's Council Chamber]
Flourish. Enter Claudius King of Denmark, Gertrude the Queen [members of the] Council as Polonius and his son Laertes, [Voltimand and Cornelius,] Hamlet, cum aliis.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death
The memory be green, and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief and our whole kingdom
To be contracted in one brow of woe,

102 seiz'd of: possessed of; cf. n. 103 moiety competent: equal amount 104 gaged: staked 106 cov'nant; cf. n. 107 carriage: import design'd: drawn up 109 unimproved mettle: untested courage hot and full: exceedingly ardent 110 skirts: outskirts 111 Shark'd up: picked up at haphazard list; cf.n. resolutes: desperadoes 113 stomach; cf. n. 116 compulsatory: involving compulsion 119 head: origin 120 romage: commotion, bustle 121–139 Not in Folio 122 sort: fit 125 mote: minute particle of dust 126 palmy state: flourishing sovereignty 130 Astounding . . . element; cf. n. 131 As: such as 132 Disasters: unfavorable omens moist star: moon 134 sick . . . doomsday; cf. n. 135 precurse: heralding fear'd; cf. n. 136 still: constantly 137 prologue: introduction omen: catastrophe 139 climatures; cf. n. 141 cross: meet, face S.d. his: its (the ghost's) 145 [do] grace: do honor to 148 happily: haply 150 uphoarded; cf. n.

154 partisan; cf. n. 166 cock; cf. n. 170 extravagant: vagrant erring: wandering hies: hastens 171 confine: place of confinement 172 probation: proof 173–180 Cf. n. 175 'gainst that: by the time that 179 planets strike: cf. n. 180 takes: bewitches 180 gracious: instinct with goodness 182 russet: gray or reddish-brown (betokening dull weather) I.ii.S.d. Flourish: a trumpet call cum aliis; cf. n. 4 one brow of woe: unanimity of sorrow

Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
Th' imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy,
With an auspicious and a dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole,
Taken to wife. Nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along. For all, our thanks.
Now follows that you know young Fortinbras,
Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
Or thinking by our late dear brother's death
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Colleagued with this dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father with all bands of law
To our most valiant brother. So much for him.
Now for ourself and for this time of meeting.
Thus much the business is: we have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose, to suppress
His further gait herein in that the levies,
The lists and full proportions are all made
Out of his subject; and we here dispatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway,
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the king more than the scope
Of these delated articles allow.
Farewell and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. } In that and all things will we show our duty.
Vol. }

King. We doubt is nothing: heartily farewell.
Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.
And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice. What wouldst thou beg, Laertes,
That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer. Dread my lord,
Your leave and favor to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty in your coronation,

9 jointress: joint possessor 10 defeated: dispirited 11 an auspicious: one happy a dropping: one tearful 13 dole: grief 17 Now . . . know: I must next inform you 18 weak supposal: low opinion 20 disjoint: at loose ends frame: order 21 Colleagued . . . advantage: conspired with himself to profit by this imaginary opportunity 23 Importing: bearing as its purport 24 bands: assurances 31 gait: proceeding in that: because 32 proportions: supplies, forces 33 his subject: liegemen of Norway 38 delated: expressly stated 47 lose your voice: speak to no purpose 49 native: closely and congenitally connected 50 instrumental: serviceable 53 Dread my lord: my revered lord 54 leave and favor: kind permission

Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, «wrung from me my slow leave
By laborsome petition, and at last
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent.»
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,
And thy best graces spend it at thy will.
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. [Aside.] A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i' th' sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted color off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not for ever with thy vailed lids
Seek for thy noble father in the dust.
Thou know'st 'tis common; all that lives must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! Nay, it is; I know not 'seems.'
'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected havior of the visage,
Together with all forms, moods, shapes of grief
That can denote me truly. These indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that within which passes show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your father.
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his, and the survivor bound
In filial obligation for some term
To do obsequious sorrow; but to perséver
In obstinate condolement is a course
Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief.
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,
An understanding simple and unschool'd:
For what we know must be and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we in our peevish opposition
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd, whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse till he that died to-day,
'This must be so.' We pray you, throw to earth

59 leave and pardon: indulgence [to depart] 61–63 wrung, etc.; not in Folio 63 hard: given with difficulty 66 graces: virtues 67 cousin: nephew 68 kin . . . kind; cf. n. 70 i' th' sun; cf. n. 73 vailed: down-cast 75 common: the common lot 79 particular: personal 83 windy suspiration: tempestuous sighing forc'd: against one's will 84 fruitful: copious 85 havior: behavior 87 denote: portray 94 bound: was bound 96 obsequious: dutiful 97 condolement: sorrowing 99 incorrect to: unchastened toward 103 vulgar . . . sense: common experience 109 corse: corpse 110 throw to earth: drop (like a burden on one's back)

This unprevailing woe, and think of us
As of a father; for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne,
And with no less nobility of love
Than that which dearest father bears his son
Do I impórtune you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire;
And we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.
Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers, Hamlet.
I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.
Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.
King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply!
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come.
This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart; in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit again,
Re-speaking earthy thunder. Come away.
Flourish. Exeunt all but Hamlet.
Ham. O that this too too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw and resolve itself into a dew!
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world.
Fie on 't! ah, fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead! nay, not so much, not two.
So excellent a king, that was to this
Hyperion to a satyr; so loving to my mother
That he might not beteem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on; and yet, within a month,—
Let me not think on 't! Frailty, thy name is woman.
A little month; or ere those shoes were old
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears; why she,—
O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer,—married with my uncle,
My father's brother, but no more like my father
Than I to Hercules. Within a month,
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married. O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets.
It is not, nor it cannot come to, good.—
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue.

111 unprevailing: unavailing 113 most immediate: next in succession 116 importune: entreat; cf. n. 117 Wittenberg: cf. n. 118 retrograde: contrary 119 bend: incline 131 rouse: revelry, 'carousing' bruit: echo 134 resolve: dissolve 136 cannon: divine law 138 uses: usages 141 merely: entirely 144 Hyperion: cf. n. 145 beteem: allow 153 Niobe: cf. n. 154 discourse of reason: reasoning power 159 left the flushing: ceased to produce redness galled: sore with weeping 160 post: hasten 161 dexterity: facility

Enter Horatio, Marcellus and Bernardo.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!
Ham. I am glad to see you well.
Horatio! or I do forget myself.
Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.
Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you.
And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?
Marcellus?
Mar. My good lord,—
Ham. I am very glad to see you. [To Bernardo.] Good even, sir.
But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?
Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.
Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so,
Nor shall you do my ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself; I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore?
We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.
Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.
Ham. I prithee, do not mock me, fellow-student.
I think it was to see my mother's wedding.
Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.
Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral bak'd meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!
My father, methinks I see my father.
Hor. Where, my lord?
Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.
Hor. I saw him once; 'a was a goodly king.
Ham. 'A was a man! take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.
Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.
Ham. Saw? Who?
Hor. My lord, the king your father.
Ham. The king, my father?
Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attent ear, till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.
Ham. For God's love, let me hear.
Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead waste and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd: a figure like your father,
Armed at point exactly, cap-a-pe,
Appears before them, and with solemn march
Goes slow and stately by them. Thrice he walk'd
By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes,
Within his truncheon's length; whilst they, distill'd
Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did,
And I with them the third night kept the watch;

166 forget myself; cf. n. 168 change that name: share the name of friend 175 disposition: temperament 181 to drink deep; cf. n. 186 bak'd meats: meat pies; cf. n. 187 coldly: when cold 188 dearest: direst 189 Or: before 200 Season: temper, qualify admiration: wonder 201 attent: attentive 207 waste; cf. n. 209 at point: in full readiness cap-a-pe: from head to foot 213 truncheon: officer's' staff distill'd: melted 214 act: operation

Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and good,
The apparition comes. I knew your father;
These hands are not more like.
Ham. But where was this?
Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch.
Ham. Did you not speak to it?
Hor. My lord, I did;
But answer made it none; yet once methought
It lifted up it head and did address
Itself to motion, like as it would speak;
But even then the morning cock crew loud,
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away
And vanish'd from our sight.
Ham. 'Tis very strange.
Hor. As I do live, my honor'd lord, 'tis true;
And we did think it writ down in our duty
To let you know of it.
Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.
Hold you the watch to-night?
All. We do, my lord.
Ham. Arm'd, say you?
All. Arm'd, my lord.
Ham. From top to toe?
All. My lord, from head to foot.
Ham. Then saw you not his face.
Hor. O yes, my lord; he wore his beaver up.
Ham. What! look'd he frowningly?
Hor. A countenance more in sorrow than in anger.
Ham. Pale or red?
Hor. Nay, very pale.
Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?
Hor. Most constantly.
Ham. I would I had been there.
Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.
Ham. Very like.
Stay'd it long?
Hor. While one with moderate haste
Might tell a hundredth.
Both. Longer, longer.
Hor. Not when I saw 't.
Ham. His beard was grizzled, no?
Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd.
Ham. I will watch to-night;
Perchance 'twill walk again.
Hor. I warr'nt it will.
Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still;
And whatsomever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue.
I will requite your loves. So, fare you well.
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.
All. Our duty to your honor.

227 it: its; cf. n. 244 beaver: face-guard of a helmet 256 tell: count hundredth: hundred (a Norse form) 259 grizzled: grey 261 sable: heraldic term for black 269 Let . . . tenable: see that you keep it 270 whatsomever: whatever

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you. Farewell.
Exeunt [all but Hamlet].
My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
I doubt some foul play. Would the night were come!
Till then sit still, my soul: foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. Exit.

Scene Third

[Polonius' Apartment in the Castle]
Enter Laertes and Ophelia, his sister.

Laer. My necessaries are embark'd; farewell:
And, sister, as the winds give benefit
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.
Oph. Do you doubt that?
Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favor,
Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood,
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute;
No more.
Oph. No more but so?
Laer. Think it no more:
For nature crescent does not grow alone
In thews and bulk, but as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you now,
And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch
The virtue of his will; but you must fear.
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own,
⟨For he himself is subject to his birth⟩.
He may not, as unvalu'd persons do,
Carve for himself, for on his choice depends
The safety and health of this whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
Unto the voice and yielding of that body
Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves you,
It fits your wisdom so far to believe it
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed; which is no further
Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then weigh what loss your honor may sustain,
If with too credent ear you list his songs,
Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster'd importunity.
Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest maid is prodigal enough
If she unmask her beauty to the moon;
Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes;

2 give benefit: are favorable 3 convoy: means of conveyance 7 fashion: mere form toy in blood: passing amorous fancy 8 violet: cf. n. primy: spring-like 9 Forward: precocious 10 suppliance: diversion 14 crescent: growing 15 thews: bodily strength temple: body 17 withal: also 18 soil: blemish cautel: trickery 19 virtue of his will: his virtuous intentions 21 not in Quarto 22 unvalu'd: untitled 26 voice and yielding: approval and compliance 29 place: position as a prince; cf. n. 30 deed: effect 33 credent: trustful list: listen to 35 unmaster'd: unrestrained 39 chariest: most scrupulous

The canker galls the infants of the spring
Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd,
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary then; best safety lies in fear:
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.
Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep,
As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother,
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own rede.
Laer. O fear me not.

Enter Polonius.

I stay too long, but here my father comes.
A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.
Pol. Yet here, Laertes? aboard, aboard, for shame!
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There, my blessing with thee!
And these few precepts in thy memory
Look thou charácter. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar;
Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them unto thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comráde. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel, but, being in,
Bear 't that th' opposed may beware of thee.
Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man,
And they in France of the best rank and station
Are of a most select and generous clef in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulleth edge of husbandry.
This above all: to thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell; my blessing season this in thee!
Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.
Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants tend.
Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.
Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

42 canker: caterpillar galls: injures infants: young plants 43 buttons: buds disclos'd: opened 44 liquid dew: while the dew is still fresh 45 blastments: blights 50 ungracious: graceless 52 puff'd: bloated from excess 53 primrose path: path of pleasure 54 recks: heeds rede: counsel fear me not: don't worry about me 57 double; cf. n. 58 Occasion: opportunity smiles upon: favors me with 60 wind . . . of; cf. n. 62 precepts; cf. n. 63 character: inscribe 64 unproportion'd: inordinate 65 familiar: friendly 68 dull thy palm: make yourself less sensitive to true friendship 69 unfledg'd: immature 73 censure: opinion 75 express'd in fancy: singular in design 78 generous: aristocratic clef: musical key, tone; cf. n. 81 husbandry: thrift 85 season this: make my admonition palatable 86 tend: are in waiting

Laer. Farewell. Exit Laertes.
Pol. What is 't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?
Oph. So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet.
Pol. Marry, well bethought:
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous.
If it be so,—as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution,—I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behoves my daughter and your honor.
What is between you? give me up the truth.
Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders
Of his affection to me.
Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak like a green girl,
Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?
Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.
Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby,
That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;
Or (not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Running it thus) you'll tender me a fool.
Oph. My lord, he hath impórtun'd me with love
In honorable fashion.
Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it. Go to, go to.
Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.
Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat, extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a-making,
You must not take for fire. From this time
Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence;
Set your entreatments at a higher rate
Than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him: that he is young,
And with a larger tether may he walk
Than may be given you. In few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers,
Not of that dye which their investments show,
But mere implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds,
The better to beguile. This is for all:
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so slander any moment leisure,
As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet.
Look to 't, I charge you; come your ways.
Oph. I shall obey, my lord. Exeunt.

97 private time: time in private visits 99 put on: impressed on 104 tenders: offers; cf. n. 106 green: inexperienced 107 Unsifted: untried circumstance: state of affairs 112 sterling: legal currency 114 Running; cf. n. 120 springes: snares woodcocks; cf. n. 127 entreatments: interviews 131 In few: briefly 132 brokers: go-betweens, procurers 133 investments: vestments, clothes 134 implorators: solicitors 135 bawds; cf. n. 138 slander: bring reproach upon

Scene Fourth

[The Platform of the Castle]
Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.
Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.
Ham. What hour now?
Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.
Mar. No, it is struck.
Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: it then draws near the season
Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

A flourish of trumpets, and two pieces [of ordnance] go off.

What does this mean, my lord?
Ham. The king doth wake to-night and takes his rouse,
Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring reels;
And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.
Hor. Is it a custom?
Ham. Ay, marry, is 't:
But to my mind, though I am native here
And to the manner born, it is a custom
More honor'd in the breach than the observance.
«This heavy-headed revel east and west
Makes us traduc'd and tax'd of other nations;
They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase
Soil our addition; and indeed it takes
From our achievements, though perform'd at height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chances in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As, in their birth, (wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin),
By the o'ergrowth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason,
Or by some habit that too much o'er-leavens
The form of plausive manners; that these men,
Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect,
Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,—
His virtues else, be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault. The dram of eale
Doth all the noble substance oft adulter
To his own scandal.»

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!
Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell,
Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
Thou com'st in such a questionable shape
That I will speak to thee. I'll call thee Hamlet,
King, father, royal Dane! O answer me:
Let me not burst in ignorance, but tell
Why thy canóniz'd bones, hearsed in death,
Have burst their cerements; why the sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee up again? What may this mean,
That thou, dead corse, again in cómplete steel
Revisits thus the glimpses of the moon,
Making night hideous; and we fools of nature
So horridly to-shake our disposition
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?
Ghost beckons Hamlet.
Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.
Mar. Look, with what courteous action
It waves you to a more removed ground:
But do not go with it.
Hor. No, by no means.
Ham. It will not speak. Then, I will follow it.
Hor. Do not, my lord.
Ham. Why, what should be the fear?
I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
And for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?
It waves me forth again; I'll follow it.
Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord,
Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff
That beetles o'er his base into the sea,
And there assume some other horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason
And draw you into madness? think of it;
«The very place puts toys of desperation,
Without more motive, into every brain
That looks so many fadoms to the sea
And hears it roar beneath.»
Ham. It waves me still. Go on! I'll follow thee.
Mar. You shall not go, my lord.
Ham. Hold off your hands!
Hor. Be rul'd; you shall not go.
Ham. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty arture in this body
As hardy as the Némean lion's nerve.
Still am I call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen!
By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me.
I say, away!—Go on! I'll follow thee.
Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.
Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

2 eager: sharp 9 wake: hold a revel by night 10 Keeps wassail: holds a drinking-bout up-spring: wild dance of German origin 11 Rhenish: Rhine wine 13 pledge: toast 19-40 Not in Folio 20 traduc'd and tax'd: defamed and censured 21 clepe: call swinish phrase: name of 'pigs' 22 Soil our addition: blemish our good name 23 at height: to the maximum 24 attribute: reputation 26 mole: blemish 29 complexion: natural tendency, 'humor' 30 pales: defensive enclosures 31 o'er-leavens: makes too light 32 plausive: pleasing 34 nature's livery: a natural attribute fortune's star: the position in which one is placed by fortune 35 His; cf. n. 36 undergo: bear the weight of 38 dram: minute quantity eale: e'il, evil 39 oft adulter; cf. n. 40 scandal: shame 42 ministers of grace: messengers of God 43 spirit of health: good spirit goblin: evil spirit

46 questionable: inviting question 50 canoniz'd: buried according to the Church's rule hearsed: coffined 51 cerements: waxen grave-clothes 52 inurn'd: interred; cf. n. 56 glimpses of the moon: the earth by night 57 fools of nature: stupid in nature's presence 58 to-shake our disposition: shatter our composure 59 reaches: capacities 62 impartment: communication 71 at ... fee: at even a trifling value 75 flood: sea 77 beetles: overhangs threateningly 79 deprive ... reason: dethrone reason from its sovereignty 81-84 The ... beneath; not in Folio 81 toys of desperation: whims involving thoughts of self-destruction 83 fadoms: fathoms 90 arture: artery 91 Nemean lion's; cf. n. nerve: sinew, tendon 93 lets: hinders

Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.
Hor. Have after. To what issue will this come?
Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.
Hor. Heaven will direct it.
Mar. Nay, let's follow him. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

[A more remote Part of the Platform]
Enter Ghost and Hamlet.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? speak; I'll go no further.
Ghost. Mark me.
Ham. I will.
Ghost. My hour is almost come,
When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames
Must render up myself.
Ham. Alas, poor ghost.
Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall unfold.
Ham. Speak; I am bound to hear.
Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.
Ham. What?
Ghost. I am thy father's spirit,
Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night,
And for the day confin'd to fast in fires,
Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature
Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,
Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand an end,
Like quills upon the fretful porpentine.
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood. List, list, oh list!
If thou didst ever thy dear father love—
Ham. O God!
Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murther.
Ham. Murther!
Ghost. Murther most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.
Ham. Haste me to know 't, that I, with wings as swift
As meditation or the thoughts of love,
May sweep to my revenge.
Ghost. I find thee apt;
And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That roots itself in ease on Lethe wharf,
Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear:
'Tis given out that, sleeping in my orchard,
A serpent stung me. So the whole ear of Denmark
Is by a forged process of my death
Rankly abus'd; but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life
Now wears his crown.

97 issue: outcome 21 spheres: orbits 22 knotted: neatly arranged combined: smoothly combed 23 an: on 24 porpentine: porcupine 25 eternal blazon: revelation of eternity; cf. n. 29 unnatural: i.e., for one brother to kill another 36 apt: ready to learn 37 fat weed; cf. n. 38 Lethe; cf. n. wharf: bank 40 orchard: garden 42 process: narrative 43 abus'd: deceived

Ham. O my prophetic soul!
My uncle?
Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,—
O wicked wit and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce!—won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming-virtuous queen.
O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline
Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!
But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven,
So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will sate itself in a celestial bed,
And prey on garbage.
But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be. Sleeping within my orchard,
My custom always of the afternoon,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursed hebona in a vial,
And in the porches of my ears did pour
The leperous distilment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man
That swift as quicksilver it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body,
And with a sudden vigor it doth posset
And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood. So did it mine;
And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth body.
Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd;
Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd, disappointed, unanel'd,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head.
[Ham.] O horrible! O horrible! most horrible!
[Ghost.] If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsomever thou pursu'st this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught. Leave her to heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!
The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire;
Adieu, adieu, adieu! Remember me. Exit.
Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?
And shall I couple hell? O fie! Hold, hold, my heart!

48 adulterate: adulterous 68 hebona: yew, notorious for its poisonous properties, but henbane and ebony are also involved 70 leperous: causing leprosy 73 gates and alleys: streets and lanes; cf. n. 74 posset: curdle 75 eager: sour 77 instant: instantaneous tetter: skin eruption bark'd about: covered (as with bark) 78 lazar-like: leprous-like 81 dispatch'd: bereft 83 Unhousel'd: without having received the Holy Communion disappointed: unprepared unanel'd: without having received extreme unction 84 reckoning: confession and absolution 86 O horrible; cf. n. 89 luxury: lasciviousness 95 matin: morning 96 uneffectual: heatless

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
But bear me stiffly up. Remember thee?
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee?
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
That youth and observation copied there;
And thy commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven!
O most pernicious woman!
O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables! Meet it is I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark. [Writing.]
So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word.
It is, 'Adieu, adieu! remember me.'
I have sworn 't.
Hor. and Mar. within. My lord! my lord!

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. Lord Hamlet!
Hor. Heaven secure him!
Ham. So be it!
Hor. Illo, ho, ho, my lord!
Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.
Mar. How is 't, my noble lord?
Hor. What news, my lord?
Ham. O wonderful!
Hor. Good my lord, tell it.
Ham. No; you will reveal it.
Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven!
Mar. Nor I, my lord.
Ham. How say you, then? would heart of man once think it? But you'll be secret?
Both. Ay, by heaven, my lord.
Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark, But he's an arrant knave.
Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave, To tell us this.
Ham. Why, right; you are in the right;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part;
You, as your business and desire shall point you,—
For every man hath business and desire,
Such as it is,—and, for my own poor part,
I will go pray.
Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.
Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; Yes, faith, heartily.
Hor. There's no offence, my lord.
Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio, And much offence, too. Touching this vision here, It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you. For your desire to know what is between us,
O'ermaster 't as you may. And now, good friends,
As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.
Hor. What is 't, my lord? we will.
Ham. Never make known what you have seen tonight.
Both. My lord, we will not.
Ham. Nay, but swear 't.
Hor. In faith, My lord, not I.
Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.
Ham. Upon my sword.
Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.
Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.
Ghost. Swear. Ghost cries under the stage.
Ham. Ha, ha, boy! sayst thou so? art thou there, true-penny? Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,— Consent to swear.
Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.
Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen. Swear by my sword.
Ghost. Swear.
Ham. Hic et ubique? then we'll shift our ground.
Come hither, gentlemen, and lay your hands
Again upon my sword. Swear by my sword
Never to speak of this that you have heard.
Ghost. Swear by his sword.
Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i' th' earth so fast? A worthy pioner! once more remove, good friends.
Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!
Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome. There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.
But come;
Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,
How strange or odd soe'er I bear myself,—
As I perchance hereafter shall think meet
To put an antic disposition on,—
That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,
With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake,
Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
As, 'Well, well, we know,' or, 'We could, an if we would;'
Or, 'If we list to speak,' or, 'There be, an if they might;'
Or such ambiguous giving out, to note
That you know aught of me. This do swear,
So grace and mercy at your most need help you.
Ghost. Swear. [They swear.]
Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! So, gentlemen,
With all my love I do commend me to you:
And what so poor a man as Hamlet is
May do t' express his love and friending to you,
God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;
And still your fingers on your lips, I pray.
The time is out of joint. O cursed spite,
That ever I was born to set it right!
Nay, come, let's go together. Exeunt.

103 distracted globe: confused head 104 table: writing-tablet 105 fond: foolish 106 saws: maxims pressures: impressions—as of a seal 116 word: watch-word 123 Illo, ho, ho: falconer's hunting call 124 come, bird, come: call which falconers use to their hawk in the air 136 arrant: thoroughgoing 140 circumstance: formality 146 whirling: eddying, incoherent 150 Saint Patrick; cf. n. 152 honest ghost; cf. n.

154 O'ermaster 't: conquer it 168 true-penny: honest fellow 173 sword; cf. n. 175 *Hic et ubique: here and everywhere 181 pioner: digger, miner 185 your; cf. n. 189 meet: proper 190 antic: fantastic 192 encumber'd: folded; cf. n. 193 doubtful: ambiguous 194 an if: an intensive form of if 196 to note: to give a sign 206 spite: vexatious circumstance

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE FIRST

Polonius' Apartment in the Castle
Enter old Polonius with his man [Reynaldo].

Pol. Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo.
Rey. I will, my lord.
Pol. You shall do marvel's wisely, good Reynaldo,
Before you visit him, to make inquire
Of his behavior.
Rey. My lord, I did intend it.
Pol. Marry, well said, very well said. Look you, sir,
Inquire me first what Danskers are in Paris;
And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,
What company, at what expense; and finding
By this encompassment and drift of question
That they do know my son, come you more nearer
Than your particular demands will touch it.
Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;
As thus, 'I know his father, and his friends,
And in part him.' Do you mark this, Reynaldo?
Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.
Pol. 'And in part him; but,' you may say, 'not well:
But if 't be he I mean, he's very wild,
Addicted so and so'; and there put on him
What forgeries you please: marry, none so rank
As may dishonor him; take heed of that;
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.
Rey. As gaming, my lord?
Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing,
Quarrelling, drabbing,—you may go so far.
Rey. My lord, that would dishonor him.
Pol. Faith, no, as you may season it in the charge.
You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency.
That's not my meaning; but breathe his faults so quaintly
That they may seem the taints of liberty,
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,
A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.
Rey. But, my good lord,—
Pol. Wherefore should you do this?
Rey. Ay, my lord,
I would know that.
Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;
And I believe it is a fetch of warrant.
You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' th' working,
Mark you,
Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd,
He closes with you in this consequence:
'Good sir,' or so, or 'friend,' or 'gentleman,'
According to the phrase or the addition
Of man and country—
Rey. Very good, my lord.
Pol. And then, sir, does 'a this,—'a does,—what was
I about to say? By the mass I was about to say something.
Where did I leave?
Rey. At 'closes in the consequence,'
At 'friend or so,' and 'gentleman.'
Pol. At 'closes in the consequence'? Ay, marry;
He closes thus: 'I know the gentleman;
I saw him yesterday, or th' other day,
Or then, or then, with such or such; and, as you say,
There was 'a gaming, there o'ertook in 's rouse,
There falling out at tennis'; or perchance,
'I saw him enter such a house of sale,'
Videlicet, a brothel, or so forth.
See you now;
Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth;
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlasses and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out.
So by my former lecture and advice
Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?
Rey. My lord, I have.
Pol. God be wi' ye; fare ye well.
Rey. Good my lord!
Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.
Rey. I shall, my lord.
Pol. And let him ply his music.
Rey. Well, my lord.
Pol. Farewell! Exit Reynaldo.

Enter Ophelia.

How now, Ophelia! what's the matter?
Oph. O my lord, my lord! I have been so affrighted.
Pol. With what, i' th' name of God?
Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,
Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbrac'd,
No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle;—
Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each other,
And with a look so piteous in purport
As if he had been loosed out of hell
To speak of horrors, he comes before me.
Pol. Mad for thy love?
Oph. My lord, I do not know;
But truly I do fear it.
Pol. What said he?
Oph. He took me by the wrist and held me hard,
Then goes he to the length of all his arm,
And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face

1 notes: instructions 3 marvel's: marvelously 4 inquire: investigation 8 Danskers: Danes 9 keep: live 11 encompassment: 'talking round' a subject question: conversation 13 particular demands: concrete questions 14 Take: assume 20 put on: impute to 21 forgeries: invented tales rank: excessive 23 wanton: unrestrained 28 drabbing: wenching 30 season: flavor charge: accusation 32 incontinency: habitual loose behavior 33 breathe . . . quaintly: hint . . . cleverly 34 taints of liberty: blemishes due to high spirits 36 savageness: wildness unreclaimed: untamed 37 Of general assault: to which all are liable 43 fetch of warrant: justifiable trick 44 sullies: blemishes 45 Cf. n. 48 prenominate: aforesaid

50 closes . . . consequence: confides in you as follows 57 leave: leave off 64 o'ertook in 's rouse: unable to hold his liquor 67 Videlicet: namely 70 reach: resourcefulness 71 windlasses: roundabout ways assays of bias: indirect approaches 72 indirections: devious courses directions: the straight facts 73 lecture: instruction 78 in yourself: for yourself 80 ply: keep up 86 closet: sitting room 87 doublet: close-fitting coat unbrac'd: unfastened 89 down-gyved: hanging down like gyves or fetters 101 perusal: scrutiny

As 'a would draw it. Long stay'd he so.
At last, a little shaking of mine arm,
And thrice his head thus waving up and down,
He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound
As it did seem to shatter all his bulk
And end his being. That done, he lets me go,
And with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes,
For out o' doors he went without their help,
And to the last bended their light on me.
Pol. Come, go with me. I will go seek the king.
This is the very ecstasy of love,
Whose violent property fordoes itself
And leads the will to desperate undertakings
As oft as any passion under heaven
That does afflict our natures. I am sorry.
What! have you given him any hard words of late?
Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did command,
I did repel his letters and denied
His access to me.
Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am sorry that with better heed and judgment
I had not coted him. I fear'd he did but trifle,
And meant to wrack thee, but beshrew my jealousy!
By heaven, it is as proper to our age
To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king.
This must be known, which, being kept close, might move
More grief to hide than hate to utter love.
Come. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Lobby in the Castle]

Flourish. Enter King and Queen, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, cum aliis.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.
Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need we have to use you did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation. So I call it,
Sith nor th' exterior nor the inward man
Resembles that it was. What it should be,
More than his father's death, that thus hath put him
So much from th' understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of. I entreat you both,
That being of so young days brought up with him,
And since so neighbor'd to his youth and havior,
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
Some little time; so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean,
«Whether aught to us unknown afflicts him thus,»
That, open'd, lies within our remedy.
Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;
And sure I am two men there are not living
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
To show us so much gentry and good will
As to expend your time with us awhile,
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance.
Ros. Both your majesties
Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures more into command
Than to entreaty.
Guil. But we both obey,
And here give up ourselves in the full bent,
To lay our service freely at your feet
To be commanded.
King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle Guildenstern.
Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern and gentle Rosencrantz;
And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too much changed son. Go, some of you,
And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.
Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices
Pleasant and helpful to him!
Queen. Ay, amen!

Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern [attended].
Enter Polonius.

Pol. Th' ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,
Are joyfully return'd.
King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.
Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,
I hold my duty as I hold my soul,
Both to my God and to my gracious king;
And I do think—or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath us'd to do—that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.
King. O speak of that! that do I long to hear.
Pol. Give first admittance to th' ambassadors;
My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.
King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in.
[Exit Polonius.]
He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper.
Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main:
His father's death and our o'erhasty marriage.
King. Well, we shall sift him.

Enter Polonius, Voltimand, and Cornelius.

Welcome, my good friends!
Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?
Volt. Most fair return of greetings and desires.
Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;

106 bulk: frame 113 ecstasy: madness 114 property: nature fordoes: destroys 124 coted: observed (obsolete form of 'quote') 125 wrack: ruin beshrew: curse jealousy: suspicion, mistrust 126 our age: us old folk 127 cast . . . ourselves: be over subtle 131 More . . . love; cf. n. 11 of so young days: from such early youth; cf. n. 12 neighbor'd . . . havior: near in age and occupation 13 vouchsafe your rest: please to reside 17 not in Folio

18 open'd: revealed 22 gentry: courtesy 24 supply and profit: aid and successful outcome 26 as . . . remembrance: as is suitable to a king's gratitude 32 in the full bent: to the utmost degree (an archery term) 47, 48 Cf. n. 50 policy: conduct of public affairs 55 fruit: dessert 59 main: chief point 64 desires: good wishes 65 Upon our first; cf. n.

But, better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your highness: whereat griev'd
That so his sickness, age, and impotence
Was falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests
On Fortinbras; which he in brief obeys,
Receives rebuke from Norway, and, in fine,
Makes vow before his uncle never more
To give th' assay of arms against your majesty.
Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee,
And his commission to employ those soldiers,
So levied as before, against the Polack;
With an entreaty, herein further shown, [Giving a paper.]
That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety and allowance
As therein are set down.
King. It likes us well;
And at our more consider'd time we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business.
Meantime we thank you for your well-took labor.
Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together.
Most welcome home. Exeunt Ambassadors.
Pol. This business is well ended.
My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.
Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,
I will be brief. Your noble son is mad.
Mad call I it; for to define true madness,
What is 't but to be nothing else but mad?
But let that go.
Queen. More matter, with less art.
Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all.
That he is mad, 'tis true; 'tis true 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis 'tis true: a foolish figure,
But farewell it, for I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him, then; and now remains
That we find out the cause of this effect,
Or rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause.
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Perpend.
I have a daughter (have while she is mine)
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this. Now, gather and surmise.
[Reads] The Letter.

To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia.—

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; 'beautified' is a vile phrase; but you shall hear. Thus:

In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.—

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

Doubt thou the stars are fire;
Doubt that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt I love.
O dear Ophelia! I am ill at these numbers: I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu.
Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him,
Hamlet.

This in obedience hath my daughter shown me,
And more above,—hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear.
King. But how hath she
Receiv'd his love?
Pol. What do you think of me?
King. As of a man faithful and honorable.
Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,
When I had seen this hot love on the wing,—
As I perceiv'd it, (I must tell you that)
Before my daughter told me,—what might you,
Or my dear majesty, your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk or table-book,
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb,
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight?
What might you think? No, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus I did bespeak:
'Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star;
This must not be:' and then I prescripts gave her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repelled,—a short tale to make,—
Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,
Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness,
Thence to a lightness, and by this declension
Into the madness wherein now he raves,
And all we mourn for.
King. Do you think 'tis this?
Queen. It may be, very like.
Pol. Hath there been such a time,—I'd fain know that,—
That I have positively said, ' 'Tis so,'
When it prov'd otherwise?
King. Not that I know.
Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise.
[Pointing to his head and shoulder.]
If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the center.
King. How may we try it further?

71 borne in hand: deluded 73 in fine: in conclusion 75 assay: trial 77 Cf. n. 78 his commission; cf. n. 83 regards . . . allowance; cf. n. 85 likes: pleases 86 consider'd: fit for considering 92 expostulate: set forth one's views 96 wit: judgment, understanding 97 flourishes: embellishments 105 figure: figure of rhetoric 112 Perpend: consider 116 beautified: beautiful, or, accomplished 120 these; cf. n.

127 ill at: unskilled at making numbers: verses 128 reckon: number metrically, scan 130 machine: bodily frame 134 more above: more too 135 fell out: occurred means: opportunities of access 147 winking: a short nap, i.e., allowed my heart to connive 149 round: straightforwardly 150 bespeak: address 151 out of thy star: above the position allotted thee by fortune 152 prescripts: positive orders 158 watch: state of sleeplessness 159 lightness: lightheadedness declension: downward course 171 center: middle point of the earth

Pol. You know sometimes he walks four hours together
Here in the lobby.
Queen. So he does indeed.
Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him.
Be you and I behind an arras then.
Mark the encounter; if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fallen thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm and carters.
King. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet reading on a book.

Queen. But look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.
Pol. Away! I do beseech you, both away.
I'll board him presently. O, give me leave.
Exeunt King and Queen.
How does my good Lord Hamlet?
Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.
Pol. Do you know me, my lord?
Ham. Excellent well. You are a fishmonger.
Pol. Not I, my lord.
Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.
Pol. Honest, my lord?
Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.
Pol. That's very true, my lord.
Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?
Pol. I have, my lord.
Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun. Conception is a blessing, but as your daughter may conceive, friend, look to 't.
Pol. [Aside.] How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter. Yet he knew me not at first; 'a said I was a fishmonger. 'A is far gone; and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love, very near this. I'll speak to him again. What do you read, my lord?
Ham. Words, words, words.
Pol. What is the matter, my lord?
Ham. Between who?
Pol. I mean the matter that you read, my lord.
Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards, that their faces are wrinkled, their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum, and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams. All which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for yourself, sir, shall grow old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.
Pol. [Aside.] Though this be madness, yet there is method in 't. Will you walk out of the air, my lord?
Ham. Into my grave?
Pol. Indeed, that 's out of the air. [Aside.] How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter. My honorable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

177 arras: hanging tapestry 186 board: accost presently: immediately 190 fishmonger; cf. n. 198 god kissing; cf. n. 208 matter: substance 209 Between who?; cf. n. 213 purging: discharging amber ... gum; cf. n. 216 honesty: decency 221–222 pregnant: full of meaning happiness: appropriateness 223 prosperously: successfully

Ham. You cannot take from me anything that I will more willingly part withal,—except my life, except my life, except my life.
Pol. Fare you well, my lord. [Going.]
Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter Guildenstern and Rosencrantz.

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet? There he is.
Ros. [To Polonius.] God save you, sir! [Exit Polonius.]
Guil. My honored lord!
Ros. My most dear lord!
Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do you both?
Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.
Guild. Happy in that we are not over happy; on Fortune's cap we are not the very button.
Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?
Ros. Neither, my lord.
Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favors?
Guil. Faith, her privates we.
Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? O, most true; she is a strumpet. What news?
Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.
Ham. Then is doomsday near; but your news is not true. ⟨Let me question more in particular. What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?
Guil. Prison, my lord!
Ham. Denmark's a prison.
Ros. Then is the world one.
Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons, Denmark being one o' the worst.
Ros. We think not so, my lord.
Ham. Why, then, 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad but thinking makes it so. To me it is a prison.
Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one; 'tis too narrow for your mind.
Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.
Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition, for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.
Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.
Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow.
Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.
Both. We'll wait upon you.
Ham. No such matter. I will not sort you with the rest of my servants, for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended.⟩ But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?
Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

228 withal: with 238 indifferent: ordinary, average 239, 240 on ... button; cf. n. 247 strumpet; cf. n. 250–278 Let me ... attended; not in Quarto 271 quality: nature 272 beggars bodies; cf. n. 273 outstretched: strutting 274 fay: faith reason: argue 275 wait upon: attend 276 sort: class 278 beaten: well-worn, reliable

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks, but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come, deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why anything, but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks which your modesties have not craft enough to color. I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no.

Ros. [Aside to Guildenstern.] What say you?

Ham. Nay, then, I have an eye of you. If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moult no feather. I have of late,—but wherefore I know not,—lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appeareth nothing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapors. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world, the paragon of animals. And yet to me what is this quintessense of dust? Man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did ye laugh, then, when I said 'man delights not me'?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you. We coted them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome, his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; ⟨the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickle o' the sere;⟩ and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for 't. What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? Their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed are they not.

⟨Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavor keeps in the wonted pace: but there is, sir, an aery of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for 't. These are now the fashion, and so berattle the common stages (so they call them) that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose-quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? who maintains 'em? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? Will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players (as it is most like, if their means are no better) their writers do them wrong to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to-do on both sides, and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy. There was for a while no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is 't possible?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord—Hercules and his load too.⟩

Ham. It is not very strange; for my uncle is king of Denmark, and those that would make mouths at him while my father lived give twenty, forty, fifty, a hundred ducats apiece for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out. A flourish.

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands! come then; th' appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony. Let me comply with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players (which, I tell you, must show fairly outwards) should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome; but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west. When the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern, and you too! at each ear a hearer. That great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily he is the second time come to them, for they say an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players;

282, 283 too dear a halfpenny: cf. n. 284 free: voluntary 289 color: disguise 292 conjure: adjure 293 consonancy: harmony 295 better proposer: more skillful exhorter even: straightforward 298 have an eye of you: have an eye upon you 301 prevent: precede 302 discovery: disclosure 307 brave: splendid 308 fretted: adorned 311 faculties: powers express: well-modelled 312 apprehension: understanding 314 quintessence: cf. n. 317 stuff: matter 320 lenten: meagre 321 coted: passed 325 foil and target: sword and shield 325–326 humorous man: actor of whimsical characters; cf. n. 326–327 the clown . . . sere; not in Quarto 327 tickle o' the sere: yield easily to any impulse; cf. n. 328 halt: limp 332 residence: remaining at headquarters

334 inhibition: hindrance 335 innovation; cf. n. 336 estimation: reputation 337 the city; cf. n. 339–359 How comes it . . . his load too; not in Quarto 341 aery: nest; cf. n. eyases: young hawks cry . . . question: deal pungently with the latest gossip 342 tyrannically: outrageously 343 berattle: decry common stages; cf. n. 344 many wearing rapiers: many men of quality 344–345 afraid of goose-quills: afraid of being satirized; cf. n. 346 escoted: maintained quality: profession 349 common players: professional players 351 succession: future, inheritance 353 tarre: incite 354 argument: subject-matter, plot 355 cuffs: blows 358 carry it away: carry the day 359 Hercules and his load; cf. n. 361 mouths: grimaces 363 in little: in a miniature 'Sblood: God's blood 367 appurtenance: proper accompaniment 368 comply: observe the formalities of courtesy garb: manner extent: showing of kindness 370 entertainment: hospitality 374 handsaw; cf. n. 378 swaddling-clouts: bandages in which newborn children were wrapped

mark it.—You say right, sir; o' Monday morning. 'Twas then indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buzz, buzz!

Pol. Upon my honor,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, ⟨tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral,⟩ scene individable, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why,

One fair daughter and no more,
The which he loved passing well.

Pol. [Aside.] Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why,

As by lot, God wot.

And then, you know,

It came to pass, as most like it was.—

The first row of the pious chanson will show you more, for look where my abridgment comes.

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all. I am glad to see thee well. Welcome, good friends. O, my old friend? Why thy face is valanced since I saw thee last: com'st thou to beard me in Denmark? What, my young lady and mistress! By 'r lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring. Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to 't like French falconers, fly at anything we see: we'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

Player. What speech, my good lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviary to the general: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine) an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savory, nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affection; but called it an honest method, «as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine.» One speech in 't I chiefly loved; 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this line: let me see, let me see:—

The rugged Pyrrhus, like th' Hyrcanian beast,—

'Tis not so. It begins with Pyrrhus:—

The rugged Pyrrhus, he, whose sable arms,
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble
When he lay couched in the ominous horse,
Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd
With heraldry more dismal. Head to foot
Now is he total gules, horridly trick'd
With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons,
Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets,
That lend a tyrannous and a damned light
To their lords' murther. Roasted in wrath and fire,
And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore,
With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus
Old grandsire Priam seeks.

«So proceed you.»

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken! with good accent and good discretion.

Player. Anon, he finds him
Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword,
Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,
Repugnant to command. Unequal match'd,
Pyrrhus at Priam drives, in rage strikes wide;
But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword
Th' unnerved father falls. ⟨Then senseless Ilium,⟩
Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top
Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash
Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for lo, his sword,
Which was declining on the milky head
Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' th' air to stick.
So as a painted tyrant Pyrrhus stood,
And like a neutral to his will and matter,
Did nothing.
But as we often see against some storm
A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,
The bold winds speechless and the orb below
As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder
Doth rend the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause,
A roused vengeance set him new a-work;

385 Roscius; cf. n. 388 Buzz, buzz: an exclamation of contempt 393 scene individable; cf. n. 394–395 poem unlimited; cf. n. 394 Seneca; cf. n. 395 Plautus; cf. n. law of writ and the liberty; cf. n. 397 Jephthah: hero of an old ballad quoted below 412 'as most like it was': as was most probable 413 row: stanza, or column of print chanson: song 414 abridgment: something to cut short my talk 417 valanced: 'curtained,' with a beard 420 chopine: a Venetian raised shoe worn by women 421 uncurrent: not passable as lawful coinage cracked . . . ring; cf. n. 423 straight: immediately 428 caviary . . . general; cf. n.

430 cried in the top of: spoke with a louder voice of authority than digested: arranged 431 modesty: moderation cunning: skill in technique 432, 433 sallets . . . savory; cf. n. 433 indict: convict affection: affectation 434–435 as wholesome . . . fine; not in Folio 435 handsome; cf. n. fine: elaborately fashioned 436 Æneas' tale to Dido; cf. n. 440 Hyrcanian; cf. n. 444 ominous horse; cf. n. 447 total gules: red all over trick'd: spotted 449 impasted: made into a crust 452 o'er-sized: covered with something like size, a kind of glue 453 carbuncles: glittering red stones, rubies 461 Repugnant to: resisting 463 fell: cruel 464 senseless: incapable of feeling 470 painted tyrant: picture of an oppressor a neutral: one indifferent matter: task 473 against: just before 474 rack: mass of cloud 476 anon: presently 477 region: the air

And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall
On Mars's armor, forg'd for proof eterne,
With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam.
Out, out, thou strumpet Fortune! All you gods,
In general synod take away her power,
Break all the spokes and fellies from her wheel,
And bowl the round nave down the hill of heaven
As low as to the fiends!

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard. Prithee, say on: he's for a jig or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps. Say on; come to Hecuba.

Player. But who, O who, had seen the mobled queen—

Ham. 'The mobled queen'?

Pol. That's good; ⟨'mobled queen' is good.⟩

Player. Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames
With bisson rheum,—a clout upon that head
Where late the diadem stood, and for a robe,
About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins,
A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up,—
Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,
'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have pronounc'd.
But if the gods themselves did see her then,
When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs,
The instant burst of clamor that she made
(Unless things mortal move them not at all)
Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven
And passion in the gods.

Pol. Look! wh'er he has not turned his color and has tears in 's eyes. Prithee, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well. I'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon. Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used, for they are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time. After your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. God's bodkin, man, much better! Use every man after his desert, and who shall 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honor and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play tomorrow. Exit Polonius [with all the Players but the First.] Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the Murther of Gonzago?

Player. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha 't to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in 't, could you not?

Player. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that lord, and look you mock him not. [Exit Player. To Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.] My good friends, I'll leave you till night. You are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!

Ham. Ay, so! Goodbye to you!

Exeunt [Ros. and Guil.]. Manet Hamlet.

Now I am alone.
O what a rogue and peasant slave am I!
Is it not monstrous that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own conceit
That from her working all the visage wann'd,
Tears in his eyes, distraction in 's aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function suiting
With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing!
For Hecuba?
What's Hecuba to him or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her? What would he do
Had he the motive and the cue for passion
That I have? He would drown the stage with tears,
And cleave the general ear with horrid speech,
Make mad the guilty and appal the free,
Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed
The very faculties of eyes and ears.
Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing; no not for a king,
Upon whose property and most dear life
A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward?
Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
Plucks off my beard and blows it in my face?
Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' th' throat,
As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this, ha?
'Swounds, I should take it, for it cannot be
But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter, or ere this
I should ha' fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal. Bloody, bawdy villain!
Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain!
⟨O! vengeance!⟩
Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave
That I, the son of a dear murthered,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must like a whore unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-cursing like a very drab,
A scullion! Fie upon it, foh!
About, my brains!—Hum,—. I have heard,
That guilty creatures sitting at a play
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions;
For murther, though it have no tongue, will speak

479 Cyclops': Vulcan's workmen's 480 proof eterne: eternal impenetrability 484 synod: assembly 485 fellies: the pieces of wood of which the circumference is made 486 nave: hub 490 jig: lively dance, often accompanied by coarse comic verses or dialogue 492 mobled: muffled 496 bisson rheum: blinding tears clout: piece of cloth 498 o'er-teemed: exhausted by excessive child-bearing 507 milch: milky, moist 509 turned . . . color: grown pale 512 bestowed: lodged 513 abstract: summary 517 God's bodkin: cf. n. 524 Gonzago: cf. n. 526, 527 for a need: in case of necessity some dozen or sixteen lines: cf. n.

S.d. Manet: remains on the stage 537 peasant: base 539 conceit: imagination 540 wann'd: grew pale 542 function: action of the body suiting: fitting 543 forms: bodily expression 547 cue: cf. n. 549 horrid: horrible 550 free: free from offence, guiltless 554 muddy-mettled: dull-spirited peak: mope about 555 John-a-dreams: dreamy fellow; cf. n. unpregnant of: not quickened by 557 property: cf. n. 558 defeat: destruction 563 'Swounds: God's wounds 564 But: but that pigeon-liver'd: meek; cf. n. 565 make oppression bitter: make me feel the bitterness of oppression 566 region kites: vultures of the air 568 kindless: unnatural 571 murthered: cf. n. 575 scullion: the lowest household servant 576 About, my brains: let me think less wildly

With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players
Play something like the murther of my father
Before mine uncle. I'll observe his looks,
I'll tent him to the quick. If 'a do blench,
I know my course. The spirit that I have seen
May be a de'il, and the de'il hath power
T' assume a pleasing shape;—yea, and perhaps
Out of my weakness and my melancholy
(As he is very potent with such spirits)
Abuses me to damn me. I'll have grounds
More relative than this. The play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. Exit.

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

A Room in the Castle

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Lords.

King. And can you by no drift of conference
Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?
Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted,
But from what cause 'a will by no means speak.
Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded,
But with a crafty madness keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.
Queen. Did he receive you well?
Ros. Most like a gentleman.
Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.
Ros. Niggard of question, but of our demands
Most free in his reply.
Queen. Did you assay him
To any pastime?
Ros. Madam, it so fell out that certain players
We o'er-raught on the way; of these we told him,
And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it. They are about the court,
And, as I think, they have already order
This night to play before him.
Pol. 'Tis most true;
And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties
To hear and see the matter.
King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me
To hear him so inclin'd.
Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose into these delights.
Ros. We shall, my lord.
Exeunt Ros. and Guil.
King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too;
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 'twere by accident, may here
Affront Ophelia.

585 tent: probe blench: start aside 587 de'il: devil 592 relative: relevant, to the purpose 1 drift of conference: turn of the conversation 2 confusion: distraction 3 Grating: harassing 7 forward: ready, disposed 13 forcing of his disposition: constraint 14 Niggard of question: sparing of conversation; cf. n. 16 assay: tempt 19 o'er-raught: overtook 29 edge: incitement 32 closely: privately 35 Affront: meet

Her father and myself (lawful espials)
Will so bestow ourselves that, seeing unseen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge,
And gather by him, as he is behav'd,
If 't be th' affliction of his love or no
That thus he suffers for.
Queen. I shall obey you.
And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish
That your good beauties be the happy cause
Of Hamlet's wildness; so shall I hope your virtues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honors.
Oph. Madam, I wish it may.
[Exit Queen.]
Pol. Ophelia, walk you here. Gracious, so please you,
We will bestow ourselves. [To Ophelia.] Read on this book,
That show of such an exercise may color
Your loneliness. We are oft to blame in this;
'Tis too much prov'd that with devotion's visage
And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.
King. [Aside.] O 'tis too true!
How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience!
The harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art,
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it
Than is my deed to my most painted word.
O heavy burthen!
Pol. I hear him coming; let's withdraw, my lord.
Exeunt [King and Polonius].

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the question.
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles
And by opposing end them. To die: to sleep.
No more; and by a sleep to say we end
The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to: 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die: to sleep.
To sleep? perchance to dream. Ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause. There's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life;
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
Th' oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of dispriz'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of th' unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? Who would fardels bear,
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,

36 espials: spies 38 frankly: freely 45 wildness: madness 49 Gracious . . . you: if it please your Grace 51 exercise: religious devotion 53 too much prov'd: found by too frequent experience 59 to: in comparison with the thing: the beautifying cosmetic 63 Cf. n. 66 take . . . troubles; cf. n. 72 rub: obstacle 74 shuffled off: sloughed off mortal coil: turmoil of mortal life 75 give us pause: cause us to hesitate respect: consideration 76 Cf. n. 77 For who would bear, etc.; cf. n. 79 dispriz'd: held in contempt 80 office: people holding official position spurns: insults 82 quietus: release from life 83 bare bodkin; cf. n. fardels: burdens

The undiscover'd country from whose bourn
No traveller returns, puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all,
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pitch and moment
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you now!
The fair Ophelia! Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.
Oph. Good my lord,
How does your honor for this many a day?
Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well, well.
Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you now, receive them.
Ham. No, not I.
I never gave you aught.
Oph. My honor'd lord, you know right well you did;
And, with them, words of so sweet breath compos'd
As made the things more rich. Their perfume lost,
Take these again, for to the noble mind
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.
There, my lord.
Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?
Oph. My lord!
Ham. Are you fair?
Oph. What means your lordship?
Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.
Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?
Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness. This was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.
Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.
Ham. You should not have believed me, for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it. I loved you not.
Oph. I was the more deceived.
Ham. Get thee to a nunnery. Why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest, but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not borne me. I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious, with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arrant knaves all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery.—Where's your father?
Oph. At home, my lord.
Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool nowhere but in 's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O help him, you sweet heavens!
Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as nice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery. Go; farewell. Or if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go, and quickly too. Farewell.
Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him!
Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough. God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another. You jig, you amble, and you lisp. You nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on 't; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no mo marriage. Those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go.
Exit Hamlet.
Oph. O what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword;
Th' expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion and the mould of form,
Th' observ'd of all observers, quite, quite down!
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
That unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth
Blasted with ecstasy. O woe is me,
T' have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Enter King and Polonius.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend;
Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like madness. There's something in his soul
O'er which his melancholy sits on brood,
And I do doubt, the hatch and the disclose
Will be some danger; which for to prevent,
I have in quick determination
Thus set it down: he shall with speed to England
For the demand of our neglected tribute.
Haply the seas and countries different
With variable objects shall expel
This something-settled matter in his heart,
Whereon his brain's still-beating puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on 't?
Pol. It shall do well: but yet do I believe
The origin and commencement of his grief
Sprung from neglected love. How now, Ophelia!
You need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all. My lord, do as you please;
But if you hold it fit, after the play
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his grief. Let her be round with him,
And I'll be plac'd (so please you) in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,

86 bourn: boundary 87 No traveller returns; cf. n. puzzles: frustrates 90 conscience: the ability to think 91 native hue: healthy complexion 92 cast: tinge 93 pitch and moment: elevation and importance 94 regard: consideration currents: courses 96 orisons: prayers 99 for this many a day: all this long time 112 honest: sincere 116 honest: here in special sense of 'chaste' 118 commerce: intercourse 123 paradox: absurdity time: present age 126 inoculate: engraft; cf. n. relish: taste 128 nunnery; cf. n. 129 indifferent: tolerably 132 beck: command 136 Where's your father; cf. n.

148 your paintings: i.e., that women paint their faces 150 nickname: travesty; cf. n. make your wantonness your ignorance: affect ignorance as a mask for wantonness 152 on 't: of it 153 mo: more 157 expectancy and rose: hope and pride 158 glass: mirror mould: model 162 sovereign: supreme 164 feature: proportion of the whole body ('stature' in Q 2) blown: full-blown 165 Blasted: withered 171 disclose: opening of the shell, coming to life 177 variable objects: variety of interests 178 something-settled: somewhat settled 179 still-beating: constant hammering 180 fashion of himself: his ordinary manner 190 find: see through, interpret

To England send him, or confine him where
Your wisdom best shall think.
King. It shall be so.
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go. Exeunt.

Scene Second

A Hall in the Castle
Enter Hamlet and three of the Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of our players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently, for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise. I would have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing Termagant. It out-herods Herod: pray you, avoid it.

Player. I warrant your honor.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor. Suit the action to the word, the word to the action, with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature; for anything so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature, to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now this overdone, or come tardy off, though it makes the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve, the censure of the which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theater of others. O there be players that I have seen play and heard others praise, and that highly (not to speak it profanely) that, neither having the accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

Player. I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us, sir.

Ham. O reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too, though in the mean time some necessary question of the play be then to be considered. That's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.

Exeunt Players.

2 trippingly: rapidly, but with neat articulation mouth: speak loudly with false emphasis and indistinctness 6 acquire and beget: achieve yourself and inspire in your hearers 7 temperance: moderation 8 robustious: boisterous periwig-pated: wearing a wig 9 groundlings: cf. n. 10 capable of: able to enjoy 10, 11 inexplicable dumb-shows: cf. n. 12 Termagant: cf. n. out-herods Herod: cf. n. 18 from: alien to 21, 22 very age . . . pressure: even the contemporary and actual quality of the present time 22 pressure: impressed character, stamp 23 come tardy off: inadequately done 24 the which one: one of whom 25 allowance: estimation 30 journeymen: laborers not yet masters of their trade 35, 36 there be of them: there are some; cf. n. 37 barren: barren of wit

Enter Polonius, Guildenstern, and Rosencrantz.

How now, my lord? will the king hear this piece of work?
Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.
Ham. Bid the players make haste. Exit Polonius.
Will you two help to hasten them?
Ros. Ay, my lord.
Exeunt they two.
Ham. What, ho! Horatio!

Enter Horatio.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.
Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.
Hor. O, my dear lord,—
Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter;
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revénue hast but thy good spirits
To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?
No, let the candied tongue lick ábsurd pomp,
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee
Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?
Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for herself; for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing,
A man that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks; and bless'd are those Whose blood and judgment are so well co-mingled
That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please. Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee. Something too much of this.
There is a play to-night before the king.
One scene of it comes near the circumstance
Which I have told thee of my father's death.
I prithee, when thou seest that act afoot,
Even with the very comment of thy soul
Observe my uncle. If his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen,
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note,
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And after we will both our judgments join
In censure of his seeming.
Hor. Well, my lord,
If 'a steal aught the whilst this play is playing,
And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft.
Ham. They are coming to the play. I must be idle.
Get you a place.
Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and other Lords attendant, with his Guard carrying torches.
Danish March. Sound a Flourish.

48 just: fair-minded, righteous 49 cop'd withal: came in contact with 55 candied: flattering lick: pay court to (like a dog) absurd: silly 56 pregnant hinges: easily bent joints 57 thrift: profit 59 election: choice 60 seal'd: registered unchangeably 64 blood: passions co-mingled: cf. n. 66 stop: a hole in wind instruments for controlling the sound; cf. n. 74 very comment: most intense observation 75 occulted: hidden 76 itself unkennel: come to light (like a fox driven from its hole) in one speech: cf. n. 79 Vulcan: cf. n. stithy: blacksmith's shop, forge 82 censure: careful criticism seeming: appearance 86 be idle: act mad; cf. n.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?
Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the chameleon's dish.
I eat the air, promise-crammed. You cannot feed capons so.
King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet.
These words are not mine. 95
Ham. No, nor mine now. [To Polonius.] My lord, you played once i' th' university, you say?
Pol. That did I, my lord, and was accounted a good actor.
Ham. What did you enact?
Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar. I was killed i' the Capitol. 100
Brutus killed me.
Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there. Be the players ready?
Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.
Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me. 105
Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.
Pol. [To the King.] O ho! do you mark that?
Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?
Oph. No, my lord.
⟨Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap? 110
Oph. Ay, my lord.⟩
Ham. Do you think I meant country matters?
Oph. I think nothing, my lord.
Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.
Oph. What is, my lord? 115
Ham. Nothing.
Oph. You are merry, my lord.
Ham. Who, I?
Oph. Ay, my lord.
Ham. O God, your only jig-maker. What should a man 120
do but be merry? for look you how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within's two hours.
Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.
Ham. So long? Nay, then, let the de'il wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and 125 not forgotten yet? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year; but, by 'r lady, 'a must build churches then, or else shall 'a suffer not thinking on with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is, 'For, O! for, O! the hobby-horse is forgot.' 130

Hautboys play. The dumb-show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen very lovingly, the Queen embracing him. She kneels and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up and declines his head upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers. She, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns, finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner wooes the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love.

Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord?
Ham. Marry, this is miching Malicho; it means mischief.
Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play. 145

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow. The players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.
Oph. Will 'a tell us what this show meant?
Ham. Ay, or any show that you will show him. Be not you 150 ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.
Oph. You are naught, you are naught. I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently. 155

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?
Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.
Ham. As woman's love.

Enter [Player] King and Queen.

[P.] King. Full thirty times hath Phœbus' cart gone round 160
Neptune's salt wash and Tellus' orbed ground,
And thirty dozen moons with borrow'd sheen
About the world have times twelve thirties been,
Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands
Unite commutual in most sacred bands. 165
[P.] Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon
Make us again count o'er ere love be done!
But, woe is me! you are so sick of late,
So far from cheer and from your former state,
That I distrust you. Yet though I distrust, 170
Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must;
«For women fear too much, even as they love,»
And women's fear and love hold quantity,
In neither aught, or in extremity.
Now what my love is, proof hath made you know; 175
And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so.
«Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.»
[P.] King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, ad shortly too.
My operant powers their functions leave to do, 180
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honor'd, belov'd; and haply one as kind
For husband shalt thou—
[P.] Queen. O confound the rest!
Such love must needs be treason in my breast. 185
In second husband let me be accurst;
None wed the second but who kill'd the first.

Ham. [Aside.] That's wormwood, wormwood.

[P.] Queen. The instances that second marriage move
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love; 190
A second time I kill my husband dead,

92 chameleon's dish; cf. n. 94 have nothing with: can make nothing of 100 Julius Cæsar; cf. n. Capitol; cf. n. 102 brute part: stupid act 104 stay upon: wait for patience: leisure 110, 111 not in Quarto 112 country matters: uncouth conduct; cf. n. 120 your only jig-maker: I am the best jig-maker there is; cf. n. on II. ii. 502. 122 within's: within this 123 twice two months; cf. n. 125 suit of sables: suit of rich fur; cf. n. 128 suffer not thinking on: be forgotten 129 hobby-horse: one of the participants in the morris dance; cf. n. S. d. Hautboys: wooden double-reed instruments of high pitch S. d. Mutes: actors without speaking parts (but here all are mutes)

144 miching Malicho: skulking mischief; cf. n. 145 imports the argument: amounts to a synopsis 147 counsel: secret 151 naught: wanton 154 stooping: bowing 156 posy: motto 159 cart: chariot 161 wash: sea Tellus'; cf. n. 162 borrow'd sheen: reflected light 165 commutual: an intensive form of 'mutual' 170 I distrust you: I have misgivings on your account 172, 177–178 not in Folio 173 quantity: proportion 174 In . . . extremity: nothing of either, or else an excess 180 operant: vital 189 instances: motives, inducements move: suggest

When second husband kisses me in bed.
[P.] King. I do believe you think what now you speak,
But what we do determine oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory,
Of violent birth, but poor validity;
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree,
But fall unshaken when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt;
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactures with themselves destroy;
Where joy most revels grief doth most lament,
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange
That even our loves should with our fortunes change,
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove
Whether love lead fortune or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favorite flies;
The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies.
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend,
For who not needs shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try
Directly seasons him his enemy.
But, orderly to end where I begun,
Our wills and fates do so contrary run
That our devices still are overthrown,
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own.
So think thou wilt no second husband wed,
But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.
[P.] Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!
Sport and repose lock from me day and night!
«To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!»
Each opposite that blanks the face of joy
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here and hence pursue me lasting strife,
If, once a widow, every I be wife!

Ham. If she should break it now!

[P.] King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here awhile;
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. Sleeps.
[P.] Queen Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come mischance between us twain! Exit.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?
Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.
Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.
King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in 't?
Ham. No, no, they do but jest,—poison in jest. No offence i' th' world.
King. What do you call the play?
Ham. The Mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murther done in Vienna. Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista. You shall see anon. 'Tis a knavish piece of work: but what of that? Your majesty and we that have free souls, it touches us not. Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter [Player as] Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.
Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.
Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.
Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.
Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off mine edge.
Oph. Still better, and worse.
Ham. So you must take your husbands. Begin, murtherer; leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come; the croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;
Confederate season, else no creature seeing.
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy natural magic and fire property,
On wholesome life usurps immediately.
Pours the poison in his ears.

Ham. 'A poisons him i' the garden for his estate. His name's Gonzago. The story is extant, and written in very choice Italian. You shall see anon how the murtherer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.
Oph. The king rises.
⟨Ham. What, frighted with false fire?⟩
Queen. How fares my lord?
Pol. Give o'er the play.
King. Give me some light! Away!
Pol. Lights, lights, lights!
Exeunt all but Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play,
For some must watch while some must sleep:
Thus runs the world away.

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers (if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me) with two Provincial roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players?
Hor. Half a share.
Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,
This realm dismantled was
Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very, very—pajock.

Hor. You might have rimed.

196 validity: strength 204 enactures: fulfilments 215 hollow: insincere 220 ends: results 223 Nor . . . nor: neither . . . nor 225 Sport: pleasure; cf. n. 226, 227 not in Folio 227 anchor's: anchorite's 228 opposite: contrary thing blanks: blanches, makes pale 245 Tropically: figuratively; cf. n. 246 image: representation 246, 247 duke's name; cf. n.

249 galled jade: horse sore from chafing withers: shoulders 250 unwrung: not galled 252 chorus: in Elizabethan drama one who speaks a prologue summarizing the action 253 interpret; cf. n. 258 So . . . husbands; cf. n. 259 the croaking . . . revenge; cf. n. 263 Confederate season: time conspiring to assist 265 Hecate; cf. n. 273 not in Quarto 275 Give o'er: stop 278 deer go weep; cf. n. 282 forest of feathers: an allusion to the plumes worn by actors 283 turn Turk: play the renegade Provincial roses: rosettes imitating the damask rose; cf. n. 284 razed: slashed, i.e., with cuts or openings fellowship: partnership cry: company; cf. n. 285 share: i.e., in the profits of the company; cf. n. 287 Damon; cf. n. 290 pajock: scarecrow; cf. n.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning?

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha! Come, some music! come, the recorders!

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, belike he likes it not, perdy.

Come, some music!

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to the doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir; pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Ros. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer. My wit's diseased; but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother. Therefore no more, but to the matter. My mother, you say,—

Ros. Then, thus she says: your behavior hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so 'stonish a mother! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? You do surely bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Enter the Players, with recorders.

Ham. Ay, sir, but 'While the grass grows,'—the proverb is something musty.—O, the recorders! Let me see one. To withdraw with you,—Why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O! my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. It is as easy as lying. Govern these ventages with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony. I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass. And there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, yet you cannot play upon me.

Enter Polonius.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then I will come to my mother by and by. [Aside.] They fool me to the top of my bent. [Aloud.] I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. Exit.

Ham. By and by is easily said. Leave me, friends. [Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

'Tis now the very witching time of night,
When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out
Contagion to this world. Now could I drink hot blood,
And do such bitter business as the day
Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother!
O heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom.
Let me be cruel, not unnatural;
I will speak daggers to her, but use none.
My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:

297 recorders: wind instruments of the flute type 299 perdy: a corruption of par dieu 305 distempered: disordered; cf. n. 307 choler: anger; cf. n. 309 purgation: purging; cf. n. 311 frame: sensible form 313 pronounce: speak 317 of the right breed: pure-bred, genuine; cf. n. 318 wholesome: sincere 337 pickers and stealers: hands; cf. n. 339 liberty: freedom of action 342 voice: vote

344 'While . . . grows': cf. n. 346 withdraw with: speak privately with recover the wind of: get advantage of; cf. n. 347 toil: snare 356 know no touch: have no skill at all; cf. n. 357 ventages: holes, stops 366 compass: range of voice 369 fret: cf. n. 381 by and by: at once 382 top . . . bent: limit of my endurance; cf. n. 386 witching: when spells are cast 393 Nero: cf. n.

How in my words somever she be shent,
To give them seals never, my soul, consent! Exit.

Scene Third

[A Room in the Castle]
Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. I like him not, nor stands it safe with us
To let his madness range. Therefore prepare you.
I your commission will forthwith dispatch,
And he to England shall along with you.
The terms of our estate may not endure
Hazard so near us as doth hourly grow
Out of his braves.
Guil. We will ourselves provide.
Most holy and religious fear it is
To keep those many many bodies safe
That live and feed upon your majesty.
Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound
With all the strength and armor of the mind
To keep itself from noyance; but much more
That spirit upon whose weal depends and rests
The lives of many. The cesse of majesty
Dies not alone, but like a gulf doth draw
What's near it with it. It is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things
Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.
King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;
For we will fetters put about this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.
Ros. We will haste us. Exeunt Gent[lemen].

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet.
Behind the arras I'll convey myself
To hear the process. I'll warr'nt she'll tax him home;
And, as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet that some more audience than a mother,
Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear
The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege.
I'll call upon you ere you go to bed
And tell you what I know.
King. Thanks, dear my lord.
Exit [Polonius].
O my offence is rank, it smells to heaven!
It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't;
A brother's murther. Pray can I not.
Though inclination be as sharp as will,
My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent,
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand
Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,
Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens
To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy
But to confront the visage of offence?
And what's in prayer but this twofold force,
To be forestalled, ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd, being down? Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? 'Forgive me my foul murther?'
That cannot be, since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murther,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd and retain th' offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,
And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law; but 'tis not so above.
There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature, and we ourselves compell'd
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can. What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent?
O wretched state! O bosom black as death!
O limed soul, that struggling to be free
Art more engag'd! Help, angels! make assay!
Bow, stubborn knees; and heart with strings of steel
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe.
All may be well. He kneels.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now 'a is praying!
And now I'll do 't. And so 'a goes to heaven;
And so am I reveng'd? That would be scann'd.
A villain kills my father, and for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.
Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge
'A took my father grossly, full of bread,
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May;
And how his audit stands who knows save heaven?
But in our circumstance and course of thought
'Tis heavy with him. And am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No.
Up, sword, and know thou a more horrid hent;
When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage,

397 How . . . somever; cf. I. v. 90 shent: rebuked 398 give them seals: confirm them by making words into deeds 1 like him not: distrust him 2 range: rove, roam 3 forthwith dispatch: prepare at once 5 terms: condition 7 braves: defiances; cf. n. 9 fear: caution 12 single and peculiar: individual and private 14 noyance: harm 15 weal: welfare 16 cesse: decease 17 gulf: whirlpool 18 it is a massy wheel, etc.; cf. n. 22 annexment: appendage 23 Attends: accompanies 25 Arm: prepare 31 process: interview tax . . . home: censure effectually 32 as you said; cf. n. 35 of vantage: in addition 40 primal: primeval; cf. n.

47 thicker than itself: made more than double its normal thickness 50 confront: oppose directly 52 forestalled: prevented in anticipation 57 effects: i.e., things acquired by an action 58 ambition: i.e., the realization of ambition (so also offence in 59) 61 gilded hand: hand using bribes of gold 62 wicked prize: reward of wickedness 63 Buys out: corrupts 64 shuffling: trickery lies: used in its legal sense; cf. n. 66 teeth and forehead: very face 67 rests: remains 71 limed: caught with bird-lime 72 engag'd: entangled 76 pat: to a nicety; cf. n. 78 would: requires to scann'd: examined, considered 82 hire and salary: i.e., a reward; cf. n. 83 full of bread: without opportunity to fast 84 broad blown: in full bloom flush: lusty 85 audit: account 86 in . . . thought: according to our vague ideas 89 passage: i.e., to the other world 91 know . . . hent: let me grasp you at a more horrid moment

Or in th' incestuous pleasure of his bed,
At game a-swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in 't.
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
And that his soul may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays.—
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. Exit.
King [rising]. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below.
Words without thoughts never to heaven go. Exit.

Scene Fourth

[The Queen's Closet]
Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. 'A will come straight. Look you lay home to him.
Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your Grace hath screen'd and stood between
Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here.
Pray you, be round with him.
Ham. (within.) Mother, mother, mother!
Queen. I'll warrant you;
Fear me not. Withdraw, I hear him coming.
[Polonius hides behind the arras.]

Enter Hamlet

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter?
Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.
Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.
Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.
Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.
Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!
Ham. What's the matter now?
Queen. Have you forgot me?
Ham. No, by the rood, not so.
You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;
And,—would it were not so!—you are my mother.
Queen. Nay then, I'll set those to you that can speak.
Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge.
You go not till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the inmost part of you.
Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murther me?
Help, help, ho!
Pol. What, ho! help! help! help!
Ham. How now! a rat? Dead, for a ducat, dead!
Kills Polonius [through the arras].
Pol. O, I am slain!
Queen. O me, what hast thou done?
Ham. Nay, I know not. Is it the king?
Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!
Ham. A bloody deed! almost as bad, good mother,
As kill a king, and marry with his brother.
Queen. As kill a king?
Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.
[Lifts up the arras and discovers Polonius.]
Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!
I took thee for thy better. Take thy fortune;
Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.
[To the Queen.] Leave wringing of your hands. Peace! sit you down,
And let me wring your heart; for so I shall
If it be made of penetrable stuff,
If damned custom have not braz'd it so
That it be proof and bulwark against sense.
Queen. What have I done that thou dar'st wag thy tongue
In noise so rude against me?
Ham. Such an act
That blurs the grace and blush of modesty,
Calls virtue hypocrite, takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love
And sets a blister there, makes marriage vows
As false as dicers' oaths. O, such a deed
As from the body of contraction plucks
The very soul, and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words! Heaven's face does glow,
Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful visage as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.
Queen. Ay me! what act,
That roars so loud and thunders in the index?
Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this,
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See what a grace was seated on this brow:
Hyperion's curls, the front of Jove himself,
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command,
A station like the herald Mercury
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill,
A combination and a form indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man.
This was your husband. Look you, now, what follows.
Here is your husband, like a mildew'd ear
Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes?
Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it love, for at your age
The heyday in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment; and what judgment
Would step from this to this? «Sense sure you have,
Else could you not have motion; but sure that sense
Is apoplex'd, for madness would not err,
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
But it reserv'd some quantity of choice
To serve in such a difference.» What devil was 't
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?
«Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense
Could not so mope.»
O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,

95 relish: flavor 99 physic: medicine, i.e., the postponement 1 lay home: talk plainly 2 broad: free, unrestrained 4 heat: anger silence me: withdraw into silence 17 rood: cross 27 for: i.e., I wager

43 braz'd it: made it brazen 44 proof and bulwark: an impenetrable defence sense: feeling 53 contraction: marriage contract 55 rhapsody: meaningless string glow: blush 56 this solidity and compound mass: the solid and composite earth 57 tristful: sad doom: doomsday 60 index: table of contents, prelude 62 counterfeit presentment: portrayed likeness 64 front: forehead 66 station: poise 72 ear: ear of wheat 75 batten: grow fat moor: a barren upland 77 heyday: youthful high spirits 79 Sense: control of the physical senses 79–84 Sense . . . difference; not in Folio 81 apoplex'd: atrophied 82 thrall'd: enslaved 83 quantity of choice: power to choose 85 cozen'd: cheated hoodman-blind: blind man's buff 86–89 not in Folio 87 sans: without 89 mope: act aimlessly

If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame
When the compulsive ardor gives the charge,
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.
Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more!
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots
As will not leave their tinct.
Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed,
Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love
Over the nasty sty,
Queen. O speak to me no more!
These words like daggers enter in my ears.
No more, sweet Hamlet!
Ham. A murtherer and a villain;
A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe
Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings;
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule,
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket!
Queen. No more!

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A king of shreds and patches,—
Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards! What would your gracious figure?
Queen. Alas! he's mad!
Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,
That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by
Th' important acting of your dread command?
O, say.
Ghost. Do not forget. This visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look, amazement on thy mother sits.
O, step between her and her fighting soul.
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works.
Speak to her, Hamlet.
Ham. How is it with you, lady?
Queen. Alas, how is 't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy
And with th' incorporal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in th' alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
Start up and stand an end. O gentle son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?
Ham. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares!
His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capable.—Do not look upon me;
Lest with this piteous action you convert
My stern effects. Then what I have to do
Will want true color,—tears perchance for blood.
Queen. To whom do you speak this?
Ham. Do you see nothing there?
Queen. Nothing at all; yet all that is I see.
Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?
Queen. No, nothing but ourselves.
Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!
My father, in his habit as he liv'd!
Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal. Exit Ghost.
Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:
This bodiless creation ecstasy
Is very cunning in.
Ham. ⟨Ecstasy!⟩
My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthful music. It is not madness
That I have utter'd. Bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word, which madness
Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,
Lay not that flattering unction to your soul,
That not your trespass but my madness speaks.
It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within,
Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
Repent what's past; avoid what is to come;
And do not spread the compost on the weeds
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue,
For in the fatness of these pursy times
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,
Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.
Queen. O Hamlet, thou hast cleft my heart in twain.
Ham. O throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night; but go not to my uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
«That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat
Of habits evil, is angel yet in this,
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery
That aptly is put on.» Refrain to-night,
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: «the next more easy;
For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either [tame] the devil or throw him out
With wondrous potency.» Once more, good night,
And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord,
I do repent; but heaven hath pleas'd it so,
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him. So, again, good night.
I must be cruel only to be kind:

91 mutine: rise in mutiny 94 charge: command 96 panders: ministers to the gratifications of 99 grained: ingrained 100 leave their tinct: lose their color 102 enseamed: greasy 103 honeying: talking sweetly 109 tithe: tenth part (i.e., not one two-hundredth) 110 precedent: former vice: buffoon; cf. n. 111 cutpurse: pickpocket 115 shreds and patches: cf. n. 120 laps'd in time and passion: frittering away time and energy 121 important: urgent 127 Conceit: imagination 132 incorporal: incorporeal 135 bedded: smooth, flatly brushed hair: hairs life in excrements: dead tissue come alive 136 an end: on end 140 conjoin'd: united 141 capable: capable of feeling

142 convert: translate 143 My stern effects: the sternness of my deeds 144 want true color: not be what it should 151 habit . . . liv'd: familiar costume 154 Ecstasy: not in Quarto 160 re-word: repeat word for word 161 gambol from: skip away from grace: God 162 unction: salve 165 mining: undermining 170 fatness: grossness pursy: corpulent 172 curb and woo: bow and beg him: i.e., vice 178–182 That . . . put on: not in Folio 179 evil: 'deuill' in Quarto 180 use: habitual practice 184–187 the next . . . potency: not in Folio 186 tame: cf. n. 188 be bless'd: become blessed 193 answer: account for

Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.
«One word more, good lady.»
Queen. What shall I do?
Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:
Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed,
Pinch wanton on your cheek, call you his mouse;
And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses,
Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know;
For who that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.
Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.
Ham. I must to England; you know that?
Queen. Alack!
I had forgot. 'Tis so concluded on.
Ham. «There's letters seal'd, and my two school-fellows,
Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way
And marshal me to knavery. Let it work,
For 'tis the sport to have the enginer
Hoist with his own petar; and 't shall go hard
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon. O 'tis most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet!»
This man shall set me packing.
I'll lug the guts into the neighbor room.—
Mother, good night indeed.—This counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you.
Good night, mother. Exit Hamlet tugging in Polonius.

Scene Fifth

[A Room in the Castle]
Enter King and Queen, with Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves,
You must translate. 'Tis fit we understand them.
Where is your son?

197 One ... lady: not in Folio 200 bloat: bloated 201 wanton: wantonly 202 reechy: greasy 203 paddling: playing fondly 205 essentially: in my essential nature 208 paddock: toad gib: tom-cat 209 dear concernings: affairs dearly concerning one 212 the famous ape: cf. n. 213 conclusions: experiments 214 down: in the fall 221–229 not in Folio 223 mandate: command sweep my way: clear my path 224 marshal: conduct 225 enginer: maker of military engines, sapper 226 Hoist: blown up petar: small bomb 226–227 't shall ... will: it shall not be for lack of trying if I do not 230 set me packing: cf. n. III.v.s.d. From this point to the end of Act Fourth, the act and scene divisions differ from those traditionally employed; cf. note to IV.i.s.d. The traditional numbering is indicated within square brackets in the running heads. 1 heaves: prolonged sighs

Queen. «Bestow this place on us a little while.»
[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]
Ah, mine own lord, what have I seen to-night!
King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?
Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend
Which is the mightier. In his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
Whips out his rapier cries, 'A rat! a rat!'
And in this brainish apprehension kills
The unseen good old man.
King. O heavy deed!
It had been so with us had we been there.
His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas, how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,
This mad young man. But so much was our love,
We would not understand what was most fit,
But like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?
Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd,
O'er whom his very madness, like some ore
Among a mineral of metals base,
Shows itself pure. 'A weeps for what is done.
King. O Gertrude, come away!
The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch
But we will ship him hence; and this vile deed
We must with all our majesty and skill
Both countenance and excuse. Ho, Guildenstern!

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Friends both, go join you with some further aid.
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him.
Go seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you haste in this.
Exeunt Gentlemen.
Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
And let them know both what we mean to do
And what's untimely done. [So, haply, slander,]
«Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank
Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our name,
And hit the woundless air.» O, come away!
My soul is full of discord and dismay. Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

[Another Room in the Castle]
Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Safely stowed.
Gentlemen within. Hamlet! Lord Hamlet!

4 Not in Folio; cf. n. 7 Mad as the sea and wind: cf. n. 11 brainish apprehension: insane illusion 13 heavy: grievous 18 providence: foresight 19 short: tethered out of haunt: out of company 23 divulging: becoming known 27 mineral: mine 37 fair: courteously 41 So, haply, slander: cf. n. 42–45 Whose ... air: not in Folio 42 diameter: extent from side to side 43 level: straight blank: white spot in the centre of a target

Ham. What noise? who calls on Hamlet?
O, here they come.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?
Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.
Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence
And bear it to the chapel.
Ham. Do not believe it.
Ros. Believe what?
Ham. That I can keep your counsel and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge, what replication should be made by the son of a king?
Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?
Ham. Ay, sir, that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end. He keeps them, like an ape an apple, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed. When he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.
Ros. I understand you not, my lord.
Ham. I am glad of it. A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.
Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.
Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—
Guil. A thing, my lord!
Ham. Of nothing. Bring me to him. ⟨Hide fox, and all after.⟩ Exeunt.

Scene Seventh

[Another Room in the Castle]
Enter King and two or three.

King. I have sent to seek him and to find the body.
How dangerous is it that this man goes loose!
Yet must not we put the strong law on him:
He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment but their eyes;
And where 'tis so, th' offender's scourge is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,
This sudden sending him away must seem
Deliberate pause. Diseases desperate grown
By desperate appliance are reliev'd
Or not at all.

Enter Rosencrantz.

How now! what hath befall'n?
Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,
We cannot get from him.
King. But where is he?
Ros. Without, my lord, guarded, to know your pleasure.
King. Bring him before us.
Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?
Ham. At supper.
King. At supper! Where?
Ham. Not where he eats, but where 'a is eaten. A certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots. Your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service,—two dishes, but to one table. That's the end.
«King. Alas, alas!
Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.»
King. What dost thou mean by this?
Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.
King. Where is Polonius?
Ham. In heaven. Send thither to see. If your messenger find him not there, seek him i' th' other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.
King. [To some Attendants.] Go seek him there.
Ham. 'A will stay till you come.
[Exeunt Attendants.]
King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,—
Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve
For that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence
⟨With fiery quickness.⟩ Therefore prepare thyself.
The bark is ready and the wind at help,
Th' associates tend, and everything is bent
For England.
Ham. For England?
King. Ay, Hamlet.
Ham. Good.
King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.
Ham. I see a cherub that sees them. But, come; for England! Farewell, dear mother.
King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.
Ham. My mother. Father and mother is man and wife, man and wife is one flesh, and so, my mother. Come, for England! Exit.
King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard.
Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night.
Away! for everything is seal'd and done
That else leans on th' affair. Pray you, make haste.
[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]
And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught,—
As my great power thereof may give thee sense,
Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free awe
Pays homage to us,—thou mayst not coldly set
Our sovereign process, which imports at full,
By letters cóngruing to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England;
For like the hectic in my blood he rages,

12 to be demanded of: on being questioned by replication: reply 15 countenance: favor 16 authorities: offices of authority 17 like an ape an apple; cf. n. 26 The . . . body; cf. n. 29, 30 Hide fox, and all after: signal cry in a children's game; cf. n. 6 scourge: punishment 7 bear: execute smooth and even: pleasantly and equably 9 Deliberate pause: judicially considered 10 appliance: remedy

23 convocation: assembly; cf. n. politic: crafty 26 variable service: variety of courses 28–30 not in Folio 33 progress: state journey 44 With fiery quickness; not in Quarto 46 bent: prepared 58 at foot: close behind 61 leans on: depends upon 63 thereof may give thee sense: may make you think of it 64 cicatrice: scar 65 free awe: awe still felt but no longer enforced by arms 66 set: esteem 67 process: formal command 68 congruing: agreeing 70 hectic: wasting fever

And thou must cure me. Till I know 'tis done,
Howe'er my haps, my joys were ne'er begun. Exit.

Scene Eighth

[Open Country near the Castle]
Enter Fortinbras with his army over the stage.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king.
Tell him that by his licence Fortinbras
Craves the conveyance of a promis'd march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye,
And let him know so.
Cap. I will do 't, my lord.
For. Go softly on. Exit [with army, leaving Captain].

«Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?
Cap. They are of Norway, sir.
Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?
Cap. Against some part of Poland.
Ham. Who commands them, sir?
Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.
Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir,
Or for some frontier?
Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground
That hath in it no profit but the name.
To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;
Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole
A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.
Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.
Cap. Yes, it is already garrison'd.
Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats
Will not debate the question of this straw.
This is th' imposthume of much wealth and peace,
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without
Why the man dies. I humbly thank you, sir.
Cap. God be wi' you, sir. [Exit.]
Ros. Will 't please you go, my lord?
Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before.
[Exeunt all except Hamlet.]
How all occasions do inform against me
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed? A beast, no more.
Sure he that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason
To fust in us unus'd. Now, whether it be
Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple
Of thinking too precisely on th' event
(A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom,
And ever three parts coward) I do not know
Why yet I live to say 'This thing's to do,'
Sith I have cause and will and strength and means
To do 't. Examples gross as earth exhort me:
Witness this army of such mass and charge,
Led by a delicate and tender prince,
Whose spirit with divine ambition puff'd
Makes mouths at the invisible event,
Exposing what is mortal and unsure
To all that fortune, death and danger dare,
Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great
Is not to stir without great argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw
When honor's at the stake. How stand I then,
That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
Excitements of my reason and my blood,
And let all sleep, while, to my shame, I see
The imminent death of twenty thousand men,
That for a fantasy and trick of fame
Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot
Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
Which is not tomb enough and continent
To hide the slain? O, from this time forth,
My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth! Exit»

Act Fourth

Scene First

[A Room in the Castle]
Enter Queen, Horatio, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.
Gent. She is importunate, indeed distract:
Her mood will needs be pitied.
Queen. What would she have?
Gent. She speaks much of her father; says she hears
There's tricks i' th' world; and hems, and beats her heart;
Spurns enviously at straws, speaks things in doubt
That carry but half sense. Her speech is nothing,
Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
The hearers to collection. They aim at it,
And botch the words up fit to their own thoughts;
Which, as her winks and nods and gestures yield them,
Indeed would make one think there might be thought,
Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.
Hor. 'Twere good she were spoken with, for she may strew
Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.
Queen. Let her come in. [Exit Gentleman.]
To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss.
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be split.

Enter Ophelia distracted.

72 haps: fortunes 3 the conveyance of: escort during the course of 6 in his eye: in his presence 9 softly: slowly 9–69 not in Folio 10 powers: troops 16 main: chief part 18 no addition: without adding fine words 23 ranker: richer sold in fee: sold absolutely 27 debate: bring to a settlement straw: trifling matter 28 imposthume: abscess 37 market of: way to dispose of 39 large discourse: latitude of comprehension 42 fust: become mouldy 43 Bestial oblivion: animal-like forgetfulness 44 event: outcome

47 to do; i.e., still undone 49 gross: weighty 50 charge: expense 57 argument: cause 61 Excitements: incentives 64 trick: trifle 67 continent: (a sufficient) receptacle Scene First, S. d.; cf. n. 2 importunate: persistent 6 tricks: deceptions 7 Spurns: kicks enviously: spitefully in doubt: ambiguous 9 unshaped: artless 10 collection: inference aim: guess 12 Which: the words yield them: interpret her words 14 nothing: not at all much: very 16 ill-breeding: plotting ill 19 great amiss: calamity 20 artless jealousy: foolish anxiety 21 spills: ruins S. d. Cf. n.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?
Queen. How now, Ophelia! She sings.

Oph. How should I your true love know
From another one?
By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal shoon.

Queen. Alas! sweet lady, what imports this song?
Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark. Song.

He is dead and gone, lady,
He is dead and gone;
At his head a grass-green turf;
At his heels a stone.

O, ho!
Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,—
Oph. Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow,—

Enter King.

Queen. Alas! look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded all with sweet flowers; Song.
Which bewept to the ground did—not—go
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?
Oph. Well, God 'ild you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord! we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!
King. Conceit upon her father.
Oph. Pray, let's have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine.
Then up he rose, and donn'd his clo'es,
And dupp'd the chamber door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!
Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make an end on 't:

By Gis and by Saint Charity,
Alack, and fie for shame!
Young men will do 't, if they come to 't;
By Cock they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promis'd me to wed.

He answers:

So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?
Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient; but I cannot choose but weep to think they would lay him i' th' cold ground. My brother shall know of it: and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies; good night, good night. Exit.
King. Follow her close. Give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Horatio.]

O, this is the poison of deep grief; it springs
All from her father's death. O Gertrude, Gertrude!
When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in battalions. First, her father slain;
Next, your son gone, and he most violent author
Of his own just remove; the people muddied,
Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers
For good Polonius' death,—and we have done but greenly,
In hugger-mugger to inter him; poor Ophelia
Divided from herself and her fair judgment,
Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts.
Last, and as much containing as all these,
Her brother is in secret come from France,
Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,
And wants not buzzers to infect his ear
With pestilent speeches of his father's death;
Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
Will nothing stick our person to arraign
In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this,
Like to a murdering-piece, in many places
Gives me superfluous death. A noise within.
⟨Queen. Alack! what noise is this?⟩ King. «Attend!»

Enter a Messenger.

Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door.
What is the matter?
Mess. Save yourself, my lord!
The ocean, overpeering of his list,
Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,
O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him lord,
And as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry, 'Choose we! Laertes shall be king!'
Caps, hands, and tongues applaud it to the clouds,
'Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!'
A noise within.
Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!
O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs!
King. The doors are broke.

Enter Laertes with others.

Laer. Where is this king? Sirs, stand you all without.
All. No, let's come in.
Laer. I pray you, give me leave.
All. We will! we will!
Laer. I thank you: keep the door. [Mob retires.]
O thou vile king!

26 cockle hat: pilgrim's hat; cf. n. 27 shoon: shoes 39 Larded: garnished 40 did—not—go; cf. n. 43 God 'ild: God reward owl was a baker's daughter; cf. n. 54 dupp'd: opened 59 by Gis: by Jesus 62 Cock: perversion of 'God' in oaths

80 remove: removal muddied: stirred up 82 greenly: foolishly 83 In hugger-mugger: secretly 88 wonder: doubt in clouds: in gloom, or, invisible 89 buzzers: tale-bearers 91 Wherein: i.e., in which pestilent speeches necessity: poverty (of argument) 92 nothing stick: not at all hesitate 93 In ear and ear: in many ears 94 murdering-piece: small 'anti-personnel' cannon 98 Switzers: Swiss guards; cf. n. 101 overpeering: rising above list: boundary 103 head: hostile advance 112 counter: following the trail in a direction opposite to that which the game has taken

Give me my father.
Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.
Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard,
Cries cuckold to my father, brands the harlot
Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brows
Of my true mother.
King. What is the cause, Laertes,
That thy rebellion looks so giantlike?
Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person.
There's such divinity doth hedge a king
That treason can but peep to what it would,
Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes,
Why thou art thus incens'd. Let him go, Gertrude.
Speak, man.
Laer. Where is my father?
King. Dead.
Queen. But not by him.
King. Let him demand his fill.
Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with.
To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!
Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit!
I dare damnation. To this point I stand,
That both the worlds I give to negligence.
Let come what comes! only I'll be reveng'd
Most throughly for my father.
King. Who shall stay you?
Laer. My will, not all the world:
And for my means, I'll husband them so well,
They shall go far with little.
King. Good Laertes,
If you desire to know the certainty
Of your dear father, is 't writ in your revenge,
That, swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe,
Winner and loser?
Laer. None but his enemies.
King. Will you know them then?
Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms;
And like the kind life-rendering pelican,
Repast them with my blood.
King. Why, now you speak
Like a good child and a true gentleman.
That I am guiltless of your father's death,
And am most sensibly in grief for it,
It shall as level to your judgment peer
As day does to your eye.
A noise within. [Voices.] Let her come in.
Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Enter Ophelia.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt,
Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!
By heaven, thy madness shall be paid with weight,
Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!
O heavens! is 't possible a young maid's wits
Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
⟨Nature is fine in love, and where 'tis fine
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves.⟩

Oph. They bore him barefac'd on the bier;
Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny;
And in his grave rain'd many a tear—

Fare you well, my dove!
Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,
It could not move thus.

Oph. You must sing, a-down a-down,
And you call him a-down-a.

O how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward that stole his master's daughter.
Laer. This nothing's more than matter.
Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray you, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.
Laer. A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted.
Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines; there's rue for you, and here's some for me; we may call it herb of grace o' Sundays. O, you must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy; I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died. They say he made a good end.

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.

Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,
She turns to favor and to prettiness.

Oph. And will 'a not come again? Song.
And will 'a not come again?
No, no, he is dead;
Go to thy deathbed,
He never will come again.
His beard was as white as snow
All flaxen was his poll,
He is gone, he is gone,
And we castaway moan:
God ha' mercy on his soul!

And of all Christian souls, I pray God. God be wi' you! Exit Ophelia
Laer. Do you see this, O God?
King. Laertes, I must cómmune with your grief,
Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me.
If by direct or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours
To you in satisfaction; but if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,

123 cuckold: husband with an unfaithful wife 130 peep: look from tiptoe (as over a hedge) 140 grace: God's grace 142 both the worlds: this world and the next 146 My will: as regards my will 150 certainty: the real truth 152 swoopstake: indiscriminately; cf. n. 157 life-rendering pelican; cf. n. 158 Repast: feed 162 sensibly: feelingly 163 peer: show itself 167 sense and virtue: feeling and power 169 paid with weight: heavily paid for 170 of May: early-blooming, delicate

174–176 not in Quarto; cf. n. 178 Hey non nonny; cf. n. 185 wheel; cf. n. false steward; cf. n. 188 rosemary; cf. n. 189 pansies; cf. n. 190 document: lesson 192 fennel: emblem of flattery columbines: emblems of thanklessness rue: emblem of repentance; cf. n. 194 difference; cf. n. daisy: emblem of dissemblers 195 violets: emblems of faithfulness 197 For . . . joy; cf. n. 198 passion: suffering 199 favor: charm 206 poll: head ('pow' in dialect) 208 castaway: bereaved ones 213 commune: consult 214 right: equitable treatment 215 whom your: whichever 217 collateral: indirect 218 touch'd: implicated

And we shall jointly labor with your soul
To give it due content.
Laer. Let this be so.
His means of death, his óbscure burial,
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,
No noble rite nor formal ostentation,
Cry,—to be heard as 'twere from heaven to earth,—
That I must call 't in question.
King. So you shall;
And where th' offence is let the great axe fall.
I pray you go with me. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Another Room in the Castle]
Enter Horatio with an Attendant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with me?

Atten. Seafaring men, sir. They say they have letters for you.
Hor. Let them come in. [Exit Attendant.]
I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailor.

Sail. God bless you, sir.
Hor. Let him bless thee too.
Sail. 'A shall, sir, an 't please him. There's a letter for you, sir. It came from th' ambassador that was bound for England,—if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. (reads the letter). Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valor, and in the grapple I boarded them. On the instant they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy, but they knew what they did; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent, and repair thou to me with as much speed as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England. Of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.
He that thou knowest thine,
Hamlet.

Come, I will give you way for these your letters,
And do 't the speedier that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them. Exeunt.

225 means: manner 226 trophy: memorial emblem hatchment: tablet displaying armorial bearings 227 ostentation: ceremony 228 Cry: cry out, proclaim to be heard: so loud as to be heard 229 call 't in question: demand an explanation 12 overlooked: perused 14 appointment: equipment 20 repair: come 22 bore: literally, calibre, hence importance 28 way: passage

Scene Third

[A Room in the Castle]
Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he which hath your noble father slain
Pursu'd my life.
Laer. It well appears; but tell me
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So crimeful and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things,
You mainly were stirr'd up.
King. O, for two special reasons,
Which may to you perhaps seem much unsinew'd,
But yet to me they 're strong. The queen his mother
Lives almost by his looks, and for myself,—
My virtue or my plague, be it either which,—
She's so conjunctive to my life and soul
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive
Why to a public count I might not go
Is the great love the general gender bear him,
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring that turneth wood to stone,—
Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.
Laer. And so have I a noble father lost,
A sister driven into desperate terms,
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger-on-mount of all the age
For her perfections. But my revenge will come.
King. Break not your sleeps for that. You must not think
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull
That we can let our beard be shook with danger
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more.
I lov'd your father, and we love ourself,
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—

Enter a Messenger with letters.

⟨How now, what news?
Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet.⟩
These to your majesty; this to the queen.
King. From Hamlet? who brought them?
Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not.
They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them
«Of him that brought them.»

3 knowing: convinced 5 Pursu'd: sought 8 capital: punishable by death 9 your safety: regard for your safety greatness: position wisdom: intelligence in general; cf. n. 10 mainly: strongly 12 unsinew'd: weak 15 be . . . which: whichever it be 16 conjunctive: closely united 18 could not but by her: could not move except beside her, (could not live without her) 19 count: legal indictment 20 general gender: common people 22 Work: cf. n. spring: cf. n. 23 gyves: leg-irons, marks of shame 24 Too slightly timber'd: too light 25 reverted: returned; cf. n. 29 praises . . . again: cf. n. 30 challenger-on-mount: mounted challenger, ready in the lists; cf. n. 38–39 not in Quarto 43 Claudio: cf. n. 44 Of . . . them: not in Folio

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.— Leave us. Exit Messenger.

High and mighty, you shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes; when I shall (first asking your pardon there-unto) recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back?
Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?
Laer. Know you the hand?
King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. 'Naked'!
And in a postscript here, he says, 'alone.'
Can you advise me?
Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him come!
It warms the very sickness in my heart
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
'Thus didest thou.'
King. If it be so, Laertes,—
As how should it be so? how otherwise?—
Will you be rul'd by me?
Laer. Ay, my lord;
So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.
King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,
As checking at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it, I will work him
To an exploit now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall;
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice
And call it accident.
Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd;
The rather, if you could devise it so
That I might be the organ.
King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine. Your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him
As did that one, and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.
Laer. What part is that, my lord?
King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too, for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sables and his weeds
Importing health and graveness.» Two months since
Here was a gentleman of Normandy.
I've seen myself, and serv'd against, the French,
And they can well on horseback; but this gallant
Had witchcraft in 't. He grew unto his seat,
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As had he been incorps'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast. So far he topp'd my thought,
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

47 naked: without resources 52 abuse: imposture 54 character: handwriting 67 checking: stopping short 72 uncharge: acquit of guilt practice: stratagem 74–89 Laer. . . . graveness; not in Folio 76 organ: instrument 79 falls: happens 83 siege: rank; cf. n. 84 part: attribute 85 riband: ribbon 87 livery: garb 88 weeds: garments 89 health: prosperity 92 can well: are skilled 95 incorps'd and demi-natur'd; cf. n. 96 topp'd: surpassed 97 in . . . tricks: cf. n.

Laer. A Norman was 't?
King. A Norman.
Laer. Upon my life, Lamound.
King. The very same.
Laer. I know him well. He is the brooch indeed
And gem of all the nation.
King. He made confession of you,
And gave you such a masterly report
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especially,
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed
If one could match you. «The scrimers of their nation,
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them.» Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy
That he could nothing do but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you.
Now, out of this,—
Laer. What out of this, my lord?
King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?
Laer. Why ask you this?
King. Not that I think you did not love your father,
But that I know love is begun by time,
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
«There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it,
And nothing is at a like goodness still,
For goodness, growing to a plurisy,
Dies in his own too-much. That we would do,
We should do when we would, for this 'would' changes,
And hath abatements and delays as many
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this 'should' is like a spendthrift's sigh,
That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' th' ulcer:»
Hamlet comes back. What would you undertake
To show yourself in deed your father's son
More than in words?
Laer. To cut his throat i' th' church.
King. No place, indeed, should murther sanctuarize;
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,
Will you do this: keep close within your chamber?
Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home.
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you,—bring you, in fine, together,
And wager on your heads. He, being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foils; so that with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated, and in a pass of practice
Requite him for your father.
Laer. I will do 't;

101 Lamound; cf. n. 105 confession: report 106 masterly report; cf. n. 107 art and exercise: theory and practice defence: science of defence 110–112 The scrimers . . . them; not in Folio 110 scrimers: fencers 115 play: fence; cf. n. 124 passages of proof; cf. n. 126–135 not in Folio 129 plurisy: fulness; cf. n. 132 abatements: diminutions 134 spendthrift's sigh; cf. n. 144 put on: instigate those: certain persons who 147 remiss: easy-going 149 peruse: inspect 151 unbated: not blunted pass of practice: treacherous thrust

And for that purpose I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank
So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death
That is but scratch'd withal. I'll touch my point
With this contagion, that if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.
King. Let's further think of this,
Weigh what convenience both of time and means
May fit us to our shape. If this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'Twere better not assay'd. Therefore this project
Should have a back or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me see.
We'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings.
I ha 't:
When in your motion you are hot and dry,—
As make your bouts more violent to that end,—
And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepar'd him
A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there. «But stay! what noise?»

Enter Queen.

⟨How, sweet queen?⟩
Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow. Your sister's drown'd, Laertes.
Laer. Drown'd! O, where?
Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook,
That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream.
There with fantastic garlands did she come
Of crowflowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,
That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them.
There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds
Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke,
When down her weedy trophies and herself
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide,
And mermaid-like awhile they bore her up;
Which time she chanted snatches of old tunes,
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indu'd
Unto that element; but long it could not be
Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.
Laer. Alas, then, she is drown'd?
Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.
Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears; but yet
It is our trick, nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will. When these are gone,
The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord!
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly douts it. Exit.
King. Let's follow, Gertrude.
How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I this will give it start again.
Therefore let's follow. Exeunt.

154 anoint: smear 155 mountebank; cf. n. 157 cataplasm: poultice 158 simples: medicinal herbs 159 moon; cf. n. 165 our shape: part we purpose to act 166 drift . . . performance; cf. n. 168 a back or second; cf. n. 169 blast in proof: burst when tested (as of a cannon) 170 cunnings: skill 172 motion: bodily exertion 175 for the nonce: for the purpose 176 stuck: thrust 177 But . . . noise; not in Folio 178 Not in Quarto 183 hoar: greyish-white 185 crowflowers: buttercups; cf. n. long purples: early purple orchids (orchis mascula) 186 liberal: free-spoken 188 coronet: garlanded 194 incapable: having no understanding 195 indu'd: endowed with qualities fitting her 204 trick: hereditary trait 206 woman; cf. n. 208 douts: extinguishes

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

[A Churchyard near Elsinore]
Enter two Clowns.

[First] Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial when she wilfully seeks her own salvation?
Other. I tell thee she is. Therefore make her grave straight. The crowner hath sat on her and finds it Christian burial.
Clown. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?
Other. Why, 'tis found so.
Clown. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act, and an act hath three branches; it is to act, to do, to perform. Argal, she drowned herself wittingly.
Other. Nay, but hear you, goodman delver,—
Clown. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good. Here stands the man; good. If the man go to this water and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that! But if the water come to him and drown him, he drowns not himself. Argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.
Other. But is this law?
Clown. Ay, marry, is 't; crowner's quest law.
Other. Will you ha' the truth on 't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out o' Christian burial.
Clown. Why, there thou sayest; and the more pity that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves more than their even Christen. Come, my spade! There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers. They hold up Adam's profession.
Other. Was he a gentleman?
Clown. 'A was the first that ever bore arms.
⟨Other. Why, he had none.
Clown. What! art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged; could he dig without arms?⟩ I'll put another question to thee. If thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—
Other. Go to.
Clown. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?
Other. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.
Clown. I like thy wit well. In good faith the gallows does

S. d. Clowns; cf. n. 3 straight: at once 4 crowner: coroner sat on: passed on 8 se offendendo; cf. n. 10 branches: divisions 11 Argal: corruption of ergo, therefore 12 goodman delver: Mr. Sexton 20 quest: inquest 26 even Christen: fellow Christian 30 bore arms; cf. n. 30–34 not in Quarto 35 confess thyself; cf. n. 36 Go to: out with it!

well, but how does it well? It does well to those that do ill. Now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church. Argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To 't again; come!

Other. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

Clown. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

Other. Marry, now I can tell.

Clown. To 't.

Other. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio afar off.

Clown. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are asked this question next, say, 'a grave-maker.' The houses he makes lasts till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan and fetch me a stoup of liquor. [Exit other Clown.]

[Clown digs and] sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love,
Methought it was very sweet.
To contract—oh—the time, for—ah—my behove,
O methought there—ah—was nothing—ah—meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so; the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

Clown. But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipp'd me intil the land,
As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a skull.]

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it and could sing once. How the knave jowls it to the ground, as if 't were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murther! This might be the pate of a politician which this ass now o'erreaches, one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier, which could say, 'Good morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?' This might be my Lord Such-a-one, that praised my Lord Such-a-one's horse when 'a went to beg it, might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so, and now my Lady Worm's: chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see 't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding but to play at loggats with 'em? Mine ache to think on 't.

Clown. A pick-axe and a spade, a spade, Song.
For and a shrouding sheet;
O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up another skull.]

Ham. There's another! Why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? Why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in 's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries. ⟨Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries,⟩ to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? Will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will scarcely lie in this box, and must th' inheritor himself have no more, ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calves' skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave 's this, sirrah?

Clown. Mine, sir,

O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine indeed, for thou liest in 't.

Clown. You lie out on 't, sir, and therefore 't is not yours. For my part, I do not lie in 't, yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in 't, to be in 't and say it is thine. 'Tis for the dead, not for the quick. Therefore thou liest.

Clown. 'Tis a quick lie, sir. 'Twill away again from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

Clown. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

Clown. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in 't?

Clown. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, this three years I have took note of it; the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier he galls his kibe.—How long hast thou been grave-maker?

Clown. Of all the days i' th' year, I came to 't that day that our last King Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

Clown. Cannot you tell that? Every fool can tell that. It was that very day that young Hamlet was born,—he that is mad and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry! Why was he sent into England?

Clown. Why, because 'a was mad. 'A shall recover his wits there; or if 'a do not, 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

Clown. 'Twill not be seen in him there. There the men are as mad as he.

48 unyoke; cf. n. 55 Yaughan; cf. n. 56 stoup: two quart measure 57 In . . . love; cf. n. 59 contract: shorten (with pleasure) behove: benefit 60 meet: good enough 63 property of easiness; cf. n. 65 sense: sensibility 68 intil: into 71 jowls: dashes 71, 72 Cain's jaw-bone, that: the jaw-bone of Cain, who; cf. n. 73 o'erreaches; cf. n. 79 went: went about, attempted; cf. n. 81 chapless: lacking the lower jaw mazzard: head 84 loggats; cf. n.

91 quiddities: subtleties quillets: minute distinctions 92 tenures; cf. n. 93 sconce: head 94 action of battery; cf. n. 96 statutes; cf. n. recognizances; cf. n. fines; cf. n. vouchers; cf. n. 98 recoveries; cf. n. fine: end 97, 98 Is . . . recoveries; not in Quarto 101 indentures: mutual agreements; cf. n. 101 conveyances; cf. n. 106 assurance: security; cf. n. 125 absolute: precise 125, 126 by the card: with precision; cf. n. 127 picked: fastidious; cf. n. 129 kibe: chilblain

Ham. How came he mad?
Clown. Very strangely, they say.
Ham. How, strangely?
Clown. Faith, e'en with losing his wits.
Ham. Upon what ground?
Clown. Why, here in Denmark. I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.
Ham. How long will a man lie i' th' earth ere he rot?
Clown. Faith, if 'a be not rotten before 'a die (as we have many pocky corses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in) 'a will last you some eight year or nine year. A tanner will last you nine year.
Ham. Why he more than another?
Clown. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade that 'a will keep out water a great while, and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now hath lien you i' th' earth three-and-twenty years.
Ham. Whose was it?
Clown. A whoreson mad fellow's it was. Whose do you think it was?
Ham. Nay, I know not.
Clown. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! 'a poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Sir Yorick's skull, the king's jester.
Ham. This!
Clown. E'en that.
Ham. ⟨Let me see.⟩ [Takes the skull.]—Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy. He hath bore me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock, your own grinning; quite chapfallen. Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favor she must come. Make her laugh at that. Prithee, Horatio, tell me one thing.
Hor. What's that, my lord?
Ham. Dost thou think Alexander looked o' this fashion i' th' earth?
Hor. E'en so.
Ham. And smelt so? pah! [Puts down the skull.]
Hor. E'en so, my lord.
Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander till 'a find it stopping a bunghole?
Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.
Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it; ⟨as thus:⟩ Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth to dust; the dust is earth. Of earth we make loam, and why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.
O that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall t' expel the winter's flaw!

But soft! but soft awhile! Here comes the king.

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, [a Priest,] and a Coffin, with Lords attendant.

The queen, the courtiers! Who is this they follow?
And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken
The corse they follow did with desperate hand
Fordo it own life. 'Twas of some estate.
Couch we awhile, and mark. [Retires with Horatio.]
Laer. What ceremony else?
Ham. That is Laertes,
A very noble youth. Mark.
Laer. What ceremony else?
Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd
As we have warranty. Her death was doubtful,
And but that great command o'ersways the order,
She should in ground unsanctified been lodg'd
Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers,
Shards, flints, and pebbles should be thrown on her.
Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants,
Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home
Of bell and burial.
Laer. Must there no more be done?
Priest. No more be done.
We should profane the service of the dead
To sing a requiem and such rest to her
As to peace-parted souls.
Laer. Lay her i' th' earth,
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
May violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest,
A ministering angel shall my sister be
When thou liest howling.
Ham. What! the fair Ophelia?
Queen. [Scattering flowers.] Sweets to the sweet! farewell!
I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife.
I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
And not have strew'd thy grave.
Laer. O treble woe
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
Depriv'd thee of. Hold off the earth awhile,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms.
Leaps in the grave.
Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
Till of this flat a mountain you have made
T' o'er-top old Pelion or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.
Ham. [Advancing.] What is he whose grief
Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I,
Hamlet the Dane. Hamlet leaps in after Laertes.
Laer. The devil take thy soul!
[Grapples with him.]
Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

157 sore: grievous 158 whoreson: plagued 159 lien: lain three-and-twenty years: cf. n. 166 Sir Yorick's: cf. n. 178 favor: appearance 189 curiously: minutely 191 modesty: moderation likelihood: probability 199 flaw: squall of wind

200 awhile: cf. n. 206 Fordo it: undo its estate: rank 207 Couch: remain concealed 212 enlarg'd: extended 213 warranty: warrant doubtful: suspicious 214 Cf. n. 215 been: have been; cf. n. 217 Shards: fragments of pottery 218 crants: garland; cf. n. 219 strewments: flowers strewn on a grave 225 peace-parted: piously deceased 238 ingenious: delicately sensitive 244 Pelion: cf. n. 248 wandering stars: planets 250 Hamlet the Dane: cf. n.

I prithee take thy fingers from my throat;
For though I am not splenetive and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous,
Which let thy wisdom fear. Hold off thy hand!
King. Pluck them asunder.
Queen. Hamlet! Hamlet!
«All. Gentlemen!»
Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.
[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.]
Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme
Until my eyelids will no longer wag.
Queen. O my son, what theme?
Ham. I lov'd Ophelia. Forty thousand brothers
Could not with all their quantity of love
Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for her?
King. O, he is mad, Laertes.
Queen. For love of God, forbear him.
Ham. 'Swounds, show me what thou't do.
Woo't weep? woo't fight? «woo't fast?» woo't tear thyself?
Woo't drink up eisel? eat a crocodile?
I'll do 't. Dost thou come here to whine?
To outface me with leaping in her grave?
Be buried quick with her, and so will I.
And if thou prate of mountains, let them throw
Millions of acres on us, till our ground,
Singeing his pate against the burning zone,
Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth,
I'll rant as well as thou.
Queen. This is mere madness,
And thus a while the fit will work on him.
Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden couplets are disclos'd,
His silence will sit drooping.
Ham. Hear you, sir.
What is the reason that you use me thus?
I lov'd you ever,—but it is no matter.
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew and dog will have his day. Exit.
King. I pray thee, good Horatio, wait upon him.
[Exit Horatio.]
[To Laertes.] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech.
We'll put the matter to the present push.—
Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.
This grave shall have a living monument.
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Hall in the Castle]
Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir; now shall you see the other.
You do remember all the circumstance?

255 splenetive: quick-tempered 269 forbear him: leave him alone 271 Woo't: wilt thou 272 eisel: vinegar (associated with gall) 278 burning zone: 'coelum igneum,' heavenly region of fire 284 golden couplets: cf. n. 292 in: in the thought of 294 present push: immediate trial 296 living: lasting

Hor. Remember it, my lord!
Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting
That would not let me sleep. Methought I lay
Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly,—
And prais'd be rashness for it (let us know,
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well
When our deep plots do pall; and that should learn us
There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will)—
Hor. That is most certain.
Ham. Up from my cabin,
My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark
Grop'd I to find out them, had my desire,
Finger'd their packet, and in fine withdrew
To mine own room again; making so bold
(My fears forgetting manners) to unseal
Their grand commission, where I found, Horatio,
(Ah, royal knavery!) an exact command,—
Larded with many several sorts of reasons
Importing Denmark's health and England's too,
With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,—
That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,
No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
My head should be struck off.
Hor. Is 't possible?
Ham. Here's the commission: read it at more leisure.
But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed?
Hor. I beseech you.
Ham. Being thus be-netted round with villainies,
Ere I could make a prologue to my brains
They had begun the play. I sat me down,
Devis'd a new commission, wrote it fair.—
I once did hold it, as our statists do,
A baseness to write fair and labor'd much
How to forget that learning, but, sir, now
It did me yeoman's service. Wilt thou know
Th' effect of what I wrote?
Hor. Ay, good my lord.
Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,
As England was his faithful tributary,
As love between them like the palm might flourish,
As peace should still her wheaten garland wear
And stand a comma 'tween their amities,
And many such-like 'As'es of great charge,
That, on the view and knowing of these contents,
Without debatement further, more or less,
He should those bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving-time allow'd.
Hor. How was this seal'd?
Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinant.
I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal.—
Folded the writ up in the form of th' other,
Subscrib'd it, gave 't th' impression, plac'd it safely,

6 mutines: mutineers bilboes: shackles 9 pall: fail 14 sea-gown: cf. n. 16 Finger'd: pilfered 23 bugs . . . life: cf. n. 24 supervise: perusal bated: deducted 31 be-netted: ensnared 32, 33 prologue . . . play: cf. n. 35 statists: statesmen 38 yeoman's service: good and faithful service 44 wheaten garland: emblem of peace 45 comma: bond of connection; cf. n. 46 'As'es: cf. n. 50 shriving-time: time for absolution 52 ordinant: controlling 54 model: exact likeness 56 Subscrib'd: signed impression: i.e., of the seal

The changeling never known. Now, the next day
Was our sea-fight, and what to this was sequent
Thou know'st already.
Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to 't.
Ham. ⟨Why, man, they did make love to this employment;⟩
They are not near my conscience. Their defeat
Does by their own insinuation grow.
'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes
Between the pass and fell-incensed points
Of mighty opposites.
Hor. Why, what a king is this!
Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon?
He that hath kill'd my king and whor'd my mother,
Popp'd in between th' election and my hopes,
Thrown out his angle for my proper life,
And with such cozenage—is 't not perfect conscience
⟨To quit him with this arm? and is 't not to be damn'd
To let this canker of our nature come
In further evil?
Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England
What is the issue of the business there.
Ham. It will be short. The interim is mine,
And a man's life's no more than to say 'One.'
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot myself,
For by the image of my cause I see
The portraiture of his. I'll court his favors:
But sure the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.
Hor. Peace! who comes here?⟩

Enter young Osric.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.
Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. [Aside to Horatio.] Dost know this water-fly?
Hor. [Aside to Hamlet.] No, my good lord.
Ham. [Aside to Horatio.] Thy state is the more gracious, for 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile. Let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess. 'Tis a chough, but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.
Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.
Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Put your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.
Osr. I thank your lordship. It is very hot.
Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.
Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.
Ham. But yet methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion.
Osr. Exceedingly, my lord. It is very sultry, as 'twere, —I cannot tell how. But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that 'a has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter,—
Ham. I beseech you, remember—
[Hamlet moves him to put on his hat.]

Osr. Nay, good my lord, for my ease, in good faith. «Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes,— believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing. Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.
Ham. Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you; though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dozy th' arithmetic of memory, and yet but yaw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article, and his infusion of such dearth and rareness as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror, and who else would trace him his umbrage, nothing more.
Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.
Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?
Osr. Sir?
Hor. Is 't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will to 't, sir, really.
Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?
Osr. Of Laertes?
Hor. His purse is empty already. All 's golden words are spent.
Ham. Of him, sir.
Osr. I know you are not ignorant—
Ham. I would you did, sir; yet in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. Well, sir.»
Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—«Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well were to know himself.
Osr. I mean, sir,» for his weapon; «but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he's unfellowed.»
Ham. What's his weapon?
Osr. Rapier and dagger.
Ham. That's two of his weapons, but,—well.
Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses, against the which he has impawned, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns; as girdle, hanger, and so. Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages and of very liberal conceit.
Ham. What call you the carriages?
«Hor. I knew you must be edified by the margent, ere you had done.»
Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.
Ham. The phrase would be more germane to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides. I would it might be hangers till then. But, on; six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages;

57 changeling: substitute 61, 73–86 not in Quarto 63 insinuation: intrusion 65 fell-incensed: cruelly angered; cf. n. 66 opposites: opponents 68 stand . . . upon: vitally concern 70 election; cf. n. 71 angle: fishing-hook proper: own 72 cozenage: cheating 84 bravery: ostentatious display 89 water-fly; cf. n. 94 mess; cf. n. chough: small chattering bird 109 remember; cf. n.

110 my ease; cf. n. 110–137 not in Folio 111 absolute: perfect 112 differences: distinguishing features soft: gentle 114 card: map 116 definement: description perdition: loss 117 divide inventorially: catalogue dozy: make giddy 118 yaw: stagger; cf. n. neither: too 120 great article: large scope infusion: character imparted by nature 121 semblable: like 122 trace: follow umbrage: shadow 125 concernancy: relevance 126 more rawer: too unskilled 128 another tongue; cf. n. 129 You will to 't: You will acquire the art 130 nomination: naming 137 approve me: commend me 139–143 not in Folio 139 compare with: vie with 142 imputation: reputation 143 meed: merit, worth unfellowed: without an equal 148 impawned: staked 149 assigns: appurtenances 150 hanger: strap from which a sword is suspended carriages: hangers 151 dear to fancy: unusual in design delicate: finely wrought 152 liberal conceit: tasteful design 154, 155 not in Folio 154 margent; cf. n.

that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this all impawned, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits. He hath laid on twelve for nine, and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall. If it please his-majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me. Let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him an I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir, after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. [Exit Osric.] He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for 's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. 'A did comply, sir, with his dug before 'a sucked it. Thus has he—and many more of the same bevy, that I know the drossy age dotes on—only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yesty collection which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

«Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him that you attend him in the hall. He sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure. If his fitness speaks, mine is ready, now or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king and queen and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.]»

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so. Since he went into France, I have been in continual practice. I shall win at the odds, but thou wouldst not think how ill all 's here about my heart. But it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery, but it is such a kind of gaingiving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike anything, obey it. I will forestall their repair hither and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury; there is special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all. Since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is 't to leave betimes? «Let be.»

Enter King, Queen, Laertes and Lords, with other Attendants with foils and gauntlets. A table and flagons of wine on it.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of Laertes into that of Hamlet.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir. I've done you wrong;
But pardon 't, as you are a gentleman.
This presence knows, and you must needs have heard,
How I am punish'd with a sore distraction.
What I have done,
That might your nature, honor, and exception
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.
Was 't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet.
If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,
And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,
Then Hamlet does it not; Hamlet denies it.
Who does it then? His madness. If 't be so,
Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd;
His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.
⟨Sir, in this audience,⟩
Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
That I have shot my arrow o'er the house,
And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,
Whose motive in this case should stir me most
To my revenge; but in my terms of honor
I stand aloof, and will no reconcilement
Till by some elder masters of known honor
I have a voice and precedent of peace,
To keep my name ungor'd. But till that time,
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely,
And will this brothers' wager frankly play.
Give us the foils. ⟨Come on.⟩

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes. In mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star i' th' darkest night,
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric. Cousin Hamlet,
You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;
Your Grace has laid the odds o' th' weaker side.

King. I do not fear it. I have seen you both;
But since he is better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy; let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length?

Osr. Ay, my good lord. Prepare to play.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table.
If Hamlet give the first or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
Let all the battlements their ordnance fire.
The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath;
And in the cup an union shall he throw,

165 twelve for nine; cf. n. 170 breathing time: exercise period 179 lapwing: plover, a vivacious little bird with . . . head: almost before he is hatched 180 comply: use fine language 182 drossy: frivolous tune: mood 183 outward . . . encounter: superficial mannerisms yesty: frothy 185 fond and winnowed; cf. n. S.d. not in Folio 195 In happy time: at an appropriate time 205 gaingiving: foreboding

217 presence: royal assembly 220 exception: disapproval 224 Not in Quarto 234 satisfied in nature; cf. n. 239 voice: opinion 240 ungor'd: uninjured 247 foil; cf. n. 249 Stick . . . off: stand out in relief 263 quit; cf. n. 266 union: pearl

Richer than that which four successive kings
In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups;
And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heaven to earth:
'Now the king drinks to Hamlet!' Trumpets
Come, begin! the while.
And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.
'Ham. Come on, sir.
Laer. Come, my lord. They play.
Ham. One.
Laer. No.
Ham. Judgment.
Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.
«Drum, trumpets and shot.
Flourish. A piece goes off.»
Laer. Well; again.
King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine.
Here's to thy health. Give him the cup.
⟨Trumpets sound; and shot goes off.⟩
Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by awhile.
Come.—[They play.] Another hit! What say you?
Laer. ⟨A touch, a touch,⟩ I do confess 't.
King. Our son shall win.
Queen. He's fat and scant of breath.
Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows.
The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.
[Takes Hamlet's cup.]
Ham. Good madam!
King. Gertrude, do not drink!
Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon me.
King. [Aside.] It is the poison'd cup! it is too late.
Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam. By and by.
Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.
Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.
King. I do not think 't.
Laer. [Aside.] And yet it is almost against my conscience.
Ham. Come, for the third! Laertes, you but dally;
I pray you, pass with your best violence.
I am afeard you make a wanton of me.
Laer. Say you so? come on. Play.
Osr. Nothing, neither way.
Laer. Have at you now. In scuffling they change rapiers.
King. Part them! they are incens'd.
Ham. Nay, come again! [The Queen falls.]
Osr. Look to the queen there. Ho!
Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is it, my lord?
Osr. How is 't, Laertes?
Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe, Osric.
I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.
Ham. How does the queen?
King. She sounds to see them bleed.
Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink! O my dear Hamlet!
The drink, the drink! I am poison'd. [Dies.]
Ham. O villainy! Ho! let the door be lock'd.
Treachery! seek it out. [Laertes falls.]
Laer. It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good.
In thee there is not half an hour's life.
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated and envenom'd. The foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me. Lo, here I lie,
Never to rise again. Thy mother's poison'd.
I can no more. The king, the king's to blame.
Ham. The point envenom'd too?
Then, venom, to thy work! Hurts the King.
All. Treason! treason!
King. O yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.
Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murd'rous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion! Is thy union here?
Follow my mother. King dies.
Laer. He is justly serv'd;
It is a poison temper'd by himself.
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me! Dies.
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.
I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen, adieu!
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time (as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest) O, I could tell you—
But let it be. Horatio, I am dead;
Thou liv'st. Report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.
Hor. Never believe it!
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane.
Here's yet some liquor left.
Ham. As th' art a man,
Give me the cup! let go! by heaven, I'll have 't!
O good Horatio, what a wounded name
(Things standing thus unknown) shall live behind me.
If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story.
A march afar off ⟨and shout within⟩
What warlike noise is this?

Enter Osric.

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,
To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.
Ham. O, I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit.
I cannot live to hear the news from England,
But I do prophesy th' election lights
On Fortinbras. He has my dying voice.
So tell him, with th' occurrents, more and less,
Which have solicited—The rest is silence. Dies.
Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good night, sweet prince,
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither?

Enter Fortinbras, and English Ambassador, with drum, colors, and Attendants.

Fort. Where is this sight?

269 kettle: kettledrum 288 fat: out of training 289 napkin: handkerchief 301 pass: thrust 302 wanton: pampered child 305 S. d. Cf. n. 314 sounds: swoons

335 temper'd: compounded 343 sergeant: sheriff's officer 349 Roman; cf. n. 362 This warlike volley; cf. n. 364 o'er-crows: triumphs over 368 occurrents: incidents 369 solicited: moved; cf. n. 371 flights: troops

Hor. What is it you would see?
If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.
Fort. This quarry cries on havoc. O proud death,
What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot
So bloodily hast struck?
Amb. The sight is dismal,
And our affairs from England come too late.
The ears are senseless that should give us hearing,
To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd,
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead.
Where should we have our thanks?
Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it th' ability of life to thank you.
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,
Are here arriv'd, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view;
And let me speak to th' yet unknowing world
How these things came about. So shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters,
Of deaths put on by cunning and forc'd cause,
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on th' inventors' heads. All this can I
Truly deliver.
Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune.
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me.
Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more.
But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild, lest more mischance
On plots and errors happen.
Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet like a soldier to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royal. And for his passage
The soldiers' music and the rites of war
Speak loudly for him!
Take up the bodies. Such a sight as this
Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go bid the soldiers shoot.

Exeunt ⟨marching, after the which a peal of ordnance are shot off⟩

FINIS

376 quarry: heap of slain cries on havoc: proclaims merciless slaughter: cf. n. 392 stage: platform 396 casual: unpremeditated 397 forc'd: unreal 404 rights of memory: ancient claims 407 draw on more: be seconded by others 413 been put on: been put to the proof, tried 414 royal: cf. n. 416 Speak: cf. n.

Notes

At the time of his sudden death in June of 1946, Professor Brooke had completed his work on the text, notes, and glosses for Hamlet, King Lear, Othello and I Henry IV. The editorial tasks which he left unfinished—preparation of some of the final copy for the press, reading of the proofs, compilation of the Indexes of Words Glossed, decisions as to certain matters of style and format, and, in the case of Henry IV, the rescuing of the text from the prescriptive punctuation of the eighteenth-century editors—have been undertaken by Professor Benjamin Nangle.

Textual Note. The two authorities for the text of Hamlet are the second quarto (separate) edition of the play published in 1604–05 and the version included in the first folio (collected) edition of Shakespeare's dramatic works, published in 1623. The Quarto text, though marred by bad typographical errors, is fundamentally the more reliable, and is usually (but by no means always) to be preferred. In the present book matter which the Folio omits is set within ornamental brackets («). This mainly represents cuts made in the stage version of the play as acted in Shakespeare's time. Matter which the Quarto omits is set within angle brackets (»). This is largely material excised because indiscreet in 1604 or overtopical.

The bad First Quarto of the play, printed in 1603, is untrustworthy, but is occasionally of use in explaining doubtful passages or illustrating early stage practice.

The stage directions here reprinted are those of the Second Quarto, the Folio, and very occasionally of the First Quarto. Necessary amplifications and other essential matter omitted in the original editions are supplied within square brackets([ ]). The early quartos do not divide the play into acts or scenes. Such a division was attempted in the First Folio and was carried out, with some incompleteness and with Latin headings ('Actus Primus. Scaena Prima,' etc.) through the first two acts. The act and scene division in the last three acts, and all indications of the place of action, are the work of post-Shakespearean editors, beginning with the Betterton acting text of 1676.

In Shakespeare's usage it was optional to give full syllabic value to the ending -ed of past verbal forms or (as is usually done now) to contract this ending with the preceding syllable. In the present text final -ed must always be pronounced as a separate syllable in order to preserve the original rhythm of the verse. Where rhythm requires the contracted form, the spelling -'d is used.

Shakespeare accented a number of words on syllables which now do not bear the accent, and sometimes his practice in this matter was inconsistent. Where an unusual accentuation is required, it is indicated by an acute mark over the stressed vowel, as in canóniz'd.

Obsolete words and words used in now unusual senses are explained in footnotes the first time they appear in the text. Repetitions are not noted and when they occur should be checked by the Index of Words Glossed at the end of the volume.

The critical and general notes in the present section are announced by the symbol, cf. n. ('confer notam'), at the bottom of the page of text to which each has reference. Names in parentheses at the end of notes indicate the authority for the information. No effort has been made to give precise credit either for information that has become common property or for that which, so far as known, is new in the present edition.

The Actors' Names. The first list of dramatis personae is found in the edition of 1676, which indicates the roles assumed by the actors of Thomas Betterton's company during Restoration performances of the play.

I.i.s.d. Enter Bernardo and Francisco. That is, they meet as the scene opens. The early editions regularly spell 'Barnardo,' which represents the Elizabethan pronunciation of the name.

I.i.3. Long[]. . . king!* The pass-word or reply to the sentry's challenge.

I.i.16, 17. Friends . . . Dane. When challenged by Francisco (who is now off duty) Horatio and Marcellus reply 'Friends' and 'Countrymen,' and are not asked for the pass-word. Like Denmark in line 58 below and Dane in line 46 of the next scene, Dane here means the king of Denmark.

I.i.26. piece. A humorous expression equivalent to 'something like him.'

I.i.46. his. Regularly used for 'its.' The latter form had not yet come into common use.

I.i.51. scholar. Scholars (and particularly scholars of Dr. Faustus' university, Wittenberg) had special competence to deal with spirits.

I.i.54. It . . . to. It was believed that a ghost could not speak until spoken to.

I.i.75. sleaded pole-axe. The first two Quartos agree in spelling 'sleaded pollax'; the Folio has 'sledded Pollax.' There seems to be no allusion to the Poles or 'Polacks' mentioned later in the play, though the Folio compositor may have thought so.

I.i.82. Good now. Interjectional expression denoting entreaty.

I.i.100. law and heraldry. The forms of both the common law and the law of arms having been duly observed. Nobles who signed binding agreements were wont to attach heraldic seals.

I.i.101, 102. lands . . . seiz'd of. What Fortinbras staked was not his kingdom, but his personal landed possessions.

I.i.106. cov'nant. The Folio reading. Q2 has 'comart,' probably a misreading of Shakespeare's handwriting.

I.i.111. list. Literally, a special catalogue of the soldiers of a force; here used in the sense of an indiscriminately chosen crowd.

I.i.113. hath a stomach. I.e., gives an opportunity for courage. With a quibble on the literal meaning.

I.i.131. The Quarto compositor (our only authority here) seems to have inadvertently skipped a line, perhaps because it began in the same way as 132. The line here conjecturally substituted is based upon the passage Shakespeare was remembering, where Plutarch writes (in North's translation) 'concerning the fires in the element [i.e., sky] and spirits running up and down in the night' before Cæsar's death.

I.i.134. sick . . . doomsday. Perhaps a reference to the Biblical account in Matthew 24. 29: 'Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light.'

I.i.135. fear'd. The Quarto has 'feare.' Final 'e' and 'd' were often indistinguishable in Elizabethan handwriting.

I.i.139. climatures. A rare derivative from 'climate,' here meaning about as much as 'latitudes.' The passage is an echo of Julius Cæsar, I.iii.31, 32, where Casca says of the omens:

> 'For I believe they are portentous things
> Unto the climate that they point upon.'

I.i.150. uphoarded. If while alive a person had hidden gold and placed it under a charm, it was necessary, for his soul's quiet, to release it from the spell. (Illustrated by Steevens from Dekker's Knight's Conjuring, 1607.)

I.i.154. partisan. A long-handled spear with a blade having one or more lateral cutting projections.

I.i.167. cock. It was a tradition that at cockcrow spirits returned to their confines.

I.i.174–181. This beautiful passage of (apparently unrecorded) folklore, preserved in the bad first Quarto as well as in the two good texts, is quite irrelevant to the business of the scene. It is clearly not Christmas at Elsinore and the spirits do stir abroad. Perhaps Shakespeare wrote it in anticipation of a Christmas court performance of the play, at which it would have been both appropriate and reassuring to the audience.

I.i.179. planets strike. The malignant aspects of planets, according to the pseudo-science of astrology, were supposed to be able to injure incautious travellers by night.

I.ii.s.d. cum aliis. With such other characters as the theatre manager may think proper (an author's note). The same vague phrase occurs in II.ii.s.d. This stage direction, following that in Q2, seems to define the scene as a meeting of the new king and queen with an administrative board similar to the Elizabethan Privy Council (Dover Wilson). The business transacted is suitable to such a meeting.

I.ii.68. kin . . . kind. I.e., more than his actual kinship and less than a natural relation. 'Kind' is here used equivocally for 'natural' and also for 'affectionate.' A proverbial expression occurring elsewhere in Elizabethan literature.

I.ii.70. i' th' sun. Probably Hamlet means he is too much in the unwelcome sunshine of the King's favor. The reply is purposely enigmatical. There is a quibble on 'sun' and 'son.'

I.ii.116. importune. The early editions agree in reading impart toward(s); but to impart toward a person with nobility of love has never been intelligible English and the passage has never been adequately explained. The emendation suggested is, graphically, not unlikely. Shakespeare seems to have been prone to improperly doubled consonants. In the Sonnets (set up from his autograph probably) one finds such spellings as 'crittick,' 'pittifull,' 'widdowed,' 'boddies,' 'immitated,' etc. If he wrote 'importune' here, it could have been very easily read as 'impart tow'd.' For the phrase 'importune with love' compare the next scene, line 110.

I.ii.117. Wittenberg. A famous German university, founded in 1502.

I.ii.144. Hyperion. The Titanic sun god, but here used for Apollo.

I.ii.153. Niobe. A daughter of Tantalus, who boasted that she had more sons and daughters than Leto. Consequently Apollo and Artemis slew her children with arrows, and she herself was turned by Zeus into a stone upon Mount Sipylus in Lydia, where she shed tears all the summer long.

I.ii.166. forget myself. I.e., or I have lost the knowledge even of myself.

I.ii.181. to drink deep. The Second Quarto reading, 'for to drink,' may well be what Shakespeare wrote.

I.ii.186. bak'd meats. It was an old custom to have a feast as part of the funeral ceremonies.

I.ii.207. waste. It here means emptiness, the time when no living thing was seen.

I.ii.227. it head. The neuter possessive, it, is not infrequent in Shakespeare, doubtless to avoid the ambiguity of his. See note on I.i.46.

I.iii.8. violet. Early violets were proverbial examples of transitory things.

I.iii.29. place. Instead of particular act and place the Folio reads 'peculiar Sect and force.'

I.iii.57. double blessing. I.e., because Laertes had already taken leave of his father and received his blessing.

I.iii.60. wind . . . in the shoulder of. Wind blowing from a stern quarter, hence 'behind,' 'favorable.'

I.iii.62. precepts. Many parallels for several of these precepts have been discovered. The most striking are Lord Burghley's instructions to his son, Robert Cecil (printed in J. Strype, Annals of the Reformation, etc., 1824, IV, pp. 475–479).

I.iii.78. clef. That is, the best bred Frenchmen are noted for striking the perfect tone in dress. Shakespeare uses the word twice elsewhere, spelling it 'cliff.' The early texts virtually agree in misprinting the line: 'Are (Q2 Or) of a most select and generous (Q1 generall) chiefe (F cheff) in that.' It has long been regarded as a puzzle.

I.iii.104. tenders. Polonius, in l. 111, uses 'tenders' in the sense of promises to pay, which, as he says, are not legal currency. In line 112 the word means 'value' and in line 114 tender me may mean 'present me with' or 'exhibit yourself as'; but by that time Polonius has lost control of the word.

I.iii.114. Running. The figure is that of making a horse broken-winded by over-riding. The word is the happy guess of nineteenth-century editors, Dyce and Collier. The Quarto reads 'Wrong' and the Folio 'Roaming.' (In Elizabethan handwriting 'w' may look very much like 'ru.')

I.iii.120. woodcocks. The woodcock was supposed to be a witless bird easily snared.

I.iii.135. bawds. One of the famous emendations of Lewis Theobald (1688–1744); 'bonds' in the original texts.

I.iv.35. His. So the text reads and it requires no change. Hamlet's attention turns from the group (these men, l. 32) to the typical individual.

I.iv.39. oft adulter. Another well known crux. The Second Quarto (again the only authority) reads of a doubt and has been variously emended. The reading here accepted is that of S. A. Tannenbaum (Shaksperian Scraps, 1933, p. 115). 'Adulter' for adulterate is a well established form, though not known to be used by Shakespeare elsewhere. If his manuscript abbreviated the last syllable in the common way (oft adoult'), the Quarto misprint is very easily explained.

I.iv.52. inurn'd. Put in an urn such as the Romans used for the ashes of their dead. There is a sharp inconsistency between this image and the previous one of bones bursting their cerements, but Shakespeare has the same confusion in Henry V, I.ii.232, 233 f.:

> lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
> Tombless, with no remembrance over them.

(Both the Quartos read 'interr'd.')

I.iv.91. Nemean lion's. One of the powerful monsters slain by Hercules.

I.v.25. blazon. Literally, to portray armorial bearings in their proper colors.

I.v.37. the fat weed . . . Lethe wharf. No particular weed, but an image of the absolute in vegetable nonchalance and inactivity. The Quarto reading, rootes, in line 38 is better than the Folio rots.

I.v.38. Lethe. A river (sometimes called a lake) of the Greek underworld, whose waters gave forgetfulness of the past to those who drank of them.

I.v.73. gates and alleys. Shakespeare here implies as much as was then known touching the circulation of the blood (Hudson).

I.v.86. O horrible, etc. The early texts print this line as part of the Ghost's speech, but the tradition of the stage is probably correct in assigning it to Hamlet. It was so spoken by, among others, Garrick, Kemble, and Irving. Betterton probably omitted it, for it is marked for omission in the Quarto of 1676.

I.v.150. Saint Patrick. He was the keeper of purgatory; the patron saint of all blunders and confusion (Moberly); he banished serpents from Ireland, hence he was the proper saint to take cognizance of the report that a serpent stung Hamlet's father (Dowden). If Hamlet's oath requires any explanation, the first surmise appears the more probable.

I.v.152. honest ghost. I.e., an actual ghost, and not the devil or an evil spirit in disguise. Note Hamlet's doubt upon this point later.

I.v.173. sword. It was customary to swear upon the sword, because the hilt made the form of the cross. Such an oath was binding both in military honor and in religion.

I.v.185. your. Does not mean Horatio's philosophy, but refers to philosophy in general. The Folio reads 'our.'

I.v.192. With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake. Mimicry goes with this, as Hamlet first folds his arms smugly and then nods his head.

II.i.45. As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' th' working. As if Laertes were a gay new garment slightly smudged by the tailor's hands.

II.i.131. More grief to hide than hate to utter love. Polonius' syntax is more than usually overstrained as he attempts the oracular riming couplet. His meaning is: This love of Hamlet's must be made known, because if we kept it secret, more trouble might arise from its concealment than can displeasure from its revealing.

II.ii.11. being of so young days brought up with him. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are noblemen who had been selected (as Kittredge remarks) to be Hamlet's schoolmates and playfellows when they were all children. Nothing indicates that they have been at the university. They appear to have been summoned to court from their country estates, quite in Queen Elizabeth's manner, and they arrive in some apprehension.

II.ii.47. I hold my duty as I hold my soul, etc. I think my duty, to both God and King, as important as my soul.

II.ii.65. Upon our first. Perhaps on hearing the first of the 'delated articles' mentioned in I.ii.38.

II.ii.77. Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee. This line as here printed from the Folio has a Shakespearean rhythm that is destroyed in the Quarto version, 'Gives him threescore thousand crowns,' etc. Probably the Quarto printer felt, as modern editors have, that 3,000 crowns was not enough to wage a war; but an annual pension of that amount was a handsome encouragement (about equal to the thousand pounds Queen Elizabeth allowed her impoverished premier earl, the Earl of Oxford), and there is no reason to suppose that Norway means to subsidize the expedition. In any case, 60,000 crowns in annual fee (yearly income) would be fantastic.

II.ii.78. his commission to employ those soldiers. Something like the 'letters of marque' which make the difference between a privateer and a pirate.

II.ii.83. regards . . . allowance. I.e., terms securing the safety of the country and regulating the passage of troops through it (Clarendon).

II.ii.120. these, &. That is, 'Deliver these lines.' The passage imitates the superscription of an Elizabethan letter.

II.ii.190. fishmonger. The word is probably used here in some cant coarse sense.

II.ii.198. god kissing. Bishop Warburton (1698–1779) suggested this emendation for 'good kissing' in the early editions. The sun's rays were supposed to engender maggots in dead flesh. Compare the reference to 'Titan' the sun god in I Henry IV, II.iv.108ff.

II.ii.209. Between who? Hamlet deliberately misunderstands 'matter' to mean a cause of dispute.

II.ii.213. amber . . . gum. In reference to the exudings from the weak eyes of old men.

II.ii.239, 240. on . . . button. That is, we have not reached the summit of good fortune.

II.ii.247. strumpet. Because of Fortune's fickleness.

II.ii.272. beggars bodies. I.e., if ambition is but a shadow, then monarchs and heroes, who have attained ambition, are in possession only of a shadow; whereas beggars, who have not attained ambition, at least possess something material—i.e., their bodies. But every beggar may long for ambition—a shadow—and hence the monarchs and heroes who are in possession of their ambitions, are but the beggars' shadows—i.e., have this shadow for which the beggar longs in vain.

II.ii.282, 283. too dear a halfpenny. A little too dear. Even my poor thanks are worth more than the visitation for which I am thanking you, for that is not a genuine kindness.

II.ii.314. quintessence. A term in alchemy. The fifth essence of ancient and mediæval philosophy, supposed to be the substance of which the heavenly bodies were composed, and to be actually latent in all things: hence, pure essence or extract, essential part of a thing (O. E. D.)

II.ii.325, 326. humorous man. It would appear that there is particular reference here to the audience's interruption of Macilente's part in Jonson's Every Man out of his Humour when Shakespeare's company first produced that play in 1599. The following passage on the clown, like Hamlet's rebuke in III.ii.34ff., is doubtless pointed at Will Kempe, the popular comic actor and dancer, who left the company in displeasure shortly before Shakespeare's Hamlet was produced.

II.ii.327. tickle o' the sere. Literally, the 'sere' is the catch of a gunlock that holds the hammer. Hence a trigger that goes off at a light touch. The Folio spells: 'tickled a' th' sere'.

II.ii.335. the late innovation. The new popularity of the companies of child-actors, the Children of the Queen's Chapel and Children of Paul's, both of which re-opened their theatres about 1600.

II.ii.337. the city. London is meant. What follows is highly topical and refers to conditions during the 'War of the Theatres' of 1600 and 1601.

II.ii.341. aery of children. The Children of the Queen's Chapel are particularly meant.

II.ii.343. common stages. The public theatres, such as the Globe, which were less aristocratic than the private houses occupied by the children.

II.ii.344, 345. afraid of goose-quills. The goose-quills are the pens of satirical dramatists, especially Ben Jonson. His Poetaster, acted by the Chapel Children in 1601, is full of ridicule of the adult players, with whom he had temporarily quarrelled.

III.ii.359. Hercules and his load. The reference may be to the sign of the Globe Theatre which represented Hercules carrying the globe. The sign itself was an allusion to the story of Hercules relieving Atlas.

II.ii.374. I know a hawk from a handsaw. I know one thing from another. An old proverb. (A 'handsaw' is a hernshaw or heron.)

II.ii.385. Roscius. A famous Roman actor of Cicero's time, whose intellectual capacities lifted him above the stigma usually attached to his profession.

II.ii.393, 394. scene individable. A play which follows the classical rules relating to the three unities of time, place, and action.

II.ii.394. poem unlimited. A play which disregarded the unities. Seneca. A Roman writer of rhetorical tragedies (died 65 A.D.) whose plays were during the Renaissance considered models of classic technique. Plautus. A Roman comic dramatist of the third century B.C. who ranked with Terence as the model for comedy. Imitated by Shakespeare in The Comedy of Errors.

II.ii.395. law of writ and the liberty. Polonius may be only repeating the distinction between 'scene individable' and 'poem unlimited' above. It is possible that law of writ refers to rehearsed performances following the written text, and liberty to plays in which the dialogue was extemporized by the actors, as in the Italian commedia dell' arte.

II.ii.421. Cracked . . . ring. Having the circle broken that surrounds the sovereign's head on a coin. Here used quibblingly for a voice that has changed and hence is 'cracked' in its 'ring' or purity of tone. It is, of course, a boy actor of women's parts that Hamlet is addressing.

II.ii.428. Caviary . . . general. I.e., a delicacy (caviar) for which the general public had no relish.

II.ii.432, 433. no sallets . . . savory. No ribaldry to spice the lines.

II.ii.435. handsome. I.e., its beauty was not that of elaborate diction or polish, but that of structure and proportion.

II.ii.436. Æneas' tale to Dido. The passage inserted here should be compared with Marlowe's Dido, Queen of Carthage (1594), II.i.213 ff. It is a matter of critical dispute whether Shakespeare intended this passage as burlesque or whether he selected deliberately the earlier turgid romantic style to contrast with his more realistic dramatic method in this scene. The Marlowe play had been acted by the 'little eyases' (Children of the Chapel) and was probably still in their repertoire in 1601.

II.ii.440. Hyrcanian beast. The tiger. So described by Virgil. CF. Æneid, IV. 367.

II.ii.444. ominous horse. The wooden horse in which the Greeks lay hidden until the Trojans dragged it within the walls.

II.ii.517. God's bodkin. A corruption of an oath 'by God's body.'

II.ii.524. the Murther of Gonzago. No such play is recorded, but S. A. Tannenbaum has dealt with two historical murders in the Gonzaga family (Shakspere Assoc. Bull., xvi, 1941, 169–74).

II.ii.527. some dozen or sixteen lines. A colloquial way of indicating an uncertain small number, as we say 'ten or twelve' (Hamlet has not yet written the speech). So Baxter says: 'When he had been a preacher about twelve or sixteen years.'

II.ii.548. cue. A technical stage term for the last words of an actor's line to which another actor replied.

II.ii.556. John-a-dreams. Armin's Nest of Ninnies (1608) contains the following definition: 'His name is John, indeed, says the cynic; but neither John-a-nods, nor John-a-dreams, yet either as you take it, for he is simply simple without tricks.'

II.ii.558. property. His crown, his wife, everything, in short, which he might be said to be possessed of, except his life (Furness).

II.ii.565. pigeon-liver'd. It was believed that pigeons were gentle because they had no gall.

II.ii.572. murthered. Pronounce in three syllables. Only the bad First Quarto has 'father', which is not needed.

III.i.14. Niggard of question, etc. This report differs wholly from the facts. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are not malign, but they have to save their faces.

III.i.63. To be, or not to be. To live or die. This is the lowest point that Hamlet's melancholy reaches. In the suspense with which he awaits the outcome of his test, he loses the glad assurance with which he closed Act II (the day before), and allows himself to wonder how any sensitive person can consent to endure the humiliations of life. He argues, however, in general terms, not in terms of his own situation.

III.i.66. take . . . troubles. Many commentators have felt that this line contains a badly mixed metaphor and consequently have suggested various unnecessary emendations. The phrase 'sea of troubles,' in the sense of a 'mass of troubles,' however, occurs elsewhere in Elizabethan literature. Cf. Greene's Mamillia, ed. Grosart, vol. II., p. 18; "hauing himself escaped the sea of trouble and care," and Dekker's The Wonder of a Kingdome, ed. 1873. vol. IV., p. 230:

> I never heard mongst all your Romane spirits,
> That any held so bravely up his head,
> In such a sea of troubles (that come rouling
> One on anothers necke) as Lotti doth.

III.i.76. makes calamity of so long life. Makes affliction (i.e., the afflicted person) live so long.

III.i.77. For who would bear, etc. The miseries specified are more those of man in general than of the Prince of Denmark. (In line 79 the Quarto reads despiz'd.)

III.i.83. a bare bodkin. This may mean 'a mere pin' or 'an unsheathed dagger.' The former is more forceful.

III.i.87. No traveller returns. The ghost is ignored. In this soliloquy Hamlet's mind is curiously stripped of the religious ideas and implications which usually mark it.

III.i.125, 126. virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock. A figure from the grafting of apples, with a hint at Eve's apple and original sin. Acquired virtue may be grafted on the old sinful tree ('stock'), but the fruit will still taste of man's fall.

III.i.128. Get thee to a nunnery. For which Ophelia's devotional apparatus and attitude qualify her. The sense of futility expressed in the preceding soliloquy here turns to misanthropy.

III.i.136. Where's your father? Hamlet here sees Polonius, and in line 153 ('all but one') he sees the king. There is no reason to believe that he is aware of their presence earlier.

III.i.150. nickname. I.e., by painting your face and by your fashionable affectations you turn human beings (God's creatures) into figures that bear the same resemblance to reality that a nickname does to a Christian name. Or possibly this is an allusion to the Elizabethan court fashion of giving animal names to the various courtiers.

III.ii.9. groundlings. The inferior portion of the audience who paid a penny for standing room in the yard or pit. Hamlet was written for a courtly, not a popular, audience, and perhaps in deliberate effort to establish the prestige which the 'little eyases' were endangering.

III.ii.10, 11. inexplicable dumb-shows. Pantomimes illustrating the subsequent action of the play, such as began each act of Gorboduc and other early tragedies.

III.ii.12. Termagant. A noisy character representing a supposed god of the Saracens in some of the mystery plays.

III.ii.12. out-herods Herod. I.e., outdoes even the extravagant acting of Herod, the most violent and declamatory figure in the mystery plays. Cf. the stage direction in the Coventry play of the Magi and Herod, 'Here Herod rages in the pageant, and in the street also.'

III.ii.35, 36. there be of them, etc. Examples of gags and stage business introduced by clowns are found in a contemporary anonymous play, The Pilgrimage to Parnassus, Act V, ll. 680 ff.: 'if thou canst but draw thy mouth awry, lay thy leg over thy staff, saw a piece of cheese asunder with thy dagger, lap up drink on the earth, I warrant thee they'll laugh mightily.'

III.ii.64. co-mingled. The Folio reading. Q2 has comedled (commeddled), which would mean the same thing.

III.ii.65. a pipe for fortune's finger, etc. This image of the 'recorder' is elaborately developed later in the scene, ll. 344 ff.

III.ii.76. in one speech. While one speech of the play is being spoken. Claudius is not expected to make a speech (cf. lines 79–86 below), but to betray his guilt by the look on his face.

III.ii.79. Vulcan. He was the armorer of the gods.

III.ii.86. be idle. In Hall's Chronicle, the phrase 'idle and weak in his wit' occurs (O.E.D.).

III.ii.92. chameleon's dish. It was believed that chameleons fed on air. (Hamlet takes the King's question in the sense, 'How are you being fed?')

III.ii.100. Julius Cæsar. The universities gave many representations within their walls of plays in Latin and occasionally English. A Latin play on Cæsar's death by Richard Edes was acted at Christ Church, Oxford, in 1582. See also the title-page of the 1603 Quarto of Hamlet.

III.ii.102. Capitol. The murder of Cæsar actually took place in the Theatre of Pompey, which stood in the Campus Martius. Shakespeare transfers the scene to the Capitol both in Julius Cæsar and in Antony and Cleopatra.

III.ii.112. country. For the hidden pun see Farmer & Henley, Slang and its Analogues, ii. p. 230.

III.ii.123. twice two months. This implies that about two months have passed since the opening of the play (cf. I.ii.142). Most of this time elapsed in the interval between Act I and Act II.

III.ii.124, 125. I'll have a suit of sables. Hamlet's persiflage is ambiguous. Sable fur was brown and connoted not mourning but wealth and elegance, but 'sable' as an adjective in heraldry meant black. The sense of the double talk is perhaps (1) Let the devil now wear my black mourning, for I'll be dressed like a normal prince; (2) Let the devil wear black, for I shall be dressed just like him.

III.ii.129. hobby-horse. In the morris dance, a figure of a horse made of light material and fastened around the waist of a performer, who went through various antics. The quotation here may be from a ballad perhaps satirizing Puritan opposition to May-games.

III.ii.144. miching Malicho. The Quarto has munching Mallico. The second word is usually taken to be Spanish 'malbecho,' which does mean 'mischief' or 'misdeed.' Eric Partridge ('Some Romany Words,' London Times Literary Supplement, Dec. 26, 1936) argues for a Gypsy origin.

III.ii.161. Tellus'. The goddess of the earth, who received and nourished the sown seed. Orbed ground is the round earth.

III.ii.225. Sport and repose. Here the objects of the verb.

III.ii.245. Tropically. By means of a trope or figure of speech; but the bad First Quarto prints 'Trapically,' which (with reference to the Mousetrap) is what Hamlet secretly means.

III.ii.246, 247. duke's name. In the First Quarto the leading characters are called Duke and Duchess. In the Second Quarto and the Folio, except for this line, they are always King and Queen.

III.ii.253. interpret. At puppet shows or 'motions' the dialogue was spoken by a person concealed behind the stage. This was called 'interpreting.' The classic example is the 'motion' of Hero and Leander presented by Lanthorn Leatherhead in Jonson's Bartholomew Fair (1614), V.iv.

III.ii.258. So you must take your husbands. That is, 'for better, for worse.' The good texts here have 'mistake' for must take, found only in the bad First Quarto.

III.ii.259, 260. the croaking . . . revenge. Parody of a non-Shakespearean play of 1594, The True Tragedy of Richard the Third (Malone Society reprint, ll. 1892f.)

The screeking raven sits croking for revenge,
Whole herds of beasts come bellowing for revenge.

III.ii.265. Hecate. Diana, in her aspect as infernal goddess, was regarded as the queen of witches. Pronounce 'Hecat's'.

III.ii.278. deer go weep. It was a popular belief that the deer, when badly wounded, retires from the herd and goes apart to weep and die. See As You Like It, II.i.34–41.

III.ii.283. Provincial roses. So called from Provins, a town forty miles from Paris.

III.ii.284. cry. Literally, a pack of hounds—here, troop or company.

III.ii.285. share. Theatrical companies were organized on a profit-sharing basis. The controlling members were called 'sharers' and the original 'shares' could be subdivided.

III.ii.287. Damon. An allusion to the classical story of the friendship of Damon and Pythias (or Phintias), dramatized by Richard Edwards in a play printed in 1571.

III.ii.290. pajock. 'A king of shreds and patches,' as Hamlet calls him a little later (iv.115). The word has nothing to do with peacock, but is the same that Spenser uses, in the form 'patchock' or 'patchcock' to describe the degenerate English in Ireland. The realm, Hamlet says, has been 'dismantled' of his father (as if gorgeous raiment had been removed), and now they have in his place a ragamuffin. (The O.E.D. has conjecturally explained this, but editors have ignored the explanation.)

III.ii.305. distempered. This word was used both of mental and of bodily disorder. Hamlet pretends to understand it in the latter sense.

III.ii.307. choler. The other meaning of 'choler' is bilious disorder, and so again Hamlet pretends to misunderstand it.

III.ii.309. purgation. Another word of double meaning: (1) clearing from the accusation or suspicion of guilt; (2) purging in the medical sense.

III.ii.317, 318. this courtesy is not of the right breed. Guildenstern does not think Hamlet to be mad and he knows that he is being laughed at. Here, with real dignity, he withdraws from the conversation and leaves Rosencrantz to take it up.

III.ii.337. pickers and stealers. An allusion to the phrase in the Catechism, 'To keep my hands from picking and stealing.'

III.ii.344. 'While . . . grows.' A proverb of frequent occurrence. Cf. Heywood's Proverbs "while the grass groweth the horse sterveth," and Whetstone's Promos and Cassandra (1578), "Whylst grass doth growe, oft sterves the seely steede."

III.ii.346. recover the wind of. A hunting term, meaning to frighten the game by approaching in the direction of the wind.

III.ii.356. I know no touch of it. Guildenstern is emphatic. Wind instruments were not in favor with fine gentlemen. They distorted the mouth.

III.ii.369. fret. Frets are stops of instruments of the lute or guitar kind. Hamlet also uses it quibblingly to mean 'annoy.'

III.ii.382. the top of my bent. An expression derived from archery; the bow has its 'bent' when it is drawn as far as it can be. Compare II.ii.32.

III.ii.393. Nero. He murdered his mother, Agrippina.

III.iii.7. braves. The Quarto reading is 'browes,' for which the Folio substitutes (apparently in desperation) 'Lunacies.' The word here accepted is an ancient anonymous conjecture, independently revived in Yale Review (March, 1935, p. 620) and in the Parrott-Craig ed. (1938).

III.iii.18. It is a massy wheel, etc. This passage is an interesting development of the earlier image of Fortune's wheel (II.ii.485–487).

III.iii.32. as you said. Polonius knows that the proposal came from himself. Compare III.i.186–190.

III.iii.40. primal. The curse of Cain. Cf. Genesis 4. 11: 'And now art thou cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand.'

III.iii.64. lies. Is sustainable as an action at law.

III.iii.76. pat. This famous word is not in the Quarto text, which has 'but' instead.

III.iii.82. hire and salary. The Folio reading. Q2 has 'base and silly.'

III.iv.110. vice. The Vice was a stock character in the Moralities and Interludes. Although personifying the weaker side of human nature, he was represented as a buffoon and supplied much of the comic element in these plays.

III.iv.115. A king of shreds and patches. A mock king dressed in oddments of costume, such as one might see in a peasant folk-play. This line points the contrast with the ghost, who here enters in peaceful dress—'in his nightgown,' or robe of velvet and fur, according to Q1.

III.iv.186. tame. A word has dropped out of the Quarto text.

III.iv.212. The famous ape. The moral of this unidentified parable is that the Queen will destroy herself, if she allows Hamlet's secrets (the birds) to get abroad or attempts to introduce herself into his business.

III.iv.230. packing. A pun: (1) preparing for my journey; (2) plotting, using my wits (Dover Wilson).

III.v.4. The Folio text indicates that the King enters alone to the Queen after Hamlet has dragged out Polonius' body (without any change of scene).

III.v.7. Mad as the sea and wind, etc. The queen's report attempts to free Hamlet of responsibility for Polonius' death. She does not really think him mad, but avoids doing what Hamlet has instructed her not to do. See III.iv.199–207.

III.v.41. So, haply, slander. Added by Theobald and Capell.

III.vi.17. like an ape an apple. A composite reading suggested by Farmer. The Second Quarto has 'like an apple,' the Folio 'like an Ape,' the bad First Quarto 'as an Ape doth nuttes.'

III.vi.26. The . . . body. A passage about which there have been many conjectures. If Hamlet is not designedly talking mere nonsense, a possible interpretation is: "The King is still alive (i.e., with his body), but he is not with the dead body (i.e., of Polonius)."

III.vi.29, 30. a thing . . . of nothing. Quoting the Prayer Book version of Psalm 144. 4, 'Man is like a thing of nought.'

III.vi.30. Hide fox, and all after. Added in the Folio, probably to motivate Hamlet's sudden rush from the stage. Compare that of King Lear, Lear, IV.vi.198, 199.

III.vii.23. convocation. Perhaps an allusion to the famous Diet or convocation of the dignitaries of the German Empire held at Worms in 1521. It was before this Diet that Martin Luther was summoned to appear.

IV.i.s.d. Here the Folio omits the Gentleman, no doubt, as Collier suggested, to avoid the employment of another actor. A time interval of about a month occurs at this point, and this is the logical place to begin Act IV. Most editors continue the eighteenth century act division, which begins Act IV with III.v, because it has become conventional. (This was apparently Betterton's division, being indicated in the text of 1676.)

IV.i.S.d. The direction in the First Quarto of 1603 is, 'Enter Ofelia playing on a lute, and her haire downe, singing.' This is the basis for the traditional stage-business.

IV.i.26. cockle hat. The cockle hat, staff, and sandals were the guise of a pilgrim and often the disguise of a lover. Cf. Romeo's costume at the ball in Romeo and Juliet. The hat was so called from the custom of putting cockle-shells upon pilgrims' hats. The shell was used to denote that the pilgrim had been to the shrine of St. James of Compostella in Spain.

IV.i.40. did—not—go. The word not breaks the rhythm of the song and is perhaps Ophelia's comment on the lack of ceremonious burial for Polonius.

IV.i.43, 44. owl . . . daughter. There is an old mediæval legend that a baker's daughter was turned into an owl for refusing bread to our Lord (Douce).

IV.i.98. Switzers. The Pope and the kings of France employed Swiss mercenaries as guards. The term 'Switzer' gradually became almost synonymous with 'guard.'

IV.i.152. swoopstake. A gambling term used when the winner clears the board of all the stakes.

IV.i.157. life-rendering pelican. It was a common belief that the pelican fed its young with its own blood. It was thus an emblem of family devotion.

IV.i.174–176. Nature is fine in love, etc. When we love, nature refines or subtilizes us so that some precious part of ourselves goes like an 'instance' (memento or farewell gift) after what we love. Thus Ophelia's wits have followed Polonius in death.

IV.i.178. Hey non nonny. Such meaningless refrains are common in old songs. Cf. 183, 'a-down.'

IV.i.185. wheel. Although this word is usually rendered 'burden,' 'refrain,' it is possible that Ophelia is referring to singing at the spinning wheel.

IV.i.185. false steward. This ballad or story is unknown.

IV.i.188. rosemary. Flower symbolism was an elaborate system in mediæval and Elizabethan England. Cf. The Handfull of Pleasant Delights (1584):

> Rosemarie is for remembrance,
> betweene vs daie and night:
> Wishing that I might alwaies haue
> you present in my sight.

Rosemary was often strewn on biers. Cf. Winter's Tale, IV.iv.74.

IV.i.189. pansies. French, pensées; a country emblem of love and courtship.

IV.i.193. herb of grace. Simply another popular name for rue. Cf. Richard II, III.iv.109, 110:

> I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace;
> Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen.

IV.i.194. difference. An heraldic bearing, distinguishing the arms of one branch of the same family from another. Ophelia implies that for the Queen rue signifies the remembrance of things to be repented, for herself regret.

IV.i.197. For . . . joy. The music for this song is contained in Anthony Holborne's Citharn Schoole (1597) and other collections. The words have not been found.

IV.iii.9. As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things. The Quarto adds els (else) at the end of the line, a weak superfluity probably due to scribe or compositor. The Folio keeps else, but omits greatness to make the line scan.

IV.iii.22. Work. The Second Quarto reading, certainly correct. The Folio has 'Would,' probably the printer's accidental anticipation of that word in line 25. Shakespeare would not willingly, and no editor should, put 'Would . . . wood' in the same line.

IV.iii.22. spring. There are several springs in England whose water is so heavily charged with lime that they will petrify with a deposit of lime any object placed in them. There is one at King's Newnham in Warwickshire and another at Knaresborough in Yorkshire.

IV.iii.25. reverted. I.e., the 'loud wind' of popular affection for Hamlet would have caused Claudius' shafts to recoil upon himself.

IV.iii.29. praises . . . again. I.e., if praises may return to what is now no more, viz., Ophelia's former charms.

IV.iii.30. challenger-on-mount. I.e., her worth challenged all the age to deny her perfection.

IV.iii.43. Claudio. A character who does not appear in the play. Cf. IV.ii.29.

IV.iii.83. siege. Literally 'seat,' thence 'rank,' because people sat at table in order of precedence.

IV.iii.95. incorps'd and demi-natur'd. I.e., like a Centaur, half horse, half man. Literally, of one body with and half partaking of the nature of his horse.

IV.iii.97. in . . . tricks. I.e., I cannot describe so many proofs of dexterity as he performed.

IV.iii.101. Lamound. So the Folio calls him; the Quarto 'Lamord.'

IV.iii.106. masterly report. A report describing Laertes as a master of fence.

IV.iii.115. to play with you. That he might fence with you. Not understanding, the Folio adopts the easier reading, 'to play with him.'

IV.iii.124. passages of proof. Instances from practical experience of the world.

IV.iii.129. plurisy. Often used where today one would say 'plethora' (because of a false association with Latin plus).

IV.iii.134. spendthrift's sigh. A satisfactory paraphrase has not been suggested. The general meaning is probably that the recognition of a 'should' when it is too late is like a wasteful or supererogatory sigh of the spendthrift who recalls his lost opportunities. The sighs are also spendthrifts on the old notion that each one drained blood from the heart (cf. M.N.D., III.ii.98).

IV.iii.155. mountebank. These men were quack-doctors who journeyed from town to town selling miraculous remedies and forbidden poisons. The classical account of their procedure is given in Ben Jonson's play, Volpone, Act II. sc. ii.

IV.iii.159. moon. It was believed that to gather herbs by moonlight added to their medicinal value. It is possible, however, that here the meaning is simple 'on earth.'

IV.iii.166. that our drift look through our bad performance. If our design should become visible by the bad execution of the plot. The image is apparently of the moon looking through thin clouds.

IV.iii.168. a back or second. Support or auxiliary. The king and Laertes are bungling plotters, unused and by temperament unsuited to the niceties of crime.

IV.iii.185. crowflowers. It is probable that Shakespeare is still carrying on his flower symbolism in the garlands worn by Ophelia. Thus the crowflower was also called 'the fair maid of France'; long purples were said to represent the cold hand of death; nettles meant 'stung to the quick'; and the daisy sometimes imported 'pure virginity' or 'spring of life' (Parkinson).

IV.iii.206. woman. I.e., when these tears are shed the woman in me, what I have inherited from my mother, will have come out.

V.i.S.d. Clowns. The term applies both to peasants and to actors of low comedy rôles. It seems likely that this scene was inspired by a local incident which occurred when Shakespeare was in his sixteenth year. Katharine Hamlet (sic), spinster, was drowned in the River Avon, Dec. 17, 1579, and the coroner's jury sat on her for eight weeks, at last finding it Christian burial. (See E. I. Fripp, Shakespeare Studies, 1930, pp. 128–136; and for text of the inquest Minutes & Accounts of the Corporation of Stratford-upon-Avon, 1926, vol. iii. p. 50.)

V.i.8. se offendendo. The clown's mistake for se defendendo, which would itself be a mistake, since this was the verdict in the case of justifiable homicide, not, of course, suicide.

V.i.29. bore arms. A quibble on bearing a coat of arms and the literal meaning.

V.i.35. confess thyself. Half of an old proverb. The rest was 'and be hanged.' Or possibly 'confess thyself a fool.'

V.i.48. unyoke. Literally, 'you may then free your cattle from the yoke'; hence, 'call it a day's work.'

V.i.55. Yaughan. Phonetic Danish for 'John' (Johan). The name is in the Folio text, but not in the Quarto, which reads simply, 'Go, get thee in', etc. It may be a local joke, added by the actors. Jonson's Alchemist, acted by Shakespeare's company at the Blackfriars theatre in 1610, refers to 'an ale-house darker than deaf John's' as if the latter were well and unfavorably known. If Yaughan and deaf John kept the same establishment, this reference cannot be earlier than 1609, when Shakespeare's company began using the Blackfriars.

V.i.57. In . . . love. This song, by Lord Vaux, is found in Tottel's Miscellany (1557) under the title The aged louer renounceth loue, although the Clown sings a confused and blundering version of it.

V.i.63. property of easiness. I.e., custom has made it natural to him to take his task easily.

V.i.71, 72. Legend asserted that Cain slew Abel with the jaw-bone of an ass.

V.i.73. o'erreaches. A quibble on two meanings: (1) 'paws over,' (2) 'outwits.' This is the Quarto reading; the Folio has 'o'er-offices.'

V.i.79. went to beg it. This is the reading of the Second Quarto, justified by O.E.D. (Go 34,b). The Folio changes 'went' to 'meant,' which looks like a printer's emendation.

V.i.84. loggats. A game in which thick sticks are thrown to lie as near as possible to a stake fixed in the ground or to a block of wood on a floor.

V.i.92. tenures. The act, right, or manner of holding, as real estate, property of a superior; manner in, or period for, which anything is had and enjoyed. As the present passage shows, Shakespeare's knowledge of legal terminology was broad, but it was not extraordinary for his time or minutely professional. (See P. S. Clarkson and C. T. Warren, The Law of Property in Shakespeare and the Elizabethan Drama, 1942.)

V.i.94. action of battery. Right to sue for an unlawful attack by beating and wounding.

V.i.96. statutes. Particular modes of recognizance or acknowledgment for securing debts, which thereby became a charge upon the party's land (Ritson).

V.i.96. recognizances. Bonds or obligations of record testifying the recognizor to owe to the recognizee a certain sum of money.

V.i.96. vouchers. Persons who are called upon to warrant a tenant's title.

V.i.97. fines, recoveries. Processes by which entailed estates were commonly transferred from one party to another.

V.i.100. the length . . . indentures. That is, a couple of his legal papers will cover all the ground he has left; i.e., his grave.

V.i.101. conveyances. Documents by which transference of property is effected.

V.i.106. assurance. Also used with quibble on its legal meaning 'evidence of the conveyance or settlement of property.'

V.i.125, 126. by the card. The card on which the thirty-two points of the mariner's compass are marked.

V.i.126, 127. this three years . . . the age is grown so picked. There is a temptation to associate this with the era of social sophistication which became strikingly articulate in Jonson's Every Man in his Humor (1598). Compare the talk of contemporary drama in II.ii.339 ff.

V.i.159. three-and-twenty years. We have here further testimony in support of the Clown's earlier statement (lines 134, 135, 149, 150 f.) that Hamlet was about thirty years old. This is evidently purposed and is not contradicted by anything else in the play. Shakespeare may, however, have begun with the idea of a younger prince and have been brought to emphasize his maturity at the end, both by the way the character developed and by the consideration that Richard Burbage (born about 1567) was outgrowing youthful parts.

V.i.166. Sir Yorick's. The text follows the Quarto. Yorick was not a knight, but, from the Clown at least, may well rate the honorific awarded to country parsons and bachelors of arts. The name might be meant for George (Georg) as pronounced in Danish. Relations between London and Denmark were close in Queen Elizabeth's reign, and grew closer when James I, with his Danish queen, came to the throne in 1603.

V.i.200. but soft awhile! This, the reading of the Second Quarto, is probably what Shakespeare first wrote. The Folio version, 'but soft, aside,' works the necessary business of stepping aside into the line, but that action is covered by line 228.

V.i.214. And but that great command o'ersways the order. Except that sovereign power (the king's command) prevails over the rules of the religious order to which the priest belongs. (He corroborates the suspicion of the Clowns in lines 24–30.) Here as elsewhere in the play, the tone is Catholic. In Q2 the priest's two speeches are assigned to 'Doct.,' whatever that may mean.

V.i.215. should . . . been lodg'd. This old-fashioned construction, perfectly normal in earlier English, was modernized in the Folio 'should . . . have lodg'd.'

V.i.218. crants. German Kranz (singular, not plural). Garlands appear to have been borne before the bodies of unmarried women to the grave, and were hung up in church.

V.i.244. Pelion. Pelion, Olympus, and Ossa (l. 279) are three mountains in the north of Thessaly. The Titans, warring with the gods, are said to have attempted to pile Ossa on Pelion in an effort to scale Olympus.

V.i.250. Hamlet the Dane. Thus naming himself, he asserts his royal rank and further infuriates Laertes. The stage direction accompanying this line is found only in the bad First Quarto.

V.i.284. golden couplets. The dove lays but two eggs and the young, when first disclosed, are covered with a yellow down. Cf. III.i.168 f.

V.ii.14. sea-gown. 'A coarse, high-collared and short-sleeved gown, reaching down to the mid leg, and used most by seamen and sailors' (Onions).

V.ii.23. bugs . . . life. I.e., with such enumeration of bugbears and imaginary terrors if Hamlet were allowed to live.

V.ii.32, 33. prologue . . . play. I.e., before I had formed any real plan, my brains had begun their work.

V.ii.45. comma. A symbol of relation between two parts of the same whole.

V.ii.46. 'As'es. A quibble on 'as,' the conditional particle, and 'ass,' the beast of burden.

V.ii.65. pass and fell-incensed points. Hendiadys: the angrily thrusting sword points.

V.ii.70. election. The Danish throne was elective.

V.ii.89. water-fly. Used for a vain or idly busy person, but probably also with reference to the gaudy attire of the foolish courtier.

V.ii.94. mess. 'One of the groups of persons, normally four, into which the company at a banquet was divided' (Onions).

V.ii.109. remember. The phrase 'remember thy courtesy' (i.e., remember that you are bareheaded) was a conventional one for 'be covered.' Cf. Love's Labour's Lost, V.i.82.

V.ii.110. my ease. This again was the conventional apologetic reply for declining the invitation of 'remember thy courtesy.'

V.ii.118. yaw. Nautical figure: to make way sideward, as from bad steering.

V.ii.127. another tongue. Any tongue but his own.

V.ii.154. edified by the margent. Equivalent to looking up a word in the glossary. It was customary to print explanatory matter in the margins of Elizabethan books.

V.ii.165. twelve for nine. The exact details of this wager are a matter of doubt.

V.ii.185. fond and winnowed. So the Folio, meaning perhaps 'foolish and trite (well sifted).' The Quarto reads prophane and trennowed, the latter word being an easy misreading of 'winnowed.' This portion of the play was largely unintelligible to the printers of both the early texts.

V.ii.234. satisfied in nature. Though his natural anger as a son is satisfied with Hamlet's explanation, yet his artificial honor as a courtier requires that the matter shall be adjudicated.

V.ii.247. foil. That which sets something off to advantage, with a quibble on the meaning 'fencing foil.'

V.ii.263. quit. I.e., requite Laertes' winning of the first two bouts be gaining the third.

V.ii.306.S.d. The usual method of representing upon the stage this exchange of rapiers is as follows: With a quick thrust Hamlet disarms Laertes. As the foil drops, Hamlet places his foot upon it, and, with a bow, offers Laertes his own in exchange. Courtesy compels Laertes to accept this, after which Hamlet stoops, picks up Laertes' foil from the ground, and resumes the bout. For a technical discussion see James L. Jackson, 'The Exchange of Weapons in Hamlet' (Mod. Lang. Notes, Jan., 1942).

V.ii.350. Roman. It was a Roman custom to follow masters in death. See Julius Caesar, V. iii; A. & C., IV. xii.

V.ii.362. This warlike volley. This suggests that the 'shout' mentioned in the Folio s.d. at line 352 should be 'shot.'

V.ii.369. solicited. The sentence is left unfinished.

V.ii.376. cries on havoc. Originally, to give an army the order 'havoc!' as the signal for pillaging.

V.ii.414. royal. The word is very strongly stressed, almost drawn out to three syllables. The Folio weakens by changing it to 'royally.'

V.ii.416. Speak. A command: let music, etc., speak.

The Tragedy of Othello

The Moor of Venice

Edited by Tucker Brooke
and
Lawrence Mason

Dramatis Personae

Othello, the Moor
Brabantio, Father to Desdemona
Cassio, an honorable Lieutenant
Iago, a Villain ['ancient' or standard-bearer, and third in command to Othello]
Roderigo, a gulled Gentleman
Duke of Venice
Senators
Montano, Governor of Cyprus
Gentlemen of Cyprus
Lodovico, Gratiano } two noble Venetians [Kinsman and Brother, respectively, to Brabantio]

Sailors
Clown, [in Othello's retinue]
Desdemona, Wife to Othello [and Daughter to Brabantio]
Emilia, Wife to Iago
Bianca, a Courtesan

Messengers, Herald Officers, Musicians, and Attendants

Scene—Act I, at Venice; Acts II-V, at a sea-port (Famagosta) in Cyprus.

The Tragedy of Othello

Introduction

Sources of the Play

Furness cites two actual historical personages who have been named as possible models for Shakespeare's Othello. (1) Christopher Moro, a heroic Venetian general, returned to Venice in 1508 from the lord-lieutenancy of Cyprus, after the failure of 'an hypothetical' or threatened Turkish attack on the island, in mourning for his recently deceased wife. (2) San Pietro di Bastelica, an Italian adventurer of great distinction in the service of France, in 1563 returned abruptly from a mission to Constantinople (to beg assistance for the Corsicans from the Turks) because of artfully circulated reports of his innocent wife's infidelity; thereupon, after a scene of mingled tenderness and ferocity on his part and gentle submission on hers, he asked pardon upon his knees for the deed he was about to commit and then deliberately strangled her with her handkerchief. The stories of both these personages may well have been retailed in England within Shakespeare's hearing and so may have influenced him; but the chief accepted source for the play remains a prose tale by Cinthio.

Giovanbattista Giraldi, called Cinthio, was a sixteenth-century novelist, poet, dramatist, and university professor of Ferrara who compiled, and published at Monteregale, Sicily, in 1565, an edifying 'philosophical' work wherein ten moral virtues or their opposites are illustrated by ten appropriate tales apiece,—thence entitled Hecatommithi (The Hundred Fables). The seventh novel of the third decade is the source of Othello; but Shakespeare, unless we credit him with a knowledge of Italian or French (a French translation appeared in 1583) or Spanish (a Spanish translation appeared in 1590), seemingly gained his acquaintance with the Hecatommithi at second hand, for no English translation of the work in the sixteenth or seventeenth centuries is known to us.

Cinthio gives a name to none of his prototypes of Shakespeare's characters except the heroine, who is called 'Disdemona.' Othello is simply 'the Moor,' Iago 'the Ensign,' Cassio 'the Captain of the troop' or 'the Captain,' Emilia 'the Ensign's wife,' and Bianca 'a courtesan,' while Brabantio, Lodovico, Gratiano, Montano, Roderigo, the Duke, and the Clown do not appear, and on the other hand 'the Captain of the troop' is provided with an unnamed wife. Cinthio's narrative may be summarized thus, for the sake of the instructive lesson it affords in Shakespeare's method of plot-construction:—

Despite parental opposition, Disdemona loved and married a valiant Moor who had rendered distinguished military service to the Venetian state, and the two lived happily together in Venice for some time, till the Senate appointed the Moor to the command of the troops being sent out as a new garrison for Cyprus. Rather than be separated from her husband, Disdemona insisted upon sharing the perils of the voyage. They accordingly set sail and in due time 'with a perfectly tranquil sea arrived safely at Cyprus.'[1] Now a wicked Ensign among the soldiery, of whose wife Disdemona became very fond, fell passionately in love with the Moor's wife and 'bent all his thoughts to achieve his conquest; . . . but she, whose every wish was centred in the Moor, had no thought for this Ensign more than for any other man.' The Ensign, ascribing his failure to a certain Captain of a troop to whom Disdemona had always shown great kindness, because of the Moor's affection for him, determined to revenge himself by bringing about the death of the Captain and destroying the Moor's love for the lady. 'Not long afterwards it happened that the Captain, having drawn his sword upon a soldier of the guard, and struck him,' was punished by being deprived of his rank; Disdemona's impulsive intercession thereupon, out of mere friendliness and concern lest her husband should 'lose so dear a friend,' gave the wicked Ensign a hint upon which he promptly acted by dexterously insinuating to the Moor, 'after feigning at first great reluctance to say aught that might displease,' that the lady sought the Captain's restoration to favor for her own sake, 'and all the more since she has taken an aversion to your blackness.' The enraged husband's demand for positive proof was temporarily satisfied by lies and promises, and afterwards 'the villain resolved on a new deed of guilt.

'Disdemona often used to go to visit the Ensign's wife, and remained with her a good part of the day. Now the Ensign observed that she carried about with her a handkerchief, which he knew the Moor had given her, finely embroidered in the Moorish fashion. Then he conceived the plan of taking this kerchief from her secretly, and thus laying the snare for her final ruin. The Ensign had a little daughter, a child three years of age, who was much loved by Disdemona, and one day, when the unhappy lady had gone to pay a visit at the house of this vile man, he took the little child up in his arms and carried her to Disdemona, who took her and pressed her to her bosom; whilst at the same instant this traitor, who had extreme dexterity of hand, drew the kerchief from her sash so cunningly that she did not notice him.'

After this 'it seemed as if fate conspired with the Ensign to work the death of the unhappy Disdemona.' The handkerchief was dropped in the Captain's apartment and found by him; the Moor was made to witness a conversation in which the Ensign's pantomime seemed to indicate that the Captain was confessing everything; Disdemona naturally failed to produce the handkerchief when it was called for; and the Moor, wholly convinced now, 'fell to meditating how he should put his wife to death, and likewise the Captain, so that their death should not be laid to his charge.' 'The Ensign's wife, who knew the whole truth, but dared not, from fear of her husband, disclose a single circumstance,' tried to warn Disdemona indirectly, but the Ensign pointed out to the Moor the Captain's wife 'standing at a window, where she could be seen by all the passers-by in the street,' with the handkerchief in her possession, and the doom of the two innocent victims was sealed. 'After much entreating and being richly paid,' the Ensign finally overcame his fears and one dark night assaulted the Captain, who was 'on his way to visit a courtesan,' and with one blow cut off his right leg at the thigh; only the wounded man's vigorous sword-play and the speedy response to his cries for assistance saved his life.

1 The quotations are taken from Taylor's translation, 1855, as reprinted by Furness.

Then the Ensign and the Moor 'consulted of one means and another—poison and daggers—to kill poor Disdemona, but could resolve on nothing. At length the Ensign said, "A plan comes to my mind, which will give you satisfaction and raise cause for no suspicion. It is this: the house in which you live is very old, and the ceiling of your chamber has many cracks; I propose we take a stocking filled with sand, and beat Disdemona with it till she dies; thus will her body bear no signs of violence. When she is dead we can pull down a portion of the ceiling, and thus make it seem as if a rafter falling on her head had killed the lady. Suspicion cannot rest on you, since all men will impute her death to accident." This cruel counsel pleased the Moor, and he only waited for a fitting time to execute the plot. One night, when he and Disdemona had retired to bed, the Ensign, whom the Moor had concealed in a closet which opened into the chamber, raised a noise in the closet, according to a concerted plan; whereat the Moor said to his wife, "Did you not hear that noise?"

' "Indeed I heard it," she replied.

' "Rise," said the Moor, "and see what 'tis."

'The unhappy Disdemona rose from bed, and the instant she approached the closet, out rushed the Ensign, and being strong and of stout nerve, he beat her cruelly with the bag of sand across her back; upon which Disdemona fell to the ground, scarce able to draw her breath; but with the little voice she had left, she called upon the Moor for aid. But the Moor, leaping from bed, exclaimed, "Thou wickedest of women, thus has thy falseness found its just reward." . . . The wretched lady, hearing these words, and feeling that she was near her end (for the Ensign had given her another blow), appealed to the justice of Heaven, since justice here had failed her, in proof of her fidelity and truth; and as she was thus calling Heaven to witness, the wicked Ensign inflicted a third blow, under which she sank lifeless on the floor. Then the Ensign and the Moor, laying Disdemona on the bed and wounding her head, pulled down part of the ceiling of the chamber as they had arranged; whereupon the Moor began to call aloud for help, exclaiming that the house was falling. Hearing this uproar, the neighbors all came running up, and there found Disdemona lying dead beneath a rafter,—a sight which, from the good life of that poor lady, did fill all hearts with sorrow.'

The two murderers escaped detection for the time being, but remorse finally caused the Moor so to hate his accomplice that, kept from slaying him by fear of consequences, he deprived him of his rank and dismissed him. In revenge the Ensign told the Captain, now going about on a wooden leg, that it was the Moor who had cut off his leg and killed Disdemona. They both repeated these charges before the Senate; and the Moor was thereupon brought pinioned to Venice, tortured, imprisoned, and 'condemned to perpetual banishment, in which he was eventually slain by the kinsfolk of Disdemona, as he merited. The Ensign returned to his own country, and following up his wonted villainy,' lodged a false accusation against a companion, for which he was tortured so violently to make him prove his charges that 'his body ruptured' and 'he died a miserable death. Thus did Heaven revenge the innocence of Disdemona.'

The History of the Play

On the strength of Malone's assertion, backed by a now generally credited reference in the Revels Books,[2] the composition of Othello is assigned to the year 1604; but no printed version is known to have appeared for eighteen years after that time, until the First Quarto was published by Thomas Walkley, in 1622, having been licensed 6 October 1621. This is the latest in date of all Shakespearean quarto first editions of single plays before the appearance of the famous collected edition of the plays by Heminge and Condell, known as the First Folio, in 1623; and indeed Walkley's advance knowledge of the forthcoming folio publication probably accounts for this quarto issue as an attempt to make something out of his single holding while there was yet time.

Richard Burbage, the leading tragedian of Shakespeare's company, won great fame in the rôle of Othello, as attested by tributes in verse upon his death in 1619. The title-page of the First Quarto assures us that the play had 'beene diuerse times acted at the Globe, and at the Black Friers, by his Maiesties Seruants,' but the Shakspere Allusion Book records only two performances between 1604 and 1622: one attended by the German Ambassador at the Globe, 30 April 1610, and the other before Prince Charles (later Charles I), his sister the Princess Elizabeth, and her fiancé the Elector Palatine, presumably at Whitehall, in 1612 or 1613. Three other performances can be definitely dated before the closing of the theatres, in 1642; viz., 22 November 1629; 6 May 1635, 'att the bla: ffryers'; and 8 December 1636, before the King and Queen at Hampton Court; but other references show that the play's popularity was far greater than these meager surviving accounts would indicate. There was a notable production at Oxford in September 1610, when Othello was given along with Jonson's then new comedy, The Alchemist, to the scandalous delight of the students. In the Allusion Book's 'List of Shakspere's Works, arranged according to the number of allusions to each' during the period from 1591 to 1700, Hamlet leads with 95 references, and Othello stands fifth with 56.[3]

The modern era on the English stage begins with the reopening of the theatres at the Restoration, when actresses and painted scenery were first introduced as regular features of public performances. Here Othello figures conspicuously, for on the eighth of December 1660, at the Red Bull, the first woman to appear on the public stage in England played the part of Desdemona. The experiment was undertaken with some misgivings, as Jordan's defensive prologue shows:

In this reforming age
We have intents to civilize the Stage.
Our 'women' are defective, and so siz'd
You'd think they were some of the Guard disguiz'd;
For (to speak truth) men act, that are between

2 The entry, recording the performance of the play at court, reads: 'By the King's Majesty's Players. Hallowmas Day, being the first of November [1604], a play in the banqueting house at Whitehall called The Moor of Venice.'

3 G. E. Bentley, Shakespeare and Jonson: their Reputations in the Seventeenth Century Compared, p. 109, places Othello second only to The Tempest among Shakespeare's works in seventeenth-century reputation.

Forty and fifty, Wenches of fifteen;
With bone so large, and nerve so incomplyant,
When you call Desdemona, enter Giant.

As might be expected, Pepys has some interesting remarks on Restoration performances of Othello: '1660, October 11.—To the Cockpitt to see "The Moore of Venice," which was well done. Burt acted the Moore; by the same token, a very pretty lady that sat by me, called out, to see Desdemona smothered.' '1669, February 6.—To the King's playhouse, and there in an upper box . . . did see "The Moor of Venice": but ill acted in most parts; Mohun, which did a little surprise me, not acting Iago's part by much so well as Clun used to do: nor another, Hart's[4] which was Cassio's; nor indeed, Burt doing the Moor's so well as I once thought he did.' These actors belonged to Sir William Davenant's[5] Drury Lane company; in one cast in 1663, with the above named, Cartwright, a great Falstaff, played Brabantio and Mrs. Hughes Desdemona.

Othello remained a particular favorite throughout the Restoration and Queen Anne periods, largely owing to the genius of the great Thomas Betterton (1635? -1710). Steele's tribute in the Tatler to Betterton's 'wonderful agony' in the last three acts, is familiar, and Colley Cibber's summary often quoted: 'Betterton was an actor as Shakespeare was an author, both without competitors, formed for the mutual assistance and illustration of each other's genius' (Genest I, 492). Genest's record shows that Othello was produced practically every season during the period covered, 1660-1830, and, what is more significant still, produced in its original form, when almost every other Shakespearean or Elizabethan play was presented only in some mutilated 'adaptation' or 'revision.'

Betterton's mantle descended upon Barton Booth (1681-1/33), whose Othello was considered by Colley Cibber his best rôle. Like Betterton, he probably played the part in the court-dress of the period. His successor, Quin, who dominated the stage till Garrick's triumphal entry in 1741, appeared in an English military uniform, a large powdered wig, and white gloves; when the latter were removed, the sudden disclosure of his blackened hands made emphatic Othello's alien race. David Garrick (1717-1779) made one of his few failures when he attempted the rôle of Othello, in spite of his great success as Hamlet, Macbeth, and Lear, and wisely avoided the part. Barry's splendid impersonation of the Moor, and Macklin's and Henderson's of Iago, save the credit of the performances of this period. Even Kemble failed to costume Othello properly, while his wonderful sister, Mrs. Siddons, was a far better Lady Macbeth than Desdemona. Edmund Kean won from all critics the most complete and superlative approval ever accorded any interpreter of Othello's part. The descriptions of his performance make one wonder at the change that has come over actors (or audiences?) in our own time. As is well known, Kean fell stricken upon the shoulder of his son Charles (playing Iago) during what was to have been his farewell appearance at Covent Garden, 25 March 1833, and died a few weeks later. He was the first to present Othello as a light brown or bronzed Moor instead of as a jet-black negro; and he was also a very fine Iago. Junius Brutus Booth played Iago to Kean's Othello in a notable competitive performance at Drury Lane, 20 February 1817, and later, chiefly in America, created an interesting if not wholly convincing interpretation of the Moor as a case of Oriental racial characteristics slowly overcoming an artificial Christian civilization. William C. Macready (1793-1873), who was the first to costume Othello with complete correctness, was really greater as Iago. Sir Henry Irving's first appearance as Othello, 14 February 1876, at the London 'Lyceum,' was too untrammeled by tradition to be appreciated; but on 2 May 1881, he began a brilliantly successful engagement at the 'Lyceum' with Edwin Booth, the two actors alternating the rôles of Othello and Iago at successive performances, to the Desdemona of Ellen Terry, the Cassio of William Terriss, and the Roderigo of Arthur Wing Pinero. Booth's Othello far surpassed Irving's, but the two were perhaps evenly matched as Iago. The famous Italian actor, Tommaso Salvini, was also thrilling audiences in Europe and America in the '70s and '80s by the almost animal passionateness of his interpretation of Othello's jealousy. Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson essayed Othello in 1898, and again, with Gertrude Elliott as Desdemona, in May 1913; but his Othello was inferior to his Hamlet. Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree produced Othello in London, in April 1912, with his usual scenic elaboration, Laurence Irving playing the part of Iago and Phyllis Neilson-Terry that of Desdemona.

America may claim at least two very great performers of the two rôles (for most great Othellos have also been great Iagos), in Edwin Forrest (1806-1872) and Edwin Booth (1833-1893), while John Edward McCullough (1837-1885) was also successful. Richard Mansfield steadily declined to attempt the part, on the ground that he could add nothing to Salvini's performance. E. H. Sothern appeared early in his career as Roderigo in one of McCullough's last performances, and William Faversham gave a deserving but unsuccessful performance in 1913. One of the other impressive productions was that of the New York Theatre Guild (1943), directed by Margaret Webster, with Paul Robeson as Othello and Jose Ferrer as Iago.

4 Shakespeare's grandnephew.
5 Shakespeare's godson (?).

Act First ❧ Scene First

[Venice. A Street]
Enter Roderigo and Iago.

Rod. Tush! Never tell me! I take it much unkindly
That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse
As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this.
Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me!
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.
Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.
Iago. Despise me if I do not. Three great ones of the city,
In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Off-capp'd to him; and, by the faith of man
(I know my price), I am worth no worse a place.
But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,
Evades them with a bombast circumstance
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;
«And, in conclusion,»
Nonsuits my mediators; for, 'Certes,' says he,
'I have already chose my officer.'
And what was he?
Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine
(A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife),
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster,—unless the bookish theoric,
Wherein the toged consuls can propose
As masterly as he. Mere prattle, without practice,
Is all his soldiership; but he, sir, had the election,
And I (of whom his eyes had seen the proof
At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds
Christian and heathen) must be be-lee'd and calm'd
By Debitor-and-Creditor. This counter-caster,
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
And I—God bless the mark!—his Moorship's ancient.
Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.
Iago. Why, there's no remedy. 'Tis the curse of service.
Preferment goes by letter and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each second
Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself,
Whether I in any just term am affin'd
To love the Moor.
Rod. I would not follow him then.
Iago. O sir, content you.
I follow him to serve my turn upon him;
We cannot be all masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,
That (doting on his own obsequious bondage)
Wears out his time much like his master's ass,
For nought but provender, and when he's old,—cashier'd!
Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are
Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves,
And throwing but shows of service on their lords,
Do well thrive by 'em, and when they have lin'd their coats
Do themselves homage. Those fellows have some soul,
And such a one do I profess myself. For, sir,
It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago.
In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so for my peculiar end,
For when my outward action does demónstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In complement extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at. I am not what I am.
Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe,
If he can carry't thus!
Iago. Call up her father.
Rouse him, make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the street, incense her kinsmen,
And though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies; though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such chances of vexation on't
As it may lose some color.
Rod. Here is her father's house. I'll call aloud.
Iago. Do; with like timorous accent and dire yell
As when (by night and negligence) the fire
Is spied in populous cities.
Rod. What, ho, Brabantio! Signior Brabantio, ho!
Iago. Awake! what, ho, Brabantio! thieves! thieves! thieves!
Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags!
Thieves! thieves!

Brabantio at a window, above.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there?
Rod. Signior, is all your family within?
Iago. Are your doors lock'd?
Bra. Why, wherefore ask you this?
Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you're robb'd!—For shame, put on your gown!—
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul.
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise!
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you.
Arise, I say.
Bra. What! have you lost your wits?
Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?
Bra. Not I. What are you?

4 'Sblood; cf. n. 5 matter: i.e., the marriage of Othello and Desdemona 8 Three great ones; cf. n. 10 Off-capp'd: doffed their caps 11 price: value 13 bombast circumstance: inflated circumlocution; cf. n. 15 Not in Folio; see 'Textual Note' 16 Nonsuits: rebuffs Certes: positively 20 Florentine; cf. n. 21 Cf. n. 23 division . . . battle: disposition of a battle-line 24 unless: except, unless you count bookish theoric: book-taught theory 25 toged consuls: councillors in their togas or robes of peace propose: converse, discourse 27 election: appointment 30 be-lee'd and calm'd; cf. n. 31 Cf. n. 32 in good time: (phrase of contempt), forsooth 33 God . . . mark; cf. n. ancient: ensign; cf. n. 36 letter: commendatory letter, influence affection: favoritism 37 old gradation: the old order of seniority 39 in any . . . affin'd; cf. n. 43 to serve . . . him: to use him for my own advantage

50 Whip me, etc.: i.e., I think they should be whipped 51 visages: outward semblances 54 lin'd their coats: filled their pockets 60 not I: i.e., I do not do it 61 seeming so: seeming loving and dutiful peculiar: private 63 native act: innate operation figure: configuration 64 complement extern: outward counterpart 'tis . . . But: 'twill not be long before 67 owe: possess 68 carry't: get away with it 70 Rouse him; cf. n. 74 chances of vexation: vexations accidents 75 As: that 78 by night and negligence: amid nocturnal repose 89, 90 For shame . . . gown; cf. n. 94 snorting: snoring

Rod. My name is Roderigo.
Bra. The worser welcome!
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors.
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,
Being full of supper and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious bravery dost thou come
To start my quiet.
Rod. Sir, sir, sir!
Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.
Rod. Patience, good sir.
Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? This is Venice.
My house is not a grange.
Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.
Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews neigh to you; you'll have coursers for cousins and gennets for germans.
Bra. What profane wretch art thou?
Iago. I am one, sir, that come to tell you, your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.
Bra. Thou art a villain.
Iago. You are—a senator.
Bra. This thou shalt answer. I know thee, Roderigo.
Rod. Sir, I will answer anything. But, I beseech you,
(If't be your pleasure and most wise consent
(As partly, I find, it is) that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' th' night,
Transported with no worse nor better guard
But with a knave of common hire, a góndolier,
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor—
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs.
But if you know not this, my manners tell me
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence.
Your daughter (if you have not given her leave,
I say again) hath made a gross revolt,
Tying her duty, beauty, wit and fortunes
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger
Of here and everywhere. Straight satisfy yourself.)
If she be in her chamber or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.
Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho!
Give me a taper! call up all my people!
This accident is not unlike my dream.
Belief of it oppresses me already.
Light, I say! light! Exit.
Iago. Farewell, for I must leave you.
It seems not meet nor wholesome to my place
To be produc'd (as, if I stay, I shall)
Against the Moor; for I do know the state
(However this may gall him with some check)
Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars,
Which even now stand in act, that, for their souls,
Another of his fathom they have not
To lead their business. In which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell's pains,
Yet for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,
Lead to the Sagittary the raised search,
And there will I be with him. So, farewell. Exit.

Enter [below] Brabantio in his night gown, and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil. Gone she is,
And what's to come of my despised time
Is nought but bitterness. Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her? O unhappy girl!
With the Moor, sayst thou? Who would be a father!
How didst thou know 'twas she? O, she deceives me
Past thought. What said she to you? Get mo tapers!
Raise all my kindred! Are they married, think you?
Rod. Truly, I think they are.
Bra. O heaven! How got she out? O treason of the blood!
Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds
By what you see them act. Is there not charms
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?
Rod. Yes, sir, I have indeed.
Bra. Call up my brother. O, would you had had her!
Some one way, some another! Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?
Rod. I think I can discover him, if you please
To get good guard and go along with me.
Bra. Pray, lead me on. At every house I'll call;
I may command at most. Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night.
On, good Roderigo. I'll deserve your pains. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Another Street. Before the Sagittary]
Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' th' conscience
To do no contriv'd murder. I lack iniquity
Sometimes to do me service. Nine or ten times

106 bravery: bravado 107 start: disturb 114 grange: lonely farmhouse 120 nephews: grandchildren 121 coursers: swift and spirited horses gennets: small Spanish horses 122 germans: near relatives 124, 125 Cf. n. 127 a senator; cf. n. 130–146 Not in Quarto; see 'Textual Note' 132 Cf.n. 136 your allowance: what you approve of 140 from . . . all: deprived of all regard for 145 extravagant and wheeling: vagabond and itinerant; cf. n.

157 produc'd: brought forward as witness 159 check: rebuke 160 cast: dismiss embark'd: engaged, committed 161 loud reason: pressing necessity Cyprus wars; cf. n. 162 stand in act: are actually under way 163 fathom: capacity 169 Sagittary: an inn; cf. n. S.d. night gown: dressing robe 172 what's . . . time: the remainder of my wretched life 174 unhappy; cf. n. 177 mo: more 184 property: nature 188 brother: i.e., Gratiano 195 officers of night: night watchmen 2 stuff: substance, essence 3 contriv'd: premeditated

I had thought t' have yerk'd him here under the ribs.
Oth. 'Tis better as it is.
Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your Honor
That with the little godliness I have
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir,
Are you fast married? Be assur'd of this,
That the magnifico is much belov'd,
And hath in his effect a voice potential
As double as the duke's. He will divorce you,
Or put upon you what restraint and grievance
The law, with all his might to enforce it on,
Will give him cable.
Oth. Let him do his spite.
My services which I have done the Signory
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know
(Which when I know that boasting is an honor
I shall promulgate), I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege, and my demerits
May speak unbonneted to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd. For know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yond?
Iago. Those are the raised father and his friends.
You were best go in.
Oth. Not I. I must be found.
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?
Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter Cassio with lights, Officers and torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.
The goodness of the night upon you, friends!
What is the news?
Cas. The duke does greet you, general,
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.
Oth. What's the matter, think you?
Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine.
It is a business of some heat. The galleys
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another's heels,
And many of the consuls, rais'd and met,
Are at the duke's already. You have been hotly call'd for;
When being not at your lodging to be found,
The Senate sent above three several quests
To search you out.
Oth. 'Tis well I'm found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. [Enters the Sagittary.]
Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carrack.
If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.
Cas. I do not understand.
Iago. He's married.
Cas. To who?
Iago. Marry, to—

[Re-enter Othello.]

Come, captain, will you go?
Oth. Have with you.
Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.
Iago. It is Brabantio. General, be advis'd;
He comes to bad intent.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and others, with lights and weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there!
Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.
Bra. Down with him! Thief!
[They draw on both sides.]
Iago. You, Roderigo! Come, sir, I am for you.
Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust 'em.
Good signior, you shall more command with years
Than with your weapons.
Bra. O thou foul thief! Where hast thou stow'd my daughter?
Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her;
For I'll refer me to all things of sense,
⟨If she in chains of magic were not bound,⟩
Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,
So opposite to marriage that she shunn'd
The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,
Would ever have (t'incur a general mock)
Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom
Of such a thing as thou—to fear, not to delight.
⟨Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense
That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms,
Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs or minerals
That weaken motion. I'll have't disputed on.
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee⟩
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts inhibited and out of warrant.
Lay hold upon him. If he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril.
Oth. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining and the rest.
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it
Without a prompter. Wh'er will you that I go
To answer this your charge?
Bra. To prison, till fit time
Of law and course of direct session
Call thee to answer.
Oth. What if I do obey?
How may the duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose messengers are here about my side

5 yerk'd: struck (with dagger) him; cf. n. 13 magnifico: title of Venetian nobles 14, 15 Cf. n. 18 give ... cable: permit 19 his spite: whatever spite urges 20 Signory: governing body of Venice 21 'Tis yet to know: i.e., the world doesn't yet know 24 siege: rank demerits: deserts 25 Cf. n. 28 unhoused; cf. n. 29 confine: confinement 34 parts: abilities perfect: blameless 36 Janus: two-faced Roman god of beginnings S.d.; cf. n. 45 heat: urgency 46 sequent: successive 48 consuls: senators

57 carrack: large merchant vessel 58 lawful prize; cf. n. 59–61 Cf. n. 62 Marry; cf. n. 72 Keep up: keep sheathed 78 of sense: capable of judgment 84 guardage: guardian's shelter 86 Judge ... world: let the world judge gross in sense: manifest to the reason 89 motion: inward impulse (cf. I.iii.355) have't disputed on: refer it to specialists 93 out of warrant: unwarranted 99 Wh'er: whither 102 course ... session: due order of special procedure

Upon some present business of the state
To bring me to him?
Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior.
The duke's in council, and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.
Bra. How? The duke in council!
In this time of the night! Bring him away.
Mine's not an idle cause. The duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bondslaves and pagans shall our statesmen be. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The Doge's Palace]

Enter Duke and Senators, set at a table with lights and Attendants.

Duke. There is no composition in these news
That gives them credit.
1. Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd.
My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.
Duke. And mine, a hundred forty.
2. Sen. And mine, two hundred.
But though they jump not on a just account
(As in these cases, where the aim reports,
'Tis oft with difference), yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.
Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment.
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.
Sailor within. What, ho! what, ho! what, ho!
Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Enter Sailor.

Duke. Now! The business?
Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes.
So was I bid report here to the state
⟨By Signior Angelo⟩.
Duke. How say you by this change?
1.Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason. 'Tis a pageant
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
Th'importancy of Cyprus to the Turk,
And let ourselves again but understand
That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
⟨For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks th'abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in—if we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskilful
To leave that latest which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain
To wake and wage a danger profitless.⟩
Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.
Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injointed them with an after fleet⟨.
1. Sen. Ay, so I thought. How many, as you guess?
Mess.⟩Of thirty sail; and now they do re-stem
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.
Duke. 'Tis certain then, for Cyprus.
Marcus Luccicos is not here in town?
1. Sen. He's now in Florence.
Duke. Write from us: wish him post-post-haste dispatch.
1. Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Cassio, Iago, Roderigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you
Against the general enemy Ottoman.
[To Brabantio.]. I did not see you. Welcome, gentle signior;
We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.
Bra. So did I yours. Good your Grace, pardon me.
Neither my place nor aught I heard of business
Hath rais'd me from my bed, nor doth the general care
Take hold on me, for my particular grief
Is of so floodgate and o'erbearing nature
That it engluts and swallows other sorrows
And it is still itself.
Duke. Why, what's the matter?
Bra. My daughter! O my daughter!
All. Dead?
Bra. Ay, to me.
She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks;
For nature so preposterously to err
⟨Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,⟩
Sans witchcraft could not.
Duke. Whoe'er he be that in this foul proceeding
Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter
After your own sense; yea, though our proper son
Stood in your action.
Bra. Humbly I thank your Grace.
Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems,
Your special mandate for the state affairs
Hath hither brought.
All. We are very sorry for't.
Duke [to Othello]. What, in your own part, can you say to this?
Bra. Nothing but 'This is so.'
Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,
My very noble and approv'd good masters:
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
It is most true; true, I have married her.

117, 118 Cf. n. Scene Third S.d. Enter . . . Attendants; cf. n. 1 composition: consistency 7 jump: agree just: exact 8 aim: conjecture 11 to judgment: when judicially considered 12–15 Cf. n. 23 assay of reason: reasonable test pageant: feigned show 24 in false gaze: looking in the wrong direction 28 with . . . it: carry it with less effort 29 brace: readiness 35 wake and wage: start and carry through

40 after: reserve 46 recommends: informs 51 Cf. n. 61 floodgate: torrential 69 mountebanks: itinerant vendors of nostrums; cf. n. 72 Sans: without could not: would be impossible 75–77 Cf. n. 77 proper: own 78 Stood . . . action: were involved by your charge 84 part: behalf 87 ff. Cf. n. 88 approv'd: esteemed

The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace,
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith
Till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd
Their dearest action in the tented field;
And little of this great world can I speak
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle,
And therefore little shall I grace my cause
In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patience
I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love: what drugs, what charms,
What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
(For such proceedings am I charg'd withal)
I won his daughter.

Bra. A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blush'd at herself! And she, in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, everything,
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!
It is a judgment maim'd and most imperfect
That will confess perfection so could err
Against all rules of nature, and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,
Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof,
Without more certain and more overt test
Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

1. Sen. But, Othello, speak.
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?
Or came it by request and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speak of me before her father.
If you do find me foul in her report,
⟨The trust, the office I do hold of you,⟩
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.

Exit two or three.

Oth. Ancient, conduct them. You best know the place.

[Exit Iago.]

And till she come, as truly as to heaven
⟨I do confess⟩ the vices of my blood,⟩
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me,
Still question'd me the story of my life
From year to year, the battles, sieges, fortunes
That I have pass'd.
I ran it through, even from my boyish days
To th' very moment that he bade me tell it.
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
Of hair-breadth 'scapes i' th' imminent deadly breach,
Of being taken by the insolent foe
And sold to slavery, of my redemption thence
And portance in my traveller's history.
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads touch heaven,
It was my hint to speak (such was the process),
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear
Would Desdemona seriously incline;
But still the house-affairs would draw her thence,
Which ever as she could with haste dispatch
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse. Which I observing,
Took once a pliant hour and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentively. I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs.
She swore, i' faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange;
'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful.
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man. She thank'd me,
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this heat I spake.
She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I lov'd her that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd.
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, and the rest.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.
Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best.
Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak.
If she confess that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man! Come hither, gentle mistress.
Do you perceive in all this noble company
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty.

91 head and front: i.e., the most glaring part 95 wasted: past, ago 102–105 what . . . won: with what drugs, etc., I won 104 withal: with 107 motion; cf. n. 115 vouch: assert 121 thin habits: insubstantial appearances 122 modern: mere, trivial 124 forced: violent 126 question: conversation 143 invited me: entertained me as guest 144 Still: constantly

154 portance: behavior; cf. n. 155 antres: caves 157 hint: cue process: narrative 159 Anthropophagi, etc.; cf. n. 166 pliant: suitable 168 dilate: relate in full 169 by parcels: piecemeal 170 intentively: with undistracted attention 181 Upon this heat: while the iron was hot; cf. n. 188 at the best: as best you may

To you I am bound for life and education.
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you: you are the lord of duty,
I am hitherto your daughter. But here's my husband;
And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor my lord.
Bra. God be with you! I have done.
Please it your Grace, on to the state affairs.
I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
Come hither, Moor:
I here do give thee that with all my heart
⟨Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart⟩
I would keep from thee. For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child,
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on 'em. I have done, my lord.
Duke. Let me speak like yourself and lay a sentence,
Which, as a grise or step, may help these lovers
«Into your favor.»
When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
Is the next way to draw more mischief on.
What cannot be preserv'd when Fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief;
He robs himself that spends a bootless grief.
Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile,
We lose it not so long as we can smile.
He bears the sentence well that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears;
But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear
That the bruis'd heart was pierced through the ear.
Beseech you, now to the affairs of state.
Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you. You must therefore be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.
Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
My thrice-driven bed of down. I do agnize
A natural and prompt alacrity
I find in hardness, and do undertake
These present wars against the Ottomites.
Most humbly therefore bending to your state,

200 learn: teach 209 get: beget 215 escape: escapade 218 grise: stair 220–237 Cf. n. 220 griefs: distresses of mind, anxieties 221 which: (refers to 'griefs') 223 next: nearest more mischief: cf. n. 224, 225 Cf. n. 227 bootless: unavailing 228 let: i.e., suppose 230 sentence: adage (with pun on 'court sentence') 234, 235 to sugar . . . sides; cf. n. 237 pierced: probed, touched 238 Cf. n. 242 opinion . . . effects: reputation, a great producer of results 245 slubber: sully 248 driven: sifted agnize: acknowledge 249 alacrity: congeniality, hearty sympathy 250 hardness: austerity

I crave fit disposition for my wife,
Due reference of place and exhibition,
With such accommodation and besort
As levels with her breeding.
Duke. If you please,
Be't at her father's.
Bra. I'll not have it so.
Oth. Nor I.
Des. Nor I. I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend your prosperous ear,
And let me find a charter in your voice
T'assist my simpleness.
Duke. What would you? Speak.
Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world. My heart's subdu'd
Even to the very quality of my lord.
I saw Othello's visage in his mind,
And to his honors and his valiant parts
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites for which I love him are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him.
Oth. Your voices, lords! Beseech you, let her will Have a free way. I therefore beg it not
To please the palate of my appetite,
Nor to comply with heat the young affects
In my distinct and proper satisfaction,
But to be free and bounteous to her mind;
And heaven defend your good souls that you think
I will your serious and great business scant
For she is with me. No, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid seel with wanton dulnes
My speculative and offic'd instruments,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!
Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay or going. Th' affair cries haste,
And speed must answer. You must hence to-night.
«Des. To-night, my lord?
Duke. This night.»
Oth. With all my heart.
Duke. At ten i' the morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality or respect
As doth concern you.

254 reference: assignment exhibition: allowance 255 besort: suitable retinue 264 unfolding: explanation prosperous: favoring 265 charter: official sanction 269 storm: forcible seizure 271 quality: profession 276 moth, etc.; cf. n. 280 voices: favorable votes 283 heat . . . affects: lust which the young incline to 284 distinct and proper: separate and personal; cf. n. 286 defend: forbid 288 For: because toys: trifles 289 seel; cf. n. 290 speculative . . . instruments: eyes which should see and perform duties; cf. n. 292 skillet: kettle helm: helmet 293 indign: unworthy 294 Make head: take arms estimation: fame 301 ten; cf. n. 304 quality or respect: general importance or detail (almost 'genus' and 'species')

Oth. Please your Grace, my ancient.
A man he is of honesty and trust.
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good Grace shall think
To be sent after me.
Duke. Let it be so.
Good night to every one. [To Brabantio.] And, noble signior,
If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.
1. Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.
Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to see:
She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.
Oth. My life upon her faith!
Exeunt [Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.].
Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
I prithee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring her after in the best advantage.—
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction
To spend with thee. We must obey the time.
Ex. Moor and Desdemona.

Rod. Iago!
Iago. What sayst thou, noble heart?
Rod. What will I do, think'st thou?
Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.
Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.
Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman?
Rod. It is silliness to live when to live is a torment; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician.
Iago. ⟨O, villainous!⟩ I ha' looked upon the world for four times seven years, and since I could distinguish between a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.
Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond, but it is not in my virtue to amend it.
Iago. Virtue! a fig! 'Tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners; so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manured with industry, why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions. But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts, whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion.
Rod. It cannot be.
Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will. Come, be a man. Drown thyself? Drown cats and blind puppies. I profess me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdúrable toughness. I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse. Follow these wars; defeat thy favor with an usurped beard. I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be that Desdemona should long continue her love unto the Moor,—put money in thy purse,—nor he his to her. It was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration. Put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills. Fill thy purse with money. The food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as acerb as the coloquintida. ⟨She must change for youth.⟩ When she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice. «She must have change, she must.» Therefore put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst. If sanctimony and a frail vow betwixt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her: therefore make money. A pox o' drowning! 'tis clean out of the way. Seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy than to be drowned and go without her.
Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes ⟨if I depend on the issue⟩?
Iago. Thou art sure of me. Go, make money. I have told thee often, and I tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor. My cause is hearted: thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him. If thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse! go! provide thy money! We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.
Rod. Where shall we meet i' th' morning?
Iago. At my lodging.
Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.
Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?
«Rod. What say you?
Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?
Rod. I am chang'd.» ⟨I'll sell all my land.⟩
Iago. «Go to; farewell. Put money enough in your purse.»
Exit Roderigo.

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse;
For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,
If I would time expend with such a snipe
But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor,
And it is thought abroad that 'twixt my sheets
He's done my office. I know not if't be true,
But I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do as if for surety. He holds me well.
The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio's a proper man. Let me see now.—
To get his place, and to plume up my will
In double knavery: how? how? Let's see.—
After some time t'abuse Othello's ear
That he is too familiar with his wife.

314 delighted: delighting 317, 318 Cf. n. 331 incontinently: immediately 341 change: exchange 348 gender: kind 350 manured: cultivated corrigible authority: correcting control 351 balance: weighing instrument 352 poise: offset, counterbalance 355 motions: impulses unbitted: unbridled 356 sect: variety scion: offshoot

361 perdúrable: most durable 362 stead: aid 363 defeat thy favor: disguise thy face usurped: false 367 answerable sequestration: similarly hasty parting 370 locusts: cassia fistula, a sweet fruit 371 acerb: bitter coloquintida: an intensely bitter drug (imported from Cyprus) 376 erring: roving; cf. n. on I.i.145 386 hearted: deep-seated in the heart conjunctive: united 387 cuckold him: seduce his wife 389 Traverse: march 394 Go to: come, come! 403–406 it is . . . surety: cf. n. 405 in that kind: of that sort 408 proper: fine, good-looking 410 double knavery: cf. n. 411 abuse: deceive

He has a person and a smooth dispose
To be suspected, fram'd to make women false;
The Moor a free and open nature too,
That thinks men honest that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by th' nose
As asses are.
I have't! it is engender'd! Hell and night
Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.
Exit.

Act Second ❧ Scene First

[Famagosta, capital of Cyprus. An open place near the quay]
Enter Montano, Governor of Cyprus, with two other Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?
1. Gent. Nothing at all. It is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot 'twixt the haven and the main
Descry a sail.
Mon. Methinks the wind does speak aloud at land;
A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements.
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortise? What shall we hear of this?
2. Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet;
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds;
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,
Seems to cast water on the burning bear
And quench the guards of th' ever-fixed pole.
I never did like molestation view
On the enchafed flood.
Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not enshelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd.
It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

3. Gent. News, lads! our wars are done.
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks
That their designment halts. A noble ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wrack and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.
Mon. How! is this true?
3. Gent. The ship is here put in,
La Veronesa. Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor Othello,
Is come on shore; the Moor himself at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.
Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.
3. Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort
Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly
And prays the Moor be safe, for they were parted
With foul and violent tempest.
Mon. Pray heaven he be;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full soldier. Let's to the seaside, ho!
As well to see the vessel that's come in
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
⟨Even till we make the main and th' aerial blue
An indistinct regard.⟩
3. Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks to the valiant of this warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor! And let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.
Mon. Is he well shipp'd?
Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv'd allowance.
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.
Messenger within. A sail!—a sail!—a sail!

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise?
Mess. The town is empty. On the brow o' th' sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry, 'A sail!'
Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.
A shot.
2. Gent. They do discharge the shot of courtesy.
Our friends, at least.
Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.
2. Gent. I shall. Exit.
Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?
Cas. Most fortunately. He hath achiev'd a maid
That paragons description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in th' essential vesture of creation
Does tire the ingen-giver.

Enter 2. Gentleman.

Now, who has put in?
2. Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.
Cas. He's had most favorable and happy speed.
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by
The divine Desdemona.
Mon. What is she?
Cas. She that I spoke of, our great captain's captain,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts
A sennight's speed. Great Jove, Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath,

413 dispose: manner Scene First S.d.; cf. n. 3 main: open ocean; cf. n. 9 hold the mortise: remain unshattered 10 segregation: dispersal 15 guards: two stars in Ursa Minor pole: pole-star 16 molestation: disturbance 20 bear it out: ride it out 23 designment: enterprise 24 sufferance: disaster 28 La Veronesa: 'The Lady of Verona' (the ship's name); cf. n.

39 full: thorough 42, 43 till the sea and sky become indistinguishable 46 more arrivance: further arrivals 53 Of very allowed and approved expertness 54–56 Cf. n. 56 Messenger; cf. n. 68 paragons: surpasses 69 quirks: subtleties blazoning: extolling 70 in the beauties of soul with which nature has clothed her 71 ingen-giver; cf. n. 76 gutter'd: jagged 77 ensteep'd: submerged 79 mortal: deadly 83 conduct: escort 85 sennight's: week's

That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
«And bring all Cyprus comfort»!

Enter Desdemona, Iago, Emilia, and Roderigo [with Attendants].

O! behold,
The riches of the ship is come ashore.
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear! How lost you company?

[Cry] within. 'A sail!—a sail!"

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
Parted our fellowship. But hark! a sail. [Guns heard.]

2. Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. «So speaks this voice.» ⟨See for the news!⟩ [Exit 2. Gentleman.]
Good ancient, you are welcome. [Kisses Emilia.] Welcome, mistress.
Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners. 'Tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips
As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much.
I find it still when I have list to sleep.
Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on! You are pictures out o' doors,
Bells in your parlors, wild cats in your kitchens
Saints in your injuries, devils being offended,
Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O fie upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk.
You rise to play and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't,
For I am nothing if not critical.

Des. Come on; assay. There's one gone to the harbor?

Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry, but I do beguile
The thing I am be seeming otherwise.
Come, how wouldst thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it, but indeed my invention comes from my pate as birdlime does from frieze. It plucks out brains and all. But my muse labors, and thus she is deliver'd.

If she be fair and wise.—Fairness and wit:
The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?

Iago.

If she be black, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How if fair and foolish?

Iago.

She never yet was foolish that was fair,
For even her folly help'd her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh i' th' alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?

Iago.

There's none so foul and foolish thereunto
But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance that praises the worst best! But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed? one that, in the authority of her merits, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago.

She that was ever fair and never proud,
Had tongue at will and yet was never loud;
Never lack'd gold and yet went never gay,
Fled from her wish and yet said 'Now I may';
She that being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,
Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly;
She that in wisdom never was so frail
To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;
She that could think and ne'er disclose her mind,
⟨See suitors following and not look behind:⟩
She was a wight, if ever such wights were,—

Des. To do what?

Iago.

To suckle fools and chronicle small beer.

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion! Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio? Is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam. You may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.

Iago [aside]. He takes her by the palm. Ay, well said, whisper! With as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do! I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. [Cassio speaks to Desdemona in dumbshow.] You say true, 'tis so, indeed. If such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good! well kissed! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would they were clyster-pipes for your sake! Trumpets within. The Moor! I know his trumpet.

93 knees: obeisance 96 Enwheel: encircle 107 So . . . news; cf. n. 111 extend: elaborate 118 list: inclination 123 pictures: i.e., paint your faces 124 Bells: janglers 125 Saints . . . injuries: adopt a saintly air when saying spiteful things 126 housewifery, housewives; cf. n. 136 assay: essay, attempt 139 The . . . am: my real feeling 141 invention: imagination 142 frieze: rough woolen cloth 146 black: brunette 149 white: quibble on 'wight' (cf. line 176) 154 folly: lewdness 155 fond: foolish 157 foul: ugly 163 put on: clothe herself in 164 vouch: favorable testimony 167 Had tongue at will: was good at talking 173 As to mistake show for substance (?); cf. n. 179 chronicle, etc.: keep petty household accounts 182 liberal: licentious 183 home: to the point 184 in the: in the character of 185 said: done 187, 188 I . . . courtship; cf. n. 187 gyve: fetter 188 courtship: courtliness

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter Othello and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content
To see you here before me. O my soul's joy,
If after every tempest come such calms,
May the winds blow till they have waken'd death!
And let the laboring bark climb hills of seas
Olympus-high, and duck again as low
As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die,
'Twere now to be most happy, for I fear
My soul hath her content so absolute
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid
But that our loves and comforts should increase
Even as our days do grow.

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!
I cannot speak enough of this content.
It stops me here. It is too much of joy;
And this, and this, the greatest discords be They kiss.
That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago [aside]. O! you are well tun'd now,
But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,
As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle.—
News, friends! Our wars are done. The Turks are drown'd.
How does my old acquaintance of his isle?—
Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus;
I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,
I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
In mine own comforts. I prithee, good Iago,
Go to the bay and disembark my coffers.
Bring thou the master to the citadel;
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect. Come, Desdemona!
Once more, well met at Cyprus!

Ex. Othello and Desdemona [with all except Iago and Roderigo].

Iago [to Rod.]. Do thou meet me presently at the harbor. Come hither. If thou be'st valiant (as they say base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them), list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard. First, I must tell thee this: Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him? Why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger thus, and let they soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies. And will she love him still for prating? Let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be, again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favor, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in. Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor. Very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted (as it is a most pregnant and unforced position), who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? A knave very voluble, no farder conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming for the better compassing of his salt and hidden affections? ⟨Why, none; why, none.⟩ A subtle, slippery knave, a finder-out of occasions, that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself. ⟨A devilish knave!⟩ Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after. A pestilent complete knave! and the woman has found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her. She's full of most bless'd condition.

Iago. Bless'd fig's end! The wine she drinks is made of grapes. If she had been bless'd, she would never have loved the Moor. ⟨Bless'd pudding!⟩ Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? ⟨Didst not mark that?⟩

Rod. Yes, ⟨that I did;⟩ but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand! an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embraced together. ⟨Villainous thoughts, Roderigo!⟩ When these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the ⟨master and⟩ main exercise, the incorporate conclusion. ⟨Pish!⟩ But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night. For your command, I'll lay't upon you. Cassio knows you not. I'll not be far from you. Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline, or from what other cause you please which the time shall more favorably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash and very sudden in choler, and haply «with his truncheon» may strike at you. Provoke him that he may, for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them, and the impediment most profitably removed without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

191 apt: ready 192 sir: gallant 194 clyster-pipes: tubes for injections 199 warrior: (because he finds her among the soldiers) 209 content: blissful happiness 217 here: in his heart 221 set . . . pegs: untune the strings by loosening; cf. n. 226 well desir'd: much sought after 231 master: ship's captain 238 list: hear 239 court: post 242 thus: on the lips (i.e., be silent) 252 heave the gorge: be nauseated 255 pregnant: obvious 257 voluble: fickle farder: further conscionable: conscientious 259 salt: lewd 260 A subtle, slippery knave: cf. n. 266 found him: recognized his qualities 268 condition: quality 277 mutualities: intimacies marshal: lead 279 incorporate: carnal 281 command: authorization 283 tainting: disparaging 285 minister: provide 287 in choler: when enraged 290 qualification: pacification 290 true taste: satisfactory state; cf. n. 293 prefer: promote 295 if you can: cf. n.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel. I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe't;
That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit.
The Moor (howbeit that I endure him not)
Is of a constant, noble, loving, nature;
And I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too,—
Not out of absolute lust (though peradventure
I stand accountant for as great a sin),
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof
Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards,
And nothing can nor shall content my soul
Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife,—
Or failing so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong
That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,
If this poor trash of Venice, whom I thrash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting-on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip,
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb
(For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too),
Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me
For making him egregiously an ass
And practising upon his peace and quiet
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd:
Knavery's plain face is never seen till us'd. Exit.

Scene Second

[A Street]
Enter Othello's Herald, with a proclamation.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open, and there is full liberty ⟨of feasting⟩ from this present hour of five till the bell have tolled eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general Othello! Exit.

Scene Third

The 'Court of Guard' or Guard-post]
Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night.
Let's teach ourselves that honorable stop,
Not to outsport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.
Michael, good night. To-morrow with your earliest
Let me have speech with you.
[To Desdemona.]. Come, my dear love.
The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;
The profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you.
Good night. Ex. Othello and Desdemona [and Attendants].

Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock. Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona, —who let us not therefore blame. He hath not yet made wanton the night with her, and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! Methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye, and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And when she speaks, is it not an alarum to love?

Cas. She is indeed perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine, and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago. I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking. I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O they are our friends. But one cup. I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here. I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels. The gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door. I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me. Exit

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him,
With that which he hath drunk to-night already,
He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool Roderigo,
Whom love hath turn'd almost the wrong side out,
To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd
Potations pottle-deep; and he's to watch.
Three lads of Cyprus, noble swelling spirits,
That hold their honors in a wary distance,
The very elements of this warlike isle,
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,
And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

300 apt ... credit: natural and very credible 306 accountant: accountable 307 diet: feed 310 mineral: drug 316, 317 whom ... hunting: cf. n. 317 putting-on: urging; cf. n. 319 rank garb: grossest fashion 323 practising upon: using wiles against 324 to madness: to the point of driving him mad 2, 3 mere perdition: complete destruction 3, 4 put ... triumph: give himself up to celebrating the occasion 5 addiction: inclination; cf. n. 7 offices: storerooms, kitchens 9 tolled; cf. n. Scene Third; cf. n. 2 stop: caution (musical figure)

17 who: whom (Othello) 22 parley: trumpet-call 25 alarum: summons 27 Well, etc.; cf. n. 28 stoup: large measure (often two quarts) 37 qualified: diluted innovation: disturbance 37 here: in my head 44 dislikes me: is distasteful to me 51 pottle-deep: to the bottom of the tankard 53 Cf. n. 54 elements: typical representatives

Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle. But here they come.
If consequence do but approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Enter Cassio, Montano, and Gentlemen [Boys following with wine].

Cas. 'Fore God, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one. Not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

[Sings]

And let me the canikin clink, clink;
And let me the canikin clink.
A soldier's a man;
O man's life's but a span;
Why then let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys!

Cas. 'Fore God, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where indeed they are most potent in potting. Your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so exquisite in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility your Dane dead drunk. He sweats not to overthrow your Almain. He gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general!

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England!

[Sings]

King Stephen was and—a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown.
He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor lown.
He was a wight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree.
'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then take thine owd cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. 'Fore God, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear't again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things. Well, God's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay; but, by your leave, not before me. The lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs. God forgive us our sins! Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk. This is my ancient; this is my right hand, and this is my left hand. I am not drunk now. I can stand well enough, and I speak well enough.

Gent. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then. You must not think then that I am drunk. Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters. Come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone before.
He is a soldier fit to stand by Cæsar
And give direction; and do but see his vice.
'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as th' other. 'Tis pity of him.
I fear the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps he sees it not, or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils. Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

Iago [aside to him]. How now, Roderigo?
I pray you, after the lieutenant. Go! Exit Roderigo.

Mon. And 'tis great pity that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place as his own second
With one of an ingraft infirmity.
It were an honest action to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well, and would do much [Cry] 'Help! Help!' within.
To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise?

Enter Cassio, driving in Roderigo.

Cas. Zounds! You rogue, you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave teach me my duty! I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.

Rod. Beat me?

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue? [Striking Roderigo.]

Mon. [Staying him.] Nay, good lieutenant. I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir, or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come; you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! They fight.

Iago [aside to Roderigo]. Away, I say! Go out, and cry a mutiny. Exit Roderigo.
Nay, good lieutenant! God's will, gentlemen!
Help, ho! Lieutenant! Sir Montano! sir!
Help, masters! Here's a goodly watch indeed!
A bell rung.
Who's that that rings the bell? Diablo, ho!
The town will rise. God's will! lieutenant, hold!
You will be sham'd for ever.

59 Cf. n. 61 rouse: bumper 65 canikin: little can or mug (an affectionate diminutive); cf. n. 73 potent in potting: mighty in drinking 73, 74 swag-bellied: fat-paunched 77 Almain: German 80 do you justice: keep pace with you in drinking 85 lown: loon, lout 89 owd: old

111 platform: rampart 115 just equinox: exact equivalent (virtue and vice are equal in him) 122 Cf. n. 133 ingraft: firmly rooted 142 twiggen bottle; cf. n. 147 mazzard: head 155 Diablo; cf. n.

Enter Othello and Gentlemen with weapons.

Oth. What is the matter here?
Mon. Zounds! I bleed still. I am hurt to the death.
Oth. Hold, for your lives!
Iago. Hold, hold lieutenant! Sir Montano! gentlemen!
Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold! the general speaks to you; hold for shame!
Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence arises this?
Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that
Which heaven has forbid the Ottomites?
For Christian shame put by this barbarous brawl.
He that stirs next to carve for his own rage
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the isle
From her propriety. What's the matter, masters?
Honest Iago, that looks dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this? On thy love, I charge thee.
Iago. I do not know. Friends all but now, even now,
In quarter and in terms like bride and groom
Devesting them for bed; and then, but now
(As if some planet had unwitted men)
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds,
And would in action glorious I had lost
These legs that brought me to a part of it!
Oth. How came it, Michael, you were thus forgot?
Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.
Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil.
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure. What's the matter,
That you unlace your reputation thus
And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to't.
Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger.
Your officer, Iago, can inform you
(While I spare speech, which something now offends me)
Of all that I do know; nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night,
Unless self-charity be sometime a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.
Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule,
And passion, having my best judgment collied,
Assays to lead the way. Zounds! If I stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you
Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me—both at a birth—
Shall lose me. What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrels
In night, and on the court and guard of safety!

162 Cf. n. 166 Cf. n. 168 carve for: satisfy 171 From her propriety: out of her very being 175 In . . . terms: on a footing 180 odds: quarrel 188 censure: judgment 189 unlace: undo 190 opinion: good name 194 something: somewhat offends: harms 202 collied: blackened (as with coal) 206 rout: riot 207 approv'd: convicted 211 manage: set on foot 212 on . . . safety: cf. n.

'Tis monstrous. Iago, who began't?
Mon. If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.
Iago. Touch me not so near.
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. Thus it is, general.
Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help,
And Cassio following him with determin'd sword
To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause.
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lest by his clamor (as it so fell out)
The town might fall in fright. He, swift of foot,
Outran my purpose, and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath, which till to-night
I ne'er might say before. When I came back
(For this was brief), I found them close together,
At blow and thrust, even as again they were
When you yourself did part them.
More of this matter can I not report,
But men are men; the best sometimes forget.
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage strike those that wish them best,
Yet surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd
From him that fled some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.
Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine—

Enter Desdemona, with others.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up!—
[To Cassio.] I'll make thee an example.
Des. What's the matter?
Oth. All's well now, sweeting. Come away to bed.—
Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon.
Lead him off. [Montano is led off.]
Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.
Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldiers' life,
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.
Ex. Moor, Desdemona, and Attendants.
Iago. What! are you hurt, lieutenant?
Cas. Ay, past all surgery.
Iago. Marry, God forbid!
Cas. Reputation, reputation, ⟨reputation! O!⟩ I have lost my reputation. I have lost the immortal part «sir,» of myself, and what remains is bestial. My reputation, ⟨Iago, my reputation!⟩
Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound. There is more sense in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition, oft got without merit, and lost without deserving. You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again. You are but now cast in his mood (a punishment more in policy than in malice), even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion. Sue to him again, and he is yours.

214 partially affin'd: bound by partiality 230 rather: sooner 239 him: i.e., Montano 266 imposition: adjunct

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. ⟨Drunk! and speak parrot! and squabble, swagger, swear, and discourse fustian with one's own shadow!⟩ O thou invisible spirit of wine! if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore. O God! that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains; that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts.

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough. How came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath. One unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not so befallen, but since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again. He shall tell me I am a drunkard. Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! ⟨O strange!⟩ Every inordinate cup is unblessed and the ingredience is a devil.

Iago. Come, come; good wine is a good familiar creature if it be well used. Exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir. I drunk!

Iago. You or any man living may be drunk at some time. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general. I may say so in this respect, for that he has devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces. Confess yourself freely to her; importune her help to put you in your place again She is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter; and my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning will I beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me. I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago! Exit Cassio.

Iago. And what's he, then, that says I play the villain,
When this advice is free I give and honest,
Probal to thinking and indeed the course
To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy
Th' inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit; she's fram'd as fruitful
As the free elements. And then for her
To win the Moor,—were't to renounce his baptism,
All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,
His soul is so enfetter'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function. How am I, then a villain
To counsel Cassio to this parallel course
Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will their blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
As I do now; for while this honest fool
Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear
That she repeals him for her body's lust;
And, by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undo her credit with the Moor.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch,
And out of her own goodness make the net
That shall enmesh them all.

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo?

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains; and so, with no money at all and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience!
What wound did ever heal but by degrees?
Thou know'st we work by wit and not by witchcraft,
And wit depends on dilatory time.
Does't not go well? Cassio has beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt hast cashiered Cassio.
Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe.
Content thyself awhile. By the mass, 'tis morning;
Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
Retire thee; go where thou art billeted.
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter.
Nay, get thee gone. Exit Roderigo.
Two things are to be done:
My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress—
I'll set her on—;
Myself awhile to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump when he may Cassio find

270 mood: temporary feeling 276 speak parrot: use words irrationally 277 discourse fustian: talk nonsense 294 moraler: moralizer 299 Hydra; cf. n. 303 familiar: domestic 310, 311 denotement: observation 316 splinter: bind with splints lay: wager

330 Probal: probable 333 fruitful: bountiful 340 function: charcater 341 parallel: straight; cf. n. 343 put on: instigate 344 suggest: tempt 349 repeals: recalls to favor 357 cry: pack of hounds (i.e., I merely go through the motions) 379 jump: precisely

Soliciting his wife. Ay, that's the way.
Dull not device by coldness and delay. Exit.

Act Third

Scene First

[Before the Citadel]
Enter Cassio with Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains.
Something that's brief, and bid 'Good morrow, general.'
They play, and enter the Clown.
Clo. Why, masters, ha' your instruments been at Naples, that they speak i' th' nose thus?
Mus. How, sir? how?
Clo. Are these, I pray, called wind-instruments?
Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.
Clo. O! thereby hangs a tail.
Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?
Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind-instrument that I know.
But, masters, here's money for you; and the general so likes your music that he desires you, of all loves, to make no more noise with it.
Mus. Well, sir, we will not.
Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again; but (as they say) to hear music the general does not greatly care.
Mus. We ha' none such, sir.
Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away.
Go; vanish into air; away! Exeunt Musicians.
Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend?
Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.
Cas. Prithee, keep up thy quillets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favor of speech. Wilt thou do this?
Clo. She is stirring, sir. If she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her.
Cas. «Do, good my friend. Exit Clown.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.
Iago. You ha' not been a-bed, then?
Cas. Why, no. The day had broke
Before we parted. I ha' made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife. My suit to her
Is that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Procure me some accéss.
Iago. I'll send her to you presently;
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business
May be more free.
Cas. I humbly thank you for't. Exit Iago.
I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.
Enter Emilia.
Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant. I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will soon be well.
The general and his wife are talking of it,
And she speaks for you stoutly. The Moor replies
That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus
And great affinity, and that in wholesome wisdom
He might not but refuse you; but he protests he loves you,
And needs no other suitor but his likings
«To take the saf'st occasion by the front»
To bring you in again.
Cas. Yet, I beseech you,
If you think fit, or that it may be done,
Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.
Emil. Pray you, come in.
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.
⟨Cas. I am much bound to you.⟩
Exeunt.

Scene Second

[A Room in the Citadel]
Enter Othello, Iago, and other Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot,
And by him do my duties to the state.
That done, I will be walking on the works;
Repair there to me.
Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't.
Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, shall we see't?
Gent. We wait upon your lordship. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The garden of the Citadel]
Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do
All my abilities in thy behalf.
Emil. Good madam, do. I know it grieves my husband,
As if the case were his.
Des. O that's an honest fellow! Do not doubt, Cassio,
But I will have my lord and you again
As friendly as you were.
Cas. Bounteous madam,
Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never anything but your true servant.
Des. O, sir, I thank you. You do love my lord.
You have known him long; and be you well assur'd
He shall in strangeness stand no farther off
Than in a politic distance.
Cas. Ay, but, lady,
That policy may either last so long,
Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed itself so out of circumstances,
That, I being absent and my place supplied,
My general will forget my love and service.

S.d. Clown: cf. n. 3, 4 Cf. n. 12 of all loves: for goodness' sake 23 quillets: quibbles 25 stirring: up and dressed (in the morning) 30 In happy time: well met 37 presently: immediately 43 Florentine: cf. n.

45 displeasure: misfortune 49 affinity: family connection 52 Cf. n. 60 bosom: private thoughts and feelings 2 state: cf. n. 13 strangeness: estrangement 16–18 Cf. n. 17 nice: finical waterish: watered, thin

Des. Do not doubt that. Before Emilia here
I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee,
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article. My lord shall never rest;
I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;
I'll intermingle everything he does
With Cassio's suit. Therefore be merry, Cassio;
For thy solicitor shall rather die
Than give thy cause away.

Enter Othello and Iago [at a distance].

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.
Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.
Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.
Cas. Madam, not now. I am very ill at ease,
Unfit for mine own purposes.
Des. Well, do your discretion. Exit Cassio.
Iago. Ha! I like not that.
Oth. What dost thou say?
Iago. Nothing, my lord; or if—I know not what.
Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?
Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it,
That he would steal away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.
Oth. I do believe 'twas he.
Des. How now, my lord!
I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.
Oth. Who is't you mean?
Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good my lord,
If I have any grace or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take;
For if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honest face.
I prithee call him back.
Oth. Went he hence now?
Des. Yes, faith; so humbled,
That he has left part of his griefs with me.
I suffer with him. Good love, call him back.
Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemon. Some other time.
Des. But shall't be shortly?
Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.
Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?
Oth. No, not to-night.
Des. To-morrow dinner then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home.
I meet the captains at the citadel.
Des. Why then, to-morrow night, or Tuesday morn;
On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morn.
I prithee name the time, but let it not Exceed three days. I' faith, he's penitent;
And yet his trespass, in our common reason
(Save that they say, the wars must make examples
Out of their best), is not almost a fault
T' incur a private check. When shall he come?
Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul,
What you could ask me that I should deny,
Or stand so mammering on. What? Michael Cassio,
That came a-wooing with you, and so many a time,
When I have spoke of you dispraisingly,
Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do
To bring him in! By'r Lady, I could do much—
Oth. Prithee, no more! Let him come when he will.
I will deny thee nothing.
Des. Why, this is not a boon.
'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,
Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit
To your own person. Nay, when I have a suit
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of poise and difficúlty,
And fearful to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing.
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself.
Des. Shall I deny you? No. Farewell, my lord.
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona. I'll come to thee straight.
Des. Emilia, come. Be it as your fancies teach you.
Whate'er you be, I am obedient.
Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.
Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul
But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. What does thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,
Know of your love?
Oth. He did, from first to last. Why dost thou ask?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought.
No further harm.
Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her.
Oth. O yes; and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed?
Oth. Indeed? ay, indeed. Discern'st thou aught in that?
Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my lord?
Oth. Honest? ay, honest.
Iago. My lord, for aught I know.
Oth. What dost thou think?
Iago. Think, my lord?
Oth. Think, my lord?
By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought
Too hideous to be shown.—Thou didst mean something.
I heard thee say but now, thou lik'st not that,
When Cassio left my wife. What didst not like?
And when I told thee he was of my counsel
In my whole course of wooing, thou criedst, 'Indeed?'
And didst contract and purse thy brow together,
As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit. If thou dost love me,
Show me thy thought.
Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

21 doubt: fear 25 watch him tame; cf. n. 26 shrift: confessional 36 do your discretion: do what seems to you discreet 68 to-morrow . . . morn; cf. n. 74 not almost: almost not, scarcely

78 mammering: hesitating 82 in: into favor 91 poise: weight 101 wretch: expression of utmost fondness 103 Cf. n. 106 Cf. n. 128 of my counsel: in my confidence 132 conceit: idea

Oth. I think thou dost;
And, for I know thou'rt full of love and honesty,
And weigh'st thy words before thou give 'em breath,
Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more;
For such things in a false disloyal knave
Are tricks of custom, but in a man that's just
They are close delations, working from the heart
That passion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Cassio,
I dare be sworn I think that he is honest.
Oth. I think so too.
Iago. Men should be what they seem;
Or those that be not, would they might seem none!
Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.
Iago. Why then, I think Cassio's an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this.
I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts
The worst of words.
Iago. Good my lord, pardon me;
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts? Why, say they are vile and false;
As where's that palace whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure
But some uncleanly apprehensions
Keep leets and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?
Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.
Iago. I do beseech you,
Though I perchance am vicious in my guess
(As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not)—I entreat you then,
From one that so imperfectly conjects,
You'ld take no notice, nor build yourself a trouble
Out of my scattering and unsure observance.
It were not for your quiet nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.
Oth. «Zounds!» ⟨What dost thou mean?⟩
Iago. Good name in man, and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of our souls.
Who steals my purse steals trash. 'Tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.
Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thought.
Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.
Oth. Ha!
Iago. O beware, my lord, of jealousy!
It is the green-ey'd monster which doth mock
The meat it feeds on. That cuckold lives in bliss
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O, what damned minutes tell she o'er
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet strongly loves!
Oth. O misery!
Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich enough,
But riches fineless is as poor as winter
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.
Good God, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy.
Oth. Why, why is this?
Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt
Is once to be resolv'd. Exchange me for a goat
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous
To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well.
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous.
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes and chose me. No, Iago.
I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this:
Away at once with love or jealousy!
Iago. I am glad of this; for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit. Therefore (as I am bound)
Receive it from me—I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife. Observe her well with Cassio.
Wear your eye thus, not jealous nor secure.
I would not have your free and noble nature
Out of self-bounty be abus'd. Look to't!
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let God see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands. Their best conscience
Is not to leave undone, but keep unknown.
Oth. Dost thou say so?
Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you:
And when she seem'd to shake and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.
Oth. And so she did.
Iago. Why, go to, then.
She that so young could give out such a seeming,
To seel her father's eyes up close as oak,—
He thought 'twas witchcraft—but I am much to blame.
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon
For too much loving you.
Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.
Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.
Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.
Iago. I' faith, I fear it has.
I hope you will consider what is spoke
Comes from my love. But I do see you're mov'd.
I am to pray you not to strain my speech
To grosser issues nor to large reach

138 stops: pauses, reticences 140 tricks of custom: habitual tricks 141 close delations: covert, involuntary accusations 147 seem none; cf. n. 160 But: but therein 161 leets: synonymous with 'law-days' (keep leet: hold court) 167 Though: supposing, granting that vicious: wrong 171 conjects: imagines; cf. n. 173 scattering: random 179 our souls; cf. n. 190, 191 mock . . . feeds on: tantalizes its victim

195 O misery; cf. n. 197 fineless: endless 205 resolv'd: freed from uncertainty 207 exsufflicate: puffed up, empty; cf. n. 220 as I am bound: this being my duty 225 self-bounty: inherent generosity 226 country: native

Than to suspicion.
Oth. I will not.
Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success
As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my trusty friend—
My lord, I see you're mov'd.
Oth. No, not much mov'd.
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.
Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!
Oth. And, yet, how nature erring from itself,—
Iago. Ay, there's the point: as (to be bold with you)
Not to affect many proposed matches
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree,
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends—
Foh! one may smell, in such a will, most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.
But pardon me; I do not in position
Distinctly speak of her, though I may fear
Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms
And happily repent.
Oth. Farewell, farewell.
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more.
Set on thy wife to observe. Leave me, Iago.
Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.]
Oth. Why did I marry? This honest creature, doubtless,
Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.
Iago [returning]. My lord, I would I might entreat your honor
To scan this thing no further; leave it to time.
Though it be fit that Cassio have his place
(For sure he fills it up with great ability),
Yet if you please to hold him off awhile,
You shall by that perceive him and his means.
Note if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
As worthy cause I have to fear I am,
And hold her free, I do beseech your honor.
Oth. Fear not my government.
Iago. I once more take my leave. Exit.
Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit
Of human dealing. If I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jesses were my dear heartstrings,
I'd whistle her off and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black,
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have, or for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years (yet that's not much)—
She's gone, I am abus'd, and my relief
Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage!
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites. I had rather be a toad,

252 success: consequences 256 honest: virtuous 265 position: formal logical thesis 267 recoiling: adjusting itself 268 fall: chance country forms: the types she has been accustomed to 269 happily: perhaps 282 means: the methods he uses 283 strain his entertainment: urge his reinstatement 288 free: guiltless 289 government: self control 292 qualities: kinds of people 292, 293 learned . . . dealing: mind expert in human intercourse 293–296 Cf. n. 297 soft . . . conversation: effeminate talents in social intercourse 298 chamberers: wanton courtiers

And live upon the vapor of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ'd are they less than the base.
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death:
Even then this forked plague is fated to us
When we do quicken.
Look, where she comes!
If she be false, O then heaven mocks itself.
I'll not believe't.

Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

Des. How now, my dear Othello?
Your dinner and the generous islanders
By you invited do attend your presence.
Oth. I am to blame.
Des. Why is your speech so faint?
Are you not well?
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.
Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again.
Let me but bind your head; within this hour
It will be well.
Oth. Your napkin is too little.
[He puts the handkerchief from him, and it drops.]
Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.
Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.
Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.
Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin.
This was her first remembrance from the Moor.
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it, but she so loves the token
(For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it)
That she reserves it evermore about her
To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out
And give't Iago.
What he will do with it heaven knows, not I.
I nothing know, but for his fantasy—

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?
Emil. Do not you chide. I have a thing for you.
Iago. A thing for me? It is a common thing—
Emil. Ha?
Iago. To have a foolish wife.
Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me now
For that same handkerchief?
Iago. What handkerchief?
Emil. What handkerchief?
Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.
Iago. Hast stol'n it from her?
Emil. No, faith. She let it drop by negligence,
And, to th' advantage, I, being here, took't up.
Look, here it is.
Iago. A good wench! give it me.
Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest

307 Prerogativ'd: privileged, protected 309 forked plague: cuckold's horns 310 When . . . quicken: in prenatal life 315 generous: noble, of gentle birth 321 watching: lack of sleep 322 your head; cf. n. 324 napkin: handkerchief 330 a hundred times; cf. n. 334 work ta'en out: embroidery copied 344 handkerchief; cf. n.

To have me filch it?
Iago. Why, what's that to you? [Snatches it.]
Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,
Give me't again. Poor lady, she'll run mad
When she shall lack it.
Iago. Be not acknown on't. I have use for it.
Go, leave me. Exit Emilia.
I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it. Trifles light as air
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ; this may do something.
⟨The Moor already changes with my poison.⟩
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste,
But, with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur. I did say so.
Look, where he comes!

Enter Othello.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.
Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?
Iago. Why, how now, general? No more of that.
Oth. Avaunt! be gone! Thou hast set me on the rack.
I swear 'tis better to be much abus'd
Than but to know't a little.
Iago. How now, my lord?
Oth. What sense had I of her stol'n hours of lust?
I saw't not, thought it not, it harm'd not me.
I slept the next night well, was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips.
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n,
Let him not know't and he's not robb'd at all.
Iago. I am sorry to hear this.
Oth. I had been happy if the general camp,
Pioners and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known. O, now for ever
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troops and the big wars
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, th' ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And, O ye mortal engines, whose wide throats
Th' immortal Jove's great clamor counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!
Iago. Is't possible, my lord?
Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore,
Be sure of it! Give me the ocular proof;
Or by the worth of man's eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog
Than answer my wak'd wrath.
Iago. Is't come to this?
Oth. Make me to see't; or, at the least, so prove it
That the probation bear no hinge nor loop
To hang a doubt on, or woe upon thy life!
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. If thou dost slander her and torture me,
Never pray more. Abandon all remorse;
On horror's head horrors accumulate;
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd;
For nothing canst thou to damnation add
Greater than that.
Iago. O grace! O heaven defend me!
Are you a man? Have you a soul or sense?
God be wi' you! Take mine office. O wretched fool!
That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice.
O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world,
To be direct and honest is not safe.
I thank you for this profit, and from hence
I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence.
Oth. Nay, stay. Thou shouldst be honest.
Iago. I should be wise, for honesty's a fool,
And loses that it works for.
⟨Oth. By the world,
I think my wife be honest and think she is not;
I think that thou art just and think thou art not.
I'll have some proof. Her name, that was as fresh
As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black
As mine own face. If there be cords or knives,
Poison or fire or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied!
Iago.⟩ I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion.
I do repent me that I put it to you.
You would be satisfied?
Oth. Would? Nay, I will!
Iago. And may; but how? How satisfied, my lord?
Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on,
Behold her topp'd?
Oth. Death and damnation! O!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that prospect. Damn them, then,
If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster
More than their own. What then? how then?
What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?
It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say,
If imputation, and strong circumstances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you may have't.
Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.
Iago. I do not like the office;
But sith I am enter'd in this cause so far
(Prick'd to't by foolish honesty and love),
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.
There are a kind of men so loose of soul

361 Be . . . on't: admit no knowledge of it 370 with . . . act: after brief operation 371 I did say so: just as I was saying! 373 mandragora: mandrake, a narcotic 387 wanting: missing 391 Pioners: miners, military menials 399 circumstance: ceremony 400 engines: cannon wide: cf. n. 401 great clamor: thunder

411 probation: proof hinge nor loop: pivot nor strap 415 remorse: compunction 416 accumulate: pile up 426 profit: profitable lesson 427 sith: since 434 Her: cf. n. 440 put: confided 449 bolster: bed (together) 453 prime: ardent 454 in pride: in heat 456 imputation . . . circumstances: opinion based on strong circumstantial evidence 459 living: real, not sham

That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs.
One of this kind is Cassio.
In sleep I heard him say, 'Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!'
And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my hand,
Cry out 'Sweet creature!' and then kiss me hard,
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots
That grew upon my lips; then laid his leg
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then
Cried, 'Cursed fate, that gave thee to the Moor!'
Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!
Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.
Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion.
Oth. 'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream;
And this may help to thicken other proofs
That do demonstrate thinly.
Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces!
Iago. Nay, but be wise. Yet we see nothing done;
She may be honest yet. Tell me but this:
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief
Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand?
Oth. I gave her such a one. 'Twas my first gift.
Iago. I know not that; but such a handkerchief
(I am sure it was your wife's) did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.
Oth. If 't be that,—
Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.
Oth. O that the slave had forty thousand lives!
One is too poor, too weak, for my revenge.
Now do I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago;
All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven.
[Hisses contemptuously.]
'Tis gone.
Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!
Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne
To tyrannous hate. Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,
For 'tis of aspics' tongues!
Iago. Pray, be content.
Oth. O blood! Iago, blood!
Iago. Patience, I say. Your mind, perhaps, may change.
Oth. Never ⟨Iago. Like to the Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontic and the Hellespont,
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up. He kneels.
Now, by yond marble heaven,⟩
In the due reverence of a sacred vow
I here engage my words.
Iago. Do not rise yet. Kneels.
Witness, you ever-burning lights above!
You elements that clip us round about!
Witness that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service! Let him command,
And to obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody work soever. [They rise.]
Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will upon the instant put thee to't.
Within these three days let me hear thee say
That Cassio's not alive.
Iago. My friend is dead; 'tis done as you request.
But let her live.
Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!
Come, go with me apart. I will withdraw
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.
Iago. I am your own for ever. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Before the Citadel]
Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and the Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?
Clo. I dare not say he lies anywhere.
Des. Why, man?
Clo. He is a soldier, and for one to say a soldier lies is stabbing.
Des. Go to! Where lodges he?
⟨Clo. To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie.
Des. Can anything be made of this?⟩
Clo. I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.
Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?
Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.
Des. Seek him. Bid him come hither; tell him I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well.
Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. Exit Clown.
Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?
Emil. I know not, madam.
Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of cruzadoes; and but my noble Moor
Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill thinking.
Emil. Is he not jealous?
Des. Who, he? I think the sun where he was born
Drew all such humors from him.
Emil. Look where he comes!
Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio
Be call'd to him.

Enter Othello.

How is't with you, my lord?
Oth. Well, my good lady. [Aside.] O hardness to dissemble!—

479 foregone conclusion: a previous experience 480 shrewd doubt: ground for dire suspicion; cf. n. 481 thicken: give substance to 487 Spotted: embroidered 493 any that; cf. n. 495 the slave: Cassio 500 hollow cell: underground prison 502 fraught: freight, burden 503 aspics': asps', venomous snakes' content: quiet 507-515 Cf. n. 513 capable: comprehensive 515 marble: inflexible 520 clip: enclose

522 execution: exercise 524 remorse: conscience 528 to't: to the test 12 be edified by report: make intelligent use of what you hear 22 cruzadoes: Portuguese gold coins

How do you, Desdemona?
Des. Well, my good lord.
Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist, my lady.
Des. It yet has felt no age nor known no sorrow.
Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal heart:
Hot, hot, and moist. This hand of yours requires
A séquester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
Much castigation, exercise devout;
For here's a young and sweating devil here
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.
Des. You may, indeed, say so,
For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.
Oth. A liberal hand! The hearts of old gave hands,
But our new heraldry is hands not hearts.
Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.
Oth. What promise, chuck?
Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.
Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum offends me.
Lend me thy handkerchief.
Des. Here, my lord.
Oth. That which I gave you.
Des. I have it not about me.
Oth. Not?
Des. No, 'faith, my lord.
Oth. That is a fault.
That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give.
She was a charmer and could almost read
The thoughts of people. She told her, while she kept it,
'Twould make her amiable and subdue my father
Entirely to her love, but if she lost it
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathly, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies. She dying gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,
To give it her. I did so,—and take heed on't;
Make it a darling like your precious eye.
To lose or give't away were such perdition
As nothing else could match.
Des. Is't possible?
Oth. 'Tis true. There's magic in the web of it.
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to course two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work.
The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk,
And it was dy'd in mummy which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.
Des. I' faith? is't true?
Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.
Des. Then would to God that I had never seen it!
Oth. Ha? wherefore?
Des. Why do you speak so startingly and rash?
Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? Speak! Is't out o' the way?
Des. Heaven bless us!
Oth. Say you?
Des. It is not lost: but what an if it were?
Oth. How!
Des. I say, it is not lost.
Oth. Fetch't, let me see't.
Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now.
This is a trick to put me from my suit.
Pray you, let Cassio be receiv'd again.
Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief. My mind misgives.
Des. Come, come;
You'll never meet a more sufficient man.
«Oth. The handkercher!
Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.»
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. A man that all his time
Hath founded his good fortunes on your love,
Shar'd dangers with you,—
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. I' faith, you are to blame.
Oth. Zounds! Exit Othello.
Emil. Is not this man jealous?
Des. I ne'er saw this before.
Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief.
I am most unhappy in the loss of it.
Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man.
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food.
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full
They belch us. Look you! Cassio and my husband.

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do't.
And, lo, the happiness! Go and impórtune her.
Des. How now, good Cassio? what's the news with you?
Cas. Madam, my former suit. I do beseech you
That by your virtuous means I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love
Whom I with all the office of my heart
Entirely honor. I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of such mortal kind
That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,
But to know so must be my benefit.
So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content,
And shut myself up in some other course
To fortune's alms.
Des. Alas, thrice-gentle Cassio,
My advocation is not now in tune.
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in favor as in humor alter'd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best
And stood within the blank of his displeasure
For my free speech. You must awhile be patient.
What I can do I will, and more I will
Than for myself I dare. Let that suffice you.
Iago. Is my lord angry?
Emil. He went hence but now,

41 séquester: separation 48, 49 Cf. n. 51 chuck: chick (term of endearment) 53 sorry rheum: distressing discharge (of eye or nose); cf. n. 63 charmer: witch 77 sibyl: inspired prophetess 78 course . . . compasses: make . . . revolutions 81 mummy: drug made from embalmed bodies 84 Most veritable; cf. n. 87 startingly and rash: impetuously and fast

113 Cf. n. 115 but . . . but: merely . . . merely 119 the happiness: what luck! 124 office: duty 127 nor . . . nor: neither . . . nor 130 But: merely 132 shut . . . in: confine myself to 133 To . . . alms: in pursuit of fortune's favor 137 humor: disposition 140 blank: range (literally, target)

And certainly in strange unquietness.
Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,
When it hath blown his ranks into the air,
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother,—and can he be angry?
Something of moment then. I will go meet him;
There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.
Des. I prithee, do so. Exit [Iago.]
Something, sure, of state,
Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice
Made démonstrable here in Cyprus to him,
Hath puddled his clear spirit; and in such cases
Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,
Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so;
For let our finger ache, and it endues
Our other healthful members ev'n to that sense
Of pain. Nay, we must think men are not gods,
Nor of them look for such observancy
As fits the bridal. Beshrew me much, Emilia,
I was (unhandsome warrior as I am)
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find I had suborn'd the witness,
And he's indicted falsely.
Emil. Pray heaven it be state-matters, as you think,
And no conception, nor no jealous toy
Concerning you.
Des. Alas the day! I never gave him cause.
Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so.
They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous. 'Tis a monster
Begot upon itself, born on itself.
Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!
Emil. Lady, amen.
Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk hereabout.
If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.
Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.
Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. 'Save you, friend Cassio!
Cas. What make you from home?
How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?
I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.
Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.
What! keep a week away? seven days and nights?
Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours,
More tedious than the dial eight score times?
O weary reckoning!
Cas. Pardon me, Bianca,
I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd,
But I shall, in a more continuate time,
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca,
[giving her Desdemona's handkerchief]
Take me this work out.

155 unhatch'd practice: undeveloped plot 157 puddled: muddied, disturbed 160 endues: brings 163 observancy: tender devotion 164 Beshrew: a mild imprecation 165 unhandsome ... am: i.e., failing in this test to be a 'fair warrior' (cf. II.i.194) 170 conception: fancy toy: whim 183 'Save: God save, preserve in health 188 keep a week away; cf. n. 189 Eight score eight: 168 (seven times twenty-four) 194 continuate: uninterrupted

Bian. O Cassio! whence came this?
This is some token from a newer friend;
To the felt absence now I feel a cause;
Is't come to this? ⟨Well, well.⟩
Cas. Go to, woman!
Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous now
That this is from some mistress, some remembrance.
No, by my faith, Bianca.
Bian. Why, whose is it?
Cas. I know not, sweet. I found it in my chamber.
I like the work well. Ere it be demanded
(As like enough it will), I'd have it copied.
Take it and do't; and leave me for this time.
Bian. Leave you? wherefore?
Cas. I do attend here on the general,
And think it no addition nor my wish
To have him see me woman'd.
⟨Bian. Why, I pray you?
Cas. Not that I love you not.⟩
Bian. But that you do not love me.
I pray you, bring me on the way a little
And say if I shall see you soon at night.
Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you,
For I attend here; but I'll see you soon.
Bian. 'Tis very good. I must be circumstanc'd. Exeunt.

Act Fourth ❧ Scene First

[Before the Citadel]
Enter Othello and Iago.

Iago. Will you think so?
Oth. Think so, Iago!
Iago. What!
To kiss in private?
Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss.
Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed
An hour or more, not meaning any harm?
Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm?
It is hypocrisy against the devil.
They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,
The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.
Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip.
But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—
Oth. What then?
Iago. Why, then, 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers,
She may, I think, bestow't on any man.
Oth. She is protectress of her honor too.
May she give that?
Iago. Her honor is an essence that's not seen.
They have it very oft that have it not;
But for the handkerchief,—
Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it.
Thou said'st (O it comes o'er my memory
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,

213 no ... wish: neither advantageous nor desirable 214 woman'd: accompanied by a woman 222 be circumstanc'd: yield to circumstances 9 hypocrisy against: an attempt to cheat 20 Cf. n. 22 Cf. n.

Boding to all) he had my handkerchief.
Iago. Ay, what of that?
Oth. That's not so good now.
Iago. What
If I had said I had seen him do you wrong?
Or heard him say (as knaves be such abroad,
Who having, by their own importunate suit
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab)—
Oth. Hath he said anything?
Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well assur'd,
No more than he'll unswear.
Oth. What hath he said?
Iago. Faith, that he did—I know not what he did.
Oth. What? what?
Iago. Lie—
Oth. With her?
Iago. With her, on her—what you will.
Oth. Lie with her! lie on her! We say, lie on her, when they belie her. Lie with her? Zounds, that's fulsome! Handkerchief!—confessions!—handkerchief! ⟨To confess, and be hanged for his labor. First, to be hanged, and then to confess: I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shake me thus. Pish! Noses, ears, and lips. Is't possible?— Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil!⟩ Falls in a trance.
Iago. Work on,
My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;
And many worthy and chaste dames even thus,
All guiltless, meet reproach. What, ho! my lord!
My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter Cassio.

How now, Cassio!
Cas. What's the matter?
Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy.
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.
Cas. Rub him about the temples.
Iago. «No, forbear.»
The lethargy must have his quiet course.
If not he foams at mouth, and by and by
Breaks out to savage madness. Look! he stirs.
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight. When he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you. [Exit Cassio.]
How is it, general? Have you not hurt your head?
Oth. Dost thou mock me?
Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven.
Would you would bear your fortunes like a man!
Oth. A horned man's a monster and a beast.
Iago. There's many a beast then, in a populous city,
And many a civil monster.
Oth. Did he confess?
Iago. Good sir, be a man.
Think every bearded fellow that's but yok'd
May draw with you. There's millions now alive
That nightly lie in those unproper beds
Which they dare swear peculiar. Your case is better.
O, 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a sécure couch,
And to suppose her chaste. No, let me know;
And knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.
Oth. O, thou art wise, 'tis certain.
Iago. Stand you awhile apart;
Confine yourself but in a patient list.
Whilst you were here o'erwhelmed with your grief
(A passion most unsuiting such a man),
Cassio came hither. I shifted him away,
And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy;
Bade him anon return and here speak with me,
The which he promis'd. Do but encave yourself,
And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns
That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He has, and is again to cope your wife.
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience;
Or I shall say you're all in all in spleen,
And nothing of a man.
Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?
I will be found most cunning in my patience,
But—dost thou hear?—most bloody.
Iago. That's not amiss;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?
[Othello goes apart.]
Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife that by selling her desires
Buys herself bread and clothes. It is a creature
That dotes on Cassio (as 'tis the strumpet's plague
To beguile many and be beguil'd by one).
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter. Here he comes.

Enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish jealousy must cónstrue
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behavior
Quite in the wrong. [Aloud.] How do you now, lieutenant?
Cas. The worser that you give me the addition
Whose want even kills me.
Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't.
[Speaking lower.] Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power, How quickly should you speed!
Cas. Alas! poor caitiff!
Oth. Look how he laughs already!
Iago. I never knew a woman love man so.
Cas. Alas! poor rogue! I think, i' faith, she loves me.
Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.
Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?
Oth. Now he impórtunes him
To tell it o'er. Go to! well said, well said.

33 Convinced: overcome (those who needed importuning) supplied: satisfied (those who doted voluntarily) 43–51 Cf. n. 63 his: its 73 horned man: a deceived husband 75 civil: civilian 78 yok'd: yoked in matrimony 79 draw: draw the same cart, endure the same ignominy 80 unproper: not their own 81 peculiar: their own 83 lip: kiss sécure: carefree 85 what she shall be: i.e., what I am to call her 88 patient list: the bounds of patience 92 ecstasy: fit 94 encave: conceal 99 cope: encounter 101, 102 all . . . man; cf. n. 107 keep time: proceed fittingly 116 unbookish: unskilled 120 addition: title 124 speed: prosper 125 caitiff: wretch (used pityingly) 126 Cf. n.

Iago. She gives it out that you shall marry her.
Do you intend it?
Cas. Ha, ha, ha!
Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph?
Cas. I marry her! ⟨what? a customer?⟩ I prithee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!
Oth. So, so, so, so. Laugh that wins!
Iago. Faith, the cry goes you shall marry her.
Cas. Prithee, say true.
Iago. I am a very villain else.
Oth. Have you scored me? Well!
Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out. She is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.
Oth. Iago beckons me. Now he begins the story.
Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was t'other day talking on the sea bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the bauble, and falls me thus about my neck—
Oth. Crying, 'O dear Cassio!' as it were. His gesture imports it.
Cas. So hangs and lolls and weeps upon me; so hales and pulls me. Ha, ha, ha!
Oth. Now he tells how she plucked him to my chamber. O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to.
Cas. Well, I must leave her company.
Iago. Before me! look where she comes!
Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one!

Enter Bianca.

What do you mean by this haunting of me?
Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work? A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work! There, give it your hobby-horse, wheresoever you had it. I'll take out no work on't.
Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca? how now? how now?
Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!
Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may. An you will not, come when you are next prepared for. Exit.
Iago. After her! after her!
Cas. Faith, I must. She'll rail i' the street else.
Iago. Will you sup there?
Cas. Faith, I intend so.
Iago. Well, I may chance to see you, for I would very fain speak with you.
Cas. Prithee, come; will you?
Iago. Go to! Say no more. Exit Cassio.
Oth. [advancing]. How shall I murder him, Iago?
Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?
Oth. O Iago!
Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?
Oth. Was that mine?

⟨Iago. Yours, by this hand. And to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! She gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.⟩
Oth. I would have him nine years a-killing. A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!
Iago. Nay, you must forget that.
Oth. Ay, let her rot and perish, and be damned to-night, for she shall not live. No, my heart is turned to stone. I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world has not a sweeter creature. She might lie by an emperor's side and command him tasks.
Iago. Nay, that's not your way.
Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is. So delicate with her needle! An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear. Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!
Iago. She's the worse for all this.
Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times. And then, of so gentle a condition!
Iago. Ay, too gentle.
Oth. Nay, that's certain. But yet the pity of it, Iago! ⟨O, Iago, «the pity» of it, Iago!⟩
Iago. If you be so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touches not you, it comes near nobody.
Oth. I will chop her into messes. Cuckold me—
Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.
Oth. With mine officer!
Iago. That's fouler.
Oth. Get me some poison, Iago, this night. I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again. This night, Iago.
Iago. Do it not with poison. Strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.
Oth. Good, good. The justice of it pleases. Very good.
Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker.
You shall hear more by midnight.
Oth. Excellent good. A trumpet.
What trumpet is that same?
Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico,
Come from the duke; and see, your wife is with him.

Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Lod. God save you, worthy general!
Oth. With all my heart, sir.
Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.
[Gives him a letter.]
Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.
[Opens the letter and reads.]
Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?
Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior.
Welcome to Cyprus.
Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant Cassio?
Iago. Lives, sir.
Des. Cousin, there's fall'n between him and my lord
An unkind breach, but you shall make all well.
Oth. Are you sure of that?
Des. My lord?
Oth. [reads]. 'This fail you not to do, as you will'—

136 Roman: used metaphorically, in association with 'triumph' 137 customer: prostitute 138 wit: intelligence unwholesome: unsound 140 Laugh: let him laugh 144 scored: notched 146 flattery: self-flattery, delusion 151 bauble: plaything 161 such another: a patronizingly fond intensive, like modern 'such a' fitchew: amorous creature (literally, polecat) 168 hobby-horse: harlot 172 An: if 173 next: (implying 'never')

187–189 Cf. n. 198 your way: the way for you (to think of her) 208 Cf. n. 209 patent: license 216 unprovide: unfit, weaken 218 Strangle her; cf. n. 221 undertaker: caretaker (i.e., settle him) 240 'This fail you not to do,' etc.; cf. n.

Lod. He did not call. He's busy in the paper.
Is there division 'twixt thy lord and Cassio?
Des. A most unhappy one. I would do much
T'atone them for the love I bear to Cassio.
Oth. Fire and brimstone!
Des. My lord?
Oth. Are you wise?
Des. What! is he angry?
Lod. May be the letter mov'd him;
For, as I think, they do command him home,
Deputing Cassio in his government.
Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.
Oth. Indeed?
Des. My lord?
Oth. I am glad to see you mad.
Des. How, sweet Othello?
Oth. Devil! [Strikes her.]
Des. I have not deserved this.
Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,
Though I should swear I saw't. 'Tis very much.
Make her amends, she weeps.
Oth. O devil, devil!
If that the earth could teem with women's tears,
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile.
Out of my sight!
Des. [going]. I will not stay to offend you.
Lod. Truly, an obedient lady!
I do beseech your lordship, call her back.
Oth. Mistress!
Des. My lord?
Oth. What would you with her, sir?
Lod. Who, I, my lord?
Oth. Ay, you did wish that I would make her turn.
Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,
And turn again. And she can weep, sir, weep;
And she's obedient, as you say, obedient,
Very obedient.—Proceed you in your tears.—
Concerning this, sir,—O well painted passion!—
I am commanded here—Get you away;
I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,
And will return to Venice.—Hence! avaunt! [Exit Desdemona.]
Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-night,
I do entreat that we may sup together.
You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys! Exit.
Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate
Call all-in-all sufficient? Is this the nature
Whom passion could not shake, whose solid virtue
The shot of accident nor dart of chance
Could neither graze nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?
Iago. He's that he is. I may not breathe my censure.
What he might be (if what he might he is not)
I would to heaven he were!
Lod. What! strike his wife!
Iago. Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew
That stroke would prove the worst!
Lod. Is it his use?
Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?
Iago. Alas, alas!
It is not honesty in me to speak
What I have seen and known. You shall observe him,
And his own courses will denote him so
That I may save my speech. Do but go after
And mark how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[A Room in the Citadel]
Enter Othello and Emilia.

Oth. You have seen nothing, then?
Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.
Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.
Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then I heard
Each syllable that breath made up between 'em.
Oth. What! did they never whisper?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?
Emil. Never.
Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. That's strange.
Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
Lay down my soul at stake. If you think other,
Remove your thought. It doth abuse your bosom.
If any wretch have put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!
For if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
There's no man happy; the purest of their wives
Is foul as slander.
Oth. Bid her come hither. Go. Exit Emilia.
She says enough; yet she's a simple bawd
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore,
A closet lock and key of villainous secrets;
And yet she'll kneel and pray. I have seen her do't.

Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

Des. My lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?
Oth. Let me see your eyes;
Look in my face.
Des. What horrible fancy's this?
Oth. [to Emilia]. Some of your function, mistress.
Leave procreants alone and shut the door;
Cough or cry 'hem' if anybody come.
Your mystery, your mystery. Nay, dispatch. Exit Emilia.
Des. Upon my knees, what does your speech import?
I understand a fury in your words
«But not the words.»
Oth. Why, what art thou?

244 atone: reconcile 247 Are you wise: sardonic; Have you no wisdom? 251 government: office 263 teem with: be impregnated by 264 falls: lets fall 278 painted passion: simulated emotion 298 use: custom

299 blood: temper 14 to wager: in pledge that ('durst' goes with 'Lay down') 15 other: otherwise 18 serpent's curse: cf. Genesis 3.14 24 This: Emilia 25 closet lock and key: instrument of concealment 33 function: profession (i.e., of procuress) 36 mystery: trade

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true
And loyal wife.
Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;
Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves
Should fear to seize thee. Therefore be double damn'd.
Swear thou art honest.
Des. Heaven doth truly know it.
Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.
Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? how am I false?
Oth. Ah! Desdemon! Away, away, away!
Des. Alas, the heavy day! Why do you weep?
Am I the motive of these tears, my lord?
If haply you my father do suspect
An instrument of this your calling back,
Lay not your blame on me. If you have lost him,
Why, I have lost him too.
Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven
To try me with afflictions, had they rain'd
All kinds of sores and shames on my bare head,
Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips,
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes,
I should have found in some part of my soul
A drop of patience. But, alas!, to make me
A fixed figure for the time of scorn
To point his slow unmoving fingers at!
Yet could I bear that too. Well! very well!
But there, where I have garner'd up my heart,
Where either I must live or bear no life;
The fountain from the which my current runs
Or else dries up: to be discarded thence,
Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads
To knot and gender in! Turn thy complexion there,
Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubin.
I here look grim as hell!
Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me honest.
Oth. O, ay. As summer flies are in the shambles,
That quicken even with blowing.
O thou black weed, why art so lovely fair?
Thou smell'st so sweet that the sense aches at thee.
Would thou hadst ne'er been born!
Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?
Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,
Made to write 'whore' on? What committed?
⟨Committed! O thou public commoner!
I should make very forges of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modesty,
Did I but speak thy deeds. What committed?⟩
Heaven stops the nose at it and the moon winks,
The bawdy wind that kisses all it meets
Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
And will not hear't. What committed?
«Impudent strumpet!»
Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a strumpet?
Des. No, as I am a Christian.
If to preserve this vessel for my lord
From any other foul unlawful touch
Be not to be a strumpet, I am none.
Oth. What! not a whore?
Des. No, as I shall be sav'd.
Oth. Is't possible?
Des. O heaven, forgiveness!
Oth. I cry you mercy, then.
I took you for that cunning whore of Venice
That married with Othello. You, mistress,
That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell!

Enter Emilia.

You, you, ay, you!
We have done our course. There's money for your pains.
I pray you, turn the key and keep our counsel. Exit.
Emil. Alas! what does this gentleman conceive?
How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?
Des. Faith, half asleep.
Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord?
Des. With who?
Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.
⟨Des. Who is thy lord?
Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.
Des. I have none; do not talk to me, Emilia;
I cannot weep, nor answer have I none,
But what should go by water. Prithee, to-night
Lay on my bed our wedding sheets. Remember;
And call thy husband hither.
Emil. Here is a change indeed! Exit.
Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.
How have I been behav'd, that he might stick
The small'st opinion on my greatest abuse?

Enter Iago and Emilia.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is't with you?
Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes
Do it with gentle means and easy tasks.
He might have chid me so, for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.
Iago. What is the matter, lady?
Emil. Alas! Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
As true hearts cannot bear.
Des. Am I that name, Iago?
Iago. What name, fair lady?
Des. Such as she says my lord did say I was.
Emil. He call'd her whore. A beggar in his drink
Could not have laid such terms upon his callet.
Iago. Why did he so?
Des. I do not know. I am sure I am none such.
Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas the day!
Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches,
Her father, and her country, and her friends,
To be call'd whore? Would it not make one weep?
Des. It is my wretched fortune.
Iago. Beshrew him for't!

52 motive: cause 58 they; cf. n. 60 Steep'd: submerged (cf. 'ensteep'd,' II.i.78) 64, 65 Cf. n. 67–70 Cf. n. 72 gender: engender, multiply 72, 73 Turn . . . cherubin; cf. n. 73 cherubin; cf. n. 74 Cf. n. 77 quicken . . . blowing; cf. n. 78, 79 O thou black weed . . . sweet; cf. n. 91, 92 What . . . strumpet; cf. n.

102 forgiveness: grant me power to forgive this! 103 cry you mercy: ask your pardon (I cry to be read: Cry) 104 whore of Venice: a variety with an international fame 110 turn the key: open the door 121 go by water: express itself in tears 126, 128 stick . . . abuse: even slightly regard my worst offence as an offence 141 callet: basest of low women

How comes this trick upon him?
Des. Nay, heaven doth know.
Emil. I will be hang'd if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office
Have not devis'd this slander. I'll be hang'd else.
Iago. Fie! there is no such man. It is impossible.
Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!
Emil. A halter pardon him, and hell gnaw his bones!
Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company?
What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?
The Moor's abus'd by some outrageous knave,
Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.
O heaven! that such companions thou'dst unfold,
And put in every honest hand a whip
To lash the rascal naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west!
Iago. Speak within doors.
Emil. O, fie upon him! Some such squire he was
That turn'd your wit the seamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.
Iago. You are a fool. Go to!
Des. O good Iago,
What shall I do to win my lord again?
Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,
I know not how I lost him. ⟨Here I kneel.
If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
Either in discourse of thought or actual deed,
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense
Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will (though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorcement) love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;
And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taint my love. I cannot say 'whore.'
It does abhor me now I speak the word;
To do the act that might th' addition earn
Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.⟩
Iago. I pray you be content. 'Tis but his humor.
The business of the state does him offence
«And he does chide with you.»
Des. If 'twere no other,— [Trumpets within.]
Iago. 'Tis but so, I warr'nt you
Hark how these instruments summon you to supper,
And the great messengers of Venice stay.
Go in, and weep not. All things shall be well. Ex. women.

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo?
Rod. I do not find that thou deal'st justly with me.
Iago. What in the contrary?
Rod. Every day thou daffest me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me, thou keepest from me all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will indeed no longer endure it, nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.
Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?
Rod. Faith, I have heard too much, for your words and performance are no kin together.
Iago. You charge me most unjustly.
Rod. ⟨With nought but truth.⟩ I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist. You have told me she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquittance, but I find none.
Iago. Well, go to! Very well.
Rod. Very well? go to? I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well. By this hand, I say 'tis very scurvy, and begin to find myself fopped in it.
Iago. Very well.
Rod. I tell you 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona. If she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful solicitation. If not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.
Iago. You have said now?
Rod. Ay, and said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.
Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee, and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo. Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.
Rod. It hath not appeared.
Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever (I mean purpose, courage, and valor), this night show it. If thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery and devise engines for my life.
Rod. Well, ⟨what is it?⟩ is it within reason and compass?
Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.
Rod. Is that true? Why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.
Iago. O, no! he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.
Rod. How do you mean, removing of him?
Iago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place. Knocking out his brains.
Rod. And that you would have me to do!
Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit and right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him. He knows not yet of his honorable fortune. If you will watch his going thence (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one), you may take him at your pleasure. I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us.

150 trick: vagary 154 cogging, cozening: deceiving, cheating 156 Cf. n. 162 notorious: egregious, preëminent 163 companions: base fellows unfold: expose 167 within doors: quietly, not from the house-tops 177 discourse of thought: day-dreaming 178 that: if 183 Comfort . . . me: may happiness forsake me 184 defeat: destroy 186 It does abhor me: I feel abhorrence 188 vanity: vain treasure 191 chide with: quarrel with, 'take it out on' 195 stay: are waiting 199 What evidence have you against me? 200 daffest me: puttest me off

202 conveniency: opportunity advantage: increase, furthering 204 put up: accept 205 Cf. n. 211 votarist: religious devotee, nun 213 sudden respect: immediate notice 217 fopped: swindled 223 said: finished your speech 230 directly: straightforwardly 238 engines for: plots against 244 Mauritania: supposed land of the Moors; cf. n. 245 lingered: prolonged 246 determinate: decisive

Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me. I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste. About it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[State Bedroom in the Citadel]

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night. I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honor is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?—
O! Desdemona.

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed o' the instant. I will be returned forthwith. Dispatch your attendant there. Look it be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

Exit [Othello, with Lodovico and Attendants].

Emil. How goes it now? He looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent.
He hath commanded me to go to bed,
And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding. Therefore, good Emilia,
Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu.
We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I. My love doth so approve him,
That even his stubbornness, his checks and frowns,—
Prithee, unpin me,—have grace and favor in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one. Good faith! how foolish are our minds!
If I do die before thee, prithee, shroud me
In one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk!

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbary:
She was in love, and he she lov'd prov'd mad
And did forsake her. She had a song of 'willow';
An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune,
And she died singing it. That song to-night
Will not go from my mind. ⟨I have much to do
But to go hang my head all at one side,
And sing it like poor Barbary. Prithee, dispatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpin me here.
This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip. Desdemona sings.

The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,—
Sing all a green willow.
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,—
Sing willow, willow, willow.
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moons.
Sing willow, &c.
Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones.
Sing willow, &c.

Lay by these.—

Willow, willow.

Prithee, hie thee; he'll come anon.

Sing all a green willow must be my garland.
Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,—

Nay, that's not next.⟩ Hark! who is it that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des.

⟨I call'd my love false love; but what said he then?
Sing willow, &c.
If I court mo women, you'll couch with mo men.⟩

Now get thee gone. Good night. Mine eyes do itch;
Does that bode weeping?

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

⟨Des. I have heard it said so. O these men, these men!
Dost thou in conscience think (tell me, Emilia)
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.⟩

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light. I might do't as well i' th' dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world is a huge thing. It is a great price for a small vice.

Des. Good troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. By my troth, I think I should, and undo't when I had done it. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition. But for the whole world? Ud's pity! who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong
For the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and having the world for your labor, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many to the vantage,
as would store the world they played for.
⟨But I do think it is their husbands' faults
If wives do fall. Say that they slack their duties,
And pour our treasures into foreign laps,
Or else break out in peevish jealousies,
Throwing restraint upon us; or say they strike us,

261 grows to waste: is wasting away 1 Cf. n. 2 pardon me: don't mention it 5 Will you walk: shall we start? 9 Dispatch: 'dismiss' (Folio) 12 incontinent: immediately 24 All's one: no matter 27 talk: talk idly 29 mad: inconstant, wild 31 An old thing 'twas; cf. n. 34 But to: not to

53 hie thee: make haste 79, 80 undo't . . . done: see lines 86–88 80, 81 joint-ring: ring made in interlocking halves 91 to the vantage: to boot, in addition

Or scant our former having in despite;
Why, we have galls, and though we have some grace,
Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know
Their wives have sense like them. They see and smell,
And have their palates both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have. What is it that they do
When they change us for others? Is it sport?
I think it is. And doth affection breed it?
I think it doth. Is't frailty that thus errs?
It is so too. And have not we affections,
Desires for sport, and frailty as men have?
Then, let them use us well; else let them know,
The ills we do, their ills instruct us so.⟩
Des. Good night, good night! God me such usage send,
Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend! Exeunt.

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

[A Street near Bianca's lodging]
Enter Iago and Roderigo.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk. Straight will he come.
Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home.
Quick, quick. Fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow.
It makes us, or it mars us. Think of that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.
Rod. Be near at hand. I may miscarry in't.
Iago. Here, at thy hand. Be bold, and take thy stand.
[Retires.]
Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons.
'Tis but a man gone. Forth, my sword! he dies.
Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain. Live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him,
As gifts to Desdemona.
It must not be. If Cassio do remain,
He has a daily beauty in his life
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him. There stand I in peril.
No, he must die. Be it so! I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his gait; 'tis he. Villain, thou diest!
[Makes a pass at Cassio.]
Cas. That thrust had been my enemy indeed
But that my coat is better than thou think'st.
I will make proof of thine.
[Draws, and wounds Roderigo.]
Rod. O! I am slain!

98 having: allowance, pin-money despite: spite 99 galls: spirit to resent injury 101 sense: sensations, feelings 105 affection: inclination 111 usage: code of conduct 112 Cf. n. 1 bulk: projecting shelter 12 quat: pimple (cf. modern 'scab') sense: quick 15 Live Roderigo: if Roderigo live; Cf. n. 17 bobb'd from him: cheated him out of 20 Cf. n. 26 coat: i.e., he wore defensive armor under his outer garments

[Iago from behind wounds Cassio in the leg, and exit.]
Cas. I am maim'd for ever! Light, ho! murder! murder!
[Falls.]

Enter Othello [at a distance].

Oth. The voice of Cassio. Iago keeps his word.
Rod. O villain that I am!
Oth. Hark! 'Tis even so.
Cas. O, help, ho! light! a surgeon!
Oth. 'Tis he. O brave Iago, honest and just,
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong!
Thou teachest me. Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your fate hies apace. Strumpet, I come!
Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted.
Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted.
Exit Othello.

Enter Lodovico and Gratiano [at a distance].

Cas. What ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!
Gra. 'Tis some mischance. The cry is very direful.
Cas. O, help!
Lod. Hark!
Rod. O wretched villain!
Lod. Two or three groan. It is a heavy night;
These may be counterfeits. Let's think't unsafe
To come in to the cry without more help.
Rod. Nobody come? then shall I bleed to death.
Lod. Hark!

Enter Iago, with a light.

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.
Iago. Who's there? Whose noise is this that cries on murder?
Lod. We do not know.
Iago. Did not you hear a cry?
Cas. Here, here! For heaven's sake, help me.
Iago. What's the matter?
Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.
Lod. The same indeed. A very valiant fellow.
Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously?
Cas. Iago? O, I am spoil'd, undone by villains!
Give me some help.
Iago. O my lieutenant! what villains have done this?
Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.
Iago. O treacherous villains!
[To Lodovico and Gratiano.] What are you there? Come in, and give some help.
Rod. O help me here!
Cas. That's one of them.
Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!
[Stabs Roderigo.]
Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!
Iago. Kill men i' the dark! Where be those bloody thieves?
How silent is this town! Ho! murder! murder!
What may you be? are you of good or evil?
Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.
Iago. Signior Lodovico?
Lod. He, sir.

S.d. Enter Othello; cf. n. 36 Minion: hussy 40 passage: passers-by 45 heavy: doleful (cf. V.ii.120) 51 cries on: shouts 65 What: who 74 praise: appraise, estimate

Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.
Gra. Cassio?
Iago. How is it, brother?
Cas. My leg is cut in two.
Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!
Light, gentlemen. I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is't that cried?
Iago. Who is't that cried!
Bian. O my dear Cassio! O my sweet Cassio!
Cassio! Cassio!
Iago. O notable strumpet! Cassio, may you suspect
Who they should be that thus have mangled you?
Cas. No.
Gra. I am sorry to find you thus. I have been to seek you.
⟨Iago. Lend me a garter. So. O for a chair,
To bear him easily hence!⟩
Bian. Alas! he faints! O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!
Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To bear a part in this.
Patience awhile, good Cassio. ⟨Come, come.⟩
Lend me a light. Know we this face, or no?
Alas! my friend and my dear countryman,
Roderigo? no: yes, sure. O heaven! Roderigo.
Gra. What? of Venice?
Iago. Even he, sir. Did you know him?
Gra. Know him? ay.
Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry you gentle pardon.
These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,
That so neglected you.
Gra. I am glad to see you.
Iago. How do you, Cassio? O, a chair, a chair!
Gra. Roderigo! [A chair brought in.]
Iago. He. 'Tis he.—O! that's well said; the chair.
Some good man bear him carefully from hence.
I'll fetch the general's surgeon. [To Bianca.] For you, mistress,
Save you your labor. He that lies slain here, Cassio,
Was my dear friend. What malice was betwixt you?
Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.
Iago. [To Bianca.] What! look you pale?? O, bear him out o' the air. [Casio borne off.]
Stay you, good gentlemen. Look you pale, mistress?—
Do you perceive the gastness of her eye?—
Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.—
Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her.
Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness
Will speak though tongues were out of use.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. 'Las! what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?
Iago. Cassio has here been set on in the dark
By Roderigo and fellows that are 'scap'd.
He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.
Emil. Alas, good gentlemen! alas, good Cassio!
Iago. This is the fruit of whoring. Pray, Emilia,
Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night.—
What! do you shake at that?
Bian. He supp'd at my house, but I therefore shake not.
Iago. O, did he so? I charge you, go with me.
Emil. Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet!
Bian. I am no strumpet, but of life as honest
As you that thus abuse me.
Emil. As I! foh! fie upon thee!
Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd.
Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale.
Emilia, run you to the citadel,
And tell my lord and lady what has happ'd.
Will you go on afore? [Aside.] This is the night
That either makes me or fordoes me quite.

Exeunt.

Scene Second

[State Bedroom in the Citadel]
Enter Othello with a light, and Desdemona in her bed.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul.
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!
It is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood,
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alablaster.
Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.
Put out the light, and then put out the light.
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me; but once put out thy light,
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd thy rose,
I cannot give it vital growth again.
It needs must wither. I'll smell it on the tree. He kisses her.
O balmy breath, that doth almost persuade
Justice to break her sword! One more, one more.
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee
And love thee after. Once more, and this the last!
So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears. This sorrow's heavenly,
It strikes where it doth love. She wakes.
Des. Who's there? Othello?
Oth. Ay, Desdemona.
Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?
Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?
Des. Ay, my lord.
Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.
Des. Alas, my lord, what may you mean by that?
Oth. Well, do it, and be brief. I will walk by.
I would not kill thy unprepared spirit.
No (heaven forfend!), I would not kill thy soul.
Des. Talk you of killing?
Oth. Ay, I do.
Des. Then heaven

90 I have been to seek you; cf. n. 91 chair: a plain chair, probably 95 Cf. n. 118 gastness: ghastliness 129 know: learn

139 Cf. n. 141 Will . . . afore; cf. n. 142 fordoes: unmakes, destroys Scene Second S.d. Enter . . . bed; cf. n. 1 It is the cause; cf. n. 5 alablaster; cf. n. 12 Promethean heat: divine fire; cf. n. 13 relume: rekindle 16 doth; cf. n. 20 fatal; cf. n. 29 grace: God's mercy 30 Solicit: pray 32 by: apart 34 forfend: forbid

Have mercy on me!
Oth. Amen! with all my heart.
Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.
Oth. Humh!
Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal then
When your eyes roll so. Why I should fear I know not,
Since guiltiness I know not; but yet I feel I fear.
Oth. Think on thy sins.
Des. They are loves I bear to you.
Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.
Des. That death's unnatural that kills for loving.
Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip?
Some bloody passion shakes your very frame.
These are portents, but yet, I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.
Oth. Peace, and be still!
Des. I will so. What's the matter?
Oth. That handkerchief which I so lov'd and gave thee
Thou gav'st to Cassio.
Des. No, by my life and soul!
Send for the man and ask him.
Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,
Take heed of perjury. Thou'rt on thy death-bed.
Des. Ay, but not yet to die.
Oth. Yes, presently.
Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath
Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.
Des. Then Lord have mercy on me!
Oth. I say, amen.
Des. And have you mercy too! I never did
Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio
But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love. I never gave him token.
Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his hand.
O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call what I intend to do
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice.
I saw the handkerchief.
Des. He found it then.
I never gave it him. Send for him hither;
Let him confess a truth.
Oth. He has confess'd.
Des. What, my lord?
Oth. That he hath—uds death!
Des. How? unlawfully?
Oth. Ay.
Des. He will not say so.
Oth. No; his mouth is stopp'd.
Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't.
Des. O! my fear interprets. What! is he dead?
Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all.
Des. Alas, he is betray'd and I undone!
Oth. O strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?
Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not!
Oth. Down, strumpet!
Des. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night!
Oth. Nay, an you strive,—
Des. But half an hour!
⟨Oth. Being done, there is no pause.
Des.⟩ But while I say one prayer!
Oth. It is too late. He stifles her.
«Des. O Lord, Lord, Lord!»
Emilia calls within. My lord, my lord! what, ho! my lord, my lord!
Oth. What noise is this? Not dead? not yet quite dead?
I that am cruel am yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain.
So. so.
Emil. [within]. What, ho! my lord, my lord!
Oth. Who's there?
Emil. [within]. O! good my lord, I'ld speak a word with you.
Oth. Yes; 'tis Emilia.—By and by.—She's dead.
'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death.
The noise was high. Ha! no more moving?
Still as the grave. Shall she come in? Were't good?
I think she stirs again: no. What's the best?
If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:
My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife:
O, insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon, and that the affrighted globe
Should yawn at alteration.
Emil. [within]. I do beseech you
That I may speak with you, O good my lord.
Oth. I had forgot thee. O, come in, Emilia!—
Soft, by and by.—Let me the curtains draw.—
Where art thou? [Unlocks the door.]

Enter Emilia.

What's the matter with thee now?
Emil. O! my good lord, yonder's foul murders done.
Oth. What! now?
Emil. But now, my lord.
Oth. It is the very error of the moon.
She comes more near the earth than she was wont,
And makes men mad.
Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian
Call'd Roderigo.
Oth. Roderigo kill'd!
And Cassio kill'd!
Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.
Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! then murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.
Des. O falsely, falsely murder'd.
Emil. O Lord! what cry is that?
Oth. That? what?
Emil. Out and alas! it is my lady's voice.
Help! help, ho! help! O lady, speak again!
Sweet Desdemona! O sweet mistress, speak!
Des. A guiltless death I die.
Emil. O! who has done this deed?
Des. Nobody. I myself. Farewell!

65 conception: cf. n. 71 general . . . heaven: permission granted by heaven to all 74 stone: make stony 83 Cf. n. 88 order: measures 91 stomach: appetite 99 Being . . . pause: cf. n. 115 The . . . high: cf. n. 117 What's the best: 'what's best to do?' (Folio) 123 yawn at alteration: cf. n. 127 Soft: stop, wait 132 But: just 133 error: aberration

Commend me to my kind lord. O farewell! She dies.
Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?
Emil. Alas, who knows?
Oth. You heard her say herself it was not I.
Emil. She said so. I must needs report a truth.
Oth. She's like a liar gone to burning hell.
'Twas I that kill'd her.
Emil. O the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil.
Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.
Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.
Oth. She was false as water.
Emil. Thou art rash as fire to say
That she was false. O she was heavenly true.
Oth. Cassio did top her. Ask thy husband else.
O I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.
Emil. My husband?
Oth. Thy husband.
Emil. That she was false to wedlock?
Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been true,
If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.
Emil. My husband?
Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first.
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds
Emil. My husband?
Oth. What needs this iterance, woman? I say thy husband.
⟨Emil. O mistress! villainy hath made mocks with love.
My husband say that she was false?
Oth. He, woman.
I say, thy husband; dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.⟩
Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! He lies to the heart.
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.
Oth. Ha!
Emil. Do thy worst.
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven
Than thou wast worthy her.
Oth. Peace! you were best.
Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harm
As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!
As ignorant as dirt! Thou hast done a deed,—
I care not for thy sword. I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives. Help! help, ho! help!
The Moor has kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder!

Enter Montano, Gratiano, Iago, and others.

Mon. What is the matter? How now, general?
Emil. O, are you come, Iago? You have done well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.
Gra. What is the matter?
Emil. Disprove this villain if thou be'st a man:
He says thou told'st him that his wife was false.
I know thou didst not. Thou'rt not such a villain.
Speak, for my heart is full.
Iago. I told him what I thought, and told no more
Than what he found himself was apt and true.
Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false?
Iago. I did.
Emil. You told a lie, an odious damned lie;
Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie.
She false with Cassio! Did you say with Cassio?
Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.
Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak.
⟨My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.
All. O heavens forfend!
Emil. And your reports have set the murder on.
Oth. Nay, stare not, masters. It is true indeed.
Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.
Mon. O monstrous act!
Emil. Villainy! villainy! villainy!
I think upon't, I think, I smell't. O villainy!
I thought so then. I'll kill myself for grief.
O villainy, villainy!⟩
Iago. What! are you mad? I charge you, get you home.
Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak.
'Tis proper I obey him, but not now.
Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.
Oth. Oh! Oh! Oh! Othello falls on the bed.
Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar,
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent
That e'er did lift up eye.
Oth. O! she was foul.
I scarce did know you, uncle. There lies your niece.
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd.
I know this act shows terrible and grim.
Gra. Poor Desdemon, I am glad thy father's dead.
Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread a-twain. Did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation.
Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed. Cassio confess'd it;
And she did gratify his amorous works
With the recognizance and pledge of love
Which I first gave her. I saw it in his hand.
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.
Emil. O God! O heavenly God!
Iago. Zounds! hold your peace.
Emil. 'Twili out, 'twill out! I hold my peace, sir? No!
No, I will speak as liberal as the north.
Let heaven and men and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.
Iago. Be wise, and get you home.
Emil. I will not. [Iago threatens Emilia.]
Gra. Fie!
Your sword upon a woman?

161 folly: unchastity 174 such another: another such (as large as this one) 175 chrysolite: a precious stone, green in color 182 iterance: repetition 183 made mocks with: made a dupe of 197 gull: fool 205 Gra. Cf. n.

217 charm: silence, as if by a magic spell 227 then; cf. n. 232 Cf. n. 243 Shore: cut 244 do . . . turn: commit some desperate deed 246 reprobation: damnation 251 recognizance: token 254 Cf. n. 258 as . . . north: as freely and strongly as the north wind; cf. n.

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of
I found by fortune and did give my husband,
For often with a solemn earnestness
(More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle)
He begg'd of me to steal it.
Iago. Villainous whore!
Emil. She give it Cassio? No, alas! I found it,
And I did give't my husband.
Iago. Filth, thou liest!
Emil. By heaven, I do not. I do not, gentlemen.
O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool
Do with so good a wife?
Oth. Are there no stones in heaven
But what serves for the thunder? Precious villain!
The Moor runs at Iago. Iago kills his wife.
Gra. The woman falls. Sure, he has kill'd his wife. Exit Iago.
Emil. Ay, ay. O lay me by my mistress' side.
Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.
Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. [To Gratiano.] Take you this weapon,
Which I have here recover'd from the Moor.
Come, guard the door without. Let him not pass,
But kill him rather. I'll after that same villain,
For 'tis a damned slave. Ex. Mont. and Gratiano.
Oth. I am not valiant neither,
But every puny whipster gets my sword.
But why should honor outlive honesty?
Let it go all.
Emil. ⟨What did thy song bode, lady?
Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,
And die in music. [Sings.]

Willow, willow, willow.

Moor, she was chaste. She lov'd thee, cruel Moor.
So come my soul to bliss as I speak true.
So speaking as I think, I die, I die. She dies.
Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber.
It is a sword of Spain, the ice brook's temper.
O here it is.—Uncle, I must come forth.
Gra. within. If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear.
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.
Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak to me,
Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

[Enter Gratiano.]

Gra. What is the matter?
Oth. Behold! I have a weapon.
A better never did itself sustain
Upon a soldier's thigh. I have seen the day
That with this little arm and this good sword
I have made my way through more impediments
Than twenty times your stop. But O vain boast!
Who can control his fate? 'Tis not so now.
⟨Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd.
Here is my journey's end, here is my butt
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.

276 wife: cf. n. 277 stones: bolts; cf. n. 284 recover'd: taken 289 whipster: (cf. modern whipper-snapper) stripling 290 honor: mere dignity honesty: fundamental righteousness 300 ice brook's temper: tempered in icy water 305 naked: unarmed (as Gratiano supposed) 312 stop: power of prevention 315 butt: goal (literally, target) 316 sea-mark: beacon, limit

Do you go back dismay'd? 'Tis a lost fear.
Man but a rush against Othello's breast,
And he retires. Where should Othello go?—
Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-starr'd wench!⟩
Pale as thy smock! When we shall meet at compt,
This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl,
Even like thy chastity.
O cursed, cursed slave! Whip me, ye devils,
From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!
O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead!
O! O! O!

Enter Lodovico, Montano, Iago [prisoner], and Officers, Cassio in a chair.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?
Oth. That's he that was Othello. Here I am.
Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.
Oth. I looked down towards his feet, but that's a fable.
If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee. [Wounds Iago.]
Lod. Wring his sword from him.
Iago. I bleed, sir, but not kill'd.
Oth. I am not sorry neither. I'd have thee live,
For in my sense 'tis happiness to die.
Lod. O thou Othello that wert once so good,
Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,
What shall be said to thee?
Oth. Why, anything:
An honorable murderer, if you will;
For nought did I in hate, but all in honor.
Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villainy.
Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?
Oth. Ay.
Cas. Dear general, I did never give you cause.
Oth. I do believe it, and I ask you pardon.
Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil
Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body.
Iago. Demand me nothing. What you know, you know:
From this time forth I never will speak word.
Lod. What! not to pray?
Gra. Torments will ope your lips.
Oth. Well, thou dost best.
Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,
Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter
Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo,
And here another. The one of them imports
The death of Cassio to be undertook
By Roderigo.
Oth. O villain!
Cas. Most heathenish and most gross!
Lod. Now here's another discontented paper,
Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant t' have sent this damned villain,
But that, belike, Iago in the nick
Came in and satisfied him.

317 lost: wasted, unnecessary 318 Man: wield rush: bulrush, reed 321 compt: reckoning, on the Judgment Day 326 possession: haunting obsession 334 I look for the devil's outward sign, a cloven hoof 337 I bleed, sir; cf. n. 341 practice: sinister scheme 353 Demand me nothing; cf. n. 369 nick: nick of time; cf. n.

Oth. O the pernicious caitiff!
How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief
That was my wife's?
Cas. I found it in my chamber;
And he himself confess'd it even now
That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose
Which wrought to his desire.
Oth. O fool! fool! fool!
Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter
How he upbraids Iago that he made him
Brave me upon the watch, whereon it came
That I was cast: and even but now he spake
(After long seeming dead): Iago hurt him,
Iago set him on.
Lod. You must forsake this room and go with us.
Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,
If there be any cunning cruelty
That can torment him much and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest,
Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state. Come, bring him away.
Oth. Soft you! A word or two ⟨before you go.⟩
I have done the state some service, and they know't;
No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of them as they are. Nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice. Then must you speak
Of one that lov'd not wisely but too well;
Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose hand
(Like the base Indian) threw a pearl away
Richer than all his tribe; of one whose súbdu'd eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drops tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their méd'cinable gum. Set you down this;
And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian and traduc'd the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him thus. He stabs himself.
Lod. O bloody period!
Gra. All that's spoke is marr'd.
Oth. I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee. No way but this,
Killing myself to die upon a kiss. He dies.
Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon;
For he was great of heart.
Lod. [To Iago.] O Spartan dog,
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea,
Look on the tragic loading of this bed!
This is thy work. The object poisons sight;
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed to you. To you, lord governor,
Remains the censure of this hellish villain,
The time, the place, the torture. O, enforce it!
Myself will straight aboard, and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS

386 taken off: revoked 397 Cf. n. 400 wrought: wrought upon, worked up

401 Perplex'd: desperately troubled 402 Indian: cf. n. 406 méd'cinable: cf. n. 407 Aleppo: cf. n. 412 period: ending, close 418 Spartan: for fierceness and taciturnity 419 fell: deadly 422 Let it be hid: cf. n. 423 seize upon: take legal possession of 424 succeed: descend in succession (as nearest relative of Desdemona) 426 enforce it: make it severe

Notes

At the time of his sudden death in June of 1946, Professor Brooke had completed his work on the text, notes, and glosses for Hamlet, King Lear, Othello and I Henry IV. The editorial tasks which he left unfinished—preparation of some of the final copy for the press, reading of the proofs, compilation of the Indexes of Words Glossed, decisions as to certain matters of style and format, and, in the case of I Henry IV, the rescuing of the text from the prescriptive punctuation of the eighteenth-century editors—have been undertaken by Professor Benjamin Nangle.

Textual Note. The two authorities for the text of Othello are the first separate (quarto) edition, printed in 1622, and the version included in the first collected (folio) edition of Shakespeare's dramatic works, published in 1623. Neither is based directly on the other, though there is some indication that both go back to a common manuscript authority which itself was a derivative from Shakespeare's original. The Quarto text is the shorter by more than 150 lines. These lines (missing in Quarto 1, but nearly all restored in the second Quarto of 1630) are here printed within angle brackets (⟨ ⟩). Some of these (e.g., IV.i.187–189, V.ii.315–321) are clearly accidental omissions; others have the appearance of stage cuts. The much less numerous passages which appear in the first Quarto, but not in the Folio, are here printed within ornamental brackets (« »).

Neither of the 'substantive' texts of Othello can be said to be well printed. Each has a rather high proportion of plain typograpahical error, and there are some passages where a tolerable reading can be secured only by blending what appears to be authentic in either the Quarto or the Folio and ejecting the faults of both. In other places variants are found which are so nearly balanced in merit that it is hard to say which word Shakespeare really wrote. In such conditions it is unlikely that a perfectly scientific and satisfactory edition of Othello will ever be produced. However, when the faults of the Quarto are weighed against those of the Folio, it becomes quite certain that the margin of virtue is on the side of the former; and this means, since the early editors had a strong prejudice in favor of the Folio, that a considerable number of readings have had to be eliminated in the present edition which familiarity has endeared, but which reason can no longer justify.

The Quarto marks the act divisions, except Act III. The Folio divides the play correctly into both acts and scenes (with a slight deviation from modern practice at II.iii) and adds 'The Names of the Actors' on the last page. The stage directions are fuller in the Quarto, and these have generally been followed; a very few have been taken from the second Quarto of 1630. Necessary amplifications and other essential matter omitted in the original editions are supplied within square brackets.

In Shakespeare's usage it was optional to give full syllabic value to the ending -ed of past verbal forms or (as is generally done now) to contract this ending with the preceding syllable. In the present edition final -ed must always be pronounced as a separate syllable in order to preserve the original rhythm of the verse. Where rhythm requires the contracted form, the spelling 'd is used.

Shakespeare accented a number of words on syllables which do not now bear the accent, and sometimes his practice in this matter was inconsistent. Where an unusual accentuation is required, it is indicated by an acute mark over the stressed vowel, as in séquester.

Obsolete words and words employed in now unusual senses are explained in footnotes the first time they occur in the text. Repetitions are not usually noted and when they occur should be sought in the Index of Words Glossed at the end of the volume.

The critical and general notes in the present section are announced by the symbol, cf. n., at the bottom of the page of text to which each has relevance. A name at the end of a note (in parentheses) indicates the authority; but no special effort is made to give credit for material which is common property or which is, so far as known, new in the present edition.

I.i.4. 'Sblood. An oath, contracted from 'God's blood'; as 'Zounds, line 86 below, is a contraction from 'God's wounds,'—the reference in both cases being to Christ (as of one substance with God) on the cross. In 1606 King James I caused an Act to be passed forbidding blasphemy on the stage, and accordingly these oaths are omitted in the Folio edition of the play, while other similar expressions throughout are either omitted or softened; cf. Iago's mild ejaculation in IV.i.160.

I.i.8. Three great ones. Three quite mythical characters. Iago was never an open candidate for the office of lieutenant. Neither Othello, Cassio, nor Emilia knows of such a thing, and Iago does not mention it again. He invents this story in order to disarm Roderigo's suspicion that he has been preferring Othello's interests to Roderigo's. (It may be, in spite of line 7, that Iago's vague distaste for Othello first crystallizes into conscious hate at this moment, when he starts inventing specious reasons for it.)

I.i.13. bombast circumstance. Bombast was a cheap kind of cotton stuff used for padding Elizabethan garments; the obvious metaphorical use was very common.

I.i.20. Florentine. Iago sneers at Cassio's place of origin because the name connotes what 'Parisian' or 'Bostonian' might.

I.i.21. A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife. Properly punctuated by the Folio as a parenthetical remark. Cassio, says Iago, is a fellow of such effeminate quality that the like could hardly be endured in a fine lady. Here in means 'in the person of' and wife 'woman' in general. In this description of Cassio Iago is again lying (compare note on II.iii.122) in order to build up Roderigo's belief that Othello has misused him. The obscure feeling called inferiority complex drives him in the same direction. It is evident that Shakespeare had confidence in the ability of the actor of Iago, who thus begins his rôle with two statements that the audience must not be allowed to accept with the full faith Roderigo gives them. (The name of the first impersonator of Iago has not been recorded. In the following generation Joseph Taylor [c. 1586–1653], who also played Hamlet, was famous in the part.)

I.i.30. belee'd and calm'd. A nautical metaphor, meaning 'Have the wind (of Othello's favor) taken from my sails: be superseded by this interloper.'

I.i.31. Debitor-and-Creditor. A coined name of contempt for Cassio: 'Mr. Bookkeeper.' counter-caster. 'One who casts accounts, or reckons by counters'; cf. Iago's earlier term, arithmetician, line 19 above. These expressions are all intended to cast contempt on Cassio as a man of books and figures, not of warlike deeds. They are later shown to be contrary to fact, except in that Cassio did apparently possess technical qualifications which Iago lacked.

I.i.33. God bless the mark! Originally this was a pious formula to avert the consequences of an evil omen; then, by ironical inversion, it came to be a contemptuous interjection equivalent to 'forsooth' or a mild oath. ancient. This spelling represents the way in which the word 'ensign' was pronounced. Cassio and Iago were of higher rank than their titles indicate, for they were staff-officers, the commander-in-chief's immediate aides.

I.i.39. in any . . . affin'd. The image is from the old tables or terms of affinity which controlled legal marriage and were posted in churches. Do I stand, asks Iago, in any such close spiritual relationship with the Moor that it it my duty to love him?

I.i.70. Rouse him. Like the other pronouns in this line, him must refer to Othello, not Brabantio. No actor could read the line adequately otherwise.

I.i.89, 90. For shame . . . gown! Iago is simply enjoying this exhibition of the senator in negligé.

I.i.124, 125. your daughter . . . two backs. Borrowed from Rabelais (Bk. I, ch. 3).

I.i.127. a senator. Iago, who belongs to the left politically, and who is exploiting his advantage in being unknown, implies that in answering 'Villain!' with 'Senator!' one is offering a generous quid pro quo.

I.i.132. The tedious time about midnight; a 'toss-up,' indeterminate odd or even, as to whether it be the last moments of one day or the first of the next.

I.i.145. extravagant and wheeling. There is a reference here to Othello's being a 'soldier of fortune,' not a native of Venice. Venetian law required that the commander-in-chief of Venetian forces should be a politically disqualified alien, so that no political ambition might distract him from the strict performance of his military duties and jeopardize the security of the state.

I.i.161. Cyprus wars. The historical date at which the action of the play took place has usually been given as 1570, on the strength of Reed's assertion that in that year 'Mustapha, Selymus' general, attacked Cyprus,' after having effected a junction with another Turkish fleet at Rhodes. But in the play (1) the Turks did not 'attack' Cyprus, and (2) they were reported (I.iii.17–36) as intending to 'attack' Rhodes—which had been in their hands since 1522. The date of the action of the play must therefore be placed between 1471, the year in which the Venetians assumed virtual sovereignty of Cyprus, and 1522, the year in which the Turks became masters of Rhodes. The Turkish expedition described in the play must then have been either too abortive for record in history or entirely fictitious, for none such is known between those dates according to Malone and Reed (Furness, 357); but the 'hypothetical attack' cited in Sources of the Play (1) as 'meditated, according to report' in 1508 (Furness, 374) would satisfy all Shakespeare's requirements.

I.i.169. the Sagittary. 'The Sign of the Archer.' Most likely an inn in the neighborhood of the famous Venetian Arsenal.

I.i.174. unhappy. Hapless, ill-fated, unfortunate; cf. III.iv.113.

I.ii.5. him. Evidently Brabantio, as is made clear in Iago's next speech (line 13 ff.). He has been giving Othello a highly spiced account of Brabantio's comments on the wedding. (Iago never talks of his association with Roderigo.)

I.ii.14, 15. 'And has, in actual effect (though not by law), an influence as weighty as the Duke's own.' Iago was simply 'talking big' in order to alarm Othello by exaggerating Brabantio's importance.

I.ii.25. speak unbonneted. Speak on equal terms, without removing the hat as one did in the presence of a superior. 'Uncapped' could be used in the same way. In Coriolanus, II.ii.23, bonneted has the contrary sense, having hats off in token of humility.

I.ii.28. unhoused. Possibly merely 'unmarried'; but probably 'unhampered,' free as the open air; just the opposite of 'cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd,' Macbeth III.iv.27.

I.ii. S.d. Enter Cassio with lights, Officers and torches. Perhaps in two groups, each with lights. The emphasis on lighting effects in this scene may indicate that it was meant to be acted indoors at court. A type of drama popular at this period was commonly known as the 'nocturnal' (see W. J. Lawrence, 'Shakespeare from a New Angle,' Studies, Dublin, Sept., 1919).

I.ii.58. lawful prize. Iago uses metaphors from buccaneering. Desdemona is a land-carrack (cf. 'prairie schooner'), and Othello's problem is that of the Elizabethan privateer: Will the prize-court allow him to keep his booty?

I.ii.59–61. I do not understand. Contrast III.iii.78 ff., 106 ff. Presumably Cassio, who is punctilious, does not understand himself to be at liberty to avow what he knows.

I.ii.62. Marry. The word, originally an oath or ejaculation calling on the Virgin Mary, is here used by Iago to create a pun. For its use as a simple ejaculation, cf. II.iii.261, III.i.10.

I.ii.117, 118. If Othello is allowed to commit such an outrage with impunity, Venice may just as well give up the caste system.

I.iii.S.d. Enter . . . Attendants. A typical stage direction. The characters do not literally enter, but are revealed by drawing the curtain of the rear stage.

I.iii.12–15. I do not feel so reassured by the mere discrepancy in detail as not to credit, with dreadful apprehensions, the underlying main point.

I.iii.51. Write from us, etc. Command him in our name to use the greatest haste (the Quarto reading).

I.iii.69. mountebanks. Brabantio's charge, which he has been gradually elaborating (cf. I.i.183 ff., I.ii.86 ff.), now expresses itself in the language Laertes had used in Hamlet IV.iii.155.

I.iii.75–77. the bloody book of law . . . sense. Capital punishment shall be imposed according to your own interpretation of the bitter letter of the law.

I.iii.88 ff. For discussion of Shakespeare's use of the oration as a branch of rhetoric see M. B. Kennedy, The Oration in Shakespeare (1942).

I.iii.107. motion. Desdemona was so still and pure by nature that she couldn't move without blushing.

I.iii.154. portance . . . history. These adventures of Othello are closely paralleled by those related in Captain John Smith's True Travels, Adventures and Observations (1630). When the play was written Smith had not yet gone to Virginia, but he had suffered all the vicissitudes Othello here mentions.

I.iii.159. Anthropophagi, etc. For Shakespeare's information about these creatures see J. Milton French, 'Othello among the Anthropophagi,' PMLA, Sept., 1934.

I.iii.181. Upon this heat. The Quarto reading. The Folio substitute, 'Upon this hint,' has required so much defence that readers have grown fond of it, but it is probably a scribal or typographical slip occasioned by recollection of line 157, 'It was my hint to speak.' It is unlikely that Shakespeare would employ so banal a phrase twice in twenty-five lines, particularly in a passage of such high finish.

I.iii.220–237. These staccato riming couplets are introduced, as prose is later, for contrast and orchestral effect. After a great movement in blank verse, which is the idiom of youth, romance, and passion, Shakespeare brings in the balanced rime, which is the idiom of age, caution, and experience. The same means are employed in Romeo and Juliet as the balcony scene (II.ii) is linked to the scene (II.iii) at Friar Lawrence's cell.

I.iii.223. more mischief. Quarto reading. The Folio has 'new mischief.' There are many cases like this in Othello, where the merits of the two texts are so closely balanced that an editor must be content to impute to Shakespeare what his own taste selects as slightly the more euphonious or more meaningful.

I.iii.224, 225. Part of the art of the gnomic couplet lay in confusion of the prose order of words. The sense here is: When Fortune takes what cannot be preserved, Patience makes a mockery of Fortune's injury.

I.iii.234, 235. to sugar . . . sides. Having converse and opposed powers, capable of either sweetening or embittering.

I.iii.238. In the Folio this line is recast in the form of prose. Shakespeare may so have written or rewritten it to serve as a transition to the Duke's speech which follows.

I.iii.276. A moth of peace. A concentrated metaphor. It suggests the futile fluttering of a moth, its confined sphere indoors, and its triviality; while there is also a kind of pun on Desdemona 'fretting' like a moth in the midst of peace.

I.iii.284. distinct. Both the early texts here read 'defunct,' and the obscurity resulting has led to some of the most repellent emendations in the Shakespeare canon. In Elizabethan script 'distinct' and 'defunct' are very similar. Shakespeare is notably fond of the word distinct in the present sense of 'separate,' 'individual.' The sense of the passage has been further obscured for modern readers by two Elizabethanisms in the previous line: the omission of the relative after heat, and the 'Northern' verbal plural in affects, both quite characteristic of Shakespeare.

I.iii.289. seel. Folio reading; Quarto 'foyles.' Literally, a hawking term, meaning to sew the lids of a falcon's eyes together in order to restrict the sight while the bird was being trained; thence used metaphorically in a variety of senses, such as to blind, cover, conceal, restrain.

I.iii.290. speculative and offic'd. The inferior reading of the Quarto, 'speculative and active,' is interesting. It suggests that someone (probably not Shakespeare) was thinking of the old mediaeval coupling of contemplative and active.

I.iii.301. ten. No one is likely ever to know whether Shakespeare set the hour for ten, as the Quarto says, or 'nine' as the Folio has it. Perhaps he used a Roman numeral, 'x' or 'ix.'

I.iii.317, 318. It is again optional to prefer the Quarto version:

Look to her, Moor! Have a quick eye to see.
She has deceiv'd her father, may do thee.

I.iii.403–406. it is . .. surety. The author's purpose is not to discredit Emilia or Othello, who are clearly innocent, but to show that Iago (unlike Othello) has a morbidly jealous nature and is morbidly seeking to rationalize the obscure hostility he feels.

I.iii.410. double knavery. Referring to the two purposes mentioned in the preceding line: to get Cassio's place and plume up (pamper) Iago's injured ego. Iago, whose reputation for 'honesty' revolts him as a reflection on his intellect, finds a real solace in picturing himself as a clever knave.

II.i.S.d. The place, not definitely mentioned, is evidently Famagosta, which the Turks captured after a famous siege that lasted from 1569 till 1571. The time is a Saturday afternoon (cf. III.iii.68f.) something over a week (cf. II.i.86) after the close of Act I.

II.i.3. 'twixt the haven and the main. Between the harbor and the point where the sea fades into the horizon. Folio reading: ' 'twixt the Heauen, and the Maine.'

II.i.28. La Veronesa. The early texts have 'A Veronessa' ('A Verennessa'), probably a copyist's or printer's misreading.

II.i.54–56. Therefore, while not foolishly over-confident, I am emboldened to hope for the best. A condensed figure almost incapable of precise literal paraphrase.

II.i.56. Messenger. The Folio dispenses with the Messenger, making this speech an off-stage cry and assigning his subsequent speech to one of the gentlemen already on the stage. Throughout this scene, the Quarto and Folio texts are frequently at variance in the stage directions and assignment of speechs to the various characters, reflecting the difficulties of the early producers in coping with the complicated action and crowded stage. The present text generally follows the Quarto, which here, as elsewhere, give more thoughtful attention to these details.

II.i.71. ingen-giver. What Shakespeare here wrote has bothered all editors, and evidently bothered the earliest printers. The Folio, attempting to follow copy, produces a nonsense word: 'Do's tyre the Ingeniuer.' The Quarto evades the issue by inventing a flat paraphrase: 'Does beare all excellency.' The suggested emendations of earlier editors have read little sense into the passage. The present reading, assuming that the Folio compositor, faced with utterly illegible copy, dropped a 'g' from the word, renders the sentence plausible. Ingen (ingine, engine; Latin ingenium) meant native talent, mother wit, the mental and moral qualities which come from nature rather than art, and in Platonic conception belong to the inner rather than the outer beauty. The word in this sense was common in Elizabethan and Jacobean literature, and was even used for the names of characters who, like Ingen in Nathan Field's Amends for Ladies (c. 1612), represented

'The fountain of humanity, the prize
Of every virtue, moral and divine:'

In the present passage (as in Field's) the ingen-giver is Nature, who by Cassio's image tires herself by the multitude of her benefactions to Desdemona. Lines 70, 72 laud her beauty of soul, as lines 68, 69 do her outward beauty. Cassio was a Florentine, and thereby something of a Platonist.

II.i.107. So . . . news. Alternative readings of Quarto and Folio respectively. Each satisfactorily completes the metrical line.

II.i.126. housewifery, housewives. Pronounced 'huzzifry,' 'huzzivs.' The modern 'hussy' (merely a phonetic transcription of 'housewife') shows the slur intended.

II.i.169. Probably some cant saying or 'double entendre' gave point to this line in Shakespeare's day.

II.i.187, 188. I . . . courtship. The Quarto has 'I will catch you in your own courtesies,' and above (180 f.) '. . . whisper: as little a web as this will ensnare as great a Flee as Cassio.'

II.i.221. set down the pegs, etc. Iago develops the musical image suggested by Othello in discords (line 213).

II.i.260. A subtle, slippery knave. Folio: 'A slipper and subtle knave.' In these prose speeches the two texts exhibit a number of slight variations. The Folio may contain actors' additions. (Note the words in angle brackets.)

II.i.290. taste. The first Quarto reading, 'trust,' may be right.

II.i.295. if you can. Most editors here read with the Quarto 'if I can'; but the Folio is correct. It is Iago who makes the opportunities.

II.i.316, 317. whom . . . hunting. 'Whom I flog to make him hunt faster.' The reference is to beating an ill-trained dog to make him more diligent. Instead of thrash, the first Quarto reads 'crush,' the second and the Folio 'trace'; but these yield no tolerable sense, and it seems evident that Roderigo is called 'trash of Venice' only for the sake of a pun.

II.i.317. stand the putting on. That is, if Roderigo doesn't break down under the rigor of my discipline. One sense of 'put on' was to lay a hound on the scent (O.E.D., Put 46. 1).

II.ii.5. addiction. So the second Quarto (1630). This may be Shakespeare's word, but if so was a very early use of it and was not understood by the printer of either the first Quarto (who substitutes 'mind') or the Folio (who spells it 'addition').

II.ii.9. tolled. Both Quartos and the Folio read 'told.' See H. Kökeritz, 'Two Sets of Shakespearean Homophones,' R.E.S., Oct., 1943.

II.iii. No new scene was necessary here on the Elizabethan stage, and none is indicated in the Folios or Quartos. Theobald first assigned a new location for the action after the Herald's departure, and Capell first added the caption 'Scene iii.'

II.iii.27. Well, etc. Iago gives up the effort to lure Cassio into indiscreet comment on the general's wife.

II.iii.53. hold their honors in a wary distance. Are skittish about them; allow none to approach too close.

II.iii.59. If consequence do but approve my dream. If the outcome only justifies my hope.

II.iii.65. This song like the next (line 81) need not be credited to Iago's invention. The first was quite possibly an Elizabethan tavern catch, and the second is a mélange of old ballads.

II.iii.122. He'll watch the horologe a double set. He'll see the hour-hand of the clock make two complete revolutions; i.e., stay awake for twenty-four hours at a stretch. Iago is expert at adjusting his prevarications to what the traffic will bear. To the civilian Roderigo, in I.i., he can safely picture Cassio as a military nincompoop; to the commander Montano, who doubtless knows Cassio's professional reputation but not his personal habits, he can safely deplore the fact that Cassio is a dipsomaniac, while belauding his military competence.

II.iii.142. twiggen (Quarto 'wicker') bottle. Either 'slash him till he resembles a Chianti bottle covered with straw net-work' (Booth), or 'beat him till he runs to hide himself in one of the wicker flasks we've just been using' (Hart). Cf. also Much Ado About Nothing I.i.216, 217: 'Hang me in a bottle like a cat And shoot at me,' and the note thereon.

II.iii.155. Diablo. Oath or exclamation of excitement: 'the Devil!' A typical Jacobean affectation of elegance was this garnishing of the speech with scraps of Spanish.

II.iii.162. all sense of place and duty. Since Quarto and Folio agree in the misarrangement, 'all place of sense and duty,' it looks as if both were based on a common source.

II.iii.166. Which heaven has forbid the Ottomites. That is, heaven has, through the storm, forbidden the Turks to kill us.

II.iii.212. on . . . safety. Guard-post established to secure the general safety. Hendiadys for 'court of guard' (cf. II.i.234).

II.iii.299. Hydra. A monster with nine heads. Whenever one was cut off, several new ones replaced it. The destruction of the Lernæan Hydra was the second of the Twelve Labors of Hercules.

II.iii.341 f. this parallel course Directly to his good. This course which runs straight in line with his advantage.

III.i. S.d. Clown. The Clown here must have been a licensed jester, like Touchstone, in Othello's train: cf. III.iv.1–18. (This stage direction comes from the second Quarto.)

III. i. 3, 4. The Neapolitans spoke Italian with a marked nasal twang.

III.i.43. Iago was a Venetian, Cassio a Florentine. The latter merely means to say, 'I never experienced more honesty and kindness even in one of my own countrymen than in this man' (Malone).

III.i.52. Opportunity, in the fable, had no hair on the back of the head and hence must be grasped by the forelock.

III.ii.2. state. The Folio has 'Senate.'

III.iii.16–18. 'He may either of himself think it politic to keep me out of office so long, or he may be satisfied with such slight reasons, or so many accidents may' arise to postpone from time to time his intended re-instatement of me, 'that I may be quite forgotten' (Johnson).

III.iii.25. watch him tame. A metaphor drawn from falconry. Hawks were tamed, i.d., their fierce spirit of resistance was broken, by deprivation of sleep.

III.iii.68. to-morrow . . . morn. This tell us that the day is Sunday and that the arrival in Cyprus occurred on Saturday. The last four acts of this tragedy cover about thirty-six hours.

III.iii.103. Chaos is come again. The most emphatic of assurances. I love you, and will till the world returns to chaos. Thus ends in utter failure the plan Iago outlined in the closing lines of Act II for arousing Othello's jealousy.

III.iii.106. Did Michael Cassio . . . Know of your love? Thus Iago starts again, building, as his manner is, on the new fact he has just picked up.

III.iii.147. seem none. 'No longer seem, or bear the shape of men' (Johnson).

III.iii.171. conjects. A very good word, replaced in the Folio by the commoner 'conceits.' This whole speech is here printed as in the Quarto, which seems to give the earlier version. Note that in lines 104–176 Iago is implying nothing about Desdemona, but is playing on Othello's urgent official need to learn the truth about Cassio's trustworthiness, which had been so strangely impugned by the events of the night before (cf. II. iii.242 ff.).

III.iii.179. our souls. The Quarto reading, which seems more authentic than the Folio 'their souls.' In this speech Iago begins slyly to turn his insinuations toward Desdemona, but the speech is merely his ingenious parody of Cassio on reputation (II.iii.262 ff.).

III.iii.195. O misery! An objective, not subjective, exclamation. It means 'How intolerable!', and is the comment of a sensitive outsider upon the horrid picture Iago is painting. In line 201 Othello bursts into astonished outcry on perceiving that he is himself being linked with jealousy.

III.iii.207. exsufflicate. A coined word, not instanced elsewhere, but a good one. 'Exsufflate' would be normal.

III.iii.293–296. An elaborate metaphor drawn from falconry. A haggard was a wild hawk caught when mature and often found to be irreclaimable, unamenable to discipline. A word with such a meaning readily lent itself to use as a term of reproach for a loose woman. Jesses were leather leg-straps by which the hawk was fastened to the leash. 'The falconers always let the hawk fly [whistle her off = start her] against the wind; if she flies with the wind behind her, she seldom returns. If therefore a hawk was for any reason to be dismissed, she was "let down the wind," and from that time shifted for herself and "preyed at fortune" ' (Johnson).

III.iii.322. your head. The Folio substitutes 'it hard,' perhaps because 'yr' (your) in the manuscript was read as 'yt' (it).

III.iii.330. a hundred times. One of the numerous hints at the lapse of a considerable amount of time which are dropped in this part of the play to counteract the impression of melodramatic and improbable haste. See note on III.iv.188.

III.iii.344. handkerchief. Spelled 'handkercher' always in Quarto, and that was probably Shakespeare's form.

III.iii.400. wide throats. Folio: 'rude throats.' In this most famous scene the old prestige of the Folio text sometimes adds the charm of familiarity to the less defensible reading. It is necessary to distinguish between what Shakespeare probably wrote and what Kean and Booth declaimed. Wide throats and in the next line great clamor (Folio 'dread Clamours') better suit the context and Othello's dignity. The Folio variants suggest that even by 1623 the language of the great speeches had suffered here and there from stagy heightening. (But 'rude' may be an honest misreading of the same manuscript word as wide.)

III.iii.434. Her name. This reading, Her, is based on the second Quarto, correcting 'My' in the Folio. The passage is not in the first Quarto.

III.iii.479. The Folio assigns this line to Othello.

III.iii.493. any that. Malone's emendation for 'any, it' in the early texts. In Elizabethan handwriting yt was commonly used for both 'that' and 'it.'

III.iii.507–515. Steevens cites Holland's translation of Pliny's Natural History, 1601, as the probable source of Shakespeare's assertion about the current of the Pontic or Black Sea (the ancient Pontus Euxinus). The first Quarto omits the passage.

III.iv.48, 49. The commentators have brought to light sufficient early plays on the words 'hearts' and 'hands' (to which might be added Herrick's Panegerick to Sir Lewis Pemberton, lines 37–45) to show that this was a favorite quibble. The meaning is: The joining of hands in marriage formerly meant the giving of hearts also, but nowadays we have a formal outward union of hands without any accompanying inward union of hearts.

III.iv.53. sorry rheum. The Quarto has 'sullen rheum,' which may be right.

III.iv.84. Most veritable. Said ironically, no doubt. Othello is inventing marvels about the handkerchief to try his wife's conscience. Compare V.ii.253 ff.

III.iv.113. I am most unhappy in the loss of it. The admirable Emilia has been unfairly blamed for not confessing the theft of the handkerchief. The next lines explain. Emilia loves and fears and (like everybody else) fundamentally trusts Iago. She has the generous trait of imputing her husband's trying qualities to the general imperfection of men, and has not been depressed to see the great Othello behave in as childish a manner (lines 33–117). She thinks him irritated over the temporary loss of a keepsake, and there is nothing in the situation as she understands it which would oblige her at this point to violate Iago's confidence, disobey his command (III.iii.361), and arouse his anger. Jealousy in her view is a totally irrational passion (lines 173–176) and not worth too much bother.

III.iv.188. keep a week away. This passage, Lodovico's arrival with the message from the Senators presupposing their receipt of a report from Othello about the 'Turks' discomfiture (IV.i.230 ff.), Roderigo's 'Every day thou daffest me' (IV.ii.200), and various other points in the play would seem to imply that many days must have elapsed since Othello's arrival in Cyprus; yet an unbroken sequence of time-indications can be cited to show that he landed Saturday afternoon and killed Desdemona Sunday night. In this dilemma (which arises, of course, only in close study of the play, never in witnessing a performance) John Wilson ('Christopher North') in 1850 proposed the theory that Shakespeare consciously or unconsciously employed 'Double Time,' i.e., Dramatic or Short Time and Historic or Long Time: 'Short for maintaining the tension of the passion, Long for a thousand general needs; . . . one for our sympathy with Othello's tempest of heart, one for the verisimilitude of the transaction.' Every playwright does something of the sort, but the method in Othello is particularly bold.

IV.i.20. They have it very oft that have it not. People often have honor (receive outward respect) who have no honor (possess no inward virtue.)

IV.i.22. I would most gladly have forgot it. The purpose of Iago's gross talk now appears. In the brief interval since Othello left the stage (III.iv.109), his normal balance has begun to reassert itself and the slanders have taken on unreality. Iago finds himself in a position of direst peril, and for the moment escapes by so nauseating his victim as to deprive him of the use of his reason.

IV.i.43–51. These are the disjointed ejaculations of an agonized mind on the verge of collapse. There are few phrases in it where the reference is not fairly clear.

IV.i.101, 102. all . . . man. Altogether given over to mere passionate impulse, and not a real man.

IV.i.126. This line and all Othello's speeches down to line 181 are supposed to be spoken in his hiding-place, where he is both visible and audible to the audience, but neither visible nor audible to Cassio and Iago.

IV.i.187–189. The omission of this speech in the first Quarto was clearly accidental. That the printer had Iago's speech in his copy is shown by the fact that Othello's preceding speech, which comes at the bottom of a page, is followed by the catchword 'Iag.' Iago's speech is then dropped out, the next page beginning with Othello's subsequent speech. The second Quarto also omits Iago's speech, running Othello's two speeches into one.

IV.i.208. the pity of it, Iago, etc. The longer version of this speech in the Folio may be an actor's amplification.

IV.i.218. Strangle her. If poison were used, Iago would be an accomplice, and there might be no way to convict Othello of the crime. Moreover, Iago nowhere shows any malice against Desdemona. He may think Othello incapable of strangling her and may mean to give her a chance of life.

IV.i.240. This fail you not to do, etc. The regular formula for closing formal orders: 'This fail you not to do, as you will enjoy our favor,' or ' . . . as you will answer to us for any disobedience.'

IV.ii.58. they. The Quartos read 'he.' Perhaps Shakespeare wrote 'God' for heaven in line 57 and withdrew it as over-bold.

IV.ii.64, 65. This noble image seems to be printed correctly in the first Quarto. The Folio somewhat garbles it:

'The fixed Figure for the time of Scorne,
To point his slow, and mouing finger at,'

and the commentators have garbled it still more. Othello pictures himself as one of the figures on the dial of Scorn's clock, pointed at by Scorn's two hands or 'fingers,'—fingers which move so slowly as not to seem to move at all, and yet move through all eternity.

IV.ii.67–70. Dr. Johnson very strangely objected to this masterly pair of metaphors, the grain-garner and the fountain, elemental food and drink, the two sustaining principles represented by Desdemona, without which Othello cannot live.

IV.ii.72, 73. Turn . . . cherubin. Look on that sight and blush! Young and rose-lipped Patience at such a spectacle will become a fire-red cherub.

IV.ii.73. cherubin. A plural form used with a singular signification, by a common mistake. That the cherub was traditionally painted with a scarlet countenance is vouched for by Chaucer's phrase, 'a fyr-reed cherubinnes face' (Prologue, 624).

IV.ii.74. I here look grim as hell. A bleak and tortured line, not to be improved by emendation. Here I stand, says Othello, so unlike the cherubim, so black and desperate.

IV.ii.77. quicken . . . blowing. The reference is to the blow-fly, which lays its eggs on meat—cf. shambles—and 'again becomes pregnant [quicken] the very instant it has laid a batch of eggs [blowing]' (Deighton).

IV.ii.78, 79. O thou black weed . . . sweet. Quarto reading. The Folio, perhaps in an (imperfect) effort to divide the lines evenly, reads:

'O thou weed:
Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet.'

It remains beautiful, but something precious has been lost.

IV.ii.91, 92. What . . . strumpet. These four words, of which the last two are not in the Folio, look like an insertion. If they are omitted, the words before and after form a perfect line.

IV.ii.156. Fie! there is no such man. Not a shallow lie, probably, but Iago's confession to himself that mere self-interest would not account for what he is doing.

IV.ii.205. Compare I.i.4. The situation here is very much as at the opening of the play.

IV.ii.244. Mauritania. It is on such expressions as this and Iago's 'Barbary' (I.i.111) that those rely who wish to prove that Shakespeare thought of Othello as a bronze-colored Moor, while those who maintain that he conceived of him as a jet-black full-blooded negro cite I.i.67, I.ii.84, III.iii.435, 436, etc. Ignorantly or by intention, Shakespeare has combined distinct ethnic traits to produce the blend of romance and realism that the tragedy called for. (There is no reason to believe that Othello is, as Iago says, returning to Mauritania.)

IV.iii.1. After supper they have been showing Lodovico the living quarters in the Citadel. He is now about to leave.

IV.iii.31. An old thing 'twas. As this indicates, the famous 'willow song' which follows was not original with Shakespeare. It was perhaps first written (for a man) by John Heywood, 'the Epigrammatist,' in the reign of Henry VIII. A version exists with Elizabethan music.

IV.iii.112. Not to be corrupted by bad example, but take it as a warning.

V.i.15. Every way makes my gain. Wishful thinking. Nothing would now save Iago but for Cassio and Roderigo each neatly to eliminate the other, and nobody ask intelligent questions afterwards.

V.i.20. a daily beauty in his life. This shows the collapse of Iago's philosophy. The only daily beauty in Cassio's life is the beauty of loyal devotion to his commander, over which Iago had made so merry in I.i.46 ff.

V.i. S.d. Enter Othello. He has seen Lodovico to his lodging and is returning.

V.i.90. I have been to seek you. This presumably accounts for Gratiano's absence at the opening of IV.iii.

V.i.95. To bear a part in this. So the Quarto. The Folio reads 'To be a party in this injury,' which scans, but is certainly weak.

V.i.139. Emilia, run you to the citadel. Iago's purpose here is debatable. Did he wish Emilia to intervene in time to save Desdemona's life? Did he wish her message to shame Othello into a murder he might not otherwise commit?

V.i.141. Will . . . afore? Addressed to the 'kind gentlemen' of line 137. The purpose is to leave Iago for a moment alone on the stage. (The Quarto printer did not understand afore and substituted 'I pray.')

V.ii.S.d. Enter . . . bed. Phrased as in second Quarto (less full in first Quarto and Folio). On the Elizabethan stage Othello would enter and, drawing the curtain before the rear stage, under the balcony, reveal Desdemona in bed asleep.

V.ii.1. It is the cause. Probably explained by line 6 below. Desdemona must be destroyed, not from personal vengeance, but because she represents a pernicious principle which, if suffered, will corrupt all mankind.

V.ii.5. alablaster. Alabaster, a beautiful white stone used for the finest funeral monuments.

V.ii.12. Promethean heat. Prometheus, in classical mythology, stole from heaven the sacred element of fire, originally unobtainable on the earth. Othello means here that the spark of life, once extinguished, cannot be rekindled without some superhuman agency.

V.ii.16. doth. The Folio has 'dost,' less felicitously. Othello is commenting on the breath; he is not addressing or personifying it as the Cavalier poets did.

V.ii.20. fatal. Referring to Desdemona's deadliness. Cf. line 6.

V.ii.65. conception. The Quarto has 'conceit,' which blurs the terrible figure that Othello uses. His strong purpose is like an unwanted infant ineluctably approaching birth.

V.ii.83. That he hath— Othello is unable to go on, but the Folio editor was, replacing the oath uds death by 'vs'd thee.'

V.ii.99. Being . . . pause. While it is being done, there must be no pause. This is not in the Quarto and would not be missed. Perhaps an editor was working Othello's broken prose into the rhythmical pattern.

V.ii.115. The noise was high. Probably referring to the outcry resulting from the attack on Cassio. Othello is accounting to himself for Emilia's disturbing presence outside.

V.ii.123. yawn at alteration. Crack open at this monstrous change. Earthquakes were believed to accompany or follow eclipses. These lines, 121–123, recall Othello's earlier saying, III.iii.102, 103.

V.ii.205. Gra. The Quarto gives this speech to 'All,' which was probably Shakespeare's careless indication. The Folio editor, not caring for a chorus, decided who was to speak it. He properly left 'All' in line 220.

V.ii.227. I thought so then. That is, at IV.ii.152 ff. (but without suspicion then of Iago's guilt).

V.ii.232. Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home. A line of great poignancy, for Emilia and Iago are fond of each other.

V.ii.254. This statement is inconsistent with III.iv.61, 62, though perhaps reconcilable by casuistry. See note on III.iv.84.

V.ii.258. No, I will speak as liberal as the north. So the Folio. The Quarto has 'I'll be in speaking liberal as the air,' which is also good. Shakespearean revision is possible.

V.ii.276. wife. The Quarto has 'woman.' no stones in heaven, etc. Are there no extra thunderbolts to destroy creatures like Iago?

V.ii.338. I bleed, sir. Coldbloodedly ironic. You have drawn blood from me, as you couldn't from a real devil. This accounts for demi-devil in line 352.

V.ii.354. Demand me nothing. Iago, when caught, has been willing to confess facts (lines 296, 321); but when questioned about motives, he takes refuge in sullen silence, for he has no answer that makes any possible sense to him.

V.ii.370. nick. So the first Quarto. The Folio editor found the word inelegant and substituted 'interim,' in which perversion he has been followed by all later editions.

V.ii.398. Speak of them as they are. This, the first Quarto reading, is more in character than the Folio's 'Speak of me as I am.'

V.ii.403. Like the base Indian. There is no significance in the first Folio spelling, 'Iudean.' Shakespeare is thinking of the savage who throws away a king's ransom because he cannot realize its value. In his mind, probably, were the lines near the beginning of Marlowe's Jew of Malta:

> 'Give me the merchants of the Indian mines . . .
> The wealthy Moor that in the eastern rocks
> Without control can pick his riches up,
> And in his house heap pearl like pebble-stones.'

V.ii.407. med'cinable. Shakespeare seems to prefer this word, with the accent indicated, to 'medicinal,' which is the Quarto reading.

V.ii.408. Aleppo. Aleppo was an important center of English oriental trade. Shakespeare was evidently interested in it; cf. Macbeth I.iii.8. A consulate was established there in 1586, 'which became a convenient hospice and sometimes a place of refuge for English travellers.' Shakespeare may have read William Parry's A New and Large Discourse of the Travels of Sir A. Sherley, etc., 1601. Of one of Parry's fellow travellers, George Manwaring, it is recorded that at Aleppo 'a Turk took him by the ear and marched him up and down the street while the bystanders threw stones at him and spat upon him' (S. C. Chew, The Crescent and the Rose, pp. 157, 245–246). For more detail see The Three Brothers, or the Travels and Adventures of Sir Anthony, Sir Robert, & Sir Thomas Sherley, 1825, p. 35.

V.ii.423. Let it be hid. The rear-stage curtain is drawn so that the corpses may rise and walk away. The main stage was not curtained.

The Tragedy of King Lear

Edited by TUCKER BROOKE
and
WILLIAM LYON PHELPS

Dramatis Personae

LEAR, KING OF BRITAIN
KING OF FRANCE
DUKE OF BURGUNDY
DUKE OF ALBANY
DUKE OF CORNWALL
EARL OF KENT
EARL OF GLOUCESTER
EDGAR, Son to Gloucester
EDMUND, Bastard Son to Gloucester
LEAR'S FOOL
CURAN, Servant to Gloucester
OSWALD, Steward to Goneril
OLD MAN, Tenant to Gloucester
DOCTOR
A CAPTAIN, in Edmund's service
A GENTLEMAN, Attendant on Cordelia
A HERALD
SERVANTS TO CORNWALL
GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA } Daughters to Lear

KNIGHTS OF LEAR'S TRAIN, OFFICERS, MESSENGERS, SOLDIERS, AND ATTENDANTS

SCENE—Prehistoric Britain.

The Tragedy of King Lear

Introduction

Sources of the Play

There are two tragic stories in this play: the sorrows of Lear and the subordinate tragedy of Gloucester. The former is one of the oldest and most familiar tales in English literature, given in its general outlines by many of the old chroniclers and romancers.[1] Raphael Holinshed, in his Chronicles (Chapters V. and VI. of the Second Book of the History of England, 2nd ed., 1587), has nearly all the main facts. He gives the names of the King, the three daughters, and their husbands; the answers of the three, saying how much they loved Lear, with Cordelia's consequent disgrace; the cruelty of the two dukes and duchesses to the King. But in his version, France defeats the two antagonists, restores Lear to the throne, and after his death, Cordelia becomes Queen. There was also an old play, entered in the Stationers' Register, 14 May 1594, The most famous Chronicle historye of Leire kinge of England and his Three Daughters. On 8 May 1605, this quite un-Shakespearean and untragical piece was again entered on the Register as The Tragecall historie of Kinge Leir and his Three Daughters, as it was latelie acted, and printed in the same year. A number of minor similarities with Shakespeare's tragedy have been pointed out.[2]

The Gloucester story was taken from Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia, 1590. In the second book, chapter 10, there is a narrative called The pitifull state, and story of the Paphlagonian unkind king, and his kind son, first related by the son, then by the blind father. This tale gives the essentials of the Gloucester-Edgar-Edmund plot, except as Shakespeare has interwoven them with the history of Lear and his three daughters.

The account of King Lear in Holinshed is brief enough to be quoted here in full, with no changes but in spelling:

'Leir the son of Baldud was admitted ruler over the Britons, in the year of the world 3105, at what time Joas reigned in Judah. This Leir was a prince of right noble demeanor, governing his land and subjects in great wealth. He made the town of Caerlier now called Leicester, which standeth upon the river of Sore. It is written that he had by his wife three daughters without other issue, whose names were Gonorilla, Regan, and Cordeilla, which daughters he greatly loved, but specially Cordeilla the youngest far above the two elder. When this Leir therefore was come to great years, & began to wax unwieldy through age, he thought to understand the affections of his daughters towards him, and prefer her whom he best loved to the succession over the kingdom.

'Whereupon he first asked Gonorilla the eldest, how well she loved him: who calling her gods to record, protested that she loved him more than her own life, which by right and reason should be most dear unto her. With which answer the father being well pleased, turned to the second, and demanded of her how well she loved him: who answered (confirming her sayings with great oaths) that she loved him more than tongue could express, and far above all other creatures of the world.

'Then called he his youngest daughter Cordeilla before him, and asked of her what account she made of him, unto whom she made this answer as followeth: Knowing the great love and fatherly zeal that you have always borne towards me, (for the which I may not answer you otherwise than I think, and as my conscience leadeth me) I protest unto you, that I have loved you ever, and will continually (while I live) love you as my natural father. And if you would more understand of the love that I bear you, ascertain [assure] your self, that so much as you have, so much you are worth, and so much I love you, and no more. The father being nothing content with this answer, married his two eldest daughters, the one unto Henninus, the duke of Cornwall, and the other unto Maglanus, the duke of Albania, betwixt whom he willed and ordained that his land should be divided after his death, and the one half thereof immediately should be assigned to them in hand: but for the third daughter Cordeilla he reserved nothing.

'Nevertheless it fortuned that one of the princes of Gallia (which now is called France) whose name was Aganippus, hearing of the beauty, womanhood, and good conditions of the said Cordeilla, desired to have her in marriage, and sent over to her father, requiring that he might have her to wife: to whom answer was made, that he might have his daughter, but as for any dower he could have none, for all was promised and assured to her other sisters already. Aganippus notwithstanding this answer of denial to receive any thing by way of dower with Cordeilla, took her to wife, only moved thereto (I say) for respect of her person and amiable virtues. This Aganippus was one of the twelve kings that ruled Gallia in those days, as in the British history it is recorded. But to proceed.

'After that Leir was fallen into age, the two dukes that had married his two eldest daughters, thinking it long yer [ere] the government of the land did come to their hands, arose against him in armor, and reft from him the governance of the land, upon conditions to be continued for term of life: by the which he was put to his portion, that is, to live after a rate assigned to him for the maintenance of his estate, which in process of time was diminished as well by Maglanus as by Henninus. But the greatest grief that Leir took, was to see the unkindness of his daughters, which seemed to think that all was too much which their father had, the same being never so little: in so much, that going from the one to the other, he was brought to that misery, that scarcely they would allow him one servant to wait upon him.

'In the end, such was the unkindness, or (as I may say) the unnaturalness which he found in his two daughters, notwith-

1 See Wilfrid Perrett, The story of King Lear from Geoffrey of Monmouth to Shakespeare, 1904. Shakespeare may be presumed to have known, besides Holinshed and the old play mentioned below, the version of John Higgins in The Mirror for Magistrates (1574). He appears to have taken the spelling of Cordelia's name and the manner of her death from Spenser's more succinct account (Faery Queen, 1509, Bk. ii. canto 10, st. 25–32). For a possible minor source see D. F. Atkinson, 'King Lear—Another Contemporary Account,' E L H, 1936, pp. 63–66.

2 W. W. Greg, 'The Date of King Lear and Shakespeare's Use of Earlier Versions of the Story,' The Library, 1940, pp. 377–400.

standing their fair and pleasant words uttered in time past, that being constrained of necessity, he fled the land, and sailed into Gallia, there to seek some comfort of his youngest daughter Cordeilla whom before time he hated. The lady Cordeilla hearing that he was arrived in poor estate, she first sent to him privily a certain sum of money to apparel himself withal, and to retain a certain number of servants that might attend him in honorable wise, as appertained to the estate which he had borne: and then so accompanied, she appointed him to come to the court, which he did, and was so joyfully, honorably, and lovingly received, both by his son in law Aganippus, and also by his daughter Cordeilla, that his heart was greatly comforted: for he was no less honored, than if he had been king of the whole country himself.

'Now when he had informed his son in law and his daughter in what sort he had been used by his other daughters, Aganippus caused a mighty army to be put in a readiness, and likewise a great navy of ships to be rigged, to pass over into Britain with Leir his father in law, to see him again restored to his kingdom. It was accorded, that Cordeilla should also go with him to take possession of the land, the which he promised to leave unto her, as the rightful inheritor after his decease, notwithstanding any former grant made to her sisters or to their husbands in any manner of wise.

'Hereupon, when this army and navy of ships were ready, Leir and his daughter Cordeilla with her husband took the sea, and arriving in Britain, fought with their enemies, and discomfited them in battle, in the which Maglanus and Henninus were slain: and then was Leir restored to his kingdom, which he ruled after this by the space of two years, and then died, forty years after he first began to reign. His body was buried at Leicester in a vault under the channel of the river of Sore beneath the town.

'Cordeilla the youngest daughter of Leir was admitted Q[ueen] and supreme governess of Britain, in the year of the world 3155, before the building of Rome 54, Uziah then reigning in Judah, and Jeroboam over Israel. This Cordeilla after her father's decease ruled the land of Britain right worthily during the space of five years, in which mean time her husband died, and then about the end of those five years, her two nephews Margan and Cunedag, sons to her aforesaid sisters, disdaining to be under the government of a woman, levied war against her, and destroyed a great part of the land, and finally took her prisoner, and laid her fast in ward, wherewith she took such grief, being a woman of a manly courage, and despairing to recover liberty, there she slew herself, when she had reigned (as before is mentioned) the term of five years.'

In the old play, Cornwall is the husband of Goneril, and appears in a somewhat better light than Regan's consort, the king of Cambria (Wales). But Shakespeare, as is hinted by the very first line of King Lear, deliberately made Goneril's husband a great and noble character, one of the finest gentlemen to be found among all his dramatis personæ; while Regan's husband has no redeeming features except energy and resolution. The Fool—one of the most remarkable among all Shakespeare's jesters—is another instance, if any were needed, of the dramatist's original creative power. Our respect for Shakespeare's genius is always heightened when we study his 'originals.' In this case, he took a melodramatic story with a 'happy ending,' and transformed it into a poignant tragedy, not merely of Lear, but of old age.

The History of the Play

The first performance of the play of which we have any record was (on the evidence of the Stationers' Register) in the presence of King James I at Whitehall Palace, 26 December 1606.[3] Lear is mentioned at the time of Burbage's death in 1619 as one of that actor's great parts, but the play, in its genuine form at least, had little popularity in the seventeenth century. Both the Jacobean contemporaneity of its social satire and its archaic, unclassical, and non-Christian setting would have alienated it from Restoration taste, though in 1662 there is an allusion to King Lear which seems to indicate that it was well known. In 1681 Nahum Tate made a revision which held the stage for a hundred and forty years, and was used by all the great eighteenth-century players. Edgar and Cordelia are united in marriage, and Kent and Lear live together. Tate's version seems insipid in comparison with Shakespeare's, but it was shaped to fit the fashion of the times, and this was the Lear that Garrick and Kemble played. Tate paid a compliment to Shakespeare in his Prologue:

> each Rustick knows
> 'Mongst plenteous Flow'rs a Garland to Compose,
> Which strung by his course Hand may fairer Show,
> But 'twas a Power Divine first made 'em Grow,

but his garland contained few of the original flowers, and the Fool was totally omitted.

It was in 1823 that the great actor Edmund Kean, who had often appeared in Tate's version, finally decided to return to the original text, saying to his wife, 'The London audience have no notion of what I can do until they see me over the dead body of Cordelia.' The effect was even greater than he had hoped for. W. C. Macready restored Shakespeare's text more fully, and was notably followed by Samuel Phelps, Henry Irving, and Tommaso Salvini, while the two most admired actresses of the century, Helen Faucit and Ellen Terry, made what they could of Cordelia's brief part. The most notable performance by American actors in the nineteenth century were by Edwin Forrest and Edwin Booth, who successively made an indelible impression on both critics and public. In the twentieth century, the play has been produced frequently in Germany and occasionally in Paris, but notable English performances have been few, while the best-known American production was long that of Robert Mantell, who deserved praise for giving his contemporaries their only opportunity to see the tragedy. Still, there is much truth in what Charles Lamb said over a century ago: 'The Lear of Shakespeare cannot be acted . . . the play is beyond all art.'

3 For suggestions concerning the date of composition, which was probably during the preceding year, see notes on I.ii.97,99; III.iv.182; III.vii.81.

Act First ❧ Scene First

[King Lear's Palace, Leicester]
Enter Kent, Gloucester, and Edmund.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us; but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most, for equalities are so weighed that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge. I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could; whereupon she grew round-wombed and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account. Though this knave came something saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair. There was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged. —Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My Lord of Kent. Remember him hereafter as my honorable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. The king is coming.

Sound a sennet. Enter one bearing a coronet; then Lear, then the Dukes of Albany and Cornwall, next Goneril, Regan, Cordelia with followers.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester.

Glo. I shall, my liege.

Exit [with Edmund].

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.
Give me the map there. Know we have divided
In three our kingdom; and 'tis our fast intent
To shake all cares and business from our age,
Conferring them on younger strengths ⟨while we
Unburthen'd crawl toward death. Our son of Cornwall,
And you, our no less loving son of Albany,
We have this hour a constant will to publish
Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife
May be prevented now.⟩ The «two great» princes, France and Burgundy,
Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love,
Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,
And here are to be answer'd. Tell me, my daughters,
⟨Since now we will divest us both of rule,
Interest of territory, cares of state,⟩
Which of you shall we say doth love us most,
That we our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge. Goneril,
Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir,
I love you more than word can wield the matter;
Dearer than eyesight, space, and liberty;
Beyond what can be valu'd, rich or rare;
No less than life with grace, health, beauty, honor;
As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found;
A love that makes breath poor and speech unable;
Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. [aside]. What shall Cordelia speak? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,
With shadowy forests and ⟨with champains rich'd,
With plenteous rivers and⟩ wide-skirted meads,
We make thee lady. To thine and Albany's issues
Be this perpetual. What says our second daughter,
Our dearest Regan, wife of Cornwall? «Speak.»

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find she names my very deed of love.
Only she comes too short, that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys
Which the most precious square of sense possesses
And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love.

Cor. [aside]. Then, poor Cordelia!
And yet not so, since I am sure my love's
More richer than my tongue.

Lear. To thee and thine, hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom,
No less in space, validity, and pleasure,
Than that conferr'd on Goneril. Now, our joy,
Although our last and least, to whose young love
⟨The vines of France and milk of Burgundy
Strive to be interess'd⟩ what can you say to draw
A third more opulent than your sisters? ⟨Speak.⟩

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

⟨Lear. Nothing?

Cor. Nothing.⟩

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing. Speak again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth. I love your majesty
According to my bond; no more nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia! Mend your speech a little,
Lest you may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me. I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honor you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say

S.d. King Lear's Palace; cf. n. 1 affected: loved 5, 6 equalities . . . moiety; cf. n. 5 curiosity: whimsicality 6 moiety: Share 9 brazed: hardened 15 proper: handsome 16 some year: about a year 18 something: rather 18–20 knave, whoreson: terms of bluff affection 26 sue: beg 27 study deserving: try to be worthy 28 out: out of the kingdom S.d. sennet: notes on a trumpet 33 express: manifest by external tokens our darker purpose: my purpose which is still somewhat unclarified 34–51 Cf. n. 34 fast intent: fixed purpose 36–41 while we . . . now: not in Quarto. See Textual Note 40 several: respective 41 prevented: forestalled two great: not in Folio. See Textual Note France and Burgundy; cf. n.

47 Interest: legal title 50 Where . . . challenge; cf. n. 54 space: the external world 56 with: enhanced by 57 found: experienced 58 unable: impotent 67 self: same 68 prize . . . worth: esteem myself as worthy as she is 69 Cf. n. 70 Only: only in this 72 square; cf. n. 73 felicitate: made happy 77 More richer; cf. n. 80 validity: value 82 Cf. n. 83 milk: pasture land 84 interess'd: given a share 92 bond: obligation of duty

They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord whose hand must take my plight shall carry
Half my love with him, half my care and duty.
Sure I shall never marry like my sisters
«To love my father all».
Lear. But goes thy heart with this?
Cor. Ay, my good lord.
Lear. So young, and so untender?
Cor. So young, my lord, and true.
Lear. Let it be so. Thy truth then be thy dower,
For by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate and the night,
By all the operation of the orbs
From whom we do exist and cease to be,
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall ⟨to my bosom⟩
Be as well neighbor'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou, my sometime daughter.
Kent. Good my liege!—
Lear. Peace, Kent!
Come not between the dragon and his wrath.
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery. Hence, and avoid my sight!
So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her! Call France. Who stirs?
Call Burgundy.—Cornwall and Albany,
With my two daughters' dowers digest the third.
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty. Ourself by monthly course,
With reservation of an hundred knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turn. Only we still retain
The name and all th' additions to a king.
The sway,
Revénue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm,
This coronet part between you.
Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honor'd as my king,
Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,
As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—
Lear. The bow is bent and drawn. Make from the shaft.
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart. Be Kent unmannerly
When Lear is mad. What wouldst thou do, old man?
Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to speak
When power to flattery bows? To plainness honor's bound
When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy doom,
And in thy best consideration check
This hideous rashness. Answer my life my judgment:
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least;
Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sounds
Reverb no hollowness.
Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.
Lear. Out of my sight!
Kent. See better, Lear, and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.
Lear. Now, by Apollo,—
Kent. Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.
Lear. O vassal! miscreant!
[Laying his hand on his sword.]
Alb. / Corn. Dear sir, forbear.⟩
Kent. «Do;»
Kill thy physician, and thy fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy doom,
Or whilst I can vent clamor from my throat,
I'll tell thee thou dost evil.
Lear. Hear me, ⟨recreant!⟩
On thine allegiance, hear me!
That thou hast sought to make us break our vow,
Which we durst never yet, and with stain'd pride
To come betwixt our sentence and our power
(Which nor our nature nor our place can bear):
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee for provision
To shield thee from diseases of the world,
And on the sixth to turn thy hated back
Upon our kingdom. If on the tenth day following
Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death. Away! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.
Kent. Fare thee well, king. Sith thus thou wilt appear,
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.
[To Cordelia.] The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,
That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said!
[To Regan and Goneril.] And your large speeches may your deeds approve,
That good effects may spring from words of love.
Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu;
He'll shape his old course in a country new. Exit.

Flourish. Enter Gloucester with France and Burgundy, Attendants.

Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.
Lear. My Lord of Burgundy,
We first address toward you, who with this king

100 all: exclusively 101 plight: pledge 111 Hecate: goddess of witchcraft 112 operation: planetary influence 115 property of blood: kinship 117 this: this time 118 generation: children 119 to my bosom: in my affections 120 neighbor'd: held in friendly regard 125 set my rest: stake my all (figure from a game) 126 nursery: nursing 130 digest: assimilate 131 plainness: frankness marry: find a husband for 133 effects: outward marks of royalty 134 troop with: follow in the train of course: rotation 137 still: cf. n. 138 additions: titles, marks of distinction 139 The sway: cf. n. 142 coronet: cf. n. 147 Make from: get out of the way of

153 Cf. n. 154 in . . . consideration: with all the care you can 155 Answer my life: let my life answer for 158 Reverb: re-echo; cf. n. 161 wage: stake always 165 blank: white spot in center of target 166 by Apollo: cf. n. 169 vassal! miscreant: cf. n. 179 That: cf. n. us: cf. n. 183 Our . . . good: cf. n. 184 Five days: cf. n. 185 diseases: slight vexations, dis-eases; cf. n. 188 trunk: body 190 revok'd: cf. n. 191 Sith: since thus: i.e., in the character of a despot 196 approve: make good; cf. n. 197 effects: (actual) results words: (mere) words 199 shape . . . course: he his old self S.d. Flourish: music of horns

Hath rivall'd for our daughter. What, in the least,
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love?
Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.
Lear. Right noble Burgundy,
When she was dear t'us we did hold her so,
But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands.
If aught within that little-seeming substance,
Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd,
And nothing more, may fitly like your Grace,
She's there, and she is yours.
Bur. I know no answer.
Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she owes,
Unfriended, new-adopted to our hate,
Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take her or leave her?
Bur. Pardon me, royal sir;
Election makes not up in such conditions.
Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me,
I tell you all her wealth.—[To France.] For you, great king,
I would not from your love make such a stray
To match you where I hate. Therefore, beseech you
T'avert your liking a more worthier way
Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd
Almost t'acknowledge hers.
France. This is most strange!
That she, that even but now was your best object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
Most best, most dearest, should in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous to dismantle
So many folds of favor. Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall'n into taint;—which to believe of her
Must be a faith that reason without miracle
Could never plant in me.
Cor. I yet beseech your majesty—
If for I want that glib and oily art
To speak and purpose not (since what I well intend,
I'll do't before I speak)—that you make known
It is no vicious blot, murther, or foulness,
No únchaste action or dishonor'd step,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favor,
But even for want of that for which I am richer,
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it
Hath lost me in your liking.
Lear. Better thou
Hadst not been born than not t'have pleas'd me better.
France. Is it but this? a tardiness in nature
Which often leaves the history unspoke
That it intends to do? My lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the lady? Love's not love
When it is mingled with regards that stands
Aloof from th'éntire point. Will you have her?
She is herself a dowry.
Bur. Royal King,
Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.
Lear. Nothing. I have sworn ⟨I am firm⟩.
Bur. [to Cor.]. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father
That you must lose a husband.
Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife.
France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor;
Most choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despis'd!
Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon.
Be it lawful, I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods! 'Tis strange that from their cold'st neglect
My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,
Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy
Can buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind.
Thou losest here, a better where to find.
Lear. Thou hast her, France. Let her be thine, for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers again. Therefore be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benison.
Come, noble Burgundy.

Flourish. Exeunt Lear and Burgundy [Cornwall, Albany, Gloucester, and Attendants].

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.
Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes
Cordelia leaves you. I know you what you are;
And like a sister am most loath to call
Your faults as they are nam'd. Use well our father.
To your professed bosoms I commit him;
But yet, alas, stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So farewell to you both.
Gon. Prescribe not us our duties.
Reg. Let your study
Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you
At fortune's alms. You have obedience scanted,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.
Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides;
Who covers faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!
France. Come, my fair Cordelia.
Ex. France and Cordelia.
Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think our father will hence to-night.

203 in the least: at the lowest estimate 208 tender: offer 212 Cf. n. 213 piec'd: pieced out, amplified 214 fitly like: properly satisfy 217 owes: owns 219 stranger'd with: made a stranger by 222 Election, etc.: I cannot choose 225 stray: wandering, truancy 232 argument: subject 233 trice: moment 234 to dismantle: as to strip off 235 folds of favor: layers of regard; cf. n. 237 monsters it: makes it abnormal 238 Fall'n into taint: become blemished which; cf. n. 243 speak and purpose not: speak deceitfully what . . . intend: i.e., when I have a good intention 245 murther; cf. n. 249 still-soliciting: perpetually greedy

257 to: on the subject of 258 stands: (old plural form) 269 respects: considerations 276 inflam'd respect: warmest deference 280 unpriz'd precious: precious though unprized 282 a better where: a better place 286 benison: blessing 289 The jewels; cf. n. wash'd eyes: eyes that see clearly 291 like a sister: as befits a sister 292 as . . . nam'd: by their right names 293 your professed bosoms: the affections you have professed 295 prefer: commend 300 At fortune's alms: as a petty gift of chance 301 well . . . wanted; cf. n. 302 plighted: folded; cf. n.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you. Next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is. The observation we have made of it hath not been little. He always loved our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age. Yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash. Then must we look from his age to receive not alone the imperfections of long-engraffed condition, but therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leavetaking between France and him; pray you, let us sit together. If our father carry authority with such disposition as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and i' th' heat. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Earl of Gloucester's Castle]
Enter Bastard, solus.

Edm. Thou, Nature, art my goddess. To thy law
My services are bound. Wherefore should I
Stand in the plague of custom, and permit
The curiosity of nations to deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moonshines
Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base?
When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true
As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us
With base? with baseness? bastardy? base, base?
Who in the lusty stealth of nature take
More composition and fierce quality
Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed,
Go to th'creating a whole tribe of fops,
Got 'tween asleep and wake? Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land.
Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund
As to th'legitimate. Fine word, 'legitimate'!
Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall taw th'legitimate. I grow, I prosper;
Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter Gloucester.

[Edmund ostentatiously reading a letter.]

Glo. Kent banished thus, and France in choler parted!
And the king gone to-night, prescrib'd his power,
Confin'd to exhibition! All this done
Upon the gad! Edmund, how now? What news?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No? What needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket? The quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see. Come! If it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me. It is a letter from my brother that I have not all o'erread, and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o'erlooking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are too blame.

Glo. Let's see! let's see!

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. reads.

This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times, keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother,

Edgar.

—Hum! Conspiracy! 'Sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue.'—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in? When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord; there's the cunning of it. I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Has he never before sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord: but I have heard him oft maintain it to be fit that, sons at perfect age and fathers declined, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain! His very opinion in the letter! Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish! Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him. Abominable villain! Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you should run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honor, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your Honor, and to no other pretence of danger.

313 grossly: obviously 316 time: years 318 engraffed condition: implanted temperament 321 starts: fits of temper 323 compliment of: ceremonious 324 sit; cf. n. 326 offend: harm 3 Stand . . . plague: submit to the nuisance 4 curiosity: pedantry, legal hair-splitting 6 Lag of: behind 12 composition: symmetry 14 fops: fools 19 speed: succeed 21 taw: whip, flog, thrash; cf. n. 24 prescrib'd: limited; cf. n. 25 exhibition: *allowance, maintenance

26 gad: spur What news; cf. n. 41 too blame; cf. n. 44 essay: trial 45 policy and reverence of: policy of revering 47 fond: foolish 59 thrown . . . closet; cf. n. closet: private room 60 character: handwriting 62 in respect of that: considering the nature of the 'matter' of contents fain: gladly 69 sons: sons being 73 detested: detestable 74 apprehend: arrest 78 should; cf. n.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your Honor judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster—

«Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo.—to his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him. Heaven and earth!» Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you. Frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently, convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us. Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects. Love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide. In cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt son and father. ⟨This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father. The king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves.⟩ Find out this villain, Edmund. It shall lose thee nothing. Do it carefully. And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty! 'Tis strange! Exit.

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune—often the surfeits of our own behavior—we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars; as if we were villains on necessity, fools by heavenly compulsion, knaves, thieves, and treachers by spherical predominance, drunkards, liars, and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence, and all that we are evil in by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition on the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under ursa major; so that it follows I am rough and lecherous. «Fut!» I should have been that I am had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. «Edgar—»

Enter Edgar.

Pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy.
My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like
Tom o' Bedlam.—O, these eclipses do portend these divisions!
⟨Fa, sol, la, mi.⟩

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; ⟨as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent, death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities, divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles, needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come!⟩ When saw you my father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word nor countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself wherein you may have offended him; and at my entreaty forbear his presence until some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. ⟨I pray you have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower, and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray ye, go; there's my key. If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm.⟩ Brother, I advise you to the best; «go armed;» I am no honest man if there be any good meaning toward you. I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly. Nothing like the image and horror of it. Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business. Exit Edgar.
A credulous father and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms
That he suspects none, on whose foolish honesty
My practices ride easy! I see the business.
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit.
All with me's meet that I can fashion fit. Exit.

Scene Third

[Duke of Albany's Palace, York(?)]
Enter Goneril, and [Oswald her] Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me. Every hour
He flashes into one gross crime or other
That sets us all at odds. I'll not endure it.
His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us
On every trifle. When he returns from hunting,
I will not speak with him. Say I am sick.

83 pretence: intention 85, 86 I will ... this; cf. n. 92 wind me into him; cf. n. 94 unstate myself: give all I am and have due resolution: proper certainty 95 presently: instantly convey: manage (with privacy and discretion) 96 withal: therewith 97 These late eclipses; cf. n. 98 wisdom of nature: natural philosophy nature: human nature, the world of man 99 sequent effects: results that follow the eclipses; cf. n. 104 falls ... nature; cf. n. 110 excellent foppery: exceeding folly 114 treachers: traitors spherical predominance: causative action of the celestial 'spheres' 117 thrusting on: impulsion 118 charge: liability 119 dragon's tail; cf. n. 120 ursa major: the Great Bear 127 Fa, sol, la, mi; cf. n.

137 diffidences: suspicions 137 dissipation of cohorts: disaffection in the army 139 sectary astronomical: member of the astronomical sect 150 mischief: harm 153 continent: temperate 162 image and horror: horrible image 168 practices: treacherous plots 170 Cf. n. Scene Third. S.d. Duke of Albany's Palace; cf. n. 5 crime: offence

If you come slack of former services,
You shall do well. The fault of it I'll answer.
Osw. He's coming, madam. I hear him.
Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,
You and your fellows. I'd have it come to question.
If he distaste it, let him to my sister,
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one,
«Not to be over-rul'd. Idle old man,
That still would manage those authorities
That he hath given away! Now, by my life,
Old fools are babes again, and must be us'd
With checks as flatteries, when they are seen abus'd.»
Remember what I have said.
Osw. Well, madam.
Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you.
What grows of it, no matter. Advise your fellows so.
«I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall,
That I may speak.» I'll write straight to my sister
To hold my very course. Prepare for dinner. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[The same]
Enter Kent [disguised].

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech defuse, my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I raz'd my likeness. Now, banish'd Kent,
If thou canst serve thou dost stand condemn'd,
So may it come, thy master whom thou lov'st
Shall find thee full of labors.

Horns within. Enter Lear and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner. Go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now! what are thou?
Kent. A man, sir.
Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?
Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly that will put me in trust, to love him that is honest, to converse with him that is wise and says little, to fear judgment, to fight when I cannot choose, and to eat no fish.
Lear. What art thou?
Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.
Lear. If thou be'st as poor for a subject as he's for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?
Kent. Service.
Lear. Whom wouldst thou serve?
Kent. You.
Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?
Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.
Lear. What's that?
Kent. Authority.
Lear. What services canst thou do?

14 question: discussion 17 Idle: foolish 21 With . . . abus'd; cf. n. 23 Well: like French 'bien' 1 Cf. n. 2 defuse: disguise, disorder 3 carry through: accomplish issue: conclusion 4 raz'd: erased 11 dost . . . profess: is thy profession 15 fish; cf. n. 16 Cf. n.

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly. That which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the best of me is diligence.
Lear. How old art thou?
Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for anything. I have years on my back forty-eight.
Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me, if I like thee no worse after dinner. I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho! dinner! Where's my knave, my fool? Go you and call my fool hither. [Exit on Attendant.]

Enter Steward [Oswald].

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?
Osw. So please you,— Exit.
Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back. [Exit a Knight.] Where's my fool? Ho! I think the world's asleep. [Re-enter Knight.] How now? where's that mongrel?
Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.
Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I called him?
Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.
Lear. He would not!
Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont. There's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the duke himself also and your daughter.
Lear. Ha! sayest thou so?
Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent when I think your highness wronged.
Lear. Thou but remember'st me of mine own conception. I have perceived a most faint neglect of late, which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness. I will look further into't. But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.
Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.
Lear. No more of that. I have noted it well. Go you and tell my daughter I would speak with her. [Exit Knight.] Go you, call hither my fool. [Exit an Attendant.]

Enter Steward [Oswald].

O! you sir, you, come you hither, sir. Who am I, sir?
Osw. My lady's father.
Lear. 'My lady's father!' my lord's knave! You whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!
Osw. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech your pardon.
Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking him.]
Osw. I'll not be strucken, my lord.
Kent. Nor tripped neither, you base football player. [Tripping up his heels.]

29 curious: fanciful 36 forty-eight; cf. n. 43 clotpoll: blockhead, clodpole 55 kindness: courtesy 61 remember'st . . . conception; cf. n. 62 faint: sluggish 63 jealous curiosity: suspicious punctiliousness very pretence: genuine intention 76 bandy: exchange (an expression from the game of tennis) 77 strucken: (mainly a Northern form) 78 football; cf. n.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow. Thou serv'st me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach you differences! Away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry. But away! Go to! have you wisdom! [Pushes Oswald out.] So.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave. I thank thee. There's earnest of thy service. [Gives him money.]

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too. Here's my coxcomb.

Lear. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

«Kent. Why, fool?»

⟨Lear. Why, my boy?⟩

Fool. Why, for taking one's part that's out of favor. Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly. There, take my coxcomb. Why, this fellow has banished two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will. If thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb. How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself. There's mine [offering the coxcomb to Lear]; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah! the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel. He must be whipped out when the Lady-brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:—

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest.
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer. You gave me nothing for 't.—Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool [to Kent]. Prithee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to. He will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet one?

Lear. No, lad. Teach me.

Fool.

«That lord that counsell'd thee
To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me.
Do thou for him stand.
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here,
The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away. That thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith! Lords and great men will not let me. If I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't, and ladies too. They will not let me have all the fool to myself; they'll be snatching.» Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' th' middle and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i' th' middle and gav'st away both parts, thou bor'st thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt. Thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown when thou gav'st thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

Fools had ne'er less grace in a year,
For wise men are grown foppish,
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, e'er since thou mad'st thy daughters thy mothers; for when thou gav'st them the rod and putt'st down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep,
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among.

Prithee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie. I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are. They'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool; and yet I would not be thee, nuncle. Thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' th' middle. Here comes one o' the parings.

Lear. How now, daughter? what makes that frontlet on? You are too much of late i' th' frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning. Now thou art an O without a figure. I am better than thou art now. I am a fool, thou art nothing. [To Goneril.] Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue. So your face bids me, though you say nothing.

81 differences: quibbling distinctions 84 earnest: advance wages 86 coxcomb: fool's cap 89, 90 Cf. n. 92 an: if 94 on's: of his 96 nuncle: mine uncle 104 brach: hunting-bitch; cf. n. 105 Cf. n. 109–113 Have . . . trowest; cf. n. 112 goest: walkest 113 trowest: believest 114 Set . . . trowest: stake less than you throw to win 116 keep in-a-door: stay at home and tend to your business 117, 118 Cf. n. 123 nothing . . . nothing; cf. n. I.i.90

134 Cf. n. 149 monopoly out; cf. n. 151 crowns: half-shells 154 like myself: like a fool let . . . so; cf. n. 155 had . . . grace: were never less in demand 156 foppish: fool-like 157 wits to wear: display their wisdom; cf. n. 165 play bo-peep; cf. n. 177 frontlet: forehead-band; i.e., frown 180 an O without a figure: a mere cipher

Mum, mum;
He that keeps nor crust nor crumb,
Weary of all, shall want some.

That's a sheeled peascod. [Pointing to Lear.]

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool,
But other of your insolent retinue
Do hourly carp and quarrel, breaking forth
In rank and not-to-be-endured riots.
Sir,
I had thought by making this well known unto you
To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,
By what yourself too late have spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance; which if you should, the fault
Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses sleep,
Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessity
Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For you know, nuncle,

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it's had it head bit off by it young.

So out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. I would you would make use of your good wisdom
(Whereof I know you are fraught), and put away
These dispositions which of late transport you
From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?
Whoop, Jug! I love thee.

Lear. Does any here know me? This is not Lear.
Does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes?
Either his notion weakens, or his discernings
Are lethargied. Ha! waking? 'tis not so.
Who is it that can tell me who I am?

Fool. Lear's shadow.

«Lear. I would learn that, for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.»

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?

Gon. This admiration, sir, is much o' th' favor
Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you
To understand my purposes aright,
As you are old and reverend, should be wise.
Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires;
Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd, and bold,
That this our court, infected with their manners,
Shows like a riotous inn. Epicurism and lust
Makes it more like a tavern or a brothel
Than a grac'd palace. The shame itself doth speak
For instant remedy. Be then desir'd,
By her that else will take the thing she begs,
A little to disquantity your train,
And the remainders that shall still depend
To be such men as may besort your age,
Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!
Saddle my horses! call my train together!
Degenerate bastard, I'll not trouble thee.
Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people, and your disorder'd rabble
Make servants of their betters.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents!
«O, sir, are you come?»
Is it your will? Speak, sir.—Prepare my horses.
Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,
Than the sea-monster.

⟨Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.⟩

Lear [To Goneril]. Detested kite! thou liest.
My train are men of choice and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duty know,
And in the most exact regard support
The worships of their name. O most small fault,
How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show,
Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature
From the fix'd place, drew from my heart all love
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate that let thy folly in. [Striking his head.]
And thy dear judgment out! Go, go, my people.

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
⟨Of what hath mov'd you⟩.

Lear. It may be so, my lord.
Hear, Nature, hear! dear goddess, hear!
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility,
Dry up in her the organs of increase,
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honor her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen, that it may live
And be a thwart, disnatur'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth,
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks,
Turn all her mother's pains and benefits
To laughter and contempt, that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child! Away, away! Exit.

Alb. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know more of it,
But let his disposition have that scope
As dotage gives it.

Enter Lear.

Lear. What! fifty of my followers at a clap?

186 Cf. n. 187 sheeled peascod: empty peapod 194 safe redress: assured remedy 196 protect: authorize put . . on: encourage 197 allowance: approval 199 tender: care wholesome weal: sound public welfare 205 it: its; cf. n. 206 darkling: in the dark 209 fraught: stored 213 Whoop . . . thee; cf. n. 216 notion: understanding discernings: faculties by which he apprehends (?) 223 Which they; cf. n. 225 admiration: sign of wonder 228 should: and therefore should 230 disorder'd: disorderly debosh'd: debauched 232 Epicurism: sensuality 234 grac'd: gracious 237 disquantity: reduce 238 the remainders: those remaining depend: be in service 239 besort: befit 247 Woe, that: woe to him who 252 sea-monster; cf. n. 254 kite: buzzard 258 worships: dignity 260 engine: lever my frame of nature: the whole fabric of my natural affection 273 derogate: degraded 276 thwart: perverted disnatur'd: unnatural 278 cadent: falling 285, 286 that scope As; cf. n. 287 Cf. n.

Within a fortnight?
Alb. What's the matter, sir?
Lear. I'll tell thee. [To Goneril.] Life and death! I am asham'd
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus,
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs upon thee!
Th' untented woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee! Old fond eyes,
Beweep this cause again, I'll pluck ye out,
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
To temper clay. «Yea, is it come to this?»
⟨Let it be so:⟩ I have another daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable.
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll flay thy wolvish visage. Thou shalt find
That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever «thou shalt, I warrant thee».
Exit [with Kent and Attendants].
Gon. Do you mark that?
Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you,—
Gon. Pray you, content. What, Oswald, ho!
[To the Fool.] You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.
Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear! tarry, take thy fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter,
So the fool follows after. Exit.

⟨Gon. This man hath had good counsel. A hundred knights!
'Tis politic and safe to let him keep
At point a hundred knights! Yes, that on every dream,
Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say!
Alb. Well, you may fear too far.
Gon. Safer than trust too far.
Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart.
What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister.
If she sustain him and his hundred knights.
When I have show'd th' unfitness,—⟩

Enter Steward.

How now, Oswald?
What! have you writ that letter to my sister?
Osw. Ay, madam.
Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse.
Inform her full of my particular fear,
And thereto add such reasons of your own
As may compact it more. Get you gone,
And hasten your return. [Exit Oswald.] No, no, my lord,
This milky gentleness and course of yours
Though I condemn not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more atask'd for want of wisdom
Than prais'd for harmful mildness.
Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell.
Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.
Gon. Nay, then—
Alb. Well, well; th' event. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

[Near Albany's Palace]
Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloucester with these letters. Acquaint my daughter no further with anything you know than comes from her demand out of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy I shall be there afore you.
Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. Exit.
Fool. If a man's brains were in's heels, were't not in danger of kibes?
Lear. Ay, boy.
Fool. Then, I prithee, be merry. Thy wit shall not go slipshod.
Lear. Ha, ha, ha!
Fool. Shalt see thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she's as like this as a crab's like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.
Lear. What canst tell, boy?
Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' th' middle on's face?
Lear. No.
Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.
Lear. I did her wrong,—
Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?
Lear. No.
Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.
Lear. Why?
Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.
Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a father! Be my horses ready?
Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no mo than seven is a pretty reason.
Lear. Because they are not eight?
Fool. Yes, indeed. Thou wouldst make a good fool.
Lear. To take't again perforce! Monster ingratitude!
Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.
Lear. How's that?
Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old till thou hadst been wise.
Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven! Keep me in temper; I would not be mad!

[Enter Gentleman.]

295 untented: unsearchable 297 Beweep: if you weep for 299 temper: soften 301 comfortable: comforting 315–319 Cf. n. 322 At point: in readiness 329 taken: i.e., subjected to harm 339 compact: strengthen 341 gentleness and course: gentleness of your course (hendiadys)

343 atask'd: blamed; cf. n. 348 th' event: the outcome (will show) 1 Gloucester: cf. n. 8 kibes: chilblains 11 slipshod: in slippers; cf. n. 13 kindly: pun, with double meaning of 'gently' and 'naturally' 14 crab: crabapple 32 the seven stars: the constellation of the Pleiades mo: more 42 temper: mental balance S.d. Cf. n.

How now? Are the horses ready?
Gent. Ready, my lord.
Lear. Come, boy.
Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at my departure,
Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. Exeunt.

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Earl of Gloucester's Castle]
Enter Bastard [Edmund] and Curan, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.
Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be here with him to-night.
Edm. How comes that?
Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad? I mean the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments?
Edm. Not I. Pray you, what are they?
Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?
Edm. Not a word.
Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. Exit.
Edm. The duke be here to-night! The better! best!
This weaves itself perforce into my business.
My father hath set guard to take my brother;
And I have one thing, of a queasy question,
Which I must act. Briefness and fortune, work!
Brother, a word; descend! Brother, I say!

Enter Edgar.

My father watches. O, sir, fly this place!
Intelligence is given where you are hid.
You have now the good advantage of the night.
Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall?
He's coming hither, now, i' th' night, i' th' haste,
And Regan with him. Have you nothing said
Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany?
Advise yourself.
Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.
Edm. I hear my father coming. Pardon me;
In cunning I must draw my sword upon you.
Draw; seem to defend yourself. Now quit you well.—
Yield! Come before my father. Light, ho! here!—
Fly, brother.—Torches! torches!—So, farewell. Exit Edgar.
Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion
Of my more fierce endeavor. [Wounds his arm.] I have seen drunkards
Do more than this is sport. Father! father!
Stop! stop! No help?

Enter Gloucester, and Servants with Torches

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?
Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon
To stand auspicious mistress.
Glo. But where is he?
Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.
Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?
Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—
Glo. Pursue him, ho! Go after! [Exeunt some Servants.]
'By no means' what?
Edm. Persuade me to the murther of your lordship;
But that I told him the revenging gods
'Gaint parricides did all their thunders bend,
Spoke with how manifold and strong a bond
The child was bound to th' father. Sir, in fine,
Seeing how loathly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion
With his prepared sword he charges home
My unprovided body, latch'd mine arm;
But when he saw my best alarum'd spirits,
Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to th' encounter,
Or whether gasted by the noise I made,
Full suddenly he fled.
Glo. Let him fly far.
Not in this land shall he remain uncaught;
And found—dispatch. The noble duke my master,
My worthy arch and patron, comes to-night.
By his authority I will proclaim it,
That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous caitiff to the stake;
He that conceals him, death.
Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curst speech
I threaten'd to discover him. He replied:
'Thou unpossessing bastard, dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue, or worth in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No. What I should deny
(As this I would; ay, though thou didst produce
My very character), I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice;
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it.'
Glo. Strong and fasten'd villain!
Would he deny his letter, ⟨said he⟩? «I never got him.»
Tucket within.
Hark! the duke's trumpets. I know not why he comes.—
All ports I'll bar. The villain shall not 'scape;
The duke must grant me that. Besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

46, 47 Cf. n. Scene First: S.d. Castle; cf. n. 1 Save thee: God save you Curan; cf. n. 7 ear-kissing arguments: subjects to be mentioned only with the lips against the ear 10 toward: in prospect 17 queasy question: hazardous trial 18 Briefness . . . work; cf. n. 26 party: side 27 Advise yourself: think carefully 31 quit you: do your part

41, 42 Cf. n. 50 But that; cf. n. 52 Spoke: i.e., and I told him 55 fell: fierce 57 unprovided: unguarded latch'd: caught; cf. n. 60 gasted: scared 64 found—dispatch; cf. n. 65 arch: chief 68 caitiff; cf. n. 72 pight: fixed curst: sharp 72 discover: expose 73 unpossessing: incapable of inheriting 76 faith'd: credited 79 suggestion: evil prompting damned practice: damnable trickery 82 pregnant: inciting 84 Strong and fasten'd: gross and hardened S.d. Tucket: trumpet-notes, indicating march-signal 87 ports: seaports 91 natural: real, my own 92 capable: legal heir

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend! Since I came hither
(Which I can call but now), I have heard strange news.
Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short
Which can pursue th' offender. How dost, my lord?
Glo. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd; it's crack'd.
Reg. What! did my father's godson seek your life?
He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?
Glo. O lady, lady, shame would have it hid.
Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights that ended upon my father?
Glo. I know not, madam. 'Tis too bad, too bad.
Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.
Reg. No marvel, then, though he were ill affected.
'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have th' expense and waste of his revénues.
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well-inform'd of them, and with such cautions
That if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.
Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.
Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father
A child-like office.
Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.
Glo. He did bewray his practice, and receiv'd
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.
Corn. Is he pursu'd?
Glo. Ay, my good lord.
Corn. If he be taken he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm. Make your own purpose,
How in my strength you please. For you, Edmund,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours.
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.
Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.
Glo. For him I thank your Grace.
Corn. You know not why we came to visit you?
Reg. Thus out of season threading dark-ey'd night.
Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some poise,
Wherein we must have use of your advice.
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home. The several messengers
From hence attend dispatch. Our good old friend,
Lay comforts to your bosom, and bestow
Your needful counsel to our business,
Which craves the instant use.
Glo. I serve you, madam.
Your Graces are right welcome. Exeunt, Flourish.

99 Cf. n. 104 consort: company 107 expense and waste: wasteful spending; cf. n. 114 child-like: filial 116 bewray: expose 121 of doing: lest he do Make: execute 122 How . . . please: cf. n. 123 virtue and obedience: loyal manliness 125 deep trust: great fidelity 132 poise: weight; cf. n. 136 from: away from 137 From . . . dispatch: cf. n. 140 craves . . . use: must be dealt with at once

Scene Second

[Courtyard of Gloucester's Castle]
Enter Kent and Steward [Oswald] severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend. Art of this house?
Kent. Ay.
Osw. Where may we set our horses?
Kent. I' th' mire.
Osw. Prithee, if thou lov'st me, tell me.
Kent. I love thee not.
Osw. Why, then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.
Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.
Kent. Fellow, I know thee.
Osw. What dost thou know me for?
Kent. A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy,
worsted-stocking knave; a lily-liver'd, action-taking knave; a whoreson, glass-gazing, superserviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd, in a way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel
bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining if thou deniest the least syllable of thy addition.
Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee!
Kent. What a brazen-faced valet art thou, to deny thou knowest me! Is it two days since I tripped up thy heels and beat thee before the king? Draw, you rogue; for, though it be night, yet the moon shines: I'll make a sop o' th' moonshine of you. [Drawing his sword.] «Draw,» you whoreson, cullionly
barber-monger, draw.
Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.
Kent. Draw, you rascal! You come with letters against the king, and take Vanity the puppet's part against the royalty of her father. Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks!
Draw, you rascal! come your ways!
Osw. Help, ho! Murther! Help!
Kent. Strike, you slave! Stand, rogue, stand! You neat slave, strike! [Beating him.]
Osw. Help, ho! Murther! murther!

Enter Edmund with his rapier drawn, Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess, Servants.

Edm. How now! What's the matter! ⟨Part!⟩
Kent. With you, goodman boy, if you please! Come, I'll flesh ye! Come on, young master.
Glo. Weapons? arms? What's the matter here?
Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives.
He dies that strikes again. What is the matter?
Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king!
Corn. What is your difference? Speak.

Scene Second. S.d. severally: entering at different doors; cf. n. 1 Art . . . house: are you employed here? 6 I love thee not: cf. n. 8 Lipsbury pinfold; cf. n. 13 broken meats: scraps 14 three-suited; cf. n. 15 action-taking: given to lawsuits 16 glass-gazing: fond of the mirror superserviceable: officious one-trunk-inheriting: born to practically nothing 27 sop o' th' moonshine: make moonlight shine through you; cf. n. 28 cullionly: knavish 29 barber-monger: patron of the barber's shop 32 Vanity the puppet's: Vanity, a personified character in the Interludes (Goneril is meant) 33 carbonado: slice 34 your ways: along (with me) 36 neat: over-dressed 39 Part: separate yourselves 40 With you; goodman: cf. n. goodman: a plebeian form of address

Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirred your valor. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee. A tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow. A tailor make a man.

Kent. «Ay» a tailor, sir. A stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours o' th' trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spar'd at suit of his grey beard,—

Kent. Thou worseson zed! thou unnecessary letter! My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him. Spare my grey beard, you wagtail!

Corn. Peace, sirrah!
You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such slave as this should wear a sword,
Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these,
Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain
Which are too intrinse t'unloose; smooth every passion
That in the natures of their lords rebel,
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;
Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks
With every gale and vary of their masters,
Knowing nought, like dogs, but following.
A plague upon your epileptic visage!
Smoil you my speeches, as I were a fool?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
I'd drive ye crackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What! art thou mad, old fellow?

Glo. How fell you out? say that.

Kent. No cóntraries hold more antipathy
Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain.
I have seen better faces in my time
Than stands on any shoulder that I see
Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow,
Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect
A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb
Quite from his nature. He cannot flatter, he.
An honest mind and plain, he must speak truth.
An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.
These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness
Harbor more craft and more corrupter ends
Than twenty silly-ducking óbservants,
That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in síncere verity,
Under th' allowance of your great aspéct,
Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire
Flickering on Phœbus' front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer. He that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which for my part I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to 't.

Corn. What was th' offence you gave him?

Osw. I never gave him any.
It pleas'd the king his master very late
To strike at me upon his misconstruction;
When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure,
Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd,
And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthied him, got praises of the king
For him attempting who was self-subdu'd;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues and cowards
But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!
You stubborn ancient knave, you reverent braggart,
We'll teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn.
Call not your stocks for me. I serve the king,
On whose employment I was sent to you.
You shall do small respects, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person of my máster,
Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks! As I have life and honor,
There shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon! Till night, my lord, and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,
You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will.

Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same color
Our sister speaks of. Come, bring away the stocks.

Stocks brought out.

Glo. Let me beseech your Grace not to do so.
«His fault is much, and the good king his master
Will check him for't. Your purpos'd low correction
Is such as vilest and contemned'st wretches
For pilferings and most common trespasses
Are punish'd with.» The king ⟨his master needs⟩ must take it ill,
That he's so slightly valu'd in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse
To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
«For following her affairs. Put in his legs.»

[Kent is put in the stocks.]

Come, my good lord, away.

Exit [with all but Gloucester and Kent].

Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend. 'Tis the duke's pleasure,
Whose disposition, all the world well knows,

49 disclaims: claims no share 54 yet: however 57 zed; cf. n. 58 unbolted: unrefined 59 a jakes: a privy 60 wagtail: a nervous and impudent small bird 67, 68 holy cords . . . to intrinse; cf. n. smooth: make the way easy for 71 Renege: deny halycon; cf. n. 72 gale: breeze vary: vacillation 75 Smoil; cf. n. 76 Sarum: Salisbury 77 Camelot; cf. n. 86 better faces; cf. n. 91 constrains the garb: forces the fashion 92 from: contrary to 94 he's plain: he forces it on them anyway 97 óbservants: courtiers 98 nicely: fastidiously

102 Flickering on; cf. n. front: forehead 107 your displeasure; cf. n. 111 upon his misconstruction: having misconstrued my conduct 112 conjunct: in league 113 being down, insulted: I being down, he exulted 115 worthied: covered with dignity 117 in . . . of: to feed the appetite created by 120 Ajax; cf. n. 122 reverent: for 'reverend' (old enough to know better) 127 small respects: little in the way of compliment (ironic) 129 Stocking; cf. n. 141 check: reprimand 142 vilest and contemned'st; cf. n. 146, 147 Cf. n.

Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd. I'll entreat for thee.
Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd and travell'd hard.
Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.
Give you good morrow!
Glo. The duke's to blame in this. 'Twill be ill taken. Exit.
Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw,
Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st
To the warm sun.
Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may
Peruse this letter. Nothing almost sees miracles
But misery. I know 'tis from Cordelia,
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course.
[Reads] . . .

And shall find time
From this enormous state, seeking to give Losses their remedies.

All weary and o'er-watch'd!
Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging.
Fortune, good night. Smile once more; turn thy wheel!
Sleeps.

Scene Third

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd,
And by the happy hollow of a tree
Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard and most unusual vigilance
Does not attend my taking. Whiles I may 'scape
I will preserve myself, and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape
That ever penury, in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast. My face I'll grime with filth,
Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots,
And with presented nakedness outface
The winds and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who with roaring voices
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms
Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary;
And with this horrible object from low farms,
Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills,
Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers,
Enforce their charity. Poor Turlygod! poor Tom!
That's something yet. Edgar I nothing am. Exit.

157 rubb'd: checked 158 watch'd: lost sleep 163 approve: illustrate 164 heaven's benediction; cf. n. 168, 169 Nothing . . . misery; cf. n. 172–174 And . . . remedies; cf. n. 176 Take vantage: use the opportunity (which sleep offers) Scene Third; cf. n. 10 elf: twist 14 Bedlam beggars; cf. n. 17 object: spectacle 18 pelting: contemptible 19 bans: curses 20 Turlygod . . . Tom; cf. n. 21 Edgar I nothing am: as Edgar I am nothing

Scene Fourth

[Courtyard of Gloucester's Castle]
Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.
Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.
Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!
Lear. Ha!
Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?
Kent. ⟨No, my lord.⟩
Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters. Horses are tied by the head, dogs and bears by th' neck, monkeys by th' loins, and men by th' legs: when a man's over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.
Lear. What's he that hath so much thy place mistook
To set thee here?
Kent. It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.
Lear. No.
Kent. Yes.
Lear. No, I say.
Kent. I say, yea.
«Lear. No, no; they would not.
Kent. Yes, they have.»
Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.
⟨Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.
Lear.⟩ They durst not do't;
They could not, would not do't. 'Tis worse than murther
To do upon respect such violent outrage.
Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way
Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this usage,
Coming from us.
Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that show'd
My duty kneeling, there came a reeking post,
Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth
From Goneril his mistress salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission
Which presently they read. On whose contents
They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow and attend
The leisure of their answer, gave me cold looks.
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd mine—
Being the very fellow which of late
Display'd so saucily against your highness—
Having more man than wit about me, drew.
He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries.
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers.
⟨Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.

Fathers that wear rags
Do make their children blind,

10 cruel: pun on crewel; i.e., worsted 13 nether-stocks: stockings 28 Cf. n. 29 Resolve: inform 31 Coming: considering that you came 38 spite of intermission: making no bones of interrupting me 39 On: on perceiving 40 meiny: retinue of attendants 43–47 And . . . drew; cf. n. 53 blind: i.e., to filial duty

But fathers that bear bags
Shall see their children kind.
Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to th' poor.

But for all this thou shalt have as many dolors for thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year.⟩

Lear. O how this mother swells up toward my heart!
Hysterica passio! Down, thou climbing sorrow!
Thy element's below. Where is this daughter?

Kent. With the earl, sir: here within.

Lear [to Attendants]. Follow me not. Stay here. Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence than what you speak of?

Kent. None.
How chance the king comes with so small a number?

Fool. An thou hadst been set i' th' stocks for that question, thou'dst well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no laboring i' th' winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following; but the great one that goes upward, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again. I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That sir which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,
Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.
But I will tarry, the fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly:
The knave turns fool that runs away;
The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?

Fool. Not i' th' stocks, fool.

Enter Lear and Gloucester.

Lear. Deny to speak with me! They are sick! They are weary!
They have travell'd all the night! Mere fetches,
The images of revolt and flying off.
Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My dear lord,
You know the fiery quality of the duke;
How unremovable and fix'd he is
In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!
What fiery quality? Why, Gloucester, Gloucester!
I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

⟨Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man?⟩

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the dear father
Would with his daughter speak, commands her service.

⟨Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood!⟩
Fiery duke! Tell the hot duke that Lear—
No, but not yet; may be he is not well.
Infirmity doth still neglect all office
Whereto our health is bound. We are not ourselves
When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind
To suffer with the body. I'll forbear;
And am fall'n out with my more headier will,
To take the indispos'd and sickly fit
For the sound man. Death on my state! [Looking on Kent.]
Wherefore
Should he sit here? This act persaudes me
That this remotion of the duke and her
Is practice only. Give me my servant forth.
Go tell the duke and's wife I'd speak with them,
Now, presently. Bid them come forth and hear me,
Or at their chamber-door I'll beat the drum
Till it cry sleep to death.

Go. I would have all well betwixt you. Exit.

Lear. O, me! my heart, my rising heart! but, down!

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels when she put 'em i' th' paste alive. She knapped 'em o' th' coxcombs with stick, and cried, 'Down wantons, down!' 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, buttered his hay.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloucester, Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your Grace.
Kent here set at liberty.

Reg. I am glad to see your highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are. I know what reason
I have to think so. If thou shouldst not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,
Sepúlchuring an adult'ress.-[To Kent.] O! are you free?
Some other time for that. Beloved Regan,
Thy sister's naught. O Regan! she hath tied
Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here.
[Points to his heart.]
I can scarce speak to thee—thou'lt not believe—
Of how deprav'd a quality—O Regan!

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope
You less know how to value her desert
Than she to scant her duty.

⟨Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation. If, sir, perchance
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
'Tis on such ground and to such wholesome end
As clears her from all blame.⟩

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir, you are old.
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine. You should be rul'd and led
By some discretion that discerns your state
Better than you yourself. Therefore I pray you
That to our sister you do make return.
Say, you have wrong'd her, sir.

57 turns the key: unlocks the door 58 dolors: pun on dollars 59 tell: count; also 'narrate' 60 mother: vertigo 60, 61 mother . . . Hysterica passio; cf. n. 78 none but knaves; cf. n. 82 pack: hurry off 87 perdy: by God, pardieu 90 Deny: refuse 92 fetches: tricks 93 flying off: desertion 106–108 Cf. n.

110 office: duty 114 more headier: too headstrong 119 remotion: removal 124 cry sleep to death: murder sleep 127 cockney: city woman 128 paste: pie-dough knapped: rapped 138 Sepúlchring: for enclosing 140 naught: worthless 143 quality: manner 146 scant; cf. n. 155, 156 on . . . confine; cf. n. 156 confine: territory

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?
Do you but mark how this becomes the house:
'Dear daughter, I confess that I am old.
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg
That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.'
Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks.
Return you to my sister.
Lear. Never, Regan.
She hath abated me of half my train,
Look'd black upon me, struck me with her tongue,
Most serpent-like, upon the very heart.
All the stor'd vengeances of heaven fall
On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!
Corn. Fie, sir, fie!
Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun,
To fall and blast her pride!
Reg. O the blest gods! So will you wish on me,
When the rash mood is on.
Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse.
Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give
Thee o'er to harshness. Her eyes are fierce, but thine
Do comfort and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in. Thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o' th' kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.
Reg. Good sir, to th' purpose.
Lear. Who put my man i' th' stocks?
Tucket within.
Corn. What trumpet's that?
Reg. I know't: my sister's. This approves her letter,
That she would soon be here.

Enter Steward [Oswald].

Is your lady come?
Lear. This is a slave, whose easy-borrow'd pride
Dwells in the fickle grace of her 'a follows.
Out, varlet, from my sight!
Corn. What means your Grace?
Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou didst not know on 't.

Enter Goneril.

Who comes here? O heavens,
If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if you yourselves are old,
Make it your cause. Send down and take my part!
[To Goneril.] Art not asham'd to look upon this beard?
O Regan, will you take her by the hand?
Gon. Why not by th' hand, sir? How have I offended?
All's not offence that indiscretion finds
And dotage terms so.
Lear. O sides, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?—How came my man i' th' stocks?
Corn. I set him there, sir; but his own disorders
Deserv'd much less advancement.
Lear. You? Did you?
Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If till the expiration of your month
You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me.
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.
Lear. Return to her? and fifty men dismiss'd!
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity o' th' air,
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl:
Necessity's sharp pinch! Return with her?
Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took
Our youngest born, I could as well be brought
To knee his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg
To keep base life afoot. Return with her?
Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom.
Gon. At your choice, sir.
Lear. I prithee, daughter, do not make me mad.
I will not trouble thee, my child. Farewell.
We'll no more meet, no more see one another;
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter,—
Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine. Thou art a bile,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee.
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it.
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove.
Mend when thou canst; be better at thy leisure.
I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred knights.
Reg. Not altogether so.
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister;
For those that mingle reason with your passion
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.
Lear. Is this well spoken?
Reg. I dare avouch it, sir. What! fifty followers?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yeah, or so many, sith that both charge and danger
Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house,
Should many people under two commands
Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.
Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance
From those that she calls servants, or from mine?
Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack ye,
We could control them. If you will come to me
(For now I spy a danger), I entreat you
To bring but five-and-twenty. To no more

162 the house: our exalted family 169 She . . . train; cf. n. abated: deprived 174 taking: possessing, in the sense of malignant 172 fall: make fall 183 tender-hefted: sensitive; cf. n. 187 sizes: allowances 201 'a: he 208 Allow: commend (as an example) 217 disorders: disorderly acts 228 wage: wage war 235 sumpter: packhorse (or its driver) 236 groom: i.e., Oswald 243 bile: boil; cf. n. 244 embossed: swollen 255 mingle . . . passion; cf. n. 260 Is it not well: is not that enough?

Will I give place or notice.
Lear. I gave you all—
Reg. And in good time you gave it.
Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries,
But kept a reservation to be follow'd
With such a number. What! must I come to you
With five-and-twenty? Regan, said you so?
Reg. And speak't again, my lord. No more with me.
Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favor'd,
When others are more wicked; not being the worst
Stands in some rank of praise. [To Goneril.] I'll go with thee.
Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty,
And thou art twice her love.
Gon. Hear me, my lord.
What need you five-and-twenty? ten? or five?
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?
Reg. What need one?
Lear. O reason not the need! Our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous.
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady.
If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But for true need,—
You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need!
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age, wretched in both!
If it be you that stirs these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely. Touch me with noble anger,
And let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks! No, you unnatural hags,
I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall—I will do such things,—
What they are yet I know not,—but they shall be
The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep?
No, I'll not weep.
I have full cause of weeping, but this heart
Storm and Tempest.
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws
Or ere I'll weep. O, fool, I shall go mad.
Exeunt Lear, Gloucester, Kent, and Fool.
Corn. Let us withdraw. 'Twill be a storm.
Reg. This house is little. The old man and his people
Cannot be well bestow'd.
Gon. 'Tis his own blame; hath put himself from rest,
And must needs taste his folly.
Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,
But not one follower.
Gon. So am I purpos'd.
Where is my Lord of Gloucester?
Corn. Follow'd the old man forth. He is return'd.

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. The king is in high rage.
⟨Corn. Whither is he going?
Glo. He calls to horse; but⟩ will I know not whither.
Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself.
Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.
Glo. Alack! the night comes on, and the bleak winds
Do sorely ruffle. For many miles about
There's scarce a bush.
Reg. O, sir, to wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure
Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors.
He is attended with a desperate train,
And what they may incense him to, being apt
To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.
Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night.
My Regan counsels well. Come out o' th' storm. Exeunt.

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The Heath]

Storm still. Enter Kent and a Gentleman at several doors.

Kent. Who's there, besides foul weather?
Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.
Kent. I know you. Where's the king?
Gent. Contending with the fretful elements;
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change or cease. «Tears his white hair,
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury and make nothing of;
Strives in his little world of man t'out-scorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would crouch,
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.»
Kent. But who is with him?
Gent. None but the fool, who labors to out-jest
His heart-struck injuries.
Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my note,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,
(Although as yet the face of it is cover'd
With mutual cunning) 'twixt Albany and Cornwall,
⟨Who have—as who have not, that their great stars
Thron'd and set high—servants, who seem no less,
Which are to France the spies and speculations
Intelligent of our state. What hath been seen,
Either in snuffs and packings of the dukes,
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind king, or something deeper,
Whereof perchance these are but furnishings—⟩
«But, true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet

271 notice: countenance 274 depositaries: trustees 290 in: i.e., in possessing superfluous: possessed of more than they need 292-295 Thou . . . warm; cf. n. 300 fool . . . much: make me not such a fool 310 flaws: pieces 317 For his particular: in regard to himself 318-321 Cf. n.

327 bleak: cf. n. 328 ruffle: bluster 334 apt: naturally disposed 337 storm; cf. n. 6 main: land 10 little world of man: microcosm; cf. n. 12 cub-drawn: dry-sucked, ravenous 14 unbonneted: without a hat 20 note: observation 25 no less: no less than true servants 26 speculations: scouts 27 Intelligent: giving intelligence 28 snuffs: resentments sackings: hidden blots 31 furnishings: outer coverings; cf. n. 33 scatter'd: disunited

In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner. Now to you:
If in my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding,
And from some knowledge and assurance offer
This office to you.»
Gent. I will talk further with you.
Kent. No, do not.
For confirmation that I am much more
Than my out-wall, open this purse and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia
(As fear not but you shall), show her this ring,
And she will tell you who your fellow is
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm!
I will go seek the king.
Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?
Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet:
That when we have found the king,—in which your pain
That way, I'll this,—he that first lights on him
Holla the other. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Another part of the Heath]
Storm still. Enter Lear and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd the steeples, drown'd the cocks!
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-couriers of oak-cleaving thunderbolts,
Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,
Strike flat the thick rotundity o' th' world!
Crack nature's moulds, all germens spill at once
That make ingrateful man!
Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Good nuncle, in; ask thy daughters' blessing. Here's a night pities neither wise men nor fools.
Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Spit fire! spout rain!
Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters.
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;
I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription. Then, let fall
Your horrible pleasure. Here I stand, your slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man.
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That will with two pernicious daughters join
Your high-engender'd battles 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul.

Fool. He that has a house to put's head in has a good head-piece.

The codpiece that will house
Before the head has any,
The head and he shall louse;
So beggars marry many.
The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make,
Shall of a corn cry woe,
And turn his sleep to wake.

For there was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.
Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience.
I will say nothing.

Enter Kent.

Kent. Who's there?
Fool. Marry, here's grace and a codpiece; that's a wise man and a fool.
Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? Things that love night
Love not such nights as these. The wrathful skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves. Since I was man
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,
Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard. Man's nature cannot carry
Th' affliction nor the fear.
Lear. Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pudder o'er our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged crimes
Unwhipp'd of justice; hide thee, thou bloody hand,
Thou perjur'd, and thou simular of virtue
That art incestuous. Caitiff, to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming
Hast practis'd on man's life. Close pent-up guilts,
Rive your concealing continents, and cry
These dreadful summoners grace. I am a man
More sinn'd against than sinning.
Kent. Alack! bare-headed!
Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel.
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest.
Repose you there while I to this hard house
(More harder than the stones whereof 'tis rais'd,
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in) return and force
Their scanted courtesy.
Lear. My wits begin to turn.
Come on, my boy. How dost, my boy? Art cold?
I am cold myself. Where is this straw, my fellow?
The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.
Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.

39 making: for making 41 plain: complain 43 knowledge and assurance: sure knowledge 48 my out-wall: the servant livery I wear 51 fellow: companion 55 to effect: in importance 2 hurricanoes: water-spouts 3 cocks: weathercocks on steeples 4 thought-executing: acting Jove's thought 5 Vaunt-couriers: advance messengers 8 germens: seeds 10 court holy-water: flattery 18 subscription: allegiance 23 high-engender'd battles; cf. n.

27 codpiece: part of man's dress between the legs 30 Cf. n. 31, 32 toe, heart; cf. n. 40 grace: majesty 44 Gallow: terrify 51 pudder: 'powther' (Q), uproar simular: simulator 59 Rive: split continents: covers 60 grace: mercy 74 vile; cf. n.

Fool.

He that has and-a little tiny wit,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
Must make content with his fortunes fit,
Though the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy. Come, bring us to this hovel.
Exit [with Kent].

⟨Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtesan.
I'll speak a prophecy ere I go:

When priests are more in ward than matter;
When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
No heretics burn'd but wenches' suitors;
When every case in law is right,
No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanders do not live in tongues;
Nor cutpurses come not to throngs;
When usurers tell their gold i' th' field,
And bawds and whores do churches build:
Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion.
Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
That going shall be us'd with feet.

This prophecy Merlin shall make, for I live before his time.
Exit.⟩

Scene Third

[Gloucester's Castle]
Enter Gloucester and the Bastard, with lights.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund! I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural!

Glo. Go to! say you nothing. There is division between the dukes, and a worse matter than that. I have received a letter this night. 'Tis dangerous to be spoken; I have locked the letter in my closet. These injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there's part of a power already footed. We must incline to the king. I will look him and privily relieve him. Go you and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived. If he ask for me, I am ill and gone to bed. If I die for it (as no less is threatened me), the king, my old master, must be relieved. There is strange things toward, Edmund. Pray you, be careful. Exit.

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke
Instantly know; and of that letter too.
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses: no less than all.
The younger rises when the old doth fall. Exit.

78 Cf. n. 80–96 Cf. n. 87 Cf. n. 88 No . . . suitors; cf. n. 90 nor no poor knight; cf. n. 95, 96 Then . . . feet; cf. n. 99 Merlin; cf. n. 11 home: to the hilt 11 power: army footed: on foot, landed 12 look: look for

Scene Fourth

[The Heath. Before a Hovel]
Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter.
The tyranny of the open night's too rough
For nature to endure Storm still.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I'd rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin. So 'tis to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear;
But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,
Thou'dst meet the bear i' th' mouth. When the mind's free,
The body's delicate. The tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else
Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food to't? But I will punish home!
No, I will weep no more. ⟨In such a night
To shut me out! Pour on! I will endure.⟩
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave you all,—
O, that way madness lies; let me shun that!
No more of that!

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Prithee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease.
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more. But I'll go in.
⟨[To the Fool.] In, boy; go first. Exit [Fool].
You houseless poverty,—
[To Kent.] Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.⟩
Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O! I have ta'en
Too little care of this. Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
That thou mayst shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.
⟨Edg. [within]. Fathom and half, fathom and half!
Poor Tom!⟩

Fool [within]. Come not in here, nuncle. Here's a spirit.
Help me! help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand. Who's there?

Fool [within]. A spirit, a spirit! He says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble thee i' th' straw?
Come forth.

Enter Edgar and Fool.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me! Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind. Hum! Go to thy bed and warm thee.

14 delicate: fastidious 17 as: as if 19–21 Cf. n. 21 Cf. n. 35 loop'd: full of holes 39 shake the superflux: scatter your superfluities; cf. n.

Lear. Didst thou give all to thy daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives anything to poor Tom, whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and ⟨through flame,⟩ through ford and whirlipool, o'er bog and quagmire? that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor. Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold. ⟨O! do de, do de, do de.⟩ Bless thee from whirlwinds, starblasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now, and there, and there again, and there.

Storm still.

Lear. What! has his daughters brought him to this pass? Couldn'st thou save nothing? Would'st thou give 'em all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket. Else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous air
Hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have súbdu'd nature
To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.
Is it the fashion that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?
Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill:
Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' th' foul fiend. Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A servingman, proud in heart and mind, that curled my hair, wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven; one that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it. Wine loved I deeply, dice dearly, and in woman outparamoured the Turk: false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman. Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend. Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind! Hay no nonny, Dolphin my boy! my boy, sessa! let him trot by.

Storm still.

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated; thou art the thing itself. Unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings! Come; unbutton here.

[Tearing off his clothes.]

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, be contented. 'Tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest on's body cold. Look! here comes a walking fire.

Enter Gloucester with a torch.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet. He begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock. He gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, an makes the harelip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Swithold footed thrice the old;
He met the night-mare and her nine-fold;
Bid her alight,
And her troth plight,
And aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

Kent. How fares your Grace?

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom, that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets, swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tithing to tithing, and stock-punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body,

Horse to ride, and weapon to wear.
But mice and rats and such small deer
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Beware thy follower. Peace, Smulkin! peace, thou fiend.

Glo. What! hath your Grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman;
Modo he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile,
That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me. My duty cannot suffer
T'obey in all your daughter's hard commands.
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,
Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.
What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord,
Take his offer. Go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this most learned Theban.
What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Impórtune him once more to go, my lord.
His wits begin t'unsettle.

Glo. Canst thou blame him? Storm still.
His daughters seek his death. Ah, that good Kent!
He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man.

58 halters in his pew; cf. n. 60 course: hunt 62 taking: influence of malignant powers 63, 64 There . . . now; cf. n. 69 pendulous: overhanging 70 fated: by fate's will 77 pelican; cf. n. 78 Pillicock; cf. n. 97, 98 Hay . . . sessa; cf. n. 102 cat: civet-cat 104 Unaccommodated: unequipped 108 wild: blustery (cf. II.iv. 336)

111 Flibbertigibbet: one of Harsnet's devils 112, 113 web and the pin: eye-disease 115 Swithold: St. Withold, St. Vitalis old: wold, moor-land 116 nine-fold: nine followers 118 her troth plight: pledge her troth 119 aroint: get out! 125 wall-newt: lizard water: water-newt 126 sallets: salads 127 ditch-dog: dead dog in a ditch 128 standing: stagnant tithing: district 132 deer: game 134 Smulkin; cf. n. 142 in all: in every respect

Thou say'st the king grows mad. I'll tell thee, friend:
I am almost mad myself. I had a son,
Now outlaw'd from my blood—he sought my life
But lately, very late. I lov'd him, friend;
No father his son dearer. True to tell thee,
The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this!
I do beseech your Grace,—
Lear. O, cry you mercy, sir.
Noble philosopher, your company.
Edg. Tom's a-cold.
Glo. In, fellow, there, into th' hovel. Keep thee warm.
Lear. Come, let's in all.
Kent. This way, my lord.
Lear. With him!
I will keep still with my philosopher.
Kent. Good my lord, soothe him. Let him take the fellow.
Glo. Take him you on.
Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.
Lear. Come, good Athenian.
Glo. No words, no words. Hush.
Edg.

Child Rowland to the dark tower came,
His word was still, Fie, Foh, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

[Gloucester's Castle]
Enter Cornwall and Edmund

Corn. I will have my revenge ere I depart the house.
Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.
Corn. I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself.
Edm. How malicious is my fortune that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!
Corn. Go with me to the duchess.
Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.
Corn. True or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.
Edm. [aside] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.—I will persever in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.
Corn I will lay trust upon thee, and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. Exeunt.

161-165 Cf. n. 167 cry you mercy: I beg your pardon 170-173 Cf. n. 183 British man: cf. n. 2 censured: judged 3 something fears me: I somewhat fear 5, 6 provoking merit: meritorious incitement 9 intelligent party: conscious accessory

Scene Sixth

[A Farmhouse near Gloucester's Castle]
Enter Kent and Gloucester.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can. I will not be long from you.
Kent. All the power of his wits have given way to his impatience. The gods reward your kindness! Exit [Gloucester].

Enter Lear, Edgar, and Fool.

Edg. Frateretto calls me, and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.
Fool. Prithee, nuncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman.
Lear. A king, a king!
⟨Fool. No, he's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son; for he's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him.
Lear.⟩ To have a thousand with red burning spits
Come hizzing in upon 'em,—
«Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.
Fool. He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.
Lear. It shall be done! I will arraign them straight.
[To Edgar.] Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer.
[To the Fool.] Thou, sapient sir, sit here. No, you she foxes!
Edg. Look, where he stands and glares! Want'st thou eyes? At trial, madam!

Come o'er the broom, Bessy, to me,—
Fool.
Her boat hath at leak,
And she must not speak
Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hoppedance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel. I have no food for thee.
Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd.
Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?
Lear. I'll see their trial first. Bring in their evidence.
[To Edgar.] Thou robed man of justice, take thy place;
[To the Fool.] And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity,
Bench by his side. [To Kent.] You are o' th' commission.
Sit you too.
Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?
Thy sheep be in the corn;
And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,
Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Purr! the cat is grey.
Lear. Arraign her first. 'Tis Goneril, I here take my oath before this honorable assembly, kicked the poor king her father.
Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril?
Lear. She cannot deny it.

4 have; cf. n. 4, 5 impatience: inability to endure S.d. Cf. n. 6 Frateretto; cf. n. 7 innocent: the Fool 15 hizzing: whizzing 25 broom; cf. n. 33 amaz'd: confused 38 o' th' commission: One of the delegated judges 41-44 Cf. n. 43 minikin: mignonne, pretty 45 Cf. n. 46, 47 Cf. n.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.
Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim
What store her heart is made on. Stop her there!
Arms! arms! sword! fire! Corruption in the place!
False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?»
Edg. Bless thy five wits!
Kent. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now
That you so oft have boasted to retain?
Edg. [aside]. My tears begin to take his part so much,
They'll mar my counterfeiting.
Lear. The little dogs and all,
Trey, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.
Edg. Tom will throw his head at them. Avaunt, you curs!

Be thy mouth or black or white,
Tooth that poisons if it bite;
Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,
Hound or spaniel, brach or him,
Or bobtail tike or trundle-tail;
Tom will make them weep and wail:
For, with throwing thus my head,
Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do de, de, de. Sessa! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns. Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.
Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan. See what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts? [To Edgar.] You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only I do not like the fashion of your garments. You will say, they are Persian, but let them be changed.
Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile.
Lear. Make no noise, make no noise. Draw the curtains: so! so! We'll go to supper i' th' morning. «So! so! so!»
⟨Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.⟩

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Come hither, friend. Where is the king my master?
Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone.
Glo. Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms.
I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him.
There is a litter ready; lay him in't,
And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet
Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master:
If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life,
With thine and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up;
And follow me, that will to some provision
Give thee quick conduct.
«Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps.
This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken sinews,
Which, if convenience will not allow,
Stand in hard cure.—[To the Fool.] Come, help to bear thy master;
Thou must not stay behind.
Glo.» Come, come, away.
Exeunt [all but Edgar].

«Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes,
We scarcely think our miseries our foes.
Who alone suffers suffers most i' th' mind,
Leaving free things and happy shows behind;
But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip,
When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.
How light and portable my pain seems now,
When that which makes me bend makes the king bow,
He childed as I father'd! Tom, away!
Mark the high noises, and thyself bewray
When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,
In thy just proof repeals and reconciles thee.
What will hap more to-night, safe 'scape the king!
Lurk, lurk!» [Exit.]

Scene Seventh

[Gloucester's Castle]
Enter Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Bastard [Edmund], and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband. Show him this letter. The army of France is landed. Seek out the traitor Gloucester. [Exeunt some of the Servants.]
Reg. Hang him instantly.
Gon. Pluck out his eyes.
Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation. We are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister; farewell, my Lord of Gloucester.

Enter Steward [Oswald].

How now? Where's the king?
Osw. My Lord of GLoucester hath convey'd him hence.
Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
Hot questrists after him, met him at gate;
Who, with some other of the lord's dependants,
Are gone with him toward Dover, where they boast
To have well-armed friends.
Corn. Get horses for your mistress.
Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.
Corn. Edmund, farewell.
Ex. Goneril, Edmund [and Oswald].
Go seek the traitor GLoucester,
Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us.
[Exeunt other Servants.]
Though well we may not pass upon his life.
Without the form of justice, yet our power
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men
May blame but not control.

Enter Gloucester, brought in by two or three.

Who's there? The traitor?
Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.
Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.
Glo. What means your Graces? Good my friends, consider

50 joint-stool; cf. n. 63 or . . . or: either . . . or 66 brach or him: female dog or he-dog; cf. n. 67 bobtail tike: short-tail cur trundle-tail: curly-tail 70 hatch: lower half of the house-door 71 wakes: church festivals 75 entertain: employ 76 hundred: i.e., knights 77 Persian; cf. n. 80 Cf. n. 81 Cf. n. 91 in assured loss: sure to be lost 93 conduct: guidance 95 sinews: nerves 97 in hard cure: hard to cure

107 bearing: suffering 108 portable: endurable 111 high noises: great tumults 113 repeals: recalls 114 What . . . more: whatever else 115 Lurk, lurk; cf. n. 9 festinate: speedy 16 questrists: searchers 33 corky: dry, withered

You are my guests. Do me no foul play, friends.
Corn. Bind him, I say [Servants bind him.]
Reg. Hard, hard. O filthy traitor!
Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none.
Corn. To this chair bind him. Villain, thou shalt find—
[Regan plucks his beard.]
Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done
To pluck me by the beard.
Reg. So white, and such a traitor!
Glo. Naughty lady,
These hairs which thou dost ravish from my chin
Will quicken and accuse thee. I am your host.
With robbers' hands my hospitable favors
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?
Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?
Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.
Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors
Late footed in the kingdom?
Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatic king?
Speak.
Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down,
Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
And not from one oppos'd.
Corn. Cunning.
Reg. And false.
Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?
Glo. To Dover.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charg'd at peril—
Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.
Glo. I am tied to th' stake, and I must stand the course.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover?
Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails
Pluck out his poor old eyes, nor thy fierce sister
In his anointed flesh rash boarish fangs.
The sea, with such a storm as his bow'd head
In hell-black night endur'd, would have buoy'd up,
And quench'd the stelled fires;
Yet, poor old heart, he holp the heavens to rage.
If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that dern time,
Thou shouldst have said, 'Good porter, turn the key.'
All cruels else subscribe, but I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children.
Corn. See't shalt thou never. Fellows, hold the chair
Upon those eyes of thine I'll set my foot.
Glo. He that will think to live till he be old,
Give me some help! O cruel! O you gods!
[Gloucester's eye put out.]
Reg. One side will mock another. Th' other too.
Corn. If you see vengeance—
Servant. Hold your hand, my lord!
I have serv'd you ever since I was a child,
But better service have I never done you
Than now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dog?
Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,
I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean—
Corn. My villain!
Serv. Nay then, come on, and take the chance of anger.
Draw and fight. [Cornwall is wounded.]
Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus!
She takes a sword and runs at him behind.
Serv. O, I am slain! My lord, you have one eye left
To see some mischief on him. O!
Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it. Out, vile jelly!
Where is thy lustre now?
Glo. All dark and comfortless. Where's my son Edmund?
Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature
To quit this horrid act.
Reg. Out, treacherous villain!
Thou call'st on him that hates thee. It was he
That made the overture of thy treasons to us,
Who is too good to pity thee.
Glo. O my follies! Then Edgar was abus'd.
Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!
Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell
His way to Dover. Exit [Attendant] with Gloucester.
How is't, my lord? How look you?
Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt. Follow me, lady.
Turn out that eyeless villain. Throw this slave
Upon the dunghill. Regan, I bleed apace:
Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm.
Exeunt [Cornwall and Regan].
«2nd Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do
If this man come to good.
3rd Serv. If she live long,
And, in the end, meet the old course of death,
Women will all turn monsters.
2nd Serv. Let's follow the old earl, and get the bedlam
To lead him where he would. His roguish madness
Allows itself to anything.
3rd. Serv. Go thou. I'll fetch some flax and whites of eggs
To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him! Exeunt.»

42 Naughty: wicked 44 quicken: come to life 45 favors: features 48 simple-answer'd; cf. n. 53 guessingly: expressed in conjectural language 62 course: an attack in the sport of bear-baiting 66 rash: push violently, slash; cf. n. 67 bow'd; cf. n. 68 buoy'd: surged 69 stelled fires: fixed stars; cf. n. 71 dern: dreary 73 subscribe: sanction; cf. n. 81 Hold your hand; cf. n.

Act Fourth ❧ Scene First

[The Heath]
Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be contemn'd,
Than still contemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,
The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,
Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear.
The lamentable change is from the best;
The worst returns to laughter. ⟨Welcome, then,
Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace.
The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst
Owes nothing to thy blasts.⟩ But who comes here?

Enter Gloucester, led by an old man.

My father, poorly led? World, world, O world!
But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,

98 quit: requite 101 overture: exposure 115 old: familiar, regular 117 bedlam: bedlam-beggar (Edgar) 118 would: would be led 1 known . . . contemn'd: openly despised 3 esperance: hope 6 The . . . laughter; cf. n. 9 Owes nothing: has nothing more to pay 10 poorly led; cf. n. 11, 12 But that . . . age; cf. n.

Life would not yield to age.
Old Man. O my good lord!
I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant,
These fourscore years.
Glo. Away! Get thee away! Good friend, be gone.
Thy comforts can do me no good at all;
Thee they may hurt.
Old Man. You cannot see your way.
Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes.
I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 'tis seen,
Our means secure us, and our mere defects
Prove our commodities. O dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father's wrath!
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again.
Old Man. How now! Who's there?
Edg. [aside]. O gods! Who is't can say, 'I am at the worst?'
I am worse than e'er I was.
Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.
Edg. [aside]. And worse I may be yet. The worst is not.
So long as we can say, 'This is the worst.'
Old Man. Fellow, where goest?
Glo. Is it a beggar-man?
Old Man. Madman and beggar too.
Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg.
I' th' last night's storm I such a fellow saw,
Which made me think a man a worm. My son
Came then into my mind; and yet my mind
Was then scarce friends with him. I have heard more since.
As flies to wanton boys, are we to th' gods:
They kill us for their sport.
Edg. [aside]. How should this be?
Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow,
Angering itself and others.—[To Gloucester.] Bless thee, master!
Glo. Is that the naked fellow?
Old Man. Ay, my lord.
Glo. Then, prithee, get thee gone. If, for my sake,
Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,
I' th' way toward Dover, do it for ancient love;
And bring some covering for this naked soul
Which I'll entreat to lead me.
Old Man. Alack, sir! he is mad.
Glo. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.
Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
Above the rest, be gone.
Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have,
Come on't what will. Exit.
Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow,—
Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold. [Aside.] I cannot daub it further.
Glo. Come hither, fellow.
Edg. ⟨And yet I must.⟩ Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.
Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?
Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath. Poor
Tom hath been scared out of his good wits. Bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! «Five fiends have been in poor
Tom at once: of lust, as Obidicut; Hobbididance, prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing, who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!»

22, 23 means ... commodities; cf. n. 52 Which: whom ('who' Q) 60 daub it: make poor pretence 69 mopping and mowing: making grimaces

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens' plagues.
Have humbled to all strokes. That I am wretched
Makes thee the happier. Heavens, deal so still!
Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man,
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see
Because he does not feel, feel your power quickly.
So distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover?
Edg. Ay, master.
Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head
Looks fearfully in the confined deep.
Bring me but to the very brim of it,
And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear
With something rich about me. From that place
I shall no leading need.
Edg. Give me thy arm.
Poor Tom shall lead thee. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Before Albany's Palace]
Enter Goneril and Bastard [Edmund].

Gon. Welcome, my lord! I marvel our mild husband
Not met us on the way. Enter Steward [Oswald].
Now, where's your master?
Osw. Madam, within; but never man so chang'd.
I told him of the army that was landed;
He smil'd at it. I told him you were coming;
His answer was, 'The worse!' Of Gloucester's treachery,
And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out.
What most he should dislike seems pleasant to him;
What like, offensive.
Gon. [To Edmund]. Then shall you go no further.
It is the cowish terror of his spirit
That dares not undertake. He'll not feel wrongs
Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way
May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother;
Hasten his musters and conduct his powers.
I must change names at home, and give the distaff
Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us. Ere long you are like to hear
(If you dare venture in your own behalf)
A mistress's command. Wear this. [Giving a jewel.]
Spare speech;
Decline your head. This kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air.
Conceive, and fare thee well.
Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.
Gon. My most dear Gloucester!
Exit [Edmund].
⟨O the difference of man and man!⟩
To thee a woman' services are due;

74–78 Cf. n. 74 superfluous and lust-dieted: over-rich and willful 75 slaves; cf. n. 81 in the confined deep; cf. n. 1 Welcome; cf. n. 4 never man so chang'd; cf. n. 10 turn'd ... out: inverted right and wrong 14 cowish: easily cowed 15 undertake: assert itself 16 tie him to: require 17 brother: brother-in-law (Cornwall) 19 names: i.e., of husband and wife; cf. n. 23 mistress's; cf. n. 24 Spare speech: say nothing 25 Decline: bend down 27 Conceive: interpret my meaning

My foot usurps my body.
Osw. Madam, here comes my lord.
Exit Steward.

Enter Albany.

Gon. I have been worth the whistling.
Alb. O, Goneril,
You are not worth the dust which the rude wind
Blows in your face. «I fear your disposition.
That nature, which contemns it origin,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither
And come to deadly use.
Gon. No more; the text is foolish.
Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile;
Filths savor but themselves. What have you done?
Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?
A father, and a gracious aged man,
Whose reverence even the head-lugg'd bear would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you madded.
Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefited!
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to take these vile offences,
It will come,
Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.»
Gon. Milk-liver'd man!
That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honor from thy suffering! «that not know'st
Fools do those villains pity who are punish'd
Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum?
France spreads his banners in our noiseless land,
With plumed helm thy state begins to threat,
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sits still, and cries
'Alack! why does he so?'»
Alb. See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity shows not in the fiend
So horrid as in woman.
Gon. O vain fool!
«Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for shame,
Be-monster not thy feature. Were't my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones. Howe'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.
Gon. Marry! Your manhood!—Mew!»

Enter a Messenger.

«Alb. What news?»

Mess. O my good lord, the Duke of Cornwall's dead;
Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloucester.
Alb. Gloucester's eyes!
Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,
Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, thereat enrag'd,
Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead,
But not without that harmful stroke which since
Hath pluck'd him after.
Alb. This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these are our nether crimes
So speedily can venge! But, O poor Gloucester!
Lost he his other eye?
Mess. Both, both, my lord.
This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer.
'Tis from your sister.
Gon. [aside]. One way I like this well;
But being widow, and my Gloucester with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life. Another way
This news is not so tart. [To Messenger.] I'll read and answer.
Exit.
Alb. Where was his son when they did take his eyes?
Mess. Come with my lady hither.
Alb. He is not here.
Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.
Alb. Knows he the wickedness?
Mess. Ay, my good lord. 'Twas he inform'd against him,
And quit the house on purpose that their punishment
Might have the freer course.
Alb. Gloucester, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the king
And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither, friend.
Tell me what more thou know'st. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Near Dover]
Enter Kent and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you no reason?
Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, which since his coming forth is thought of; which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger that his personal return was most required and necessary.
Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?
Gent. The Marshal of France, Monsieur la Far.
Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?
Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;
And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek. It seem'd she was a queen
Over her passion, who most rebel-like
South to be king o'er her.
Kent. O, then it mov'd her?
Gent. Not to a rage. Patience and sorrow strove

32 My ... body: cf. n. 34 worth the whistling: cf. n. 37 fear: fear for 38 it: it's; cf. n. 39 border'd certain: possessed of fixed limits or standards of conduct 40 sliver and disbranch: split and sever 41 material: that of which she is made 42 come ... use: grow poisonous 45 Cf. n. 48 head-lugg'd: led about by a muzzle 51 A man: i.e., Cornwall him: i.e., Lear 58 Cf. n. 59, 60 discerning ... suffering: cf. n. 61, 62 Fools ... mischief: cf. n. 63 noiseless: peaceful, unready 64 state ... threat: cf. n. 65 moral: moralizing 68 Proper deformity: inherent ugliness 70 vain: empty 71 self-cover'd: hypocritical 72 Be-monster not thy feature: don't let your whole appearance become beastly my fitness: what is seemly in me 73 blood: passion 74 apt: ready 75 Howe'er: notwithstanding that 77 Mew: cf. n.

83 remorse: pity 104 back: on the way back Scene Third: cf. n. 11 Ay, sir: cf. n. 14 who: which

Who should express her goodliest. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once; her smiles and tears
Were like a better way. Those happy smilets
That play'd on her ripe lip seem'd not to know
What guests were in her eyes, which parted thence
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd. In brief,
Sorrow would be a rarity most belov'd,
If all could so become it.
Kent. Made she no verbal question?
Gent. Faith, once or twice she heav'd the name of 'father'
Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried, 'Sisters! sisters! Shame of ladies! sisters!
Kent! father! sisters! What, i' th' storm? i' th' night?
Let pity not believe't!' There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes
And clamor-moisten'd hair. Then away she started
To deal with grief alone.
Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions.
Else one self mate and make could no beget
Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?
Gent. No.
Kent. Was this before the king return'd?
Gent. No, since.
Kent. Well, sir, the poor distressed Lear's i' th' town,
Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers
What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.
Gent. Why, good sir?
Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness,
That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her
To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things sting
His mind so venomously that burning shame
Detains him from Cordelia.
Gent. Alack, poor gentleman!
Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?
Gent. 'Tis so, they are afoot.
Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear,
And leave you to attend him. Some dear cause
Will in concealment wrap me up awhile.
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve
Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go
Along with me. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[A Highroad near Dover]
Enter with drum and colors, Cordelia, Gentlemen, Doctor, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he! Why, he as met even now
As mad as the vex'd sea; singing aloud,
Crown'd with rank femiter and furrow weeds,
With hordocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn. A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.]
What can man's wisdom
In the restoring his bereaved sense?
He that helps him take all my outward worth.
Doct. There is means, madam.
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks. That to provoke in him
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.
Cor. All bless'd secrets,
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant and remediate
In the good man's distress! Seek, seek for him,
Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter Messenger.

Mess. News, madam.
The British powers are marching hitherward.
Cor. 'Tis known before. Our preparation stands
In expectation of them. O dear father,
It is thy business that I go about!
Therefore great France
My mourning and important tears hath pitied.
No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right,
Soon may I hear and see him! Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

[Regan's Palace, Gloucester]
Enter Regan and Steward [Oswald].

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?
Osw. Ay, madam.
Reg. Himself in person there?
Osw. Madam, with much ado.
Your sister is the better soldier.
Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?
Osw. No, madam.
Reg. What might import my sister's letter to him?
Osw. I know not, lady.
Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.
It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes being out,
To let him live. Where he arrives he moves
All hearts against us. Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life; moreover, to descry
The strength o' th' enemy.
Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.
Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow. Stay with us;
The ways are dangerous.

20 better way: like sunshine and rain, but in a nobler way 22 which: i.e., the 'guests' (tears) 26 verbal question: oral conversation 31 believe 't: cf. n. 33 clamor-moisten'd: wet with lamentation; cf. n. 37 mate and make: husband and wife 43 sometime . . . tune: cf. n. 47 elbows: jogs, disquiets 50 To foreign casualties: to take chances among foreigners 56 so, they: true that the 3 femiter: fumitory, plant with bitter taste 4 hordocks: burdocks (?) cuckoo-flowers: the ragged robin grass 5 Darnel: a coarse idle: worthless 6 century: company of one hundred men 15 simples: medicinal plants 19 aidant and remediate: aiding and remedial 29 important: importunate Scene Fifth S.d.: Cf. n. 8 import: be the meaning of

Osw. I may not, madam.
My lady charg'd my duty in this business.
Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you
Transport her purposes by word? Belike,
Some things—I know not what. I'll love thee much,
Let me unseal the letter.
Osw. Madam, I had rather—
Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband.
I am sure of that, and at her late being here
She gave strange eliads and most speaking looks
To noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosom.
Osw. I, madam?
Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I know't.
Therefore I do advise you, take this note:
My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd,
And more convenient is he for my hand
Than for your lady's. You may gather more.
If you do find him, pray you, give him this,
And when your mistress hears thus much from you,
I pray desire her call her wisdom to her.
So, fare you well.
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.
Osw. Would I could meet him, madam! I should show
What party I do follow.
Reg. Fare thee well. Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

[The Country near Dover]
Enter Gloucester and Edgar.

Glo. When shall I come to th' top of that same hill?
Edg. You do climb up it now. Look how we labor.
Glo. Methinks the ground is even.
Edg. Horrible steep.
Hark! do you hear the sea?
Glo. No truly.
Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eye's anguish.
Glo. So may it be, indeed.
Methinks thy voice is alter'd, and thou speak'st
In better phrase and matter than thou didst.
Edg. Y'are much deceiv'd. In nothing am I chang'd
But in my garments.
Glo. Methinks y'are better spoken.
Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place. Stand still.
How fearful
And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low!
The crows and choughs that wing the midway air
Show scarce so gross as beetles. Half way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade!
Methinks he seems no bigger than his head.
The fishermen that walk upon the beach.
Appear like mice, and yond tall anchoring bark
Diminish'd to her cock, her cock a buoy
Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge,
That on th' unnumber'd idle pebble chafes,
Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more,
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple down headlong.
Glo. Set me where you stand.
Edg. Give me your hand. You are now within a foot
Of th' extreme verge. For all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.
Glo. Let go my hand.
Here, friend, 's another purse; in it a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking. Fairies and gods
Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off.
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.
Edg. Now fare ye well, good sir.
Glo. With all my heart.
Edg. [aside]. Why I do trifle thus with his despair
Is done to cure it.
Glo. O you mighty gods! He kneels.
This world I do renounce, and in your sights
Shake patiently my great affection off.
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great opposeless wills,
My snuff and loathed part of nature should
Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!
Now, fellow, fare thee well.
Edg. Gone, sir: farewell.
He [Gloucester] falls.
[Aside.] And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The treasury of life when life itself
Yields to the theft. Had he been where he thought,
By this had thought been past. Alive or dead?
[To Gloucester.] Ho, you, sir! Friend! Hear you, sir? Speak!—
Thus might he pass indeed; yet he revives.—
What are you, sir?
Glo. Away and let me die.
Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air
(So many fathom down precipitating),
Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg; but thou dost breathe,
Hast heavy substance, bleed'st not, speak'st, art sound.
Ten masts at each make not the altitude
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell.
Thy life's a miracle. Speak yet again.
Glo. But have I fallen or no?
Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.
Look up a-height! The shrill-gorg'd lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard. Do but look up.
Glo. Alack! I have no eyes.
Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit
To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,
When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will.
Edg. Give me your arm.
Up! So. How is't? Feel you your legs? You stand.
Glo. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all strangeness.
Upon the crown o' th' cliff, what thing was that

24 Some things: cf. n. 26 I had rather—: cf. n. 29 eliads: eillades, oglings 30 of her bosom: in her confidence 33 take this note: speak to her in this key 39 desire . . . her: i.e., tell her not to be a fool 12 deceiv'd: mistaken 18 choughs: bird of the crow family, jackdaw 20 samphire: samper, used for pickles 24 cock: cock-boat

26 unnumber'd: innumerable pebble: cf. n. 28 deficient sight: cf. n. 41, 42 Why . . . cure it: cf. n. 47 opposeless: paramount 48 snuff: cf. n. 51 Gone, sir: farewell: cf. n. 52–54 conceit . . . theft: cf. n. 64 at each: one on another 68 summit; bourn: boundary 69 shrill-gorg'd: high-voiced

Which parted from you?
Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar.
Edg. As I stood here below, methought his eyes
Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses,
Horns whelk'd and wav'd like the enridged sea.
It was some fiend. Therefore, thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them honors
Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.
Glo. I do remember now. Henceforth I'll bear
Affliction till it do cry out itself
'Enough, enough,' and die. That thing you speak of—
I took it for a man—often 'twould say
'The fiend, the fiend.' He led me to that place.
Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.

Enter Lear, mad.

But who comes here?
The safer sense will ne'er accommodate
His master thus.
Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining. I am the king himself.
Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!
Lear. Nature's above art in that respect. There's your press money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard. Look, look! a mouse. Peace, peace! this piece of toasted cheese will do't. There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant. Bring up the brown bills. O! Well flown, bird! I' the clout, i' the clout: hewgh! Give the word.
Edg. Sweet marjoram.
Lear. Pass.
Glo. I know that voice.
Lear. Ha! Goneril, with a white beard! They flatter'd me like a dog, and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say 'ay' and 'no' to everything that I said! 'Ay' and 'no' too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once and the wind to make me chatter, when the thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to! they are not men o' their words. They told me I was everything. 'Tis a lie: I am not ague-proof.
Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember.
Isn't not the king?
Lear. Ay, every inch a king!
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.
I pardon that man's life. What was thy cause? Adultery? Thou shalt not die. Die for adultery? No. The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly does lecher in my sight. Let copulation thrive, for Gloucester's bastard son was kinder to his father than my daughters got 'tween the lawful sheets. To't luxury, pell-mell! for I lack soldiers. Behold yond simpering dame, whose face between her forks presages snow, that minces virtue, and does shake the head to hear of pleasure's name: the fitchew nor the soiled horse goes to't with a more riotous appetite. Down from the waist they are centaurs, though women all above. But to the girdle do the gods inherit, beneath is all the fiends'. There's hell, there's darkness, there is the sulphurous pit: burning, scalding, stench, consumption. Fie, fie, fie! pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination. There's money for thee.
Glo. O let me kiss that hand!
Lear. Let me wipe it first. It smells of mortality.
Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world shall so wear out to naught. Do you know me?
Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love. Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it.
Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see.
Edg. [aside]. I would not take this from report. It is, and my heart breaks at it.
Lear. Read.
Glo. What! with the case of eyes?
Lear. O, ho! are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light. Yet you see how this world goes.
Glo. I see it feelingly.
Lear. What! art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears. See how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places, and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief? Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?
Glo. Ay, sir.
Lear. And the creature run from the cur? There thou mightst behold the great image of authority: a dog's obey'd in office.
Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thy own back.
Thou hotly lusts to use her in that kind
For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozener.
Through totter'd rags small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. ⟨Plate sin with gold,
And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks;
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw does pierce it.
None does offend, none, I say none. I'll able 'em.
Take that of me, my friend, who have the power
To seal th' accuser's lips.⟩ Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not. Now, now, now, now.
Pull of my boots; harder, harder. So!
Edg. [aside]. O matter and impertinency mix'd!
Reason in madness!
Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.
I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester.
Thou must be patient; we came crying hither.
Thou know'st the first time that we smell the air
We waul and cry. I will preach to thee: mark.
Glo. Alack! alack the day!
Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come
To this great stage of fools. This' a good block!
It were a delicate stratagem to shoe
A troop of horse with felt. ⟨I'll put't in proof,⟩

85 whelk'd: twisted 86 fiend; cf. n. 87 clearest: most serene 96 safer: saner accommodate: equip 101 Nature's above art; cf. n. 101, 102 press-money: money given to soldiers when pressed into service crow-keeper; cf. n. 103 clothier's yard: cloth-yard shaft, used with long bow 105 brown bills: halberds, or, men carrying them 106 clout: bull's-eye, bit of white cloth used for mark in archery 107 Sweet marjoram: cf. n. 111 white hairs: the marks of wisdom 113 'Ay' . . . divinity; cf. n. 123–137 Cf. n. 127 luxury: lewdness 129 forks: legs; cf. n. minces: makes an affected show of 131 fitchew: polecat soiled: overfed 132 centaurs: cf. n.

141 Do you; cf. n. 142 squiny: squint 144 challenge; cf. n. 149 case: sockets 150 are you . . . me: so that is it? 157 handy-dandy; cf. n. 162 in office; cf. n. 163 beadle: parish police officer 165 lusts; cf. n. 166 usurer: rapacious or 'grafting' judge cozener: petty thief 167 Cf. n. 168 Plate sin; cf. n. 171 able: authorize 172 of me: on my authority 177 impertinency: irrelevant talk 177, 178 O matter . . . madness; cf. n. 186 This': this is block: type of hat; cf. n.

And when I have stol'n upon these son-in-laws,
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

Enter three Gentlemen.

Gent. O here he is! lay hand upon him!—Sir,
Your most dear daughter—
Lear. No rescue? What! a prisoner? I am even
The natural fool of fortune. Use me well;
You shall have ransom. Let me have surgeons;
I am cut to th' brains.
Gent. You shall have anything.
Lear. No seconds? All myself?
Why this would make ⟨a man,⟩ a man of salt,
To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
«Ay, and laying autumn's dust.
Gent. Good sir,—
Lear.» I will die bravely like a smug bridegroom.
What! I will be jovial. Come, come! I am a king.
Masters, know you that?
Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.
Lear. Then there's life in't. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa! Exit King, running.
Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch,
Past speaking of in a king! Thou hast one daughter,
Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.
Edg. Hail, gentle sir!
Gent. Sir, speed you. What's your will?
Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?
Gent. Most sure and vulgar; every one hears that,
Which can distinguish sound.
Edg. But, by your favor,
How near's the other army?
Gent. Near, and on speedy foot. The main descry
Stands on the hourly thought.
Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all.
Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,
Her army is mov'd on. Exit.
Edg. I thank you, sir.
Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me.
Let not my worser spirit tempt me again
To die before you please.
Edg. Well pray you, father.
Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?
Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows,
Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,
Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand,
I'll lead you to some biding.
Glo. Hearty thanks.
The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot!

Enter Steward [Oswald].

Osw. A próclaim'd prize! Most happy!
That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh
To raise my fortunes. Thou old unhappy traitor,
Briefly thyself remember. The sword is out
That must destroy thee.
Glo. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to't. [Edgar interposes.]
Osw. Wherefore, bold peasant,
Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence!
Lest that th' infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.
Edg. Chill not let go, zir, without vurther 'casion.
Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest.
Edg. Good gentlemen, go your gait, and let poor volk pass. And chud ha' bin zwaggered out of my life, 'twould not ha' bin zo long as 'tis by a vortnight. Nay, come not near th' old man. Keep out, che vor ye, or ise try whether your costard or my batoon be the harder. Chill be plain with you.
Osw. Out, dunghill!
Edg. Chill pick your teeth, zir. Come; no matter vor your foins. They fight.
Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me. Villain, take my purse.
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters which thou find'st about me
To Edmund Earl of Gloucester. Seek him out
Upon the British party. O untimely death!
Death! He dies.
Edg. I know thee well: a serviceable villain,
As duetous to the vices of thy mistress.
As badness would desire.
Glo. What! is he dead?
Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.
Let's see his pockets. These letters that he speaks of
May be my friends. He's dead. I am only sorry
He had no other deaths-man. Let us see.—
Leave, gentle wax! and, manners, blame us not.
To know our enemies' minds, we rip their hearts;
Their papers, is more lawful. Reads the letter.

Let our reciprocal vows be remembered. You have many opportunities to cut him off. If your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is nothing done if he return the conqueror. Then am I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol, from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labor.

Your wife (so I would say), your affectionate servant, «and for you her own tormentor,»

Goneril.

O undistinguished space of woman's will!
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life,
And the exchange my brother! Here, in the sands,
Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified
Of murtherous lechers; and in the mature time
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practis'd duke. For him 'tis well
That of thy death and business I can tell.
Glo. The king is mad. How stiff is my vile sense,
That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling

190 S.d. Cf. n. 195 ransom; cf. n. 199 man of salt; cf. n. 202 Good sir; cf. n. 207 life in't: still hope 214 speed you: God prosper you 216 vulgar: common 220 on speedy foot: approaching fast main descry, etc.; cf. n. 233 pregnant: ready, receptive 234 biding: abiding place 237 To boot, and boot; cf. n. 241 thyself remember: think of your sins 249 Chill: I will; cf. n. 252 And chud: if I should 254 che vor ye: I warn you; cf. n. costard: apple, used jokingly for head batoon: cudgel; cf. n. 258 foins: thrusts 263 British party; cf. n. 273 Leave: give leave 277 want not: be not wanting 282, 283 and . . . tormenter; cf. n. 285 undistinguish'd space: incalculable scope 288 rake up: cover 289 in . . . time: when the time is ripe 291 death-practis'd: mortally plotted against 293 stiff: tough 294 ingenious: conscious

Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract.
So should my thoughts be fenced from my griefs,
And woes by wrong imaginations lose
The knowledge of themselves. A drum afar off.
Edg. Give me your hand!
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

Exeunt.

Scene Seventh

[A Tent in the French Camp]
Enter Cordelia, Kent, and Doctor [with a Gentleman].

Cor. O thou good Kent! how shall I live and work
To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.
Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'erpaid.
All my reports go with the modest truth,
Nor more nor clipp'd, but so.
Cor. Be better suited.
These weeds are memories of those worser hours.
I prithee, put them off.
Kent. Pardon me, dear madam.
Yet to be known shortens my made intent.
My boon I make it that you know me not
Till time and I think meet.
Cor. Then be't so, my good lord.—[To the Doctor.]
How does the king?
Doct. Madam, sleeps still.
Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
Th' untun'd and jarring senses O wind up
Of this child-changed father!
Doct. So please your majesty
That we may wake the king? He hath slept long.
Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed
I' th' sway of your own will. Is he array'd?
Doct. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.

Enter Lear in a chair carried by Servants.

Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;
I doubt not of his temperance.
«Cor. Very well.
Doct. Please you, draw near. Louder the music there.»
Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang
Thy medicine on my lips, and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!
Kent. Kind and dear princess!
Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes
Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring winds?
«To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick cross lightning? to watch—poor pérdu!—
With this thin helm?» Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire. And wast thou fain, poor father,
To hovel thee with swine and rogues forlorn
In short and musty straw? Alack! alack!
'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all. He wakes. Speak to him.
Doct. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.
Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?
Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o' th' grave.
Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.
Cor. Sir, do you know me?
Lear. You are a spirit, I know. Where did you die?
Cor. Still, still, far wide.
Doct. He's scarce awake. Let him alone awhile.
Lear. Where have I been? Where am I? Fair daylight!
I am mightily abus'd. I should e'en die with pity
To see another thus. I know not what to say.
I will not swear these are my hands. Let's see.
I feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd
Of my condition!
Cor. O look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me.
«No, sir,» you must not kneel.
Lear. Pray do not mock me.
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward, ⟨not an hour more or less;⟩
And to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks I should know you and know this man;
Yet I am doubtful, for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is, and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not
Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me;
For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.
Cor. And so I am, ⟨I am.⟩
Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, faith. I pray, weep not.
If you have poison for me, I will drink it.
I know you do not love me, for your sisters
Have (as I do remember) done me wrong.
You have some cause, they have not.
Cor. No cause, no cause.
Lear. Am I in France?
Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.
Lear. Do not abuse me.
Doct. Be comforted, good madam. The great rage,
You see, is cur'd in him «and yet it is danger
To make him even o'er the time he has lost.»
Desire him to go in; trouble him no more
Till further settling.
Cor. Will't please your highness walk?
Lear. You must bear with me.
Pray you now, forget and forgive. I am old and foolish.

296 fenced: cf. n. Scene Seventh. Cf. n. 5 modest: measured 6 Nor . . . clipp'd: neither exaggerated nor palliated 7 Be better suited: dress your self more suitably to your rank 8 weeds: clothes 11 made intent: fixed purpose Yet . . . intent: cf. n. 12 My boon I make it: I ask as a favor 20 child-changed: cf. n. 28 temperance: mental balance 36 flakes: locks of hair 37, 38 Was . . . winds; cf. n.

41 pérdu: soldier on detached and dangerous sentry duty 42 this thin helm: only his bare skull 48 all: entirely 54 that: so that 75 mainly: mightily 92 cur'd; cf. n. 93 even o'er: smooth out, clear up

Exeunt. Manent Kent and Gent.

«Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloucester.

Gent. They say Edgar, his banished son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about; the powers of the kingdom approach apace.

Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.]

Kent. My point and period will be throughly wrought,
Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought. Exit.

ACT FIFTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The British Camp near Dover]
Enter, with drum and colors, Edmund, Regan, Gentlemen, and Soldiers.

Edm. Know of the duke if his last purpose hold,
Or whether since he is advis'd by aught
To change the course. He's full of alteration
And self-preproving. Bring his constant pleasure.
[To one, who goes out.]

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you.
Tell me, but truly, but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honor'd love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother's way
To the forefended place?

«Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct
And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.»

Edm. No, by mine honor, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her. Dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear «me» not.
She and the duke her husband!

Enter with drum and colors, Albany, Goneril, Soldiers.

«Gon.[aside]. I had rather lose the battle than that sister
Should loosen him and me.»

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met.
Sir, this I heard, the king is come to his daughter,
With others whom the rigor of our state
Forc'd to cry out. «Where I could not be honest
I never yet was valiant. For this business,
It touches us, as France invades our land,
Not bolds the king, with others whom, I fear,
Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.»

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy,
For these domestic poor particulars
Are not to question here.

Alb. Let's then determine
With th' ancient of war on our proceeding.

«Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.»

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient. Pray you, go with us.

Gon. [aside]. O, ho! I know the riddle. [Aloud.] I will go.
Exeunt both the Armies.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. If e'er your Grace had speech with man so poor,
Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you.—Speak.
Exeunt [Edmund, Regan, Gentlemen, and Soldiers].

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.
If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it. Wretched though I seem,
I can produce a champion that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
⟨And machination ceases.⟩ Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.
When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I'll appear again. Exit.

Alb. Why, fare thee well. I will o'erlook thy paper.

Enter Edmund.

Edm. The enemy's in view; draw up your powers.
Here is the guess of their true strength and forces
By diligent discovery; but your haste
Is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time.
Exit.

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love,
Each jealous of the other as the stung
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?
Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd
If both remain alive. To take the widow
Exasperates, makes mad, her sister Goneril;
And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use
His countenance for the battle; which being done
Let her who would be rid of him devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia,
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon; for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate. Exit.

108 arbitrement: process of decision 4 constant: settled 6 doubted: feared 13 forefended: forbidden 15, 16 conjunct and bosom'd: united and intimate 16 as far . . . hers: cf. n. 20 Fear: doubt 28 For: as for 30 Not bolds, etc.: cf. n.

33 reason'd: discussed 35, 36 For . . . here: cf. n. 38 ancient of war: veteran soldiers 42 convenient: proper, convenable 43 riddle: cf. n. 51 avouched: asserted 61 discovery: reconnoitring; cf. n. 63 time: occasion 65 jealous: suspicious 70 carry . . . side: play out my game 77 Shall: they shall 78 Stands on me: it is important for me

Scene Second

[A Field between the two Camps]

Alarum. Enter the powers of France over the stage, Cordelia with her father in her hand, and exeunt. Enter Edgar and Gloucester.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this bush
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive.
If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.
Glo. Grace go with you, sir! Exit [Edgar].

Alarum and Retreat within. Enter Edgar.

Edg. Away, old man! give me thy hand. Away!
King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en.
Give me thy hand. Come on.
Glo. No farther, sir. A man may rot even here.
Edg. What! in ill thoughts again? Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither.
Ripeness is all. Come on.
⟨Glo. And that's true too.⟩ Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The British Camp, near Dover]

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colors, Edmund; Lear and Cordelia as prisoners, Soldiers, Captain.

Edm. Some officers take them away! Good guard,
Until their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure them.
Cor. We are not the first
Who, with best meaning, have incurr'd the worst.
For thee, oppressed king, I am cast down;
Myself could else out-frown false Fortune's frown.
Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters?
Lear. No, no ⟨,no, no⟩! Come, let's away to prison.
We two alone will sing like birds i' th' cage.
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,
And ask for thee forgiveness. So we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues
Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too:
Who loses and who wins, who's in, who's out;
And take upon's the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies; and we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones
That ebb and flow by th' moon.
Edm. Take them away.
Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?
He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,
And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes.
The good years shall devour them, flesh and fell,
Ere they shall make us weep. We'll see 'em starv'd first.
Come. Exit [with Cordelia, guarded].
Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note. [Gives a paper.] Go follow them to prison.
One step I have advanc'd thee. If thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes. Know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword. Thy great employment
Will not bear question. Either say thou'lt do't,
Or thrive by other means.
Capt. I'll do't, my lord.
Edm. About it; and write happy when thou'st done.
Mark! I say, instantly, and carry it so
As I have set it down.
«Capt. I cannot draw a cart nor eat dried oats.
If it be man's work I'll do't.» Exit Captain.

Flourish. Enter Albany, Goneril, Regan, Soldiers.

Alb. Sir, you have show'd to-day your valiant strain,
And fortune led you well. You have the captives
Who were the opposites of this day's strife.
I do require them of you, so to use them
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.
Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention «and appointed guard»,
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen—
My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, t'appear
Where you shall hold your session. «At this time
We sweat and bleed, the friend hath lost his friend;
And the best quarrels in the heat are curs'd
By those that feel their sharpness.
The question of Cordelia and her father
Requires a fitter place.»
Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.
Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers,
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.
Gon. Not so hot!
In his own grace he doth exalt himself
More than in your addition.
Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Scene Second S.d. in her hand: his hand clasped in hers; cf. n. 1 bush; cf. n. 12 Ripeness: readiness; cf. n. Scene Third. S.d. Cf. n. 1 Good guard: guard them well 2 their greater pleasures; cf. n. 17, 18 Cf. n. 19 packs and sects; cf. n. 22 sacrifices: i.e., of liberty; cf. n. 24, 25 He . . . foxes; cf. n. 26 good years; cf. n. fell: skin

36, 37 Thy . . . question; cf. n. 40 write happy: call yourself lucky 43 Cf. n. 44 man's work: anything a man can do S.d. Cf. n. 46 led you well: was good to you 48 I; cf.n. 53 retention: detention 55 common bosom: affection of the populace 56 impress'd: enlisted 62, 63 Cf. n. 70 demanded: inquired 73 immediacy: position as my direct agent 77 your addition; cf. n. 79 compeers: equals

Alb. That were the most, if he should husband you.
Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.
Gon. Holla, holla!
That eye that told you so look'd but a-squint.
Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach. General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony.
⟨Dispose of them, of me; the whole is thine.⟩
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.
Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?
Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.
Edm. Nor in thine, lord.
Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.
Reg. [to Edmund.] Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.
Alb. Stay yet. Hear reason. Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason; and, in thine attaint,
This gilded serpent [pointing to Goneril]. For your claim, fair sister,
I bar it in the interest of my wife.
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your bans.
If you will marry, make your love to me;
My lady is bespoke.
⟨Gon. An interlude!
Alb.⟩ Thou art arm'd, Gloucester. ⟨Let the trumpet sound.⟩
If none appear to prove upon thy person
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge! [Throws down a glove.] I'll mark it on thy heart.
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
Than I have here proclaim'd thee.
Reg. Sick! O sick!
Gon. [aside]. If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine.
Edm. There's my exchange. [Throws down a glove.]
What in the world he is
That names me traitor, villain-like he lies.
Call by thy trumpet. He that dares approach,
On him, on you—who not?—I will maintain
My truth and honor firmly.
Alb. A herald, ho!
«Edm. A herald, ho! a herald!
Alb.» Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.
Reg. My sickness grows upon me.
Alb. She is not well. Convey her to my tent.
[Exit Regan, led.]

Enter a Herald.

Come hither, herald. Let the trumpet sound,
And read out this.
«Capt. Sound, trumpet!» A trumpet sounds.

Herald reads.

If any man of quality or degree within the lists of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear by the third sound of the trumpet. He is bold in his defence.

«Edm. Sound!» 1 Trumpet.
Her. Again! 2 Trumpet.
Her. Again! 3 Trumpet.
Trumpet answers within.

Enter Edgar, armed, at the third sound, a trumpet before him.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this call o' th' trumpet.
Her. What are you?
Your name? Your quality? and why you answer
This present summons?
Edg. Know, my name is lost,
By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit.
Yet am I noble as the adversary
I come to cope.
Alb. Which is that adversary?
Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloucester?
